Our Dear Canadian Home.

BY S. H. D.

Oh, who can boast such pastures green?
Such stately forests, and crystal streams,
The scenery here that feasts our eyes,
The noble rivers, the bright blue skies,
Can ne'er be matched while earth you roam,
With these in our Canadian Home.

The seasons, as they pass along,
Do each contribute a theme for song;
When winter's clear, with bright moonlight,
We scarcely feel its nature's right;
When snow-flake white, and blast doth sing,
Perchance the sleigh bells merry ring.

But Spring and Summer passing fast,
Beautiful Canada smiles her best,
The morn is bright, dew-drops adorn
The waving meadows, the golden corn,
And wildwoods dear, where hunters roam,
Secure in our Canadian Home.

Indians once their wigwams made,
On our river banks in forest shade,
But England's right, by John Cabot,
At last was established on this spot;
No Frenchmen now their banners wave,
Since Wolfe, victorious bled to save.

England of richer climes can boast,
But none more loyal than our coast,
And slavery here hath never cause,
To pine for any of freedom's laws,
For ne'er, oh ne'er will slaves here mourn,
Whilst Britain's sons retain our home.

My humble verse can ne'er describe,
One half the charms of our western wild,
To abler pens I'll leave my theme,
And hope too presumptive I've not been,
And while from zone to zone I roam,
I'll ne'er forget my Canada home.

Peterborough, June 22, 1858.

Toronto Markets.

TUESDAY, July 6, 1858.

There continue to be large receipts of wheat considering the season of the year, and buyers appear disposed to bring it forward by paying high rates. The quality continues good, and the cargoes recently sent forward will regain the good name that Canada white wheat once maintained.—There is a healthy competition on the market, and buyers feel anxious to secure good loads. Yesterday, prices ranged from 4s to 5s 4d—the latter down to 5s being paid in a good many instances. The average price for the day was 3s 9d, being higher than usual, and the market has a buoyant tendency.

FLOUR—The scarcity of flour prevents business, and there is but very little doing. Prices are purely nominal at $3 75 a $4 10 for fancy, and $4 25 a $4 50 for extra. These rates could easily be realized for fresh ground lots.

SPRING WHEAT is in poor supply at 3s 6d per bushel.

PEAS are scarce at 2s 6d a 2s 9d per bushel.

POTATOES sell at all prices between 2s 6d and 3s 3d per bushel.

HAY is in moderate supply at $8 a $16 per ton.

BUTTER scarce at 9d a 10d per lb., for fresh, and 6d a 7½ for tub.

EGGS 10d per dozen, and not plentiful.

POULTRY is coming in more freely.—Chickens 1s 9d a 2s 3d. Ducks 2s 6d a 2s 9d per pair.

BEEF.—Extra $6 medium $5½, and inferior $4½ per 100 lbs.

SHEEP $3½ a 4½. Calves $3 a $4. Lambs $2 a $2 50 each.

WOOL in good demand at 1s 2d. Lamb skins 1s 3d. Pelts 7½d each. Calf skins 6d per lb. Beef hides $5 per 100 lbs.

Peterboro' Markets.

Examiner Office,
Thursday, July 8th, 1858.

	$ a.	$ c.
Wheat per bushel	0 65 a 0 75
Flour per barrel	0 00 a 4 50
Butter per lb.	0 9½ a 0 10
Eggs per dozen	0 8½ a 0 10
Hay per ton	8 00 a 10 00

Died.

In Smith, on Saturday, July 3rd, Mr. John Shothart, in the 65th year of his age.

PORT HOPE PETERBORO' & LINDSAY R. R.

ORANGE CELEBRATION,
12th OF JULY, 1858,
AT
PORT HOPE.

THE ORANGEMEN of Peterborough and surrounding country having accepted an invitation from the Orangemen of Port Hope, to meet at Port Hope on the Twelfth, arrangements have been made with the Port Hope, Peterboro' and Lindsay Railway Company, by which passengers will on that day be carried at half fare.

The train will leave Peterborough at half-past eight o'clock, a. m. Port Hope train which is 35 minutes slower than Grand Trunk time; and returning, leaves Port Hope at 8 p. m., Peterborough time.

TICKETS.

To be had from the Masters of the Lodges, and at the Station in Peterborough, for the trip $1.

☞ Parties not procuring Tickets before starting will be charged full fare.

Passengers Cars will be reserved for the Ladies. Children under ten years of age will be charged half price.

A. T. WILLIAMS,
Superintendent.

Peterborough, July 8th, 1858. 29

VALUABLE FARM FOR SALE.
196 ACRES OF LAND.

THE Eastern Half (more often for sale 98 acres, being the west half of 23; and fifteen, being the south east quarter of Lot No. 22, on the 7th concession of the Township of Smith. There are 60 acres cleared, a good log house and log barn two Orchards of bearing trees on the premises. The farm is in a good state of cultivation, and could be divided to suit purchasers. Within 2 miles of Peterboro' and 7 miles of the thriving village of Lakefield.

For further particulars apply to the Subscriber, on the premises.

CHARLES FITZGERALD.

Smith, June 23, 1858. 24-tf

NOTICE

IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Partnership lately subsisting between HENRY MORROW & ALEX. MORROW, both of the town of Peterboro', under the firm of Morrow & Brother, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts owing to the said Partnership will be received by the said Henry Morrow and all debts due by the said firm will be paid by him.

HENRY MORROW,
ALEX. MORROW.

Peterboro', July 1st, 1858.

IN REFERENCE TO THE ABOVE, I would take the opportunity to inform my friends and the public that I will continue the business carried on by the firm in the same premises, and I hope by strict attention to business, and a thorough knowledge of the wants of my customers, to merit and receive a continuance of the patronage so liberally extended to the late firm.

HENRY MORROW.

Peterboro', July 1st, 1858. 24

BY-LAW, No.—

A By-Law to authorize the Warden of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria to issue Debentures for, and to raise by way of Loan the sum of Six Thousand Pounds for the purposes therein mentioned.

WHEREAS it is desirable to raise by loan on the credit of the Municipality the sum of Six Thousand Pounds for constructing and repairing the Roads and Bridges in the said United Counties.

And Whereas—It will require the sum of Seven Thousand Nine Hundred and Eighty Pounds to be raised by a special rate for the payment of such loan and interest for the space of ten years, to be computed from the fifth day of October now next ensuing, until the fifth day of October A. D. One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Eight exclusive of the first and last days by annual amounts as follows—that is to say,

For the first year—Nine Hundred and Sixty Pounds.

For the second year—Nine Hundred and Twenty-four Pounds.

For the third year—Eight Hundred and Eighty-eight Pounds.

For the fourth year—Eight Hundred and Fifty-two Pounds.

For the fifth year—Eight Hundred and Fifteen Pounds.

For the sixth year—Seven Hundred and Eighty Pounds.

For the seventh year—Seven Hundred and Forty-four Pounds.

For the eighth year—Six Hundred and Eight Pounds.

For the ninth year—Six Hundred and

BOOKS! BOOKS!!

THE Subscribers have now in Stock the following Books, to which they respectfully direct the attention of the inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding country, viz:—

LIFE OF GENERAL HAVELOCK.
LIVINGSTONE'S TRAVELS.
ENGLISH HEARTS & ENGLISH HANDS.
LIFE OF CAPT. HAMMOND.
The Shadow on the Hearth.
Spurgeon's Life. " Sermons.
Beecher's Life Thoughts.
Jane Eyre.—By Currer Bell.
Mormonism.—By Elder Hyde.
Waverly Anecdotes.
Life Pictures from a Pastor's Note Book.
Revival Sermons in New York in 1858.
Roger's Table Talk.
The Prince of the House of David.
Manual of Scientific Discovery for 1858.
Literary Attractions of the Bible.—Halsey.
Baynes' Essays in Biography and Criticism.
Cecile Roussin.
Laws from Heaven, for Life on Earth.
Olmstead's Mechanism of the Heavens.
Longfellow's Poetical Works.
Cats and Dogs.—By Mrs. Hugh Miller.
Flora—A Tale, by A. L. O. E.
The Roby Family.—"
Kirke White's Works.
Twenty Years a Slave.
The English Orphans.—By Mrs. Mary J. Holmes.
Baldwin's Representative Women.
Mind of Jesus.—By Macduff.
Words of Jesus. "
Bow in the Cloud. "
Faithful Promises. "
The City; its Sins and Sorrows.—By Rev. Dr. Guthrie.
Gospel in Ezekiel. "
Foster's Essays.
Dick's Christian Philosopher.
Chalmers' Moral Philosophy.
Chalmers' Miscellanies.
Bonar's Land of Promise.
Brewster's More Worlds than One.
Lectures to Young Men.
The Royal Preacher.
D'Aubigne's Reformation.
Kitto's Daily Bible Illustrations—Morning and Evening Series.
Books of Family Worship.
Family Prayers.—Macduff.
Memories of Bethany.
Footsteps of St. Paul.
McCheyne's Life and Remains.
Life of Cromwell.
Chesver's Lectures on the Pilgrim's Progress.
Dick's Astronomical Discourses.
Baxter's Saint's Rest.
Memories of Gennesaret.
Ministering Children.
Bridges' on the 119 Psalm.
Bogatsky's Golden Treasury.
Anxious Inquirer.
The Coral Island.
Ungava: a tale of the Esquimaux.
The Young Fur Traders.
&c., &c., &c.

ALSO, JUST RECEIVED,

A Choice Assortment of Bibles, Church Services, Psalm and Prayer Books, Wesley's Hymns, &c., &c. Toy Books for Children, in great variety.
Sunday School Reward Cards, Prize Books, &c., &c.

SAWERS & MURRAY.
New Book and Stationery Store, Burnham's Block, George Street.
Peterboro', June 9, 1858.

MUSIC! MUSIC!!

The Musical Bouquet, (English,
AT 4d PER SINGLE NUMBER.

THE subscribers have now in stock, the following pieces, to which they respectfully invite the attention of the Ladies of Peterborough.

QUADRILLES.

The Scotch Quadrilles.
Piccolomini Quadrilles.
Les Chiens, (dogs) do.
The Lancers do.
The Don Cæsar De Bazan Quadrilles.
Bolpiegor do.
The British Navy do.
Les Chats, (cats) do.
Bonnie Dundee do.
Les Singes, (monkeys) do.
Lucresia Borgia do.
Les Souris, (mice) do.
The Musqueters do.
The Irish do.
Puss in Boots do.
The Royal Lancers' do. do.
The Comic or Ratcatcher's do.

POLKAS.

Guy Fawkes' Polka.
The Laughing Eyes Polka.
Tomtit's do.
The Bobbin' Around do.
The Original do.
Ask Mamma do.
The Minnie do.
The Silverhair do.

FANTASIAS.

Gazelle Impromptu.
The Bush aboon Traquair.
La Violette.
Les Cloches Du Monastere.
We're a' Noddin'.
The Last Rose of Summer.
Fantasia on Bohemian Airs.
Fartant Poor La Syrie.
Minnelieder, Brilliant Fantasia.
Scots wha hae wi' Wallace bled.
Premier Recreation.
Premiere Etude De Concert'.
Two Musical Sketches, Mendelssohn.

POPULAR SONGS,

WITH ACCOMPANIMENTS.

Why did my Sarah sell me.
Hey Johnny Cope and the Campbells are coming.
Hearts and Eyes.
Ellen Rayne.
Who wadna fecht for Charlie.
For Ever Dear.
Some Folks.
Bobbing Around.
Sound Britons Sound.
Dinah is the Girl for me.
Lilly Willy Woker.
The Lass that loves a Sailor.
The Lords of the Forest.
Lets be gay Boys.
The Village Maiden.
Come again dear dream.
The Sardinian National Hymn.
Thou art my Joy.
The North Carolina Beau.
Up for the Night.
Oh let me in the dark tegah is.
The Fishermaiden.
The Camptown Races.
Strike Men Strike.
My Mary Anne.
So Early in the Morning.
The Spinning Wheel.
My Nannie O.
I Must Depart.
The Greenwood Ball.
My Gentle Dove.
There's Fortune on before us Boys.

SACRED MELODIES,

WITH VARIATIONS FOR THE PIANOFORTE.

Flegel's German Hymn.
Vital Spark of Heavenly Flame.
Prayer from Rossini's "Mose in Egitto."
The Heavens are Telling.
Adeste Fideles.
Cujus Animam, from Rossini.
I Know that my Redeemer Liveth.
Behold Jehovah's Awful Throne.
Eve's Lamentation.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Beyond Invasion, Popular Cavatina.
Rondo in B flat.
Marches Florentines.
Ah Le Morte, from Bellini.
Les Perles Dont Velons.
L'Ame ah L'Ame.
Herogle Grand Gallop.
Seven Admired Airs from Il Trovatore.
The Drake's March.
Souvenir De Verserie Mazurka.
Robert Toi Que J'Aime, &c.
Una Voce Poco Fa.
A to z Cure.
Still Soothly Dwelling.
Rose Softly Blooming.
Vega Vega, from Bellini.

Any piece not in stock, procured on the shortest notice.

—ALSO—

100 Popular Songs, Music and Words 50cts.
100 Henry Russell's Songs, &c. 25 "
100 Songs of Scotland, &c. 25 "
100 Songs of Ireland, &c. 25 "
100 Popular Comic Songs, &c. 25 "
100 Negro & Ameliorn Sc. &c. 25 "

at the

NEW BOOK, STATIONERY & MUSIC STORE,
Burnham's Block, George St. Peterborough.
SAWERS & MURRAY.
June 23, 1858 26

Miscellaneous.

COBOURG AND PETERBORO RAILWAY,

D. E. BOULTON, Lessee.

ALTERTAION OF TIME:

On and after 1st, June Trains will run as follows, connecting with the Grand Trunk Railway:

LEAVE.

Peterboro', ... 8 A. M.
" ..... 3:45 P. M.
Cobourg, ... 11:30 A. M.
G. Trunk R. ..... 11:35 "
Cobourg, ... 1:30 P. M.
G. Trunk R. ..... 7:45 "

ARRIVE.

Cobourg, ... 10 A. M.
" ..... 5:45 P. M.
Peterboro', ... 1:35 "
" ..... 9:35 "

Freight Trains.

LEAVE.

Cobourg, ... 8 A. M.
Peterboro', ... 4 P. M.

ARRIVE.

Peterboro', ... 10:30 A. M
Cobourg, ... 6 P. M.

☞ Through Tickets for Peterboro' to be had at the Stations of G. T. Railway.

Return Tickets Available Same Day Only

Cobourg to Peterboro' and back $1 50
Cobourg to Keene and back 1 25
Cobourg to Indian Village and back 1 00

GEO. H. DOWNIE, Secretary
JAMES BARBER, Supt. Running Depart.
C. & P. R. Office, Cobourg, June 1st, 1858. 21

OPENING OF THE Port Hope and Peterboro' RAILWAY.

ON MONDAY the 7TH JUNE, the Port Hope and Peterboro' Railway, will be opened for traffic.

TRAINS WILL RUN AS FOLLOWS:

Mail Train will leave Port Hope at 11.30 o'clock, A. M., after the arrival of the Grand Trunk Train from Toronto and Montreal, arriving in Peterboro' at 1 P. M.

Will leave Peterboro' at 5 P. M., and arrive in Port Hope at 6.30, in time for the trains east and west on the Grand Trunk.

Passengers can procure Tickets at any of the Grand Trunk Stations through to Peterboro', or at Peterboro' to any of the Stations on the Grand Trunk R. R.

J. S SMITH, President.
PortHope, May 27th, 1858. 22.

MUD LAKE TO BOBCAYGEON.

CHANGE OF ROUTE.

THE STEAMER "FLY,"

HAS discontinued running between Bobcaygeon and Lindsay. She will now make daily trips between Mud Lake and Bobcaygeon only; leaving Dunbar's wharf, Mud Lake, at 9 o'clock, returning in the afternoon. By this arrangement, parties seeking relief from the land beat, will be able to enjoy themselves a day on the beat lakes where there is always a refreshing breeze, and return home in the cool of the evening. The fare each each way is two shillings and sixpence, but families, making parties, will be allowed a reduction, proportionate to the number of persons in each. No better fishing ground is to be found than that at Bobcaygeon. Pope's Stage takes passengers and freight to and from the "Fly." The Stage fare is 1s 10½d. Families bringing their own carriages, will find plenty of accommodation at the different hotels at the Lake.

Peterboro', June 24, 1858. 24

STRAYED.

INTO the premises of the subscriber, on the 13th of June, A LARGE POWERFUL HORSE; the owner is requested to prove property, pay expenses and take him away.

THOMAS WATLEY.
Douro, 1st Con. 20 Lot, June 24th, 1858. 25-3

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

THE attention of Clergymen, Teachers, and others interested in Sunday Schools is respectfully invited to our large and varied assortment of

Reward Books, Tickets, Admission Cards, &c., &c., &c.,

Especially adapted for Sunday Schools, and which we will sell on the best possible terms.

A CALL SOLICITED,

SAWERS & MURRAY,
NEW BOOK AND STATIONARY STORE,
Burnham's Block, George Street Peterboro'.

Hotels, &c.,

UNION HOTEL. Peterborough.

GEORGE ALLEN

RESPECTFULLY intimates to his friends and the public generally, that his establishment is still open for the reception of guests in his usual good style.

The house is new and beautifully situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, where travellers will find a quiet and desirable retreat.

☞ A limited number of respectable BOARDERS can be accommodated.

Good Stables and Sheds

On the premises. An Ostler in attendance, who will give the best attention to horses entrusted to his care.

Peterborough Oct. 30th 1857. 42.

NORTH AMERICAN HOTEL.

HUNTER STREET, COBOURG.

THE above Hotel having been recently repaired, painted, and newly fitted up, and being now entirely complete in all its appointments, is now opened for the reception of the travelling public.

The House is commodious, and neither pains nor expense will be spared to make it one of the best in the Province.

The Liquors are of the best brands, and the Larder will be constantly supplied with all the delicacies of the Season.

The Stables are commodious, and an attentive Ostler is always in attendance.

The proprietor pledges himself that every attention will be paid to the wants of his guests.

☞ Omnibuses will attend at the Cars and Boats to carry passengers to the Hotel free of charge.

RALPH FRANCIS, Proprietor.
Cobourg, August, 1857. 35

AMERICAN HOTEL. PETERBORO'.

THE undersigned, Proprietor, begs to return his sincere thanks to the travelling community and the country, as well as the townspeople, for the very handsome support the Hotel has received from them. He hopes by excellent fare, to their wants, and careful management of the House to retain the favourable position which has attended his previous efforts.

The Bar

Will always be stocked with the best Liquors and Cigars.

Good Livery taken the in attention of carriages and saddle Horses always in attendance at the stables.

Passengers by or to the cars carried free, and omnibus regular.

LOUIS McGEBOOK.
Peterboro', 1858. 3-45

Insurances.

TIMES AND BEACON
ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....£250,000 STG.

£140,000 PAID UP.

HEAD OFFICE IN CANADA, KINGSTON, C.W.

CANADA BOARD OF DIRECTORS OR TRUSTEES:

The HON. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES MORTON, Esq., Kingston.

DIRECTORS

Chairman—M. U. STRANGE, Esq.
Vice Chairman—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.
JAMES MORTON, Esq., | A. J. McDONELL, Esq.
JOHN MOWAT, Esq., | JAMES HARDY, Esq.

AUDITORS

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Esq., Kingston,
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.,

Standing Counsel—A. J. MACDONELL, Esq.
Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.

LOCAL MANAGER:

W. CLUXTON, Peterboro'.
Peterboro', March 31, 1857. 13.

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON
Fire & Life Insurance Co.

CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.

Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.

RESPONSIBILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS UNLIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTRE'AL.

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on almost every description of property, at as reasonable rates as any other responsible office.

Losses paid without reference to the Old Country.

W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.
Peterboro.' March 24th, 1857. 12

WESTERN
Insurance Company.

CAPITAL £500,000.

Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF
FIRE & MARINE ASSURANCE
BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',
W. CLUXTON.
Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

UNITY FIRE AND UNITY GENERAL
INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS OF ENGLAND.

FOR every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.

CAPITAL £3,500,00 Sterling.

CHIEF OFFICE,—Unity Buildings, Canon St., London. Agent for Peterboro',
W. EASTLAND.
Peterboro', July, 1856.

Provincial Insurance Company.

OF TORONTO, C. W.

Subscribed Capital, $1,897,600. Paid up Capital, $632,366.

PRESIDENT, J. B. HOWARD, Esq.
VICE-PRESIDENT, HON. J. H. CAMERON.

Directors.

HON. W. B. ROBINSON, | H. P. WHITEMORE, Esq.
GEO. DUGGAN, JR., Esq. | GEO. CRAWFORD, Esq.
J. S. HOWARD, Esq. | JOHN CAMERON, Esq., M.P.,
WM. L. PERRIN, Esq. | A. M. CLARKE, Esq., M.D.
HON. J. H. CAMERON. | DUNCAN MCDONNELL, Esq.
CAPT. P. WALLACE,

MANAGER AND SECRETARY:
HON. J. LEANDER STARR.
ASSISTANT SECRETARY:
J. JOSEPA WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK.—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS:—Messrs. DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE:
TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurance business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as in any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Brokers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.

Toronto, April 20, 1858. 42

THE COLONIAL
Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

HEAD OFFICE—Edinburgh, Scotland, and MONTREAL, CANADA.

Proposals for assurance disposed of in Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Adviser for Peterboro,—Dr. MacNab.

AGENT,
W. B. READ.
Peterboro', July 28th, 1857. 30

STONABEE WOOLEN MILL!
PETERBORO' EAST.

THE Subscribers having commenced business in the above-named Establishment, beg to state to their customers and the public generally that they have made large improvement in the Mill, thus rendering it one of the most complete in Upper Canada, and are now prepared to execute every description of

CUSTOM WORK,

INCLUDING

CARDING, SPINNING, WEAVING, FULLING, DYEING, FINISHING, &c.,

In first class style, and hope by strict attention to their business, to enjoy a share of public patronage.

They offer FOR SALE, or will exchange for Wool: Full Cloth, Tweeds, Satinette, Flannels, and Stocking Yarn.

Customers and the public generally are requested to give us a call and examine for themselves.

NEWTON & TEMPLETON.
Peterboro', April 2nd, 1858. 14.

PETERBORO
TEMPERANCE HOUSE.

THE subscriber respectfully informs travellers and residents, that he has taken the building on Water Street, near Calnor's Hotel, as a house from Mr. John Robinson, and he intends to conduct it on strictly Temperance principles, by taking himself a number of the Temperance Society. He also intends keeping

BOARDERS.

The accommodation is such as every person will be satisfied with, and he trusts to receive a fair share of the public patronage.

JOHN M. TREBOUTH.
Peterboro, Feb. 9th, 1858.

Business Notices.

PETERBOROUGH LIVERY STABLE

THE SUBSCRIBER begs to inform the public that he is always ready to furnish them with horses, sleighs, carriages, and every thing required at a Livery, on the shortest notice, and on reasonable terms. His horses are in fine condition, and everything about his establishment is in good order.

He very reluctantly has to withdraw from the long credit system, and begs all who may favor him with their patronage, to remember that he can only continue to accommodate the public, by them, in turn, enabling him to keep up his business, that is, by ready pay.

THOS. EASTLAND.
Peterboro Livery Stables, Hunter Street, Jan. 1st, 1858. 1

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC IN GENERAL.

BARNARD McGARRITY & PARTNER respectfully beg to give notice that they intend to carry on the best horse-shoeing establishment in this town. Foundered feet and every kind of foot-lameness will be attended as well as at any shop in the Province. Blacksmith jobbing of all descriptions done to order. The shop is on Bethune Street near Mr. James Hall's brick dwelling.

Peterboro', Dec. 15, 1857. 50

NOTICE.

ALL indebted to the late firm of HARVEY & THOMSON, will please call and settle without delay; and all having claims against said firm, will please hand in the same before 20th inst.

Peterboro', April 7th, 1858. 14

PUBLIC NOTICE.

ALL persons having claims against the Estate of the l te JOSEPH WEST, of Otonabee, are requested to present the accounts of such claims properly attested, to Mr. Alexander Poe, at the office of Thomas Short Esq., Keene;

And all who may be indebted to the said Estate, are requested to pay the same to Mr. Poe, forthwith, as such of the accounts as remain unsettled on the fifteenth of July next, will be placed in suit for collection.

(Signed) THOMAS SHORT,
WILLIAM WEST,
Administrators.
Keene, Otonabee, 8th June, 1858. 23

NOTICE.

THE Subscriber begs leave to intimate that he has sold out his Boot and Shoe Shop to A. ROSS. All debts standing out up to date, May, 27th, must be paid to him, at his Tannery, Peterboro' East.

JNO. CLARK,
Tanner.
Peterboro' East, June 8, 1858. 23

EVERY SCOTCHMAN

SHOULD read the "Scottish American Journal," published weekly. It contains the best summary of old country news of any paper published in this country, and has besides a series of articles on the "Highland Bonnets," or Achievement of the Scottish Regiments in India and elsewhere. For sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'. Price $2,50 per year in advance, or 3d per single number.

A GOOD PEN

IS A REAL BLESSING.

BUY ONE DOZEN GILT PENS, IN BOX, FOR

ONE QUARTER OF A DOLLAR,

At Sawers & Murray's Stationary Store.

BOOT & SHOES

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform the late customers of Mr. Thomas Russell, and the public in general, that they have entered into partnership, and have made arrangements with him to succeed him in his business. They desire to assure all who favor them with their custom, that their work will be punctually attended to, and their work done in a manner that will ensure satisfaction. They will always be found ready to receive orders, and they hope by such assiduity in their business to receive a share of the public patronage.

All kinds of ready made work kept constantly on hand, and sold on the most reasonable terms for Cash or short approved credit.

Remember the old stand opposite the Eastern entrance to the Town Hall.

O'BRIEN & MAGRATH.
Peterboro', January 13th, 1858. 2

FRESH ARRIVALS!

THE Subscribers have just received a large quantity of Whitefish, of very Superio Quality!

which they will dispose of at greatly reduced prices.

They have also received some choice

BLACK TEAS, CONGOU, SOUCHONG AND ORANGE PEKOE,

which they can with confidence recommend to their friends and the Public.

COUPAR & OGILVY.
Peterboro', March 1, 1858. 9

Mail Stages.

NEW MAIL CONVEYANCE
Between Peterborough and Norwood.

LEAVING Peterborough, will call at McGregor's, Croft's and Caine's Hotels, and George Allan's Union Hotel every

Monday, Wednesday, and Friday Mornings, at 7 o'clock,

For passengers and parcels. Leaving Norwood at 2 o'clock, p. m., will return the same day.

N. N.—Terms for heavy freight, can be had on application.

T. J. HENTHORN, Proprietor.
Peterborough, 24th Nov., 1857. 47

PETERBORO' & OMEMEE.
MAIL STAGE

Will leave Daily as follows, until further notice.

Peterboro' to Omemee, | Omemee to Peterboro,
One o'clock, p. m. | Quarter to 9, a. m.
PETERBORO' TIME.

W. R. WARD, Hunter St., Agent. | R. W. SHAW, Proprietor.
Peterborough, Dec. 21st, 1857.

PORT HOPE, LINDSAY AND BEAVERTON RAILWAY OPEN TO LINDSAY.

ON and after DECEMBER 15th, Trains will run as follows, daily, until further notice.

Lindsay to Port Hope. | Port Hope to Lindsay.

Leaving daily, Sundays excepted.

P. M.		A. M.
PORT HOPE, 3	LINDSAY,	8
CAMPBELLS, 3 40	OMEMEE, Arrive,	8 50
MILLBROOK, 3 55	" Depart,	9
" Depart, 3 55	BRIDGEWICK,	9 20
HARVEY, 4 10	HARVEY,	9 40
BRIDGEWICK, 4 20	MILLBROOK, Ar.	10 25
OMEMEE, Ar. 4 45	" Depart,	10 35
" Depart, 5	CAMPBELLS,	11 20
LINDSAY, Arrive, 6	PORT HOPE Ar.	13

MONTREAL TIME.

C. C. COLE,
Superintendent.
Port Hope, Dec. 15, 1857. 51

Farms, &c., For Sale.

FARM FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale East half 6 in 7th con. and East half of 7 in 7th con. Dummer, containing 100 acres, of which

80 ARE CLEARED

In good cultivation and well fenced; a good

CEDAR LOG HOUSE,

And two large barns, with other good out houses, and a superior well close at hand.

The property is three miles from

NORWOOD,

On an excellent road, and will be sold for £2 10s an acre. From one third to one half to be paid down, the payment of the balance as agreed upon.

HENRY GARDNER.
Dummer, July 10th 1857. 38.

VALUABLE FARM, SAW-MILL, FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber is desirous of selling his property, consisting of 250 acres; 50 of which are under cultivation, comprising a

FINE YOUNG GRAFTED ORCHARD.

There is an excellent DWELLING HOUSE, with Barns, Sheds, and all other necessary Out-Houses, a good water

SAWMILL,

in good running order. The premises consist of Lot No. 9, and south-east quarter of Lot No. 8, in the 11th Concession of the Township of Monaghan. The Farm is one of the finest in the County, and most favorably situated on the Gravel Road, two miles from Peterboro. The wood land consists of hardwood and cedar, and the whole lot is furnished with a good supply of running water.

For further particulars as to terms, &c., apply on the Premises to

W. W. BOSWELL,
Peterboro, Sept. 8, 1857. 36

FOR SALE.

THE SUBSCRIBER offers for sale north half of east half of Lot No. 3, in the 5th Concession of Douro, adjoining the Church, 50 acres, 40 acres cleared. the balance in good clean wood land. There is a good House, Barns, Out-Houses, Stables, Spring, and every convenience for a good Farmer. The land is well fenced, and has been well cultivated.

The terms and price will be made known on application to the proprietor on the premises.

MICHAEL WELSH, Jr,
Lot No. 5, 5th Con. Douro, March 9th 1858.

TO LET.

TWO NEW BRICK STORES fronting on George Street, one for Dry Goods, the other for Groceries. Both finished in the newest and finest style of workmanship, and elegantly painted and varnished, equal to any in Town; the basement stories are well lighted and perfectly dry, and warranted against frost. Application to be made to the proprietor on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', Feb. 1st, 1858. 5

Hardware.

New Stove Warehouse!!!

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform their friends and the Public that they have entered into Partnership as Stove-Dealers, Tinsmiths, &c., and respectfully invite public inspection to their new styles of Stoves, consisting in part of

The Improved Burr,
The Star of the West,
The Wide World,
The Commodore,
The Improved Canadian Farmer,
The Buffalo,
The Black Rover,
The King Stove,
The Premium.

Besides a variety of Parlor and Plate Stoves.

They also receive orders for all kinds of

COPPER, SHEET-IRON AND TIN WORK.

Which their Patrons may depend upon getting done in a manner which will give the greatest satisfaction.

A large stock of TIN-WARE, STOVE-PIPES, and other such articles belonging to their business, kept constantly on hand.

Their premises are on George Street, lately occupied by Messrs. Harvey & Thomson, and next door to Messrs. Glover & Robinson.

BICKLOW & ROBINSON.
Peterboro', October 27, 1857. 43

AXES BY STEAM

THE subscriber invites public attention to his increased facility of making the

SUPERIOR AXES

he has so long supplied to the community, and begs to assure his patrons that he will be unremitting in his efforts to retain for his work the good reputation it has hitherto enjoyed. He offers

Narrow and Broad Axes,

AND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF

EDGE TOOLS,

WHOLESALE and RETAIL, as cheap as they can be purchased here or in any other market, and of a quality that cannot be surpassed.

His premises are located on GEORGE ST., opposite the OLD BURYING GROUND, and to enable him to supply his manufacture in sufficient quantity, and as modern prices, he has called in steam power to his assistance.

☞ Axes Jumped and Ground in quick order.

W. MCCOCK.
Peterboro', Sept. 22, 1857.

M 'LEOD & CO.,
PORT HOPE, C. W.

KEEP Constantly in Stock a good supply of ENGLISH, GERMAN AND AMERICAN

HARDWARE.

ALSO

They are extensively engaged in the Manufacture of

WINDOW BLINDS, SASH AND DOORS, AND MOULDINGS.

READER,—Call and inspect their large establishment.

McLEOD & Co.
Port Hope, November 3, 1857. 44.

Miscellaneous.

PLASTER! PLASTER!!

Pure Vienna Plaster for Sale by ORMOND & GILMOUR.
Peterborough, March, 1858. 13

LETTER AND NOTE PAPERS.

CREAM and Blue Cotton, ruled and plain.—Envelopes, all sizes and qualities to match. A very complete stock on hand. Merchants supplied on liberal terms.

SAWERS & MURRAY,
Stationers, &c., Peterboro'.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK,

THE best of the monthlies for the Ladies, and now so well known, as to render description unnecessary, is always on hand, for sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'.

☞ July Number received, price 25 cts.

Miscellaneous.

HATS! HATS!

THE New York and Canadian Style of Hats is now ready for inspection. Also, a large assortment of Fur Hats and Cloth Caps, &c., &c.

The Trade Supplied as Usual.

A. SECOR,
Hatter, &c.
Cobourg, March 19, 1856. 12

CABINET ROOMS
RE OPENED!

THE subscriber informs his old customers and the public generally, that he has recovered from the effects of the late fire, and has erected a new building on the old site which he has fitted up as a show room. He is daily receiving and making up a choice assortment of

FURNITURE & CABINET WARE,

Of every description, which, as usual, he offers at moderate prices.

He has removed his workshop to the building just erected by Mr. Mocock, where by the use of Steam and the most recent improvements in

LABOUR SAVING MACHINERY,

He will be prepared to manufacture for sale or to order every description of Furniture, at prices unprecedent, in this Town.

W. Y. SWAYNE.
Peterboro', July 8th, 1857. 18.

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE LOT OF LAND, on the Gravel Road, about 3 miles from Peterborough, containing 35 acres, being part of the eastern portion of the North-East quarter of Lot No. 7, 11th Concession North Monaghan, on the West of John Green's Tavern, and adjoining it. Apply to the Subscriber,

WILLIAM BELL.
Monaghan, Jan. 11, 1857. 2

HORSE SHOEING.

BARNARD McGARRITY and WILLIAM MILLER, beg to inform the public, that their horse shoeing prices are as follows:—

A full set, new 6s,
Each remove 6d.

their terms are, if not Cash, well-approved credit.

Peterborough, Jan. 1st, 1858. 1

MECHANICS' INSTITUTE
AND LIBRARY ASSOCIATION

THE DIRECTORS of the Peterborough Mechanics Institute and Library Association respectfully invite the co-operation of the inhabitants of the Town and vicinity to the sustaining of a good READING ROOM and LIBRARY in their midst. The advantages of such must be so evident to every one, that they do not consider it necessary to urge them here. About 100 Papers and Periodicals from different parts of the Canadas and the United States, are received weekly in the Reading Room; and it is intended, should sufficient encouragement be received, to procure in addition to these at an early day, some of the leading British Newspapers. The Library contains 950 volumes, to which additions are constantly being made. The terms of subscription have been placed very low so as to place the advantages within the reach of every person in the community. To shareholders the subscription is 7s 6d, to all others 10s; payable half yearly in advance. Subscriptions will be received, and any other information given on application to the Secretary at the Reading Room. Next the Telegraph Office, Burnham's Block.

S. S. PECK,
Secretary.
MECHANICS' INSTITUTE, May 5th, 1858. 19

TO RENT.

That Splendid Three Story Brick Store, lately occupied by Mr. E. Peplow on Hunter Street.

Also 18 Town Lots for sale. Terms easy.

Apply to the Subscriber on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', June 2, 1858. 22

PERIODICALS, MAGAZINES, &C.

THE subscribers receive every Saturday the Weekly Periodicals in the following list, and on the third Saturday of each month the Monthlies for the next ensuing month, all of which they are prepared to supply on the annexed terms.

Orders respectfully solicited.

PER YEAR.		PER NO.
$2,25 ..	New York Ledger.....	0s 3d.
2,50 ..	Harper's Weekly.....	0 3½
3,00 ..	Ballou's Pictorial.....	0 4
3,25 ..	Waverly Magazine.....	0 4
1,50 ..	Yankee Notions.....	0 1½
2,50 ..	New York Clipper.....	0 3½
2,50 ..	Flag of Our Union.....	0 3½
1,50 ..	Scottish Amer. Journal..	0 3
3,25 ..	Leslie's Illustrated.....	0 4
9,00 ..	Illustrated London News	1 0
5,50 ..	" " Times	0 7½
5,50 ..	Punch.....	0 7½
3,00 ..	Harper's Magazine.....	1 3
2,00 ..	Household Words.....	1 3
2,00 ..	Chamber's Journal.....	1 0
2,50 ..	Mrs. Stephen's Journal..	1 0
2,50 ..	Peterson's Journal.....	1 0
3,00 ..	Godey's Lady's Book....	1 3
3,00 ..	Atlantic Monthly.....	1 3
2,50 ..	New York Mercury.....	0 3
2,50 ..	" " Weekly.....	0 3
2,50 ..	Rural New Yorker.....	0 3

YEARLY SUBSCRIPTIONS
MUST BE STRICTLY
In Advance.

Back Nos. must be paid for when ordered.

SAWERS & MURRAY.
Peterboro', June 23, 1858. 2

BOOK BINDER.

ONLY ONE QUARTER DOLLAR!
FOR THE
VICTORIA PAPETERIE,
OR
CHEAP PACKET OF WRITING MATERIALS
WHICH CONTAINS

12 Sheets fine ruled Letter paper usually sold for.....		7½d
12 Sheets fine ruled Note paper	"	4
12 Large sized Envelopes adhesive	"	3
12 Note " " "	"	2
3 Steel Pens.....		1
1 Holder.....		1
1 Pencil.....		1
1 Sheet Blotting paper.....		1
Making a total of.....		1s 6d.

NOW SOLD FOR
ONE QUARTER DOLLAR,
BY
SAWERS & MURRAY,
AT THE
NEW BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE,
Burnham's Block George-st, Peterborough.
June 22nd, 1858. 24

FRESH TEAS.

JUST RECEIVED from the Ship "Cambaia," direct from China, an assortment of

Hyson, Young Hyson,
Gunpowder, Twankay,

S. E. CURRY, & Co.
Peterboro', 29th June, 1858. 25

DELICIOUS WHISKEY.

20 BBLS Superior Montreal for sale low.

S. E. CURRY & Co.
Peterboro', June 21, 1858.

Miscellaneous.

DR. J. B. ALFORD'S
ECLECTIC, MEDICAL & SURGICAL
OFFICE!

CORNER OF HUNTER AND AYLMER STREETS,
Near the Residence of James Hall, Esq.,
PETERBOROUGH.

DR. A. would announce to the citizens of Peterborough and vicinity, that he has located in this place for the purpose of attending to the duties of his profession. His system of treatment is purely Eclectic, using only those agents which are safe and reliable. INVALIDS however despairing, are invited to call, as no expense will be incurred without a corresponding prospect of recovery.

Residence—American Hotel.
Peterboro', Oct, 10, 1857. 41

PECK'S
EXCELSIOR SKY-LIGHT DAGUERRIAN GALLERY,

SECOND FLOOR, BURNHAM'S BLOCK, GEORGE ST., PETERBORO'.

A SPLENDID ASSORTMENT of Plain and Fancy Cases always on hand at very moderate prices.

Office Hours, from 9 A.M. to 5 P.M.

S. S. PECK, Proprieto
Peterboro, Sept 7, 1857. 31

PAPER AND STATIONERY
WHOLESALE.

THE Subscribers, in calling the attention of the trade and merchants generally to their Stock of PAPERS AND STATIONERY, beg to state that they are now receiving the Papers manufactured at Four Extensive Mills—that they are sole agents for the FIRST PRIZE

Canadian Manufactured Writing, Printing and Wrapping Papers.

The Mills with which they are connected having taken all the First Prizes for Paper at Kingston in 1856, and in Montreal in 1857.

Their CANADIAN MANUFACTURED WRITING PAPERS are 25 per cent cheaper than imported papers of a similar quality; and as one large Mill is now devoted exclusively to this branch, the quality of the Goods is daily improving, while the increased production has enabled the makers to reduce their prices equal to 10 per cent. from former rates. An unusually large Stock of also on hand, at reduced rates.

WRAPPING PAPER

The ordinary sizes of PRINTING PAPER always in Stock, and Paper of any size and weight made to order.

Additional attention will in future be given to IMPORTED STATIONERY, &c., their intention being to make their Warehouse a Depot where Stationers, Bookbinders, Printers, &c., will always find a full and complete assortment of the best

British and Foreign Staple and Fancy Goods.

Orders per post will have our best attention.

CHALMERS & ROBERTSON,
224 St. Paul Street, Montreal.
May 5, 1858. 18

CASH FOR TALLOW.

THE HIGHEST Market price in CASH paid for all descriptions of Tallow and Soap Grease, at the Pine Grove Factory.

WM. HOOEY.
Port Hope, May 22, 1858. 6t

PINE GROVE
SOAP AND CANDLE FACTORY.

THE Undersigned having leased the above establishment will from this date be prepared to supply the trade with SOAP and CANDLES of a Superior Quality at Toronto Prices.

WM. HOOEY.
Port Hope, May 22, 1858. 6t

NEW SPRING GOODS.

THE SUBSCRIBERS have received large additions to their Stock of

STATIONERY AND MISCELLANEOUS GOODS, BOOKS, &C.,

To which they would respectfully direct attention. In the present consignment they have added

Albums, Keepsakes, Philopenas,
Embossed and Tinted Note Papers and Envelopes,
Counting House Pencils, Red and Blue Lead,
New Patent Drapers Air-tight Inkstands, for regulating the supply of Ink, Duplicate Impression Papers for Embroidering, Copying Plans, Drawings, Pictures &c., &c.
Marking Ink, Cloth Stretchers, Carmine Ink,
Pencil Sharpeners, Blank Promissory Notes in Sheets and Books,
Portmonaies, Conversation Cards,
Sunday School Cards and Scripture Maps, &c., &c.

A GREAT VARIETY OF

TOY BOOKS
AND PICTURE CARDS

For Children also received.

N. B.—In a few days they will also add a large Stock of the well known publications of Carter & Brothers, New York.

SAW

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND
Ornamental.----Bronzing,
&c., &c., &c.,
Neatly executed, on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the
EXAMINER PRINTING ESTABLISHMENT,
BURNHAM'S BLOCK,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, JULY 15, 1858.

Volume 3.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 27.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

ARE TEN SHILLINGS in ADVANCE, for ONE YEAR; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING

Six Lines, and under, first insertion	£0	2	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	7½
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0	3	0
Each subsequent insertion	0	1	0
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0	0	4
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	1

☞ Advertisements without written instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognised.

Business Directory.

MR. DESBISCOUX,
BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

E. BURNHAM,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

STAFFORD F. KIRKPATRICK,
BARRISTER, &c., &c., &c., has returned to Peterborough, and resumed the practice of his profession in all its branches.
Office over Mr. McDougall's Store.
Peterboro,' June, 1856.

C. A. WELLER,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. H. J. Vinard, Esq.

MR. MARTIN DUNSFORD,
ATTORNEY at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c. Office over the New Post Office, Peterborough.

W. B. RUBIDGE,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, &c. &c., &c.
Peterboro', March 10th, 1856.

DR. HOLYWELL,
HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Rubidge's. Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,
SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' West.

M. S. MACDOWELL,
MECHANICAL AND MECHANICAL DENTIST.
OFFICE over A. W. Kempt's Drug Store, George Street, Peterboro.
May, 1856. 18

ALBRO & VINDIN,
Commission, Shipping, Forwarding
AND GENERAL AGENTS,
Lumber Merchants, &c.,
Port Hope, C. W.
Office—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets.

GEORGE TANNER,
FURNITURE WARE-ROOMS,
HUNTER STREET, PETERBOROUGH,
Opposite Eastland's Livery.
Peterboro', Oct., 6, 1857. 40

A. W. KEMPT,
DRUGGIST, Dealer in Genuine Drugs and Chemicals, Patent Medicines, Paints, Oils, Colours, Dye Stuffs, Perfumery, Spices, Hair Nail and Tooth Brushes, Smelling and Toilet Bottles, Fancy Soap, Culinary Essences, &c.
Medical Hall, George Street, Peterboro.'

MESSRS. STEWART,
ARCHITECTS, Engineers, Land Surveyors, and Land Agents. Office, Mill Street, Port Hope.
GEO. A. STEWART.
CHAS. B. STEWART.
Port Hope, May 22, 1857. 21.

JOHN HAYDEN,
Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, Window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.
King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 3, 1857. 36—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.
INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.
Peterboro', May 20th, 1857. 23

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD,
PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.
COMMUNICATIONS THROUGH THE POST OFFICE,
Peterboro.

JOHNSON'S
FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.
Port Hope, Sept. 30, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,
BURNHAM STREET, PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST.
MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.
Peterboro', Sept. 2, 1856. 3

W. COULTER,
Druggist and Apothecary
PETERBORO'
Dealer in Medicines, English and French Chemicals, Patent Medicines Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Window Glass and Perfumery. Particular attention paid to putting up Physicians Prescriptions, Family Receipts and Country orders. ALSO, English, American and Garden, Field and Flower Seeds, Together with an assortment of Mineral Bottles, Confectionery and Fancy Articles.

A. MEDCER & SONS,
TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.
Peterboro', June 5, 1856. 10—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.
A. SHERD, Agent.
May, 1856. 19

BANK, BANKING, &c.

Provincial Parliament.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY.

THE FEDERAL UNION.

TUESDAY, July 6th.

The first notice of motion called was "Mr. Galt—Certain resolutions on the subject of a Federal Union."

Mr. GALT explained why he had not concluded his speech the other evening with a motion. When the subject of Representation by Population was before the House, knowing that many members were absent, and that it was not likely the question would be brought to a vote this session he thought he could not occupy the time better than by stating his views on the subject of Federal Union. But as two amendments had already been moved, it was not competent for him to move a third. His own motion had now been called in regular order, and, believing that even at this late period of the session a day could not be better spent than in giving members an opportunity of expressing their views on this important subject, he would now move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole to consider the following resolutions:—

1. That in view of the rapid development of the Population and resources of Western Canada irreconcilable difficulties present themselves to the maintenance of that equality which formed the basis of the Union of Upper with Lower Canada—and require this House to consider the means whereby the progress which has so happily characterized this Province may not be arrested through the occurrence of sectional jealousies and dissentions. It is therefore the opinion of this House that the Union of Upper with Lower Canada, should be changed from a Legislative to a Federative Union by the sub-division of the Province into two or more Divisions, each governing itself, in local and sectional matters, with a general Legislature and Government for subjects of national and common interest; and that a Committee of nine members be now named to report on the best means and mode of effecting such constitutional changes.

2. That considering the claims possessed by this province on the North Western and Hudson's Bay territories and the necessity of making provision for the government of the said districts, it is the opinion of this House, that in the adoption of a Federative Constitution for Canada, means should be provided for the local government of the said territories under the general Government, until population and settlement may from time to time entitle them to be admitted into the Canadian Confederation.

3. That a General Confederation of the Provinces of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia Newfoundland and Prince Edward's Island, with Canada and the Western Territories, is most desirable, and calculated to promote their several and united interests, by preserving to each Province the uncontrolled management of its peculiar institutions, and of those internal affairs, respecting which difference of opinion might arise with other members of the Confederation, while it will increase that identity of feeling which pervades the possession of the British Crown in North America; and by the adoption of an uniform policy for the development of the vast and varied resources of these immense territories, will greatly add to their national power and consideration; and that a Committee of nine members be appointed to report on the steps to be taken for ascertaining, without delay, the sentiments of the inhabitants of the Lower Provinces, and of the Imperial Government, on this most important subject.

Mr. BROWN suggested that the resolutions should be made a special, order next after Representation by Population and the Double Majority, and that an agreement should be come to on both sides of the House to fix a day when the whole of those questions should be brought to a vote.

Mr. GALT was willing to accept the suggestion, if the Government on their part agreed to it.

Atty. Gen. MACDONALD said the Government could not give any such guarantee and if the hon. gentleman's resolution were put on the Order of the Day, he must take the risk himself of their again coming up. He did not think the joint influence of himself and the member for Toronto could secure the occation of the debate on any of the questions.

Atty. Gen. CARTIER thought the member for Sherbrooke should proceed now with the discussion of the question of Federation. He knew that many members from Lower Canada, while they could never consent to Representation by Population, were of opinion that a Federation would be the solution of the difficulty in the event of Upper Canada obtaining a large excess of population.

Hon. Mr. DRUMMOND suggested that, before going on with the discussion, a number of propositions between should be disposed of.

This suggestion was agreed to.

THE MUNICIPAL LAW.

WEDNESDAY, July 7.

The House went again into Committee on the Bill entitled "An Act respecting the Municipal Institutions of Upper Canada."

The Committee went through the remaining clauses of the Bill, and reported the same with amendments. The amendments being read, were concurred in.

Mr. BROWN suggested that some provision should be made to fix a limit both to the power of municipalities to borrow, and to the amount of assessment.

Atty. Gen. MACDONALD said a limit to the borrowing power was provided for by its being necessary to submit every loan to a vote of the ratepayers, and experience had shown that persons will refuse to vote for local improvements, the expenditure of which will be felt for many years, unless they are absolutely necessary. [illegible] the Bill already [illegible] the Bill was read a third time and passed.

CHEMISTS AND DRUGGISTS.

Hon. Mr. ALLEYN moved the second reading of the Bill to regulate the education of Apothecaries, Chemists and Druggists, and the sale of poisons. He said that while defending some time ago, a person charged with poisoning, he had been much struck with the few restrictions there were for the sale of poisons by Apothecaries and ordinary shop-keepers. The present Bill had been prepared under the supervision of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Lower Canada. The Bill provided that a register should be kept of the sale of substances capable of destroying life, and that druggists who sold these articles should be subject to an examination, to show that they were capable of distinguishing the properties of the articles they vended. The Bill was confined to Lower Canada.

Mr. DUNKIN said he had received a very strong representation against the Bill. There were various objections to it, not perhaps sufficient to prevent the second roading, but sufficient to call for important modifications of the Bill. It was evidently, as stated by the hon. mover, a Bill drawn up by the medical profession, as it assigned to them the entire supervision of the apothecary trade. It provided that no person should carry on the business of an apothecary, druggist or vender of medicines, unless he should have served a regular apprenticeship for three years, and obtained a diploma from the College of Physicians and Surgeons. The third section provided that in order to obtain this diploma, it was absolutely necessary that every such person should have received a sound classical education, and should be master of the French and English languages—should have attended a course of botany, &c.; and there was no saving clause in the Bill, on behalf of those already in the trade. He believed it would throw out of practice of the profession some of the largest wholesale dealers in Lower Canada, who could not profess much acquaintance with the Latin and Greek languages. The 7th section imposed heavy penalties upon any who sold drugs without these diplomas. He would not ask a division on the second reading, but he hoped important modifications would be introduced into the Bill before it passed.

Mr. MACKENZIE said that Dr. Tumblety would have good cause to petition against this Bill. When he was hauled up and fined $25, he took out a big roll of bills and tossing them to his Solicitor, said, "Pay it." But this Bill provided that for a second offence a man should go to gaol. This was one of the most absurd Bills ever put on the table of the House. It must have been prepared after the Government took its afternoon dram. Under it, a man could not sell a dose of salts unless he had served a three years' apprenticeship, and could speak French and Latin, and know something of Greek. A more ridiculous Bill never came before them.

Mr. DORION also characterised the Bill as an absurd measure as regarded the qualifications of those permitted to sell the mildest medicines. As regarded the sale poisons clause, it already existed substantially in the present law. He did not say it should not go to a Committee; but if the Committee dealt with it properly, they would knock out three-fourths of it.

Hon. J. S. MACDONALD said, that under this Bill, a sick man, living fifteen miles from Montreal, could not get a dose of salts or castor oil, without sending in for it to the city, as a country store-keeper could not be supposed to be possessed of all these qualifications. However, if the people of Lower Canada desired it, he would not object; but no Government would dare to bring in such a Bill for Upper Canada.

Hon. Mr. SICOTTE—It is not a Government measure.

Hon. J. S. MACDONALD said it was brought in by a member of the Government and on a Government day.

Hon. Mr. ALLEYN said he was not surprised at the course taken by the member for Cornwall, as he knew he was a political weather-cock. Only a few hours ago, a member of the medical profession told him that Mr. Macdonald was enthusiastically in favour of the Bill.

Hon. J. S. MACDONALD—Name.

Hon. Mr. ALLEYN—I will give the name if the hon member walks over to me.

Hon. Mr. MACDONALD—I suppose it was Dr. Jones, of Montreal, of Tumblety notoriety. He spoke to me at the dinner-table.

Hon. Mr. ALLEYN—Dr. Jones is a respectable man, and he told me the member for Cornwall was anxious that the Bill should be brought on.

Hon. J. S. MACDONALD—I never said anything of the kind.

Hon. Mr. ALLEYN did not care a straw whether the member for Cornwall was in favour of the Bill or not; and he [illegible] this hon member was a time-server. He [illegible] to power on [illegible] principles. [illegible] against this Bill, and the community [illegible] the passing of it, he had [illegible] the House. [illegible] a class will be [illegible] It had been sent to him by the [illegible] and he had presented [illegible] it. It was a good Bill. What he chiefly cared about, however, were the clauses restricting the sale of poisons.

Hon. J. S. MACDONALD, rising to reply was met by Mr. FERRES, with cries of Spoke!—Spoke!

Hon. J. S. MACDONALD said the hon member, generous as usual, would prevent him from replying, but an hon friend beside him would prepare a motion on which he could speak. This was a day the Government got appropriated to their own business, after a hard fight, and now, instead of bringing on the Tariff as had been expected they occupied it with the discussion of this Bill, which the gentleman who introduced it said he did not care whether it passed or not. He appealed to the House whether it was seemly for a Minister of the Crown to retail a dinner-table conversation in order to damage a political opponent. He (Mr. Macdonald) denied that he had ever said he was anxious for the Bill. The Commissioner of Public Works was not the man who was in a position to make such attacks—owing his seat as he did to 15,000 fictitious votes. How he got into office in the Government, he did not know; but the first use he made of it was to send down £15,000 to Quebec; and he had been busily engaged all this session, stuffing all enquiries concerning his seat. He believed he only got in by chance into the Administration, and he would be ejected from it in a few days, if all stories were true. If he (Mr. Macdonald) were to copy his example, and retail private conversations, he could state things which would bring a blush on the hon gentleman's face.

Hon. Mr. TERRILL hoped that a one of the poison spoken of in the Bill had got into the blood of the Commissioner of Public Works and the member for Cornwall. A Minister of the Crown was always expected to keep good temper. (Hear, hear.) He did not think that anything said by the member for Cornwall, rightly understood, justified the attack which had been made upon him. As regarded the Bill, he hoped the important modifications would be made on it.

Dr. DESAULNIERS thought the Bill wise in many of its provisions. Druggists ought to be men of some education. There was nothing ridiculous in the measure. He hoped it would pass a second reading, and that no lawyer would be placed on the Committee.

Hon. Mr. LORANGER defended the measure, considering that medical men were the best judges of the measures required by the country in relation to medical matters.

Mr. LANGEVIN considered there were several defects in the Bill, but he did not think that persons wholly unlearned in the apothecarial profession should be allowed to practice it.

Mr. PICHE approved of the Bill.

Mr. BELLINGHAM believed that many of the pedlars who travelled over Upper Canada vended the deadliest poison known, strychnine, and he had known it used for the destruction of cattle. There was a great deal that was salutary in the Bill, but the qualifications of the vendors were placed rather high. He would not prevent country traders from selling drugs, but he would not allow poisons to be sold anywhere but in cities, and by properly qualified men. The details of the Bill would of course be modified in Committee.

Dr. BEAUBIEN supported the Bill.

Mr. MACKENZIE protested against the course taken by the Government in occupying a night which should have been devoted to Government business, with discussion on a Bill without sense or reason, which the hon. gentleman who introduced it did not care for, nor any one else. Yet, after Mr. Alleyn's speech they had speeches for hours from the Provincial Secretary, and others of the brethren in all sorts of languages. The Government were factious in taking up the time of the House with such a piece of nonsense. The hon. gentleman wanted a three years apprenticeship for apothecaries. He thought it would be much more necessary for Commissioners of Public Works to serve an apprenticeship. (Laughter.) There was castor oil. Was a person to be allowed to die for want of it, because the grocer could not tell its name in Latin and French, as well as in English? They talked of sending the Bill to a Committee. If the Commissioner of Public Works, aided by the faculty of Lower Canada, could not produce a better Bill, he did not think that at this late period of the session they could do much good by a tinkering it in a Committee. If the hon. gentleman did not care a straw about the Bill, whether it passed or not, why did he get it printed in French and English, and hinder the House with discussing it? He (Mr. Mackenzie) did not care a straw about the Bill either. There was green vitriol; it was a poison, but it was sold by the hogshead. In future was no one to sell it, unless he could tell its name in Latin, Greek and Hebrew? Nitric acid was constantly wanted in the trades, but hereafter, if this Bill passed, no one could sell it, but the holders of these diplomas. Such a Bill could not have proceeded from any one but the Commissioner of Public Works. How he managed to get 20,000 votes in Quebec, passed his comprehension. There was Godfrey's Cordial. A child was rearing and crying with a pain in the abdomen —(laughter)—its father went to a store where Godfrey's Cordial had been sold for a century before, but he was told by the store-keeper—"Oh, they have passed a law that will send me to gaol if I sell it;" and the poor babe must continue to cry on. Suppose he had the toothache, and wanted a little creosote to put into the tooth, he must go to the Commissioner of Public Works or some other Commissioner, to get permission to buy it.

Hon. Mr. ALLEYN—I would give you any amount of poison.

Mr. MACKENZIE—What a statement! These hon. gentlemen, the Lower Canada [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Provincial Parliament.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL

WEDNESDAY, July 7.

SABBATH OBSERVANCE BILL.

Hon. Mr. DEBLAQUIERE moved the second reading of this Bill, and said it was not his intention to trouble the House with any further observations on the subject.—He thought enough had been said to show its importance, and he therefore contented himself by simply moving its second reading.

Hon. Col. TACHE said the hon. gentleman was right in not now entering into any argument respecting this Bill. He appeared to have counted the heads, and to have made sure that enough members were present to carry his measure; and that was all he cared for. The hon. gentleman appeared to have two sets of scales, in one of which he weighed his friends, and in the other his opponents. Had he (Col. Tache) suspected when the Bill was last before the House that it would have been brought up again, he certainly would have put it out of his power to do so. But he and his friends would not in future refrain from exercising all the privileges that belonged to them.—The hon. gentleman was playing with a double-edged sword, and on some future day he would see the danger of handling so dangerous a weapon.

Hon. Mr. DEBLAQUIERE said he thought his hon. friend had not come to the discussion of this question in that calm temper which ought to belong to members of the House when debating a matter of so great importance. The hon. gentleman had remarked on his rising, two pair of scales;—and he would observe that were he to weigh his hon. friend in either of those scales, he feared he should just now find him wanting, for he had not adduced a single argument against the second reading. Whether it was accepted or rejected, he (Mr. DeBlaquiere) was willing to abide by public opinion as to his want of courtesy and propriety in again bringing it forward.

Hon. Mr. VANKOUGHNET said he thought it would be proved that the practice commenced almost for the first time yesterday, would be found to be very inconvenient, and it would necessitate a resort to the practice to which his hon. friend (Col. Tache) had referred. On the evening when the Bill was last before the House, his hon friend (Col. Tache) refrained from moving the three or six months' hoist because he would not appear discourteous to the mover of the Bill. He (Mr. Vankoughnet) should vote for the second reading in hope that the Bill would be materially altered in Committee.

Hon. Col. PRINCE said he was persuaded that, if the Bill passed this House, it would pass the Assembly. He did not approve of the spirit in which his hon. friend (Col. Tache) had met the author of the Bill.

Hon. Mr. FERRIE called his hon friend to order, and said he spoke so often that he was a perfect nuisance. Yesterday, he spoke five times on one question.

Hon. Col. PRINCE said he had not before addressed the House on the second reading, and he advised his hon. friend, who was a "potent, grave and reverend seignor," to learn two things—the first was to keep his temper, and the second to acquire wisdom.

Hon. Col. TACHE denied that he had said anything improper on the present occasion.

Hon. Mr. PATTON objected to the course taken on this Bill, on its coming up a second time. So long as they adhered to the rules it was not for an hon. gentleman to impute motives to those who availed themselves of their privileges. He trusted the House would not continue to indulge in unseemly strife over what might be properly called a religious question.

Hon. Mr. FERGUSSON said this was looked upon too much as a sectional question; but it was not so, and should not be treated as such. He had heard an hon. gentleman, with a sneer, call it a Jewish enactment—it was a Christian law. The country demanded this measure, and until it was carried there would be continued agitation in its favour. A poor, miserable, weak, vacillating, tottering Ministry might throw every obstacle in the way of this Bill passing; but the voice of the country would rise like thunder against a hypocritical legislature which professed Christianity and yet permitted the habitual desecration of the Sabbath. (Hear, hear.)

Hon. Mr BOULTON said he endeavoured, a few years ago, to effect a similar object to that sought by this Bill, but the address he moved on that occasion, although well supported, did not carry. He mentioned as instance of a Bill having been once rejected at Quebec being brought up a second time, the six months' hoist not having been moved when the measure was first before the House and expressed himself in favour of this Bill. The telegraph office, which was of more importance than the post-office had never been opened on the Sunday, and no evil results had ensued.

Hon. Mr. DE LA TERRIERE said although he found himself among a number of holy patriarchs, he was bound to say he considered it his duty to oppose them. If the practice of restoring Bills a second time were adopted the greatest confusion would result; and should this measure pass it would reflect ridicule upon the Legislature.

Hon. Mr. FERRIE said he was in favour of doing away with Sabbath labour as far as possible, but he had some doubts whether moral suasion was not better than Acts of Parliament to effect this object. He would however vote for the second reading, with the conviction that the Bill would be considerably altered in Committee, and if it were not so amended, he reserved to himself the right of voting or refusing to vote for the third reading. As to the canals, he held that it would be a work of mercy to permit a boat-load of emigrants to reach the open lake during hot weather, instead of keeping them pent up in canals the whole of Sunday, but he would prevent vessels leaving the starting posts on Sunday;—The hon. gentleman then referred to the keeping of post-offices and the running of trains on Sundays, in similar terms to those employed when the Bill was last under the attention of the House.

Hon. Mr. QUESNEL said the Lower Canadians regarded the sanctity of the Sabbath as much as the Upper Canadians, but the mode of keeping the Sunday was differently estimated by different Doctors of Divinity. The Catholics of Lower Canada, in opposing the Bill, acted only in accordance with the doctrines of their Church, and not in a spirit of hostility to the Protestants of Upper Canada. There were some kinds of labour and recreation which were not only allowable but necessary, and they were permitted by the Church to which he belonged.

The motion was then put and the House divided on the following result:—

CONTENTS.—Hons. Messrs. DeBlaquiere, Ferguson, Vankoughnet, Matheson, Boulton, Gordon, Seymour, Smith (Dr.), Prince, Patterson, Dickson, Gordon, Merritt, Simpson, Moore, Perry, Mills, Cauchon, and Ferrie—21.

NOT-CONTENTS.—Honorables Messrs. Cameron, Quesnel, De La Terriere, Tache, Carling, Desbarats, Panet, Renaud, Smith (Wellington), Sherwood, Turnbull, Wilson, Forbes—15.

Hon. Mr. MURNEY who left the Chamber shortly before the vote was taken, having resumed his seat, and on being asked what way he voted, he said that in the Receiver General's absence he would not vote, having made an agreement to that effect.

Hon. Col. PRINCE—Is it understood that the Receiver General is opposed to the Bill, and that he would vote against it.

Hon. Mr. MURNEY—Not only would he vote against it, but he considers it very unfair to bring the Bill up again.

Hon. Col. PRINCE—I hope that will go to the country.

The Bill was then read a second time, and

Hon. Mr. DEBLAQUIERE moved that it be referred to a Select Committee composed of Hons. Messrs. Ferguson, Moore, Morris, Boulton, Gordon, Goodhue, Dickson, Prince, Patton, Simpson, and the mover.

Hon. Mr. RENAUD complained that there were only two Lower Canadians on the Committee.

Hon. Mr. DEBLAQUIERE said he did not desire to imperil the Bill by putting on the Committee a majority of those who were avowedly opposed to it.

The Bill was then referred to the Committee named.

TIMBER LICENSES.

TUESDAY, July 8.

The Speaker took the chair at three o'clock.

Hon. Mr. VANKOUGHNET presented two petitions—one of which was from lumberers and others on the Ottawa and its tributaries—against the Bill of the Crown Land Commissioner before the other House, on the ground that it will operate injuriously against the holders of timber licenses.

THE SABBATH OBSERVANCE BILL.

Hon. Mr. DEBLAQUIERE, from the Committee, reported this Bill with several amendments, which having been read at the table, the hon gentleman said they had been made for the purpose of meeting, as far as the Committee could do so, the objections taken to the Bill on the second reading. Though the amendments appeared to be somewhat numerous, they were simple in their character, and he did not think they would admit of much discussion. The Committee had met the objections taken by the President of the Council with regard to accidents causing delay to railway trains, and to the non-delivery of mails to the post-offices, on the Sabbath; and they had also met another objection having reference to the detention of vessels in canals on the Sabbath, under peculiar circumstances. The Committee had also revised the penalty clause, and provided that two Justices instead of one magistrate should have jurisdiction in cases of breaches of the law. And to prevent this Bill being denominated a Jewish enactment, the word "Sabbath" had been struck out and "Lord's Day" substituted. He moved that the amendments be now taken into consideration.

Hon. Mr. VANKOUGHNET hoped his hon. friend would not endeavour to force the amendments through without affording an opportunity for their consideration. The hon. gentleman had stuck very closely to Parliamentary practice in bringing the Bill up a second time, and he trusted he would now adhere to the custom of the Imperial Parliament, which was that no Bill should be advanced more than one stage at the same sitting. Instead of that, however, the hon. gentleman had clothed himself in his Bill and endeavoured to jump down the throats of the other members—clothes, boots, and all. If the hon. gentleman was sincere in what he called "God's work" and the "Lord's service," he would not be so discourteous as to force the Bill upon the House before the amendments could be printed and considered.

Hon. Mr. MORRIS recommended his hon. friend, as an objection had been taken, to give way.

Hon. Mr. DEBLAQUIERE then moved that the amendments be printed and considered to-morrow.

Considerable discussion here took place on a request made by several Lower Canada members that the consideration of the report should be postponed until Tuesday.

Hon. Mr. MORRIS said that no good end would be served by so great delay. The only amendments were that instead of closing the canals, post-offices, &c., from midnight on Saturday until midnight on Sunday, they should remain closed from eight o'clock on Sunday morning until nine o'clock on Sunday night.

Other supporters of the measure spoke in favour of the Bill being considered to-morrow.

Hon. Col. TACHE moved in amendment that the consideration of the report be postponed until Tuesday.

Hon. Mr. VANKOUGHNET said so far as he was concerned, he was willing that the report should come up to-morrow, and he thought he should then be in a position to prove, by half-a-dozen words, that so hasty had been the Committee in pushing through the Bill that some portions of the Bill were inconsistent with other portions of it. Several Lower Canadians were absent from the House; and it would almost appear that his hon. friend was afraid of delay lest they might come up in the meantime.

Hon. Mr. DEBLAQUIERE said it was for that reason he objected to the delay.

Hon. Mr. VANKOUGHNET said if anything else had been wanting to convince him of the necessity for delay it was this admission. The members referred to, had as much right to vote as those present. The unseemly haste to push the measure through against the wishes of its opponents, for Provinces remote from the scene of its action, seems to [illegible] Hear.

Hon. Col. PRINCE said that the objection of his hon. friend (Mr. DeBlaquiere) was perfectly legitimate—that the Bill should be postponed until an opportunity had been given of drawing up the members from Lower Canada. He would advise his hon. friend to make his Bill apply solely to Upper Canada—to cut the Gordian knot, and permit Lower Canada members to go free. (Hear, hear.) He believed the Lower Canadians would not be in favour of the Bill though an angel dropped from the clouds. Therefore, for Heaven's sake let Lower Canada have nothing to do with it. (Hear, hear.)

Hon. Mr. HOLMES would regret exceedingly if the Lower Canadians could say that his hon. friend had forced upon them opinions they disclaimed. He would be sorry to see the measure pushed through against the wishes of the Lower Canadians, and he would therefore support the suggestion

"Buncombe" in America.

A diffusive and cagey orator having made a complacent irrational and very unnecessary speech in the House of Representatives at Washington, where nobody thought it worth while to contradict him, was afterwards asked by a friend who met him in Pennsylvania Avenue why he had made such a display? "I was not speaking to the House," he replied; "I was speaking to Buncombe"—a county or district by the majority of whose votes he had been elected. Hence Buncombe or Bunkum has become a phrase in America—and to some extent in England also—to express that extra Parliamentary oratory which appeals to the passions and prejudices of the outside people, and not to the reason and sound sense of a deliberative assembly.—Recent mails from the United States show that the reverend senators of the Upper House at Washington have been indulging in much Buncombe upon the question of the alleged outrages of British cruisers in the Gulf of Mexico. One bellicose Senator from the South named Toombs, has declared himself ready for a war with England, and expressed his wish that, if volunteers and enquiries be wanted, he might be counted in. Keen that intelligent and able statesman, Mr. Seward, the Senator for New York, who abhors Slavery, and who thinks no greater calamity could befall the world than a war between England and the United States, has been "bunkumising" —with a view, no doubt, to catch votes on some future occasion. But English readers should not attach to such displays greater importance than they deserve. The Americans, if a sensitive, are a sensible people; and, though every State in the Union may have its county of Buncombe, the dictates of reason and not of passion, of common sense and not of effervescent prejudice, will be allowed to settle the vexed questions arising out of the "Right of Search," and the measures taken by Great Britain for the suppression of the Slave Trade.—The American lawmakers, especially those who have gone through a contested election, or who know what a contested election means, should make allowances for the unfortunate necessities that sometimes compel a wise man to talk nonsense.

Though we believe, after the statements made last week in the British House of Commons, that the present dispute—if it be not to give these exaggerated statements too high a range—will be amicably adjusted, and in a manner consistent with the interests, the dignity and the Christianity of two great and kindred nations, it will be well to explain to the people of this country how it is that, from time to time, so much jealousy and animosity are expressed towards England by speakers and writers on the other side of the Atlantic. The great bulk of the Americans are the descendants of Englishmen and Scotchmen—men who, when they speak from their hearts of England, her laws, her literature, and her example, might borrow the words of Professor Holmes—

Our little mother isle! God bless her!

The descendants of the French, the Germans, and the Norwegians, who form another large class in America, have no ill-feeling towards England. If they do not love her, they certainly do not hate her. They are a patient, plodding and industrious people, and if they are to be drawn into a war must be convinced of its overwhelming necessity. Whence, then, the Buncombe that fathers England? and which it is necessary to propitiate even at the cost of reason, justice and propriety? It exists mainly in the Irish immigration. The Hibernio-Americans, as a body, entertain a religious, as well as a political, hatred towards Great Britain. This feeling would doubtless die out were it not fostered and fomented for purposes of ecclesiastical dominion and influence, or encouraged for the selfish objects of ambitious demagogues who leave Great Britain for Great Britain's good, and strive to raise themselves into notoriety and power in the new country by acts and artifices that in the old country ceased to be profitable when they ceased to be dangerous. Parties in America are divided in reality into the Pro-slavery and the Anti-slavery parties, or, with some minor shades of difference, that are so shifting as the glass fragments in a kaleidoscope, into the Republican and Democratic parties. These are the two great and essential divisions—shift and change as they may;—and, these being pretty nearly balanced, the Irish party, well drilled and organized, is able but too often to turn the scale. Hence the Hiberno-Americans are feared, and yet courted, by both parties; and hence every now and then statesmen who have no sympathy for the Irish and the Irish cause it expedient and necessary to catch their votes by anti-English Buncombe. We are convinced that Mr. Toombs of the South, and Mr. Seward of the North, would equally deplore any serious misunderstanding with Great Britain. Nor, after what has occurred in the British Parliament in reference to this subject, is such a misunderstanding likely. The British Government is inclined to act with courtesy and prudence, and, if seconded by sensible men on the other side of the Atlantic, they will not only preserve peace and friendship between the two nations, but make the Slaveholders and Slaveowners of the United States look exceedingly foolish in the estimation of the world.

While admitting that one-half or three-fourths of the cases of alleged outrages and insolence on the part of British cruisers are mere inventions, that have their origin sometimes in malevolence, sometimes in ignorance, and sometimes from nothing more than the spirit of exaggeration, we must take the fact of the ready credence which they obtain, as a proof of the dangerous nature of the supervision which England allows to exercise over the navies of the world. If some but weak nation, unable to resist, will submit to it, we virtually challenge strong nations to try conclusions with us. It is right to rescue distressed damsels; it is right to prevent the traffic in slaves; but Don Quixote is the one case, and Great Britain is the other, must take the consequences. England is not prepared for a Buncombe war with America, or even for a war with Spain in such a cause. England and the United States, cordially united upon the question, with their naval commanders acting in concert and in good fellowship, might by a joint blockade stifle nests of Cuba, shake the sovereignty, and end long the power of the Queen. But while Americans think a distant slave owner of the interior of Africa, and a distant slave owner of the depths of Arkansas, equally entitled to the protection of the British cruiser that can land them on British soil, and while they look upon the British cruiser but with the hatred of the thief or devoted and the slave trader, and mind no more

[illegible]

English statesmen and the English people believe that Americans will not plunge into a war of humanity or sentiment for the extension of the Uniform Traffic; but they acknowledge that America has a right to her own opinion on this as on every other question, and will rightly resent from all Slave interference, except such as our friend may accept with pardon. Remember, example, family p[illegible] these are the only weapons which we have any moral or national right to employ against our brother on this question. On his head, and not on ours, will be the consequences either of permitting the wrong or aiding in its extension. On this point there is no "Buncombe" in England.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Notice—J. Edwards.
Look Out—F. & L. Lemay.
Just Received—Cooper & Ogilvy.
Quarry to Let—George A. Stewart.
Caution—Richard Winch.

The Examiner.

THURSDAY, JULY 15, 1858.

Representation by Population.

This question was fairly tested in the House, on Monday last, when the vote was taken upon Mr. Cauchon's amendment to throw out the motion of Mr. Malcom Cameron, affirming the principle and insisting upon the immediate introduction of Representation by Population. The Cabinet was itself divided upon it; of the section representing Upper Canada, Mr. Sidney Smith voted against, and Messrs. Cayley and John A. Macdonald voted for the amendment. The majority in the whole House was, favorable to Mr. Cauchon's amendment, 64; against it 42. And of that 42, only one, Mr. Somerville, was a Lower Canada member. Of the 64 opposed to representation by population, only 10 were from Lower Canada, so the Upper Canada majority in favour of the main question stood 41 to 10. Such a vote on such a question ought to satisfy the Ministry that their rule is not in accordance with the system of executive rule established by responsible government. Instead of decreasing, the Opposition of the Upper Canada section is increasing, and if Mr. Macdonald and his Cabinet have any desire to retire from office with any share of honor, they cannot take too early a determination to carry out their purpose, since the longer they stay, the worse they are liked. They need not fret themselves about the chaos their imagination presents to them, as consequent upon their departure. There is talent in the House, and what it wants, can be found outside. All that is necessary is that the present incumbents offer a chance to the opposition; but they will not, they calculate well the issue. However, willing or not willing, the fullness of time will soon be come, when a change must be made; and that not a mere departmental re-construction, but a clean sweep, leaving no vestige of the present Ministry to bamboozle the in-comers. The country, under a regime of an entirely new character, will take a fresh start, and the out-going party can enjoy the pleasure of using the knowledge they have acquired, in supervising the conduct of their supplanters. For this purpose they will be eminently useful, from the peculiar character of their own administration.

Twelfth of July.

The weather being extremely unpropitious to an out-door celebration of the established anniversary of the Orange Society, there was nothing like no general a turnout as is usually witnessed in Peterborough, on that day. The brethren of Port Hope, having invited this and other districts to a re-union upon their ground, it was intended to respond to the invitation by a very full attendance; as it was, however, a goodly number went down by the Port Hope railway, and was received by their brethren at the station. The procession was formed, and after walking to the east and then to the west, returned to the Town Hall, where they were hospitably entertained. After refreshment, the large room in the building was made the scene of the principal entertainment of the day. A platform had been erected at one end for the accommodation of the dignitaries of the order, from which the speeches were delivered. The Reverend Mr. [illegible] ed the course, by an address, and the presentation to brother David Marshal on the part of the district, of a handsome gold watch with gold appendages. The other brethren upon whom calls were made from the Chair, gave expression to their sentiments, and the proceedings closed. The visitors were then escorted to the cars, and returned home, much gratified with the manner of their reception. Everything went off remarkably quiet, no individual, so far as we have heard, committing any indiscretion that could be construed into offence.

The Municipal Bill.

Mr. Macdonald's Municipal Bill has had a third reading in the House of Assembly. The only material point which challenged discussion, was as to the unconfined power of County Councils to raise money, without the expressed approval of the ratepayers. The clause granting them this power, passed, on division, and unless the Legislative Council strike the amendment, the country will be in a fair way of a very hefty bankruptcy. Members of Municipal Councils want glorious hunting after an emphasis of the Lay Sisters. They go there with the same kind of ambition, and [illegible]

[illegible] the brethren of Port Hope, protested only that they were happy to have had, in the [illegible] the opportunity of [illegible] ing the Orangemen of the Midland District, in the [illegible] ; and [illegible] The County Council, we trust that the Legislature, [illegible] the guardians of the country, and they [illegible] the money [illegible] office.

The Lecture.

Mr. McGee delivers his lecture, upon the historical connexion of Ireland and Scotland, on Saturday evening. The prominent position of the lecturer, in the Legislature of this country, might induce the idea that a political tinge would pervade his discourse. We may therefore state that, the only object kept in view, is such as an unprejudiced mind would draw from the declared purpose of the lecturer. The backward position this neighbourhood has until lately suffered from, has been the cause of constant neglect on the part of literary celebrities. Now that our relations with the front make us more accessible to visitors, it is to be hoped we shall share more in the enjoyment of such cultivated society. The town hall, being the only public place for such gatherings, will be used on the occasion, but it is feared that it will not contain the large number which is expected. Of Mr. McGee's qualifications it is enough to know that he is accepted, by common accord, as the orator of the country.

The Slave-Trade.

(From the New York Times.)

General Cass had much plainer sailing before him, before the British abandoned the right of visit and search, than he has now. As long as they steadily maintained their old pretensions on the subject, he had an ample supply of excuses for refusing to interfere with the Slave-traffic. To have covered the sea with cruisers for the suppression of the trade, as soon as the British began to board our ships, would have looked very like both an acknowledgment of a previous fault, and a yielding to coercion of that which had been refused to remonstrance and argument. As long as the British cruisers were over-active in the matter, our own activity would have been unbecoming.

The news brought by the last mail that the law officers of the Crown have recommended an abandonment of the obnoxious claims as having no foundation in the law of nations, totally changes our position in the matter. Duties, the neglect of which was excused, whilst we were engaged in vindicating our rights, lie in profusion at our feet, and imperiously demand our attention. In short, we are now bound, not in law or in morals only, but in honour, once for all to see that our flag does not cover the Slave Trade. We have not the shadow of a pretext left us any longer, for lending it to the scum of mankind, and allowing every thief, pirate and kidnapper from Florida to Brazil to wrap his carcase in it as a protection. The principle is now fairly established beyond doubt and beyond dispute that no power on earth except ourselves, has any right to inquire why any vessel which sails the seas, carries the stars and stripes at the mast-head. But in wrestling all claims from others to propound any such question, we double the obligation which rests on us to ask it ourselves and see that it is answered. In assuming the exclusive police of the ocean as far as our own flag is concerned, we assume the responsibility of seeing that it is not used for dishonorable purposes, or for the detriment of others.

If it can be shewn beyond question, as it has been shewn that a piratical enterprise, denounced as such by the whole civilized world, as well as by us, is carried on almost exclusively under our colors, we become responsible to mankind for the extirpation of the abuse. If, after a fair trial we utterly refuse to protect the rest of the human race against the use of our ensign for the perpetration of crime, the Law of Nature gives them an undoubted right to protect themselves—and the Law of Nature is higher than the Law of Nations. If one of our cities was to follow the example of Algiers, and engage regulary in fitting out cruisers, and scouring the seas for captives to sell as slaves, it would certainly be an unpardonable impertinence on the part of foreign nations to invade our territory, and put down the practice themselves. Their proper course would be an appeal to our Government for redress, and ask it to enforce its own laws; but if through remissness, or neglect, or secret connivance with the guilty, that redress was not afforded, and no attempt was made to bring the offenders to punishment, we should not only sink in the eyes of the world to the lowest level of infamy, but any power who had the means would be justified in using it to abate the nuisance, and no such power would ever hesitate about it.

We must not be lulled by our diplomatic success into the fatal delusion that our physical strength justifies in setting public opinion at defiance, or that a flag will be always respected simply because there is force enough in readiness to punish an outrage on it. We have a moral character to support which is just as valuable to us as territory or population, and the richer, stronger, and more numerous we are, the more incumbent upon us does it become to preserve it intact from all stain. We have a perfect right to allow our laws, so far as they affect ourselves, to be set at nought, or relaxed, as we please; but in so far as they affect foreigners we are bound to see them rigidly enforced. There is no escaping from this conclusion, and the sooner we swallow and digest it the better. It is acknowledged on all hands that the Slave-trade is piracy, and that our flag protects it; and it is also acknowledged that we alone have the right to save that flag from abuse. If our own dignity were the only thing concerned, we might let the matter drop; but the life, liberty, and happiness of others is involved in it, and we have no right to hesitate. We have the road at last clear before us, and every one is waiting for us to do our duty.

General Cass, in his recent correspondence with Lord Napier, called attention to the fact that there was little use in keeping a squadron on the coast of Africa, so long as the market was left open in Cuba. The British have come to Cuba; the market is however still open, and our flag protects it. Hundreds of cargoes of human flesh pass in every year, under the shelter of our night, no one dare interfere, but why. What does General Cass propose? The English squadron is waiting to assist him in any manner he chooses; or not at all if he chooses. They are ready to do anything to attain this one object. Spanish Governors make their fortunes by the vilest corruption in this matter, and it is to our shame if Americans that they owe the hands they carry back to Spain. Not a solitary American or has an object reason to glorify the Spanish Bunker, as the wretched creatures who are sent from Madrid to Havana, to undergo tortures by commissaries with [illegible] and pistols.

There are lots or three persons upon to the whole [illegible] ; [illegible] ter of the Legislature [illegible] from the same cause. "Oh, yes I have," was the reply; "I passed through the whole [illegible]

[illegible] ; and [illegible] ; and [illegible] ; and [

BOOKS! BOOKS!!

THE Subscribers have now in Stock the following Books, to which they respectfully invite the attention of the Inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding country, viz:—

LIFE OF GENERAL HAVELOCK.
LIVINGSTONE'S TRAVELS.
ENGLISH HEARTS & ENGLISH HANDS.
LIFE OF CAPT. HAMMOND.
The Shadow on the Hearth.
Spurgeon's Life.
" Sermons.
Boocher's Life Thoughts.
Jane Eyre.—By Currer Bell.
Sternestone.—By Elder Hyde.
Waverly Anecdotes.
Life Pictures from a Pastor's Note Book.
Revival Sermons in New York in 1858.
Roger's Table Talk.
The Prince of the House of David.
Manual of Scientific Discovery for 1859.
Literary Attractions of the Bible.—Halsey.
Bayne' Essays in Biography and Criticism.
Cecil's Remains.
Lays from Heaven, for Life on Earth.
Chambers's Mechanism of the Heavens.
Longfellow's Poetical Works.
Cats and Dogs.—By Mrs. Hugh Miller.
Flora.—A Tale, by A. L. O. E.
The Roby Family.— "
Kirke White's Works.
Twenty Years a Slave.
The English Orphans.—By Mrs. Mary J. Holmes.
Baldwin's Representative Women.
Mind of Jesus.—By Macduff.
Words of Jesus. "
Bow in the Cloud. "
Faithful Promiser. "
The City: its Sins and Sorrows.—By Rev. Dr. Guthrie.
Gospel in Ezekiel. "
Foster's Essays.
Dick's Christian Philosopher.
Chalmers' Moral Philosophy.
Chalmers' Miscellanies.
Boner's Land of Promise.
Brewster's More Worlds than One.
Lectures to Young Men.
The Royal Preacher.
D'Aubigne's Reformation.
Kitto's Daily Bible Illustrations—Morning and Evening Series.
Books of Family Worship.
Family Prayers.—Macduff.
Memories of Bethany.
Footsteps of St. Paul.
McCheyne's Life and Remains.
Life of Cromwell.
Chaver's Lectures on the Pilgrim's Progress.
Dick's Astronomical Discourses.
Baxter's Saint's Rest.
Memories of Gennesaret.
Ministering Children.
Bridges' on the 119 Psalm.
Bogatsky's Golden Treasury.
Anxious Inquirer.
The Coral Island.
Ungava: a tale of the Esquimaux.
The Young Fur Traders.
&c., &c., &c.

ALSO, JUST RECEIVED,

A Choice Assortment of Bibles, Church Services, Psalm and Prayer Books, Wesley's Hymns, &c., &c. Toy Books for Children, in great variety.
Sunday School Reward Cards, Prize Books, &c., &c.

SAWERS & MURRAY.
New Book and Stationery Store, Burnham's Block, George Street.
Peterboro', June 9, 1858.

MUSIC! MUSIC!!

The Musical Bouquet, (English), AT 4d PER SINGLE NUMBER.

THE subscribers have now in stock, the following pieces, to which they respectfully invite the attention of the Ladies of Peterborough.

QUADRILLES.

The Scotch Quadrilles.
Pizzicolonni Quadrilles.
Les Chiens, (dogs) do.
The Lancers do.
The Don Caesar De Bazan Quadrilles.
Paiphegor do.
The Welsh Navy do.
Les Chats, (cats) do.
Bonnie Dundee do.
Les Singes, (monkeys) do.
Lucrezia Borgia do.
Les Souris, (mice) do.
The Musqueteers do.
The Irish do.
Pas in Boots do.
The Royal Lancers' do. do.
The Copsie or Rotenober's do.

POLKAS.

Guy Fawkes' Polka.
The Laughing Eyes Polka.
Tomtit's do.
The Bobbin' Around do.
The Original do.
Ask Mamma do.
The Minnie do.
The Silvershir do.

FANTASIAS.

Gemelle Impromptu.
The Bush abroon Trequair.
La Violette.
Les Cloches Du Monastere.
We're a' Noddin'.
The Last Rose of Summer.
Fantasia on Bohemian Airs.
Partant Pour La Syrie.
Mancelsohn, Brilliant Fantasia.
Scots wha hae wi' Wallace bled.
Premier Nocturne.
L'Italienne Fantasia.
Grand Galop Brilante.
Premiere Etude De Concert'.
Two Musical Sketches, Mendelssohn.

POPULAR SONGS,

WITH ACCOMPANIMENTS.

Why did my Sarah sell me.
Hey Johnny Cope and the Campbells 'are coming.
Hearts and Eyes.
Ellen Bayne.
Who wadna fecht for Charlie.
For Ever Dear.
Scots Folks.
Bobbing Around.
Stand Between Stewart.
Dinah is the Girl for me.
Lilly Willy Watson.
The Lass that loves a Sailor.
The Lords of the Forest.
Lets be gay Boys.
The Village Maiden.
Come again dear Queen.
The Sardinian National Hymn.
There ant my Joy.
The North Carolina Rose.
Up for the Right.
Oh let me in the dark tomb lie.
The Fisherwaiden.
The Gamgowen Races.
Strike Men Strike.
My Mary Anne.
Be Early in the Morning.
The Spinning Wheel.
My Nannie O.
I Must Depart.
The Greenwood Bell.
My Gentle Dove.
There's Fortune no before us Boys.

SACRED MELODIES,

WITH VARIATIONS FOR THE PIANOFORTE.

Flegel's German Hymn.
Vital Spark of Heavenly Flame.
Prayer from Rossini's " Mose in Egitto."
The Heavens are Telling.
Adeste Fideles.
Cujus Animam, from Rossini.
I Know that my Redeemer Liveth.
Before Jehovah's Awful Throne.
Byrd's Lamentation.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Grand Invocation, Popular Cavatina, March in D flat.
Marches Pittoresques.
Ah Le Morte, from Bellini.
Un Furbo Dunn Valeet.
L'Anse ah L'Anse.
Marcelo Grand Gallop.
Seven admired Airs from Il Trovatore.
The Druid's March.
Souvenir De Varsovie Mazurka.
Adieu Tol Que J'Aime, &c.
Von Vogo Vogo Fo.
A la Chasse.
Miss Bailey's Gallop.
Miss Bailey's Waltz.
Vogo Vogo, Vogo Ballad.

Any piece not in stock, procured on the shortest notice.

100	Foreign Letter Music and Texts	Sheets
100	Heavy, Medium and Fine Note	25 "
100	Sermon " " "	25 "
100	Ruled " " "	25 "
100	Sheets of Parchment	25 "
100	Sheets of Envelopes	25 "

NEW BOOK, STATIONERY & MUSIC STORE,
Burnham's Block, George St. Peterborough.
SAWERS & MURRAY.
June 21, 1858 26

Miscellaneous.

COBOURG AND PETERBORO RAILWAY.

D. E. BOULTON, Lessee.

ALTERTAION OF TIME:

On and after 1st, June Trains will run as follows, connecting with the Grand Trunk Railway:

LEAVE.

Peterboro',	6	A. M.
"	3:45	P. M.
Cobourg,	11:30	A. M.
G. Trunk R.	11:35	"
Cobourg,	7:30	P. M.
G. Trunk R.	7:45	"

ARRIVE.

Cobourg,	10	A. M.
"	5:45	P. M.
Peterboro',	1:25	"
"	9:25	"

Freight Trains.

LEAVE.

Cobourg,	9	A. M.
Peterboro',	4	P. M.

ARRIVE.

Peterboro',	10:30	A. M.
Cobourg,	6	P. M.

☞ Through Tickets for Peterboro' to be had at the Stations of G. T. Railway.

Return Tickets Available Same Day Only

Cobourg to Peterboro' and back..... $1 50
Cobourg to Keene and back..... 1 25
Cobourg to Indian Village and back..... 1 00

GEO. H. DOWNIE,
Secretary
JAMES BARBER,
Supt. Running Depart.
C. & P. R. Office, Cobourg, June 1st, 1858. 21

OPENING OF THE

Port Hope and Peterboro' RAILWAY.

ON MONDAY the 7TH JUNE, the Port Hope and Peterboro' Railway, will be opened for traffic.

TRAINS WILL RUN AS FOLLOWS:

Mail Train will leave Port Hope at 11.30 o'clock, A. M., after the arrival of the Grand Trunk Train from Toronto and Montreal, arriving in Peterboro' at 1 P. M.

Will leave Peterboro' at 5 P. M., and arrive in Port Hope at 6.30, in time for the trains east and west on the Grand Trunk.

Passengers can procure Tickets at any of the Grand Trunk Stations through to Peterboro', or at Peterboro' to any of the Stations on the Grand Trunk R. R.

J. S SMITH,
President.
PortHope, May 27th, 1858. 22.

MUD LAKE TO BOBCAYGEON.

CHANGE OF ROUTE.

THE STEAMER "FLY,"

HAS discontinued running between Bobcaygeon and Lindsay. She will now make daily trips between Mud Lake and Bobcaygeon only; leaving Dunbar's wharf, Mud Lake, at 9 o'clock, returning in the afternoon. By this arrangement, parties seeking relief from the land heat, will be able to enjoy themselves a day on the back lakes where there is always a refreshing breeze, and return home in the cool of the evening. The fare each way is two shillings and sixpence, but families, making parties, will be allowed a reduction, proportionate to the number of persons in each. No better fishing ground is to be found than that at Bobcaygeon. Pope's Stage takes passengers and freight to and from the "Fly." The Stage fare is 12½d. Families bringing their own carriages, will find plenty of accommodation at the different hotels at the Lake.

Peterboro', June 24, 1858. 24

STRAYED.

INTO the premises of the subscriber, on the 12th of June, A LARGE POWERFUL HORSE; the owner is requested to prove property, pay expenses and take him away.

THOMAS WATLEY.
Douro, 1st Con. 20 Lot, }
June 24th, 1858. } 25-3

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

THE attention of Clergymen, Teachers, and others interested in Sunday Schools is respectfully invited to our large and varied assortment of

Reward Books, Tickets, Admission Cards, &c., &c., &c.,

Especially adapted for Sunday Schools, and which we will sell on the best possible terms.

A CALL SOLICITED,

SAWERS & MURRAY,
NEW BOOK AND STATIONARY STORE,
Burnham's Block, George Street Peterboro'.

Hotels, &c.,

UNION HOTEL.
Peterborough.

GEORGE ALLEN

RESPECTFULLY intimates to his friends and the public generally, that his establishment is still open for the reception of guests in his usual good style.

The house is new and beautifully situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, where travellers will find a quiet and desirable retreat.

☞ A limited number of respectable BOARDERS can be accommodated.

Good Stabling and Sheds

On the premises. An Ostler in attendance, who will give the best attention to horses entrusted to his care.

Peterborough, Oct. 20th 1857. 43.

NORTH AMERICAN HOTEL.

Summer season, commence.

THE above Hotel having recently repaired, painted, and newly fitted up, and Gibbs(now) entirely completed in all its appointments, is now opened for the reception of the travelling public.

The Bar is supplied with the choicest Liquors and neither pains nor expense will be spared to render it one of the best in the Province.

The Liquors are of the best brands, and the Larder will be constantly supplied with all the delicacies of the Season.

The Tables are commodious, and an attentive Ostler is always in attendance.

The proprietor pledges himself that every attention will be paid to the wants of his guests.

☞ Omnibuses will attend at the Cars and Boats to carry passengers to the Hotel free of charge.

RICHARD SHARON,
Proprietor.
Cobourg, August, 1857.

AMERICAN HOTEL.
PETERBORO'.

THE undersigned, Proprietor, begs to return his sincere thanks to the travelling public and his friends for the liberal patronage he has received from them. He hopes by strict attention to the wants of those who may favor him with their custom, to merit a continuance of the same. The house has undergone a thorough repair, and has attached to it

GOOD STABLING AND SHEDS.

The Proprietor hopes to receive a share of public patronage.

[illegible]

Peterboro', 1858.

Insurances.

TIMES AND DRAGON ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....£250,000 STG.

£140,000 PAID UP.

HEAD OFFICE in CANADA, KINGSTON, C.W.

CANADA BOARD OF DIRECTORS OR TRUSTEES:

The HON. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES MORTON, Esq., Kingston.

DIRECTORS

Chairman—M. U. STRANGE, Esq.
Vice Chairman—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.
JAMES MORTON, Esq., | A.J.McDONELL, Esq.
JOHN MOWAT, Esq., | JAMES HARDY, Esq.

AUDITORS

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Esq., Kingston,
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.
Standing Counsel—A.J. MACDONELL, Esq.
Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.

LOCAL MANAGER:
W. CLUXTON, Peterboro'.
Peterboro', March 21, 1857. 13.

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON
Fire & Life Insurance Co.

CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.

Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.

RESPONSIBILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS UNLIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTREAL.

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on almost every description of property, at as reasonable rates as any other responsible office.

Losses paid without reference to the Old Country.

W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.
Peterboro.' March 24th, 1857. 12

WESTERN
Insurance Company,

CAPITAL £500,000.

Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF FIRE & MARINE ASSURANCE BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',
W. CLUXTON.
Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

UNITY FIRE AND UNITY GENERAL
INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS OF ENGLAND.

FOR every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.

CAPITAL £3,500,00 Sterling.

CHIEF OFFICE,—Unity Buildings, Canon St., London. Agent for Peterboro',
W. EASTLAND.
Peterboro', July, 1856.

Provincial Insurance Company.

OF TORONTO, C. W.

Subscribed Capital, $1,267,000. Paid up Capital, $633,500.

PRESIDENT, J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
VICE-PRESIDENT, Hon. J. H. CAMERON.

Directors.

Hon. W. B. ROBINSON, | E. F. WHITTEMORE, Esq.
Geo. DUNCAN, Jr., Esq. | Geo. CRAWFORD, Esq.
J. S. HOWARD, Esq. | JOHN CAMERON, Esq., M.P.P.
Wm. L. PERRIE, Esq. | A. M. CLARKE, Esq., M.D.
Hon. J. H. CAMERON. | DUNCAN McDONELL, Esq.
Capt. F. WALLACE,

MANAGER AND SECRETARY:
HON. J. LEANDER STARR.
ASSISTANT SECRETARY:
J. JOSEPH WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK.—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS:—Messrs. DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE:
TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurance business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as in any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Brokers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.

Toronto, April 30, 1858. 42

THE COLONIAL
Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

HEAD OFFICE—Edinburgh, Scotland, and MONTREAL, CANADA.

Proposals for assurance disposed of in Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Adviser for Peterboro,—Dr. Hall.

AGENT,
W. B. READ.
Peterboro', July 28th, 1857. 30

STONABEE WOOLEN MILL!
PETERBORO' EAST.

THE Subscribers having commenced business in the above-named Establishment, beg to state to their customers and the public generally that they have made large improvement in the Mill, thus rendering it one of the most complete in Upper Canada, and are now prepared to execute every description of

CUSTOM WORK,

INCLUDING

CARDING, SPINNING, WEAVING, FULLING, DYING, FINISHING, &c.,

In first class style, and hope by strict attention to their business, to enjoy a share of public patronage.

They offer FOR SALE, or will exchange for Wool: Full Cloth, Tweeds, Satinette, Flannels, and Stocking Yarn.

Customers and the public generally are requested to give us a call and examine for themselves.

NEWTON & TEMPLETON.
Peterboro', April 2nd, 1856. 14.

PETERBORO
TEMPERANCE HOUSE.

THE [illegible] HOUSE, [illegible] BOARDERS.

[illegible]

Peterboro, Feb. 9th, 1858.

Business Notices.

PETERBOROUGH LIVERY STABLE

THE SUBSCRIBER begs to inform the public that he is always ready to furnish them with horses, sleighs, carriages, and every thing required at a Livery, on the shortest notice, and on reasonable terms. His horses are in fine condition, and everything about his establishment is in good order.

He very reluctantly has to withdraw from the long credit system, and begs all who may favor him with their patronage, to remember that he can only continue to accommodate the public by them, in turn, enabling him to keep up his business, that is, by ready pay.

THOS. EASTLAND.
Peterboro Livery Stables, }
Hunter Street, Jan. 1st, 1858. } 1

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC IN GENERAL.

BARNARD McGARRITY & PARTNER respectfully beg to give notice that they intend to carry on the best horse-shoeing establishment in this town. Foundered feet and every kind of foot-lameness will be attended as well as at any shop in the Province. Blacksmith jobbing of all descriptions done to order. The shop is on Bethune Street near Mr. James Hall's brick dwelling.
Peterboro', Dec. 15, 1857. 50

NOTICE.

ALL indebted to the late firm of HARVEY & THOMSON, will please call and settle without delay; and all having claims against said firm, will please hand in the same before 20th inst.
Peterboro', April 7th, 1858. 14

PUBLIC NOTICE.

ALL persons having claims against the Estate of the l te JOSEPH WEST, of Otonabee, are requested to present the accounts of such claims properly attested, to Mr. Alexander Poe, at the office of Thomas Short Esq., Keene;

And all who may be indebted to the said Estate, are requested to pay the same to Mr. Poe, forthwith, as such of the accounts as remain unsettled on the fifteenth of July next, will be placed in suit for collection.

(Signed) THOMAS SHORT,
WILLIAM WEST,
Administrators.
Keene, Otonabee, 8th June, 1858. 23

NOTICE.

THE Subscriber begs leave to intimate that he has sold out his Boot and Shoe Shop to A. ROSS. All debts standing out up to date, May, 27th, must be paid to him, at his Tannery, Peterboro' East.

JNO. CLARK,
Tanner.
Peterboro' East, June 8, 1858. 23

EVERY SCOTCHMAN

SHOULD read the "Scottish American Journal," published weekly. It contains the best summary of old country news of any paper published in this country, and has besides a series of articles on the "Highland Bonnets," or Achievement of the Scottish Regiments in India and elsewhere. For sale at Sawers & Murray's New Book Store, Peterboro'. Price $2,50 per year in advance, or 3d per single number.

A GOOD PEN

IS A REAL BLESSING.

BUY ONE DOZEN GILT PENS, IN BOX,
FOR
ONE QUARTER OF A DOLLAR,
At Sawers & Murray's Stationery Store.

BOOT & SHOES

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform the late customers of Mr. Thomas Russell, and the public in general, that they have entered into partnership, and have made arrangements with him to succeed him in his business. They desire to assure all who favor them with their custom, that their wants will be punctually attended to, and their work done in a manner that will ensure satisfaction. They will always be found ready to receive orders, and they hope by such assiduity in their business to receive a share of the public patronage.

All kinds of ready made work kept constantly on hand, and sold on the most reasonable terms for Cash or short approved credit.

Remember the old stand opposite the Eastern entrance to the Town Hall.

O'BRIEN & MAGRATH.
Peterboro', January 12th, 1858. 2

FRESH ARRIVALS!

THE Subscribers have just received a large quantity of Whitefish, of very Superio Quality!

which they will dispose of at greatly reduced prices.

They have also received some choice

BLACK TEAS, CONGOU, SOUCHONG AND ORANGE PEKOE,

which they can with confidence recommend to their friends and the Public.

COUPAR & OGILVY.
Peterboro', March 1, 1858. 9

Mail Stages.

NEW MAIL CONVEYANCE
Between Peterborough and Norwood.

LEAVING Peterborough, will call at McLa Gregor's, Croft's and Calne's Hotels, and George Allan's Union Hotel every

Monday, Wednesday, and Friday Mornings, at 7 o'clock,

For passengers and parcels. Leaving Norwood at 2 o'clock, p. m., will return the same day.

N. B.—Terms for heavy freight, can be had on application.

T. J. HENTHORN,
Proprietor.
Peterborough, 24th Nov., 1857. 47

PETERBORO' & OMEMEE.
MAIL STAGE
Will leave Daily as follows, until further notice.

Peterboro' to Omemee, | Omemee to Peterboro,
One o'clock, p. m. | Quarter to 9, a. m.

PETERBORO' TIME.

W. B. WARD, Hunter St., Agent. | R. W. SHAW, Proprietor.
Peterborough, Dec. 21st, 1857.

PORT HOPE, LINDSAY
AND BEAVERTON RAILWAY
GOING TO
L I N D S A Y.

On and after DECEMBER 15th, Trains will run as follows, daily, until further notice.

Lindsay to Port Hope. | Port Hope to Lindsay.

Leaving daily, Sundays excepted.

P. M.		A. M.
CAMERON'S HILL		OMEMEE
[illegible]		[illegible]
HARVEY		HARVEY
[illegible]		[illegible]
[illegible]		[illegible]
[illegible]		[illegible]

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND
Ornamental.----Bronzing,
&c., &c., &c.,
Neatly executed, on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the
[illegible]
BURNHAM'S BLOCK,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, JULY 22, 1858.

Volume 3.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 28.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

ARE TEN SHILLINGS in ADVANCE, for ONE YEAR; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING

Six Lines, and under, first insertion	£0 2 6
Each subsequent insertion	0 0 7½
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0 3 0
Each subsequent insertion	0 1
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0 0 4
Each subsequent insertion	0 0 1

☞ Advertisements without written instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognized.

Business Directory.

MR. DENNISTOUN,
BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

E. BURNHAM,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

STAFFORD F. KIRKPATRICK,
BARRISTER, &c., &c., &c., has returned to Peterborough, and resumed the practice of his profession in all its branches.
Office over Mr. McDougall's Store.
Peterboro', June, 1856.

A. WELLS,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. H. J. Visard, Esq.

MR. MARTIN DUNSFORD,
ATTORNEY at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c. Office over the New Post Office, Peterborough.

W. B. RUBIDGE,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, &c. &c., &c.
Peterboro', March 10th, 1856.

DR. HOLYWELL,
HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Rubidge's. Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,
SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' West.

M. S. MACDOWELL,
SURGICAL AND MECHANICAL DENTIST.
OFFICE over A. W. Kempt's Drug Store, George Street, Peterboro.
May, 1856. 18

ALBRO & VINDIN,
Commission, Shipping, Forwarding
AND GENERAL AGENTS,
Lumber Merchants, &c.,
Port Hope, C. W.
OFFICE—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets.

GEORGE TANNER,
FURNITURE WARE-ROOMS,
HUNTER STREET, PETERBOROUGH,
Opposite Burnham's Block.
Peterboro', Oct. 6, 1857. 30

A. W. KEMPT,
DRUGGIST, Dealer in Genuine Drugs and Chemicals, Patent Medicines, Paints, Oils, Colours, Dye Stuffs, Perfumery, Spices, Hair, Nail and Tooth Brushes, Smelling and Toilet Bottles, Fancy Soaps, Culinary Essences, &c.
Medical Hall, George Street, Peterboro.

MESSRS. STEWART,
ARCHITECTS, Engineers, Land Surveyors, and Land Agents. Office, Mill Street, Port Hope.
GEO. A. STEWART.
CHAS. B. STEWART.
Port Hope, May 22, 1857. 21.

JOHN MAYDEN,
Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, Window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.
King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 35—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.
INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.
Peterboro', May 26th, 1857. 22

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD,
PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.
COMMUNICATION THROUGH THE POST OFFICE,
Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S
FASHIONABLE HAIR DRESSING AND SHAVING Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.
Port Hope, Sept. 29, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,
HUNTER STREET, PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST.
MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.
Peterboro', Sept. 3, 1856. 2-

W. COULTER,
Druggist and Apothecary
PETERBORO'
Dealer in Medicines, English and French Chemicals, Patent Medicines Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Window Glass and Perfumery, Particular attention paid to putting up Physicians Prescriptions, Family Receipts and Cattle medicines, ALSO, English American and Garden, Field and Flower Seeds. Together with an assortment of School Books, Stationery and Fancy Articles.

A. MERCER & SONS,
TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—The Misses
Peterboro', June 9, 1856. 20—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.
A. MUNRO, Agent.
May, 1856. 19

ROOM PAPER, PAINTING, &c.
THE subscriber offers for sale, at his shop on Hunter Street, a large and varied assortment of Room Paper, among which will be found gothic, satin and common papers, and which he will sell at the lowest rates, and which he will put up in the latest and most approved style.
THE subscriber is employing a number of hands, who can be employed in
PAPER HANGING!
And he respectfully solicits a share of public patronage.
[illegible] in white lead at 56 per Keg, [illegible] Painting and Glazing business [illegible] that they will be executed in the best manner and on the most reasonable terms.
The highest price given for Rags.
GEORGE SEYMOUR.
Brock Street, Peterboro, April 9, 1856. 41

A Pleasant Surprise.

It is many years since the following story was first published, and it is doubtless pretty well known; but there is a beautiful lesson in it which cannot be too frequently brought before the youthful mind, as there is ever more pleasure derived from doing an act of kindness than from any trick, however expert, if the laugh is raised at the expense of a fellow being.

A young man of eighteen or twenty, a student in a University, took a walk one day with a professor, who was commonly called the students' friend, such was his kindness to the young men whom it was his office to instruct. While they were now walking together, and the professor was seeking to lead the conversation to graver subjects, they saw a pair of old shoes lying in the path, which they supposed belonged to a poor man who had nearly finished his day's work.

The young student turned to the professor, saying: "Let us play the man a trick. We will hide his shoes and conceal ourselves behind these bushes, and watch to see his perplexity when he cannot find them."

"My dear friend," answered the professor, "we must never amuse ourselves at the expense of the poor. But you are rich and may give yourself a much greater pleasure by means of this poor man. Put a dollar in each shoe, and then we will hide ourselves."

The student did so, and then placed himself with the professor behind the bushes hard by, through which they could easily watch the laborer, and see whatever wonder and joy he might express.

The poor man soon finished his work, and came across the field to the path where he had left his coat and shoes.—While he put on his coat he slipped one foot into one of his shoes; feeling something hard, he stooped down and found the dollar. Astonishment was upon his countenance; he gazed upon the dollar, turned it round, and looked again; then he looked around on all sides but could see no one. Now he put the money in his pocket, and proceeded to put on the other shoe; but what was his astonishment when he found the other dollar! His feelings overcame him, he fell upon his knees, looked up to heaven, and uttered a loud and fervent thanksgiving, in which he spoke of his wife sick and helpless and his children, who from some unknown hand, would be saved from perishing.

The young man stood there deeply affected [illegible]

"Now," said the professor, "you are much better pleased than if you had played your intended trick?"

"Oh, dearest sir," answered the youth "you have taught me a lesson that I never will forget, I feel now the truth of the words which I never before understood—'It is better to give than to receive.'" We should never approach the poor but with a wish to them good.

Theory of Thunder-Storms.

In an article on this subject, the New York Evening Post, after giving its theory of the cause thus alludes to some of the freakish effects of lightning:

It is commonly thought that there is more danger from lightning in the country than in cities, but statistics would seem to show a greater number of accidents from lightning in cities than in localities of corresponding size in the country. About fifteen years since, in a storm of two hours duration, lightning struck in thirty different places in this city and suburbs.

It is probable that upwards of fifty persons are annually killed by lightning in the United States, and it may be truly said that in most cases are the result of rashness on the part of the victims. A great many persons are killed by taking refuge from the rain under the trees in open fields. Their presence renders the trees more liable to be struck, because the human body is a better conductor than the tree, and it is therefore safer to get wet than to run the risk consequent upon taking such shelter in a thunder-storm.

In buildings, the safest position is a horizontal one in the middle of a room, and care should be taken that the body be not placed between the two conductors, such as, for example, a mirror in one room and a stove funnel in the room beneath; because lightning in passing through a building, selects the best conductors, and occasions destruction on its way from one conductor to another. Several years since a man was killed while standing in front of a mirror by a discharge of lightning which passed across the quicksilver coating of the glass, thence down the body to the floor, and through that to a stove funnel immediately beneath. Mr. Hatch, of Poughkeepsie, was killed while seated in a chair on the piazza of his house, with his hand leaning back against the bell knob. Persons have been killed while standing at a door or window during a thunder storm. A man was killed in West Newton, Massachusetts, some years ago, while sitting between a boiler inside a building, and a lightning rod upon the outside, the discharge leaving the rod and passing through his body on its way through the building. It is proper to add, that this lightning rod was insulated by glass fastenings, and that there is no reason to doubt the efficacy of lightning-rods when they are constructed and applied on proper scientific principles. Protecting buildings from lightning, however, is something like prescribing for a sick person—the success of the prescription in either case depending, under Providence, on the degree of knowledge, skill and experience possessed by the physician.

Curious Phenomenon in Potters' Field.

A committee was created some days since in the vicinity of Potters' Field, at the discovery of a body which had undergone a remarkable transformation. The body had been under three tiers of coppers, and the head and feet had disappeared while the remainder, which was somewhat contracted, bore a close resemblance to wax of an obstetrical character. A facetious Irishman, who was present (and where are they not?) did not await the moment indicated by the priest to raise his voice; he immediately requested that his name should be placed on the list for two!

A Tight Shoe

produces a corn, which is nothing more than thickened cuticle. The same muscle which with ease raised a hundred pounds when alive, is torn through by ten when dead. Life pretents their chemical affinities; new combinations are formed; ammoniacal, sulphuretic, carburretted, and other gasses are given off, and nothing remains but dust. This never happens during life.—Moral and Intellectual School-Book.

Singular Case in England.

ATTEMPT TO SEND A CHURCH OF ENGLAND CLERGYMAN TO THE INSANE ASYLUM.

An attempt on the part of the relatives of the Rev. Mr. Leech, a gentleman of the Church of England, of good family and fortune, to have him removed for life into a lunatic asylum, is creating much comment in England. The jury refused to pronounce him insane. The London Daily News thus sums up and comments on the case:

The moving spirits in this attempt were his mother, his married sister, and her husband. The reverend gentleman had on two previous occasions labored under attacks of mental infirmity, and had once been put under restraint. But he had been released, and had for some years been allowed the free indulgence of his eccentricities. Singular as they were, Mr. Leech appears to have been perfectly harmless.—He seems to have lived alone or with his mother. He was a religious enthusiast.—He was possessed with the idea that the Millenium was "dawning," if indeed it had not already dawned. His actions were all guided, he said, by the Holy Spirit.

In early youth he had shaved off his beard, but the scriptural injunction against effeminacy and woman's attire, had induced him to resume the badge of manhood. He entertained strong views as to the necessity of personal defence, and on the occurrence of some burglaries in his neighborhood, provided himself, after the fashion of Notting Hill, with four or five pistols, and declared that he should carry about gunpowder in his waistcoat pocket to keep it dry. He was a man of kindly and domestic habits. He thought servants ought to be treated more on an equality, and carried his principles on this point somewhat to an extreme. Feeling lonely, he was in the habit of associating with his women servants, would occasionally kiss them, and sometimes take them on his knee. Even this, however, he power of sex he did not venture to undertake.

In his delicate attentions he drew distinctions: One kiss he would imprint upon the lips—another upon the cheek; but the former kind of caress, was reserved exclusively for the young woman he intended to make his wife. Clergyman though he was, he was in the habit of playing whist with his female domestics, but then the game was sanctified by his reading a chapter or singing a hymn between the deals. For a clergyman and a rational man these were no doubt strange eccentricities. But then the man was harmless, and he was certainly a person of learning and ability. To meet him in a drawing-room, or as one of the witnesses more cautiously put it, "in the company of learned and scientific men," no one would suppose him insane, and his tailors and tradespeople found him punctual in payment and obliging in manner. For years even his friends admitted him to be eccentric, but never thought of putting him in a madhouse.

However, about the year 1857, his theory that "Marriage was the first thing, and the second thing, and the third thing," began to fructify. His sister, Mrs. Sedden, and her husband, found that he was actually about to marry one of the damsels whom he had hitherto been caressing. There is no conclusive evidence of insanity in that. Chancellors, judges, bishops, and the like, have done as mad things in this way as poor Mr. Leach. Such an intention, in itself would never induce any one to put his brother or anybody else into an asylum. But there were other facts. It turns out that on the death of his mother, Mr. Leach would become entitled to £30,000. If he died without children and intestate, that fortune must come to Mr. and Mrs. Sedden. This was too splendid a prospect to be obscured by a servant maid and a small family.

It was natural enough that the doctor should be called in by the Seddens to see whether eccentricities could not be construed into insanity. The thing was managed. Poor Mr. Leach was consigned to an asylum. One jury, unable to agree on a verdict, has been discharged, but another jury has just come to the conclusion that Mr. Leach is competent to manage his own affairs, In this verdict every friend to the sacredness of personal liberty will concur. Eccentricity is one thing, madness is another. Dr. Winslow, when first consulted on the matter, recommended his friends to wait until Mr. Leach had committed some overt act of insanity. That overt was act, according to Mr. and Mrs. Sedden's opinion, committed when he was about to marry his servant-maid. The jury, who had the whole case very ably brought before them, naturally and properly looked with suspicion on such a proof of insanity, as this. They, no doubt, remembered that a marriage might prevent the addition of £30,000 to the fortune of those friends who sought to prove the madness. The best and clearest summary of the whole case is to be found in the admirable letter of Mr. Leach, the supposed madman, written after his incarceration in the asylum, to his brother-in-law, Mr. Sedden.

"Nobody," he writes, "ever thought of imprisoning Charles Matthews when he married Madame Vestris. And though there is a religious motive associated with mine, if that would indicate insanity, you might as well imprison the whole body of Quakers, of Swedenborgians, of Mormonites, and I know not how many, who not succeeding to their consciences, and believing that they act more or less under divine influence in their every day proceedings. It is grievous to think that but for my temper on the Friday previous, and my divulging my intended marriage—which, by the way, If I had chosen, I could have contracted secretly—neither you nor any one else would have cared more than you have ever cared for my religious opinions or conduct; that is to say, not a two-penny piece."

This is the whole truth of the matter. The case is a most discreditable one to the mother and brother-in-law; and the consequence of a verdict affirming, on such grounds, the insanity of Mr. Leach, might have been to the last degree dangerous. If eccentricity and a medical certificate are all that is required to deprive a man of his liberty and shut him up in a madhouse, what becomes of the boasted liberty of this eccentric and doctor-ridden British people?

Madame Lola Montez.

We have several times been desired to furnish a sketch of the career of this distinguished woman, but have until now been prevented from doing so, by the entire absence of any information which we could rely upon as authentic. She has herself, however, supplied that want, and we give the history of her life and doings in her own she was told "it was none of her business." Through the intervention of Captain James —young and handsome—she learned that her mother had pledged her hand to a wealthy old East Indian Judge, named Lumley, whose attractions were metallic, coined into rupees. This, said the lecturer, was the first spark to the magazine.—An explosion followed, and the upshot was that Lola eloped with Captain James to Ireland. There no clergyman would marry a girl of fourteen without her mother's consent. With much reluctance consent was at last given, and Miss Gilbert became Mrs. James. The Captain proved but the outside shell of a husband and Lola drew the witty inference, which she commended to young ladies, that runaway matches are like runaway horses, and end generally in some smash up.

Captain James remained eight months in Ireland, and then was ordered to the East Indies, whither his young wife accompanied him. For a while she was the belle of Calcutta. The removal of the troops to the interior produced a change of scene, and the lecturer, leaving Lola in the interior, introduced a most interesting dissertation on Indian travelling, illustrating the description with several ludicrous incidents. She described most graphically Runjeet Sung's reception of the officers of the Bengala ray. After a most magnificent feast were introduced. Each woman bore jewels worth a fortune, and was invested with the ownership of twenty villages. These equally in number the officers entertained, and were offered as a present to the officers. The peculiar looks of the English officers, the sad manner in which Lord Auckland informed the king that English law did not permit them to receive such presents, may well be imagined. But I am afraid, said the lecturer, that the young officer—Ah! well, the gentlemen present can appreciate the dissapointment.—(Laughter and applause long continued.)—Other matters relating to justice having been disposed of, the lecturer returned to Lola, in the interior. While there she lived with a Mrs. Lomer, of whose connection with Capt. James previous to his marriage, rumor had been busy many days.—Capt. James's wife felt little interest in the matter. At last, one morning at breakfast, it was found that Capt. James and Mrs. Lomer had eloped, and Lola Montez was a grass widow. Much against her will she was sent to her mother in Calcutta, by whom she was despatched to England to the care of the Cragies. Mr. and Mrs. Sturges, now in Boston, came from India in the same vessel.

On Lola's departure from India, her father-in-law handed her a check for $20,000.—David Cragie met her on her arrival in England, but she refused to go in care of the Cragies, and, at the suggestion of Miss Fanny Kelly, was about to adopt the profession of an actress; but her poor English pronunciation, unfitted her for that, and, after preparation, she made her debut in London as a danseuse, with Mr. Lumley. After appearing when Carl Formes and Lisztwere the lions, she met with marked success in Berlin. The king offered to make a match for her suitable to her station. She refused. Several incidents of her success here were received with marked effect. It was here she met with Prince Alexander, to whom it was rumored that she was some months since engaged to be married. But while she was away at the South telegraphing kisses on the Morse line, he was travelling incognita with a celebrated prima donna, taking her name and booking her and himself as Mr. & Mrs. So and So. This had produced a rumpus. After Berlin followed Warsaw. When Lola first commenced politics, Prince Paskievitch fell in love with her. Old men are never wise in love. He offered her diamonds, and in his ardent professions of attachment, opened his mouth so wide as to expose the gold roof of his mouth. It was death's head making love to a lady, and he was rejected in consequence. She was hissed in the theatre, and was forced in self-defence, to tell the whole matter on the stage. The crowd applauded her, and she was accompanied home by a concourse that made the "welkin ring" with shouts. Polish gentlemen stood up to [illegible] spark of liberty where it had been dead for years. This forced her from Poretand. At St. Petersburg she found safety, and then closed the calm portion of Lola's life. The History of her stormy career was then commenced. She would meet it calmly: she had nothing to lose. In the words of Byron she said, "Whatever betides, I know the worst."

After leaving St. Petersburg, she visited Paris, where she became fascinated to Dujarier, the editor of La Presse, but who was subsequently killed in a duel by M. de Beauvallon. Lola journeyed to the Spanish ground for the purpose of taking the place of her lover, but she was too late. On the field of the encounter at Rouen, she was arrested, together with Alexander Dumas, and his answer to the question of what his profession was, was worth recording. He answered, "I would say that I was a dramatic poet, if I were not in the birthplace of Corneille." Then followed a rapid sketch of her Bavarian history, manifesting strong feeling of animosity, hatred, bigotry towards the venerable order of the Jesuits, and denial that King Louis of Bavaria was weak, old, unprincipled, and careless of the happiness of his people. In her whole history in that country, Lola Montez challenged any one to produce an instance of power in the hands of any woman better applied for the good of the people. She it was that influenced Louis to dismiss his corrupt cabinet and select a new one from the ranks of the middle classes. She was often shot at, once poisoned; but when the revolution broke out she was driven into exile by the influence of Austrian money on the rabble. She then fled to Switzerland, disguised as a peasant, but subsequently visited the King of Bavaria, clothed as a boy, and exacted an oath from him to abdicate rather than revoke any of the liberal measures she had induced him to adopt; and be kept that oath by abdicating. She denied emphatically that there was anything in her conduct in Bavaria to compromise her with the respectable world.

Before coming to America, she left Switzerland for London on a marriage speculation, for which nothing but sorrow resulted. From thence she went to Paris, where she entertained the first people of the age, including many Americans. Kossuth was her fellow-traveller coming to America; but her career in this country was not worth much notice. She had been charged by the papers, it is true, with horse-whipping hundreds of men whom she had never seen. But the grossest slander was that of Wm. H. Russell, the Crimean correspondent of the London Times, who edited "The adventures of Aunty Seacoal," and there described Lola Montez, on her language.

She claims to be one of the best abused women that ever lived, and we see no reason to doubt the justice of her claim. Certainly, if we take the malignity, slander and indecent jests that met her on her arrival in this country, some four or five years ago, as a specimen of the greeting usually bestowed upon, we are inclined to think that she has been the subject of more malicious falsehood than any hundred women that have been the subject of spicy paragraphs in newspapers, or holy cant elsewhere.

That Madame Lola Montez has fairly won a place in the public favour must be allowed by all. The press, to whom she cause to feel galled in the course they have pursued towards her. Her conduct since she has been in this country has been perfectly correct and proper. She has given no cause for scandal or remark, and yet again and again has she been assailed by impertinent surmises, or exploded falsehoods, which speak badly for the heads, and worse for the hearts of those who can only get up piquant sketches and witty paragraphs at the expense of a woman's feelings and reputation.

Her own genius, united with a courageous and energetic nature, has at length discomfitted her assailants. The newspapers of New York, with wonderful condescension, have at length taken her up, and have actually made the discovery that she is a woman of wonderful talent—that her lectures are full of wit, humor, and sound sense; that no public speaker, male or female, could more effectually charm and amuse an audience. Even the holy Bostonians, who, a few years since, would not yield her permission to visit their public schools, but wrote her impudent letters in reply to her polite and reasonable request, have rushed in crowds to hear her lectures, ignoring altogether the fact, that five years ago they were thrown into spasms of pious horror by her appearance,—likening her to the scarlet woman of Babylon, and other equally reputable personages, merely because she desired, as most intelligent strangers do, to visit the institutions of a country which her republican principles had taught her to admire and revere.

We are glad that she owes this triumph to herself alone, and hope that she may long continue to reap rich harvests of honor and profit in the field she has selected for her labors.

We present her history as related by herself in a farewell lecture in New York.

Several leading journals had, she said called for a lecture on Lola Montez. It might be supposed that she was well enough acquainted with that personage to undertake the task. It was not pleasant to hold up to the world a mirror of one's self, and though newspapers had sometimes styled her impudent, yet it was with more than diffidence she undertook the subject. As Burns says, "We were gods together—(applause)—and have been so closely connected, that to speak of that lady is very much like speaking of myself." A woman like a man, dislikes to hold the mirror up to nature, and few can summon the courage to stand face to face with themselves. 'Tis only those women who have met the difficulties and braved the dangers that are commonly the lot of men, that dare to do it These pieces of human waxwork to whom life means eating, drinking, the Opera and sleeping, know none of the rules which apply to others whose stormy nature forces them into the battle of every day life. A [illegible] currents with which other women have to contend. Alas for the women forced out into the currents of native life! Some who had the strength to get there were powerless to stand the time. Their great misfortune was too much energy for woman's present sphere, and too little for her proper use.

A gifted man well said, "Woman with wit and beauty needed the quills of the porcupine for self-preservation." Daniel O'Connell observed to Irish lasses, the best shrewd men in the world. She would, not say Lola was the best shrewd woman, but surely she had been shrewd enough compared. She had the honour of hearing from the mouth [illegible] most conspicuous personages [illegible] say being women. She was the heroine of twenty-three biographies. Seven claimed Homer; seven times seven disputed for the birthplace of Lola Montez, if her biographies are to be believed. Lola was a myth—Spain, Germany, Cuba, Italy, India, and Turkey were each her birthplace. Lord Byron, King Louis of Barbaria, and others, numerous as the signs of the Zodiac were, in turn, her father; and a wretched frozs the gallows will have it that she is the issue of a washerwoman named Molly Watson, Betsy Watson, or Betsy Reagan. If I were Lola, continued the lecturer, I should doubt if I were born at all. But if all this is written of her be true, she has been born again many times. Minerva sprang from the brain of Jupiter, but Lola has been born of the brain of each one of her biographers.

Lola Montez was, in truth born in Limerick, in 1824. Her father was the son of Sir E. Gilbert, an Englishman, and her mother one of the Olivers of Castle Oliver Ireland, who were connections of the Spanish Montagos, that lost extensive fortunes in the French and Don Carlos wars. The Montalgos are of Moorish descent, and thus Lola is of English, Irish, and Moorish blood—a somewhat combustible admixture. Her father was made an ensign at seventeen by the Duke of York, captain, and married to a girl of fifteen ere he was twenty. The second year of this union, Lola Montez was born—Maria Dolores Eliza Rosanna Gilbert. Her father was ordered to the East Indies, soon after her birth, and there died of the cholera, leaving her mother a widow of eighteen, and the young Lola to the care of Major Patrick Cragie. The difficulties of the young widow were numerous. Suitors surrounded her on every side till the air, said the lecturer, trembled of their emotion for miles around. She gave her hand to Major Cragie, then assistant Adjutant General of the British army in Calcutta.

Young Lola was sent to the care of the the Cragies, at Montrose, in Scotland.—There the little Indian girl, who spoke but a little patois of Spanish and Hindostane, was first made a lion, and laid the foundation of her pranks. Then she moved to the care of Sir Jasper Nichols, who spent some of his time in Paris; awhile in a French convent with the daughter of Sir Jasper; with her she crossed the channel and "finished" her education at a boarding school in Bath. There Lola's mother came to see her. Heaps of dresses were [illegible] each one fifteen, inquired "what for?" voyage to California, as a big, impudent-looking woman, dressed in man's attire, with a cowhide in her hand, while the fact is, stage, except on her stolen visit to Bavaria; never handled a cowhide in her life, and was not in California for two years after the time stated in his book. The story of Mr. Russell, in short, was an abominable lie. "If she was to collect all the lies told of Lola, they would make a mountain as high as Mont Blanc.

She said that since she commenced her course of lectures she had been treated by the Press with courtesy and kindness, and she would never forget it. Then followed delightfully just, eloquent, credible, and feeling remarks, in the farewell strain to America, the grand refuge of liberty—the fairest pillar to freedom that ever rose beneath God's o'erarching sky; and she closed by citing, with felicitous elocution, the concluding stanza of Childe Harold's pilgrim:

"Farewell! a word that must be and hath been,
A sound which makes us linger; yet, farewell!
Ye, who have traced the pilgrim to the scene
Which is his last, if your memories dwell
A thought which once was his, if on ye swell
A single recollection not in vain
He wore his sandal-shoon and scallop-shell;
Farewell! with him alone may rest the pain,
If such there were—with you, the moral of his strain."

Arrival of the Star of the West.

NEW YORK, July 14.

The steamship Star of the West arrived here at 10 o'clock this morning, with two weeks later news from California. She brings $1,400,000 in treasure, and 200 passengers. She left Aspinwall on the evening of the 5th instant. The California papers are barren of news. The Fraser River gold excitement was increasing, in consequence of glaring accounts furnished by the miners who have returned from that region. San Francisco was crowded with people on the way to the Fraser mines, and throughout the State, parties are making arrangements for the same purpose. The effect of the excitement was beginning to be felt in the State. Labour was scarce, and wages had gone up 20 to 30 per cent. It is estimated that 8,000 people have already left for the new diggings. Six steamers had been put upon the route, besides ten sailing vessels. Several American newspapers are projected in the British possessions, and one—the North American—had already been announced at Victoria. The steamer Cortez had taken 1,500 passengers for that city, and every berth in sailing vessels was taken for days in advance. The Hudson's Bay Company has stationed armed vessels on Fraser River to prevent emigrants, from carrying goods into the interior to sell.

Fine Chances to Marry.

One of the ministers, says the Princess Belgiojoso, in her Eastern travels, in very good circumstances, had three daughters who had long reached a mature age. The wife of an officer, thought it advisable to wait no longer, and put in execution a thoroughly [illegible] One Sunday he preached American ideas. He developed the text, "Increase and multiply," declaring to his congregation that it was a command, and not merely a counsel. He started with eloquence and warmth on the climate pleasures of wedlock, and ended his sermon by offering his three daughters with three dowries [illegible] officers, to any young men who were willing to marry them. He added that, after the sermon, he should receive the names of the officers, and that the three would fall on those who presented the best moral character. A facetious Irishman, who was present (and where are they not?) did not await the moment indicated by the priest to raise his voice; he immediately requested that his name should be placed on the list for two!

Provincial Parliament.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

WOLFORD DEBENTURES.

WEDNESDAY, July 14.

Hon. Mr. MORRIS had given notice of a motion, that the return made on the 22nd ultimo, to an address presented to his Excellency the Governor General on the 16th ultimo, praying his Excellency to cause to be sent to this House, a full report of the circumstances attending the issue to the Municipality of the township of Wolford, of Municipal Loan Fund Debentures to the amount of £25,000 sterling, and of the return of the same to the Receiver General's office; and of the subsequent delivery of the said debentures to the Municipality of Peterborough, be referred to a Select Committee. He, however, said that since he had given notice of this motion he had been informed by the legal gentleman who had this case in hand that he had been instructed by the Municipality of Peterborough to institute proceedings for the recovery of the missing money; and he, therefore, withdrew the motion.

MUNICIPAL BILL (U. C.)

Hon. Mr. VANKOUGHNET said this measure was one of importance, and great pains had been taken to make it as perfect as possible. He proposed that the Bill should be read a second time and referred to a Select Committee.

Hon. Col. PRINCE said he had carefully looked over the Bill, and he was bound to say that a more valuable Municipal Bill had never been given to Upper Canada. There was no less than twenty-six Acts of Parliament embodied in it. But there were two or three objections which he had to make to it. The first was that mayors were permitted to be elected by the people instead of by the councils; and the second objection was, that city clerks who received stated salaries, but who were required to perform extra services for which they had hitherto received fees, should be compelled to come to pay over the fees to the city treasurers. These objections could, however, be remedied in Committee.

The Bill was then a second time, and referred to Select Committee.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY.

WEDNESDAY, July 14.

NON-CONFIDENCE IN THE ADMINISTRATION.

Hon. J. S. MACDONALD moved, seconded by Dr. CONNOR, the following resolution:—"That an Address be presented to His Excellency the Governor General, setting forth that His Excellency's Advisers in the Provincial Cabinet do not possess the confidence of the Representatives of the people of Upper Canada in this House; and respectfully entreating His Excellency that until he shall be enabled to summon to his Council men in whose judgement and political principles the Upper Canadian members of the House can rely, His Excellency will be graciously pleased to withhold the exercise of his undoubted prerogative in all appointments to places of trust and emolument which are now vacant or may become vacant in Upper Canada, until such time as he can receive advice concerning the same from members of an Administration which shall faithfully represent the well understood wishes and interests of both sections of the Province." He said the position of the Government in this House, and the mode in which legislation is carried on, was inimical to the interests and contrary to the wishes of the people of that portion of the Province to which he belonged. It was not necessary to dwell at any great length on this, because the proofs had been repeated in this House so often by the votes of Upper Canadian members. It mattered not whether it was a Railroad which affected Upper Canada interests—it mattered not whether it was an Upper Canadian highway, the Administration, en masse, took sides against us. In saying this he wished it to be understood that he did not bring up this motion as a sectional one, he desired the house to understand that we now complained of the administration as an administration, that whilst we had endeavoured to bring before this House the complaints of the people of Upper Canada, we found not only those who ought to represent us upon the floor of this house, but also Lower Canadian members, who knew less of our wants, requirements and prejudices, we found them continually leading their aid to put us down. On the question of legislation we are ready to meet them on the floor of the House. We could discuss those measures which affect the general interests of Upper Canada, and he could appeal to the House if the discussions which had taken place had not in a great measure prevented the gentlemen on the Treasury Benches forcing upon Upper Canada views and laws inimical to their feelings. But we complained that there was administrative functions exercised in which we had no voice, acts perpetrated in the secret Council Chamber, over which we could exercise no control. In the exercise of their legislative functions we could meet them, we had met them boldly and checked them. Was it not true that the administration of the day did not possess the confidence of the people of Upper Canada. If this fact was admitted, as he thought it must be, he would be met by the reply that if the Government had the majority of the people of the whole province on their side they were entitled to proceed, that they were justified in setting aside the views of the large majority of the people of Upper Canada. Was it to be said that the others of the people of Upper Canada were then to be disregarded and that representations should be made in defiance of representations which not only affected them their wishes, which not only affected them now, but hereafter. If that was a normal feature in the administration, was it not time that we should discountenance a system which enabled gentlemen on the treasury benches to set aside the legitimate expression of the public opinion of Upper Canada; that they who stood here representing a large majority of these people were to have no voice in the appointments to such offices as those of judges, sheriffs, and surveyors of customs. It was useless for Government to say that the strong opinion which existed against them was caused by a religious cry, it was to the floor of this House, to the majority against them which they had to look. And outside the House not a single expression of public opinion has been given condemnatory of the course any Opposition member had taken and that being the case they stood corroborated in their decisions. Should it be said that we were to have our opinions set aside and that our neighbours from Lower Canada were to join with the minority of Upper Canada in saying that a voice in the choice of the most important officers should be denied us. The hon. gentleman then remarked upon the injuries done to the public service through the delay of filling up offices. Was it not notorious that the office of Solicitor General had been vacant for nearly five or six months? The Shrievalty of London was waiting to be filled up, as well as the office of Registrar; but the Government were so weak that they dare not fill them. Last session a new office of Inspector of Prisons were made, and they dare not fill them up because there were three or four hundred applicants to whom they had promised situations. If we were to be kept down by the votes of Lower Canadian members, let it be clearly understood, let the principle be boldly laid down, and we should know what course to take. The hon. gentleman concluded by reading the resolution he had moved.

Mr. MACKENZIE said that when at the last general election, every Upper Canada member of the Government, except the Attorney General was turned out, a pretty clear proof was afforded that they were particularly objectionable to this part of the country. Those who had the patronage,—who advised with his Excellency—were in a minority of one portion of the Province they professed to govern. In 1852 and 1853, Mr. Baldwin proposed that the Court of Chancery should be abolished, and when the vote went against him he immediately resigned. It had since been proposed that Upper Canada should have a Divorce Bill with the consent of the mother country; but it was voted down by the French Canadian members; and the same custom prevailed with regard to many other Upper Canadian measures. Only on Monday, the largest Upper Canada vote ever given was recorded in favour of Representation by Population; yet, it was voted down. Next, as to the Russell election, it was clear that were the voice of Upper Canada respected, the member who now sat and voted for that county, would not at, this moment be occupying a seat in this House. And upon the motion of the member for Toronto, to make public officers punishable for improperly using their office, he had hoped to have had a majority from the House; but the motion was voted down. With regard to the fishery Bill, if Upper Canada were represented, she would not have been compelled to pay for the support of the people engaged in the Lower Canada fisheries. He asked the Lower Canadians whether they considered they were acting towards Upper Canada in a fair and manly spirit? As to Mr. Spence, a place House, and the gentleman who was [illegible] opposite a political opponent (Mr. Notman) had been denied by the Lower Canadians an enquiry into a road. The Government had appealed to the country [illegible] in the late election, and yet they imposed upon Upper Canada the heaviest possible taxes.

The House adjourned a few minutes before one o'clock.

THURSDAY, 15th July, 1858.

The Speaker took the chair at ten o'clock.

Mr. HOGAN resumed the adjourned debate on Hon. J. S. Macdonald's motion of non-confidence in the Administration, and in doing so took a review of the present state of parties in the country and in the House—there being a majority from Upper Canada against the Ministry, and a majority from Lower Canada in their favour. The Attorney General West had possessed at one period a large share of the confidence of the people of Upper Canada, but, if he went before them now, with the fact that he had been legislating for Upper Canada with a Lower Canada majority, and making appointments for Upper Canada against the will of its representatives by means of that Lower Canada majority, he would not be able for very shame to lift up his face before his fellow-countrymen. Another consideration was that a Government in a minority of Upper Canada could not by possibility have the necessary confidence in themselves to do those things which the public required. Hence the absence of all useful legislation, the Government not daring to go on with their most important measures. Again in endeavoring to convert their minority into a majority, a Government in that position had recourse to most disreputable means, making the granting of any benefits constituencies dependent on the subserviency of their members. Members of the majority, for the sake of getting some act of justice for their constituents, were induced to give an occasional vote in favour of the Government, in violation of the pledges given at their election. In illustration of this Mr. Hogan read an article from a Huron newspaper, remonstrating with the member for that county against his course in giving an occasional vote to the Ministry, from a desire to benefit his constituents, and representing that there was nothing which he could secure for Huron that would compensate for the violation of the pledges given at his election. There was a feeling on the part of some Lower Canada members that the Upper Canada majority were hostile to the interests of Lower Canada. There was no ground whatever for any such feeling. It was thought the member for Toronto, especially, was actuated by that hostility. But, even if that charge were true, he (Mr. H.,) knowing what he did of the feelings of the gentlemen who sat around him, ventured to say it would be impossible for the member for Toronto to form a Government, actuated by any other feeling than a desire to do justice to Lower as well as Upper Canada. And the member for Toronto himself, if he found he could not carry on the Government on principles just to one section of the province as well as to the other, would, he was satisfied, of once abandon the attempt. (Hear, hear.)

After a few remarks by Mr. THIBAUDEAU, a vote was taken on the resolution which was negative by 67 to 36.

YEAS.—Messrs. Abbott, Bell, Bigger, Burnett, Burwell, Christie, Clark, Connor, Cook, Conflin, Dorion, Dorland, Gould, Hastings, Hebert, Hogan, Holton, John Labrge, Lefrenkoihe, D. A. Macdonald, J. S. Macdonald, Mackenzie, McGee, Merrill, Moore, Notman, Parkes, Patrick, Piche, W. Powell, W. Rose, Short, Stirton, Thibaudeau, Wallbridge, Wright, —37.

NAYS.—Messrs. Alleyn, Baby, Beaubien, Bellingham, Billinghurst, Benjamin, Buchanan, Burton, M. Cameron, Carling, Cayley, Atty. Gen. Cartier, Chapais, Cimon, Daly, Daoust, Dawson, Demaraisrs, Drouin, Dunkin, Ferrus, Fortier, Fournier, Gaudet, Gauvreau, Gill, Lacoste, Langevin, Laporte, Le Boutillier, Loranger, Atty. Gen. Macdonald, McCann, Panet, Playfair, Pope, Robinson, Roblin, Sol. Gen. Rose, R. W. Scott, Sherwood, Sicotte, Sincennes, Sidney Smith, Talbot, Tasse, Tetu, Turcotte,—47.

THE SUPPLIES.—SEAT OF GOVERNMENT.

FRIDAY, July 16.

Hon. Mr. CAYLEY moved that the Speaker leave the chair, for the House to go again into Committee of Supply.

Mr. DORION moved in amendment that the Speaker do not now leave the chair, but that it be resolved;—

"That an humble Address be presented to her Gracious Majesty the Queen, to represent—That this House is duly grateful to her Majesty for complying with the Address of her Canadian Parliament, praying her Majesty to select a permanent Seat of Government; but that the House deeply regrets that the city which her Majesty has been advised to select, is not acceptable to a large majority of the Canadian people.

Mr. GALT asked that this motion should not be pressed, and said it was contrary to an arrangement which had been made between the two parties, in regard to the order of business. It had been agreed by the hon. member for Toronto, and the member for Montreal, that the tariff resolutions should pass through Committee last night, that the remainder of the Supplies should be voted to-day, and that the discussion on the general financial policy of the Government should be taken on Monday on the question of concurrence in the tariff resolutions.

Mr. DORION said that no such arrangement was intended to preclude him from moving this resolution, which he had intimated all along that he would move when the motion was made for the House to go into Committee of Supply.

Atty. Gen. MACDONALD said he looked upon the course now taken as a breach of faith on the part of the member for Toronto and the member for Montreal.

Mr. BROWN said there was no breach of faith. He had only, so far as he was concerned, expressed his willingness that the general financial discussion should be postponed till the question of concurrence was taken on the tariff resolutions. But he had only spoken for himself, and it had been understood that his hon. friend from Montreal would take the first opportunity which the forms of the House permitted, of moving his resolutions on the Seat of Government. Were the Government afraid of the question? They had had notice of it for many weeks. As to the charge of a breach of faith it was utterly groundless; but he considered that the Government themselves had been guilty of a breach of faith in taking advantage of the absence of himself and other members when the House met this morning, to bring on the Consolidated Stock resolutions, in contravention of the understanding which had been come to.

Mr. DORION also warmly protested against the charge of a breach of faith, and proceeded to address the House briefly in French, in support of his resolutions.

In opening of the question, contended that Quebec would now have been the Seat of Government, but for the necessary of members the selection of Ottowa had been influenced by a feeling on the part of the Imperial Government, adverse to the French Canadians. He thought the question should not be treated as a Government one, but should be left an open question, as it had been treated on former occasions.

Hon. Mr. LORANGER said it could not be left an open question, as the resolutions were moved in amendment to the Supplies. He then went on to justify the reference of the question to the Queen as the combination of the Toronto and Quebec interests would always have prevented the fixing of a permanent Seat of Government otherwise. This very resolution was a convincing proof that this House could never have fixed it permanently. There were still many members in favor of the perambulating system.

Mr. LABERGE asked on whose advice the Imperial Government proceeded in fixing the Seat of Government at Ottawa?

Hon. Mr. LORANGER replied that he supposed the Imperial Government had good reasons for fixing it where they did. In the United States, it was the general rule to select small towns to be the Seats of Government in preference to large cities. He supposed one reason which weighed with England in selecting Ottawa, was that it would have a tendency to open up the vast Ottawa region, and create new channels for trade. Another reason was that it was one of the best places that could have been selected with a view to disarming the prejudices and animosities existing between the two races.

Mr. OUIMET said that during the late election public opinion in many parts of the country had been expressed strongly against the reference to England, and and members who, like himself, came into Parliament for the first time, came unbound by any previous action, and free to carry out the views of their constituents on this question. He regretted to find himself voting against the Government, but the Government ought not to have made it a ministerial question. But whether a ministerial or an open question, he deemed it his duty to vote for the resolution of the hon. member for Montreal. He thought Ottawa a very bad selection, and it gave him a poor idea of the wisdom displayed by the British Government, if this were a fair sample of it.

Mr. PATRICK said that, being warmly in favour of Ottawa as the Seat of Government, he could not be very favourable to Mr. Dorion's resolution. But he had strong misgivings in his mind as to the integrity of the intentions of the Government in the matter. He thought their conduct had been an insult to the Queen. It was they who proposed the reference to the Queen, which at the time he thought was a mere dodging of the question, and which they now [illegible] the difficulty, and that after all they had to shoulder the responsibility.—If he were satisfied they were determined to carry out the decision of the Queen, he would cheerfully vote with them on this question, but he was afraid they were only trying to hoodwink him. He was informed that the Commissioner of Public Works was telling the Quebec men that the Government would go to Quebec, if they only got over this session. The Attorney General East again told the Montreal men that it would go there, if they got over the session. And the Inspector General, with an Ottawa constituency, told them it was going to Ottawa. By only dealing with the question in this way, the Government endeavoured to make the best of it to suit them in holding on to their seats. He was much afraid that the Government were open to this charge. If they had intended to keep faith with Ottawa, why had they not commenced the expenditure of money there on public buildings, when they could have raised money on cheaply as they could have done during the whole of this spring and summer. He considered that Ottawa was the right place for the Seat of Government, and that the Union would be cemented by its being fixed there, instead of in Lower Canada, where he was afraid it was the desire of the Government to fix it.

Mr. RICHARD SCOTT had every faith in the integrity of the Government in regard to carrying out Her Majesty's decison, and he hoped the resolution of the member for Montreal would be acceeded to. He confessed, however, that it was a very injurious one, as it was framed to secure the support not only of what might be termed the legitimate Opposition, but of members from various sections who desired the seat of Government to be fixed in their respective localities, and therefore wished to have the question re-opened. In a matter of this sort, where they were likely to be influenced by sectional feelings, the decision of the Upper House should have some weight with them. There, Mr. DeBlaquiere's resolution, re-opening the question, was voted down by 27 to 5. They ought also to be influenced by the consideration that it would be insulting to the Queen, after she had been requested to give a decision and gave it, to say that they would not act upon it. He understood that Her Majesty had taken a warm personal interest in the matter, and that the decision was not Mr. Labouchere's but her own. He hoped, therefore, that the House would not, by adopting this resolution, insult the first lady in the world. Mr. Scott proceeded to give a number of reasons why in his view Ottawa was the best place for the Seat of Government, instancing its neutrality as respected the two races, its security in the event of foreign invasion, &c.

Hon. Mr. SICOTTE after giving a history of the Seat of Government question from the time it was fixed by Lord Sydenham at Kingston till the period of the reference to the Queen, admitted that at the time of his election he had declared the reference contrary to constitutional usage, but he had never declared that he would oppose the expenditure of the moneys voted, for it was not then known what choice had been or would be made.

Mr. LABERGE—Did not the hon. member then express his strong opposition to Ottawa?

Hon. Mr. SICOTTE had not done so.—He was willing to say that he never approved of the action of the House last session, but every Parliament left some legacy to the next which could not be ignored.—Indeed he thought that new Parliaments were in certain cases bound by the acts of their predecessors. It was the duty of the Government, and, of course, his duty while a member of the Government, to maintain the law. It would ill become him to object to the declared will of the country on any subject, and he would therefore abide by the declaration of the Premier at the beginning of the session, that the law would be respected. There had been no agitation on the subject in any part of the country since the subject became known. A stray article here and there had appeared complaining of it, but no dissatisfaction had been manifest. In Montreal it had even been stated by one Opposition press, the Montreal Herald, that the selection of Ottawa was in reality next to Montreal itself, the best choice that [illegible] repeated that the public mind had not at all been agitated on the question. [illegible] the Government had kept the matter secret and prevented public opinion from being created.

Hon. Mr. SICOTTE—On the contrary, the decision was published, so soon as it was known, and the Government was blamed by the Opposition for having given the decision to the public journals before Parliament met. Suppose the House agreed to the motion of the hon. member for Montreal, what would be the consequence?—Things would be thrown into the condition in which they were before the reference, for the resolution was limited to a simple negation. Now what would be the use of this? For unless a place were selected by the majority, the decision of the Queen, or rather the Queen's prerogative, would be good in the case. And why had the hon. member moved his resolution as an amendment to the Supplies? Had the Government opposed its being taken in its regular course?

Mr. DORION said he had asked the Attorney General West to fix a day for the consideration of the question, but the reply was that there were many other questions of greater importance to take up.

Hon. Mr. SICOTTE reiterated that the Government had offered no opposition to the regular progress of this matter, and in fact the hon. member had refused to proceed with it, thinking his position might be improved by delay. But he (Mr. Sicotte) believed that the House would not affirm so indefinite a proposition as that now submitted. Did the hon. member expect to carry the House by his personal popularity, and on trust as to his after course? It was clear that his object was not the settlement of the vexed question, but to embarrass the Government. Doubtless he thought that if he carried his motion, the Government would be obliged to act, and he took that as the easiest mode—involving no responsibility of his own at all. He (Mr. Sicotte) complained of this mode of procedure, and he had a right to do so; and he further said that such a motion should not have been discussed at all, for it was a Parliamentary maxim, that mere negations ought not to involve debates. His hon. friend (Mr. Dorion) had not decided upon any affirmative course on the part of the House; for even in the motion, as originally placed on the notice paper. It was the Queen who was to be asked to select Montreal. Was not this the very course which the hon. member had so much found fault with last year, namely, the reference to the Crown? But the hon. member had seen his error, and so altered his motion as to make it a simple negation. With reference to the speech of the hon. member for Beauharnois (Mr. Ouimet), he would say that the Government he had agreed to sustain was the same, with one or two exceptions, as the Government which was in office last session, and, of course, he [illegible] they were bound to carry out the law relative to the Seat of Government. If the motion of the member for —— carried were, nothing in effect would have been done. If it carried, the hon. member would only have succeeded in placing himself in a very unfavourable position, in fact much worse than he occupied before; but he would have no one to blame but himself.

Mr. LABERGE said that the Commissioner of Crown Lands (Mr. Sicotte) had remarked that he originally disapproved of the reference to Her Majesty, but he did not understand to say what was the opinion now. The hon. gentleman objected that an affirmative proposition had not been submitted to an earlier period of the session. Doubtless if an affirmative proposition had not been made, the course would have been pursued, as in former cases, of naming one place after another until every one had been negatived. The fact was that, if the Government had had the requisite vigour, the question would have been settled long ago. If it pleased the hon. Commissioner to maintain now a decision he had disapproved of a year ago, and which he believed the hon. gentleman still in his secret soul disapproved of, that was his business; but he should not expect the House to follow him. Ottawa had had only ten votes in the House, and was the last place that the House would have been likely to select. If it could have been foreseen that Ottawa would have been chosen, he was sure that not more than ten members would have gone for the reference. Quebec had been once chosen although it was alleged again and again that the House could never agree upon a place. Mr. Laberge went on to remark upon the presumed duty of one Parliament to respect the decisions of a former one, and denied that any such duty was ever recognized.—Indeed, our political history completely refuted the proposed principle. Another argument of the Commissioner of Crown Lands was that the public voice had received the decision of Her Majesty [with respect and submission, if not with satisfaction. This he doubted, and in fact he believed if the people had not disliked expressing a strong dissatisfaction with their Queen, very strong disapprobation would have been manifested. He then proceeded to say that the despatch relating to the Seat of Government had been withheld until after the election, which showed how the Ministry itself foresaw how unpopular the choice of Ottawa would be.

Hon. Mr. SICOTTE said the despatch was dated the 31st December; it was received here about the 15th of January, and communicated to the public on the 18th. How, then could the hon. member in face of these facts say that information had been withheld?

Mr. LABERGE said he was probably wrong in this matter; but it was a trifling inaccuracy. As to the merits of the case, according to the Commissioner of Crown Lands fate had decreed that they were to go to Ottawa; and there was no hope to the contrary, for the Attorney General West had said that the law must be carried out. Therefore, unless something were done now to reverse the decision, it would be afterwards too late, unless, indeed, next year the expense of the erection of the summer of 1859 were sacrificed. He called upon his fellow Lower Canadian members to interfere.

Mr. TURCOTTE said the Government was bound to abide by the law. It was clear that the member for Montreal wanted to fix other seats than the Seat of Government. If the Government wished to free themselves from the entanglement in which this motion was designed to put them they would appoint a day for the discussion of the subject on its own merits. By thus freeing it from the subject with which it was connected a more intelligent vote would be taken. He had no intention of falling into the trap which had been set.

Atty. Gen. CARTIER said the question had been brought up in an artful manner. The motion was the small subterfuge of a very small lawyer, for not a single member had accepted the amendments as made in good faith. Indeed they were but a miserable trick.

Mr. DORION said there was not a word of truth in all this.

Atty. Gen. CARTIER had heard his words only with pity. but what could be expected from one who had conspired with the member for Toronto to impose a mis[illegible] on a credulous people? [illegible] had been attempted in the most unfair manner to be attributed to the Commissioner of Crown Lands at the last election.—With regard to himself, he had voted for the reference. Had the Queen been advised to select a commercial centre, Montreal should have been chosen; if a stronghold, Quebec; but if a compromise was wanted between the two Provinces, Ottawa was the place. And, he added, that if the latter was the choice, it would after all be far more a Lower Canada than an Upper Canada city. He had given it as his opinion that Montreal was the best place, next to which Ottawa; and one reason he had for Ottawa was, that that city was part French. But what was the design of this motion? Neither more nor less than a censure on her Majesty. If any one should be censured, it should be those who had occasioned the reference. There was no alternative but for the House to reject the motion of censure to the Queen. The choice of course could not please those who were determined to have Montreal, or Quebec, or Kingston, or Toronto, at any cost. The House had, however, seen the clumsy trap prepared for them, and he would now tell the House that the Government would afford ample time and opportunity to deal with the subject in its entirety and integrity. When it was considered that last year both Houses of Parliament had humbly prayed her Majesty to intervene and voted the means necessary to carry out her choice to which she had graciously assented. How would it look for the same Legislature to turn round and tell our Sovereign that she had committed a gross blunder? Yet this was the case, this was the proceeding the hon. gentleman advocated. The reason was clear. He wanted the votes of the hon. member for Toronto, for that member did not like Ottawa as there were nuns and priests there. Then he also thought he would get the Government in a tight place, and of course such an opportunity could not be lost. This was the full meaning and reach of the astute member. He then referred to his course in 1856 and since; for the purpose of shewing he had been consistent with himself all throughout.—His interests would have been much better served by placing the Government at Montreal, for every member knew what property he possessed there. He then proceeded to recapitulate the reasons offered for and against all the places named, and contended that after Montreal Ottawa was undoubtedly the best place.

Mr. DORION would not answer the impertinences of the Atty. Gen. East, but would confine himself to the discussion which had taken place between the members for Toronto, Sherbrooke and himself. In the arrangement then talked over, there was nothing to prevent this question being moved in amendment to the Supplies, and been deemed the best occasion for bringing it up. He thought this was the only opportunity when the subject could be fully discussed, and was content to be decided.

Mr. OUIMET.—The Government complained that there had been a want of frankness and certainly if it was the object of the member for Montreal to have a fair discussion, he would not object to the proposition of giving up Wednesday to it.

Mr. DORION said that on last Wednesday when the question was brought up, he had proposed to the Government to consider it as a substantive motion the next day, but they refused to do this; so he had been driven to adopt the present course. In fact they had treated the subject as too unimportant to give it a day.

Hon. Mr. DRUMMOND said the House had been dragged into this debate unexpectedly and unprepared, and he trusted the hon. member for Montreal would consent to the postponement of the motion until Wednesday.

Mr. DORION said it would be a great inducement for him to do so, if he thought he could in the meantime convert the hon. member for Shefford. (Hear, hear.) But in that, judging from that hon. gentleman's custom of voting he feared he would not succeed. He wanted to get a vote on the question, and he knew that if it were postponed until Wednesday, it would be again adjourned and no vote would be taken.—The motion had been upon the paper ever since the despatch of Mr. Labouchere was received four months ago; and now that he had an opportunity of bringing it up, he was not to be pooh-poohed by the supporters of the ministry. Representation by Population was continually postponed—between the time of its being taken up and the period of its disposal, six weeks having elapsed, between the one period and the other; whilst the Double Majority had been dragging its weary length along for two months and a half. It was easy to speak against time for three days, and if he postponed the amendment until Wednesday, the three Wednesdays coming, beyond which the session would not probably last, would be talked away without a vote being taken.

Hon. Mr. DRUMMOND—Put it down for the first motion, with the understanding that the discussion will be continued until the motion is disposed of.

Mr. DORION declined.

Mr. PICHE censured the conduct of Attorney Gen. Cartier towards Mr. Dorion, but he was glad that the hon. member for Montreal had answered him with becoming dignity. He then proceeded to deny that the motion of Mr. Dorion was disrespectful to Her Majesty, since it was a mere fiction that she had given any decision at all. Was it not known that the choice was in fact made by the Colonial Minister. He hoped the House would not assent to the request for delay.

Mr. MCGEE said, that in the absence of the senior member for Montreal, he a few weeks ago moved a resolution similar to that before the House. The debate continued during the morning, but in the evening the Speaker ruled the motion out of order.—At that time the senior member for Montreal having returned to the House, he stated his intention of bringing up the question at the earliest possible moment. Notwithstanding the period that had since elapsed, it having been discussed at length in last Parliament—it being made one of the most important issues which determined the last election—and the communication to the House of Mr. Labouchere's despatch, the hon. member for Shefford complained that due notice had not been given of this discussion. He, therefore, did not think that any man, much less the member for Shefford, who was in some sort the sponsor of the choice made, had any reason for complaining of surprise. The Sol. General East (Mr. Rose) had maintained a most unmistakeable silence on this question. In ancient times, the rose was the emblem of silence; and hence when silence was desired, the words "sub rosa" were employed. (Hear, hear.) But the House would not be satisfied unless the Solicitor General, before the debate ended, informed the House what course he intended taking, and his reason for pursuing that course. When the Attorney General East, and the Solicitor General East were before the city of Montreal, their organs said that had not the people of that city wilfully chosen to [illegible] magnificent [illegible] been the capital of the Province; and the Solicitor General ought to declare what his views were now. One thing, however, appeared to have been agreed upon by the House, and that was to abandon the rotary system of carrying the Government from city to city. With regard to her Majesty, it was well known that this was not the decision of the Queen but of Mr. Labouchere, who was perhaps instigated by the very men who defended the choice he had made. (Hear, hear.)—he maintained that no Mr. Labouchere ought to be permitted to place irrevocably the metropolis at a point were the majority believed it ought not to be placed. (Hear, hear.) Red tape might do to bind papers in the circumlocution office, but red tape would never bind Canada to this decision. (Hear, hear.) The arguments used to-night were of two kinds, the first was by the hon. member for Ottawa, of whom he (Mr. McGee) would certainly think much less than he did if it were possible for him to sit quiet in this House and not argue the cause of his city. The argument which he used was the centrality of his city. But how was a political centrality to be determined? Not by taking an almost uninhabited region on one side, and an inhabited region on the other, and saying that the point between was the political centre of the country. No one would assert that Northern Ottawa would ever have a large population until every other acre of country capable of settlement had been populated. until the Saskatchewan had been populated. The European population did not love the extreme north. The ship canal was two and a half degrees north of the line of continuous population, and through such a country it was impossible to create a way traffic permanently populative. No one believed that on a crystaline limestone foundation they were going to breed a great industrial population; for such the report of Mr. Murray, the Provincial Geologist, conclusively proved the Upper Ottawa to be. The rule by which to find the centre of population, was not to trace out certain tracks of land, and fix upon their centre; the centre of a sheet of paper was not the centre of human life, industry and interests.

Mr. W. POWELL asked where that was?

Mr. MCGEE—If the Government of Canada was to remain as it is at present—if we were to be no greater, nor no less—then the centre must be the St. Lawrence, the line of life, the line of destiny, the line of commerce. There, if Canada was to remain as it was at present, was the natural Seat of Government. Still more, if this capital we had to choose were to be the Seat of Government, not only of Canada, but of every one of these Provinces; and if the member for Sherbrooke had really at heart the magnificent project to which he lately called the attention of the House, why did he not step in, and for one, give his vote against the premature decision of this question, which decision must be reversed. If we were to have a Federal Union the Western Province ought to be, in common courtesy, consulted. If Quebec was found to be the best place, let it be Quebec. But if we were advancing towards federation—if that was the destiny of those scattered communities, as he believed it was, compelled as they would be by their best interests, and the instinct of their necessities—then we were forestalling the greater decision in endeavouring to walk alone.—We were anticipating what we ourselves should have to overthrow by deed by. Then would the buildings we erected have to be brought under the humour and cold for a more central one like the Common House of Quebec, for £30 or £40. The hon. Attorney General East had used another argument—an argument he (Mr. McGee) had heard before. He had said that Ottawa was surrounded by a mixed population, and by fixing the Seat of Government there the union of the two races would be forwarded. Now what were the facts, and he called the attention of hon gentlemen from Lower Canada to them, because they had a deep, vital, a permanent interest in it? In the country surrounding the proposed capital, the population of French origin was not more than one in ten of the people of British origin. He held in his hand the last census which had been taken of the counties adjoining the proposed seat of Government. On the Lower Canadian side the French as compared with the inhabitants of British origin, were not in the proportion of one to three. The hon. member then read from the census, the population of the various counties around Ottawa, Carleton, Lanark, Renfrew, Russell and Prescott. On the average, taking these counties, the average of the French population was not more than one in twelve.—And yet the Attorney Gen. East, to satisfy French Canadians in this House, said that the population was mixed, and that the effect would be to bind the various races and nationalties into one homogeneous and united Canadian people. In Ottawa itself, according to the census, there were but a little over two thousand French to eight thousand of British origin.—The total population was then 7,760, of French Canadians there were 2,036, a little over 26 per cent. Before he sat down he would take this opportunity of calling the attention of the House to a fact which had not been brought before the House the present session. It appeared, and unless the members from the Ottawa district resolved not to profit by experience, they would find much food for meditation; it appeared then at the last election for the city of Kingston the Attorney General West made a declaration in relation to the tactics he had previously pursued on this question. He (Mr. McGee) would read from that declaration. He knew some of the organs were authorized to deny the statement, but he knew also that the reporter, who was certified to be a most respectable man, Mr. Shannon, had re-affirmed it over his own name, and he (Mr. McGee) had been told by respectable citizens of Kingston within three days they were ready on oath to affirm its substantial truth. The Attorney General West was asked by one of those troublesome interrogators, when upon the hustings, why he had not done something to bring the Seat of Government to Kingston? He replied, "you are aware that the Lower Canadians to a man, and some of the representatives of Upper Canada too had decided upon placing it at Montreal, and had it then been put to a vote the Parliament, Public Offices and Seat of Government would now have been placed at Montreal. But by a species of humbugging"—the reporter was positive as to the use of the word, and those who knew the Parliamentary style of the hon. gentleman would not do very great violence in supposing it rose to his mind—"we got it knocked aside that time. How was that? Just by setting up Montreal." This was a candid confession; the sinner's heart was opened. But he forgot at the time the warning of the Scottish poet;

"A chiel's among ye takin' notes!"

(Laughter) and the consequence was his words got a much larger circulation than he had bargained for. (Hear, hear.) He (Mr. McGee) did not think the members for Ottawa, some of them at least, would repulse with rudeness the opinion of any member so that he would call attention to at the head of a Government made an avowal of this kind, and gloried in his shame, gloried in the fact that by a trick of humbugging, of legerdemain, and by setting up one town against another, that he had succeeded in cheating those who had trusted in him, who, would in future repose confidence in him. A man who had deceived his own friends once would deceive them again, nothing was more natural, and if they (the Ottawa members) vouched for his honesty, would the people vouch for theirs? The Government ought to give a straight-forward answer as to what they proposed to do with the Debentures, they were authorized to raise for the buildings at Ottawa? What security had they that the Inspector General would not deal with the $900,000, as he had done with the Rebellion Losses Debentures? Ottawa had a right to a distinct answer. Then were they to go for four years to Quebec after spending another Session here? Quebec had a right to an answer. Or were they to have a repetition of the humbug spoken of by the Attorney General in his speech on the Kingston hustings? Mr. McGee proceeded to argue that Ottawa was not the most suitable place for the Seat of Government. He was against the selection of Ottawa, he said, not on local or on partizan grounds; but because from its situation and the composition of its surrounding population, which did not comprise a fair representation of the two races, it was not the best place for working out the destiny of Canada. He concluded by vindicating the course of his colleague in bringing up the subject now, when it was sure of a decision. Had he brought it up on Wednesday, it would have been on the Orders of the Day for next Wednesday, and then it would have been adjourned to another Wednesday, until the prorogation took place, without a decision. It had been the aim of the out a decision. It had been the aim of the Government during the whole session to shirk the question. At its very commencement, in the Speech from the Throne, they gave it the go-by, alluding to it in a mere clause at the tail-end of a sentence, and ever since the Government had failed to give any satisfaction as to what their intentions were.

Mr. R. SCOTT said, the Ottawa members were satisfied with the announcement of the Government that they would carry out the law.

Mr. W. F. POWELL regretted that the question had come up in the shape it did, involving the fate of the Administration.—He would have preferred that it had come up to be discussed on its own merits. This motion involved an amount of treachery which does little credit to its introducer.—(Oh! oh!) The hon. member proceeded to attack the antecedents of Mr. McGee, and to vindicate the claims of Ottawa over Montreal and other places to be the Seat of Government.

Col. PLAYFAIR considered that, if this resolution were adopted, we would become the laughing stock not only of England, but of Europe and the United States. Independently of the decision of Her Majesty, he considered that every unprejudiced person would come to the decision that Ottawa was the best place to be the Seat of Government. It was central, being within a gun-shot of the line between Upper and Lower Canada. It had a population half British and half French. In a military point of view too it was the right place. It had a position strong by nature, and capable of being made stronger by art, and being 50 miles inland, was far removed from foreign invasion.

Mr. FORTIER will be desired to vote for the Supplies, and he would therefore vote against the motion now in hand, and when the question of the Seat of Government came up on its own merits, he would then give an independent vote.

Mr. LANGEVIN would also vote against the motion on the understanding that on Wednesday the question would come up for consideration on its own merits. If the member for Montreal did not then proceed with his resolutions, he would move some himself.

Hon. Mr. CAUCHON wished a distinct statement to be made whether in that event, it would be a Ministerial question.

Mr. CHAPAIS would vote against the motion now, but on Wednesday next he would vote on the question independently.

Major CAMPBELL said that the question having been referred by the Parliament to her Majesty, and her Majesty having accepted the reference and having decided upon, he would abide by that, until he saw a very large majority in favor of one place in which case, he might perhaps join in asking her Majesty to reconsider her decision.

Mr. DUNBAR ROSS said if this was the decision of Her Majesty, he might hesitate to disturb it, but it was the decision of her Ministers, and public opinion fixed it as the decision of one man, whom he was not going to name, but who was not the Colonial Secretary, or any other of the Imperial Ministers. But the Imperial Ministers were responsible for it, and when they chose a place altogether unsuitable, which was ridiculed in this House when proposed if we could not reach them otherwise, we could show them what was the state of public opinion. But we could reach the Ministers here who endorsed it, and turn them out of their seats if necessary. He would have preferred that the question had come up independantly, but if it was pressed now, he was bound to vote for it.

Mr. BROWN insisted that it was the duty of the Government to make an explicit statement of their policy on this question. It was most discreditable to them that they should have allowed the debate to go on the whole night without a word of explanation to place clearly and distinctly before the House what their policy was. (Hear, hear.) Did any one know what they had done or what they intended to do—whether they had borrowed the $900,000 authorized by the Act of last session—whether they had bought land—whether they intended to go on with the buildings—whether Parliament was to be removed to Quebec after next session—what their intentions really were? They had got up and made speeches by the hour—making appeals ad misericordiam—beseeching members to put off the question to another opportunity, so as not to embarrass them; but they had not said a word about what they were actually to do. In private they told their Quebec friends one thing, the Montreal members another, and the Ottawa members another; but they had not dared openly to declare their policy in the face of the House. But there could be no doubt that the real issue to-night was By-town or no By-town. (Hear, hear.) If the resolution was lost, nothing more could be done with the question this session; and when they assembled next session, they would find that the Government had entered on the work of constructing the buildings at Ottawa. If, on the other hand, the resolution was carried, the Canadian Legislature would resume—what it never would have given away, but for the desire of those hon. gentlemen to stave off a difficult question—the power of determining where its own seat of Government should be. Mr. Brown went on to express his opinion that the Legislature would not carry out the views of a moiety of the people of Canada, if they endorsed the decision of the Colonial Secretary; or, as had been hinted by the member for Beauce, of some person behind the Colonial Secretary, in favour of Ottawa, which had almost nothing to recommend it, and which only secured 11 votes out of 130 when its claims were presented to the House.

Hon. Mr. DRUMMOND said that long ago, after consultation with the hon. Robert Baldwin, he came to the conclusion, that if the Union was to be preserved, By-town should be the seat of Government, and he did not think that the junior member from Montreal, with all his arguments, placing the Seat of Government there it would be impossible to say that one section of the Province had been favoured at the expense of the other. Having gone through the Ottawa country, he knew it contained the elements of vast prosperity. It was placed in a more favourable position for a capital city than Montreal, because Montreal was liable to aggression from the south, whereas Ottawa, from its position, was almost impregnable, and was a place where the records of the Province could be placed in security.—The decision of her Majesty ought to be abided by. All parties were divided on the question previous to that decision. The House was divided, the Executive Council was divided, and the Upper House was divided. He gave full credit to the Government for referring the matter to the Queen. In matters of general legislation, we had a right to reverse any decision we had come to, but he did deny that we had any right to reverse a decision we had come to in reference to a foreign power. On the contrary, we were bound in honor to abide by our word. If a matter of the greatest importance was referred by gentlemen to arbitration, neither of them, if they wished to preserve their characters would refuse to abide by the award. He would go further; he would say that if this House should unfortunately repudiate the decision of Her Majesty, and the Governor-General should attempt to carry out the decision of the House, he ought to be recalled. Nay, if he even allowed it to be an open question, he was insulting his sovereign. What he blamed the Government for was that they did not come down boldly to this House and declare the course they intended to take. (Hear, hear.) He wished to know if they would carry out the Queen's decision; he wished to know if they would spend the money that had been set aside; above all things he wished to know if the Government would be so weak, in order to please a certain proportion of their supporters? He hoped they would not commit any such monstrous injustice; he hoped they would not be guilty of such lavish expenditure of public money, especially at a time when they had to cut down the salaries of their officers; he hoped they would not spend £150,000 in this way merely to please their Quebec friends. The thing was monstrous! The hon. member concluded by saying that it was quite unnecessary for him to say that he should vote against the motion. (Laughter from the Opposition, and "quite unnecessary, we knew that when you began.")

Hon. MALCOLM CAMERON said he should vote against the motion, as it was evidently brought forward to prevent discussion, and with other intentions than those which appeared on the face of it. The member for Toronto appeared to think the fate of the country depended upon the [illegible] Seat of Government. He, (Mr. C.) however, thought it mattered little whether the Seat of Government was located at Kingston, Toronto, Montreal, or Ottawa; at all events, with our railway communication, it was but a matter of two or three hours travel, and $2 or $3 expense. After a few more remarks the hon. member concluded by expressing his disapprobation of the way the motion was brought in, and his wish that the question could be debated next Wednesday, as the Government proposed.

Mr. DORION's amendment was then, at 3 A. M., put to the vote, and negatived on a division of 63 to 45.

YEAS.—Messrs. Alleyn, Bigger, Bourassa, Brown, Burnett, Burwell, Cameron, Christie, Cimon, Clark, Connor, Coutlee, Desaulniers, Dorion, Dorland, Daudet, Gauvreau, Gould, Hebert, Hogan, Howland, Jobin, Laberge, Lefrenkoihe, Lemieux, John S. Macdonald, Masson, Matice, McDougall, McGee, Mowat, Munro, Notman, Ouimet, Piche, Walker, Powell, Rose, Rymal, William Scott, Short, Somerville, Stirton, Thibaudeau, Wallbridge and Wright,—45.

NAYS—Alleyn, Baby, Beaubien, Bell, Billinghurst, Benjamin, Burton, John Cameron, Malcolm Cameron, Campbell, Carling, Cayley, Attorney General Cartier, Chapais, Cook, Daly, Dawson, Dionne, Drummond, Dufresne, Dunkin, Fellowes, Ferres, Fortier, Fournier, Galt, Harwood, Heath, Holmes, Labelle, Lacoste, Langevin, Laporte, LeBoutillier, Loranger, Macbeth, Atty. General Macdonald, MacLeod, McCann, Morin, Morrison, Panet, Papineau Patrick, Playfair, Pope, Wm. F. Powell, Price, Robin, Solicitor General Rose, Richard W. Scott, Sherwood, Sicotte, Simard, Simpson, manse comants and mantles, and even glass and porcelain mosaics brought to the test of scientific investigation, or, better still, of practical experience, with a view to their adoption for such uses. For, though we cannot exploit immunity from the law of decay when erecting such memorials, it is satisfactory to find that, even for centuries, they will mark the place where all that remains ineffably dear to us reposes; and where all that is mortal of ourselves is soon to lie down in the dreamless slumber of the grave.

We had hoped to have been able to enter a protest against, "the folly, profanity and ignorance of the mass of modern epitaphs." There are few more palpable evidences than these of the mighty work Christianity has to perform before the spirit of the world can be brought into harmony with the spirit of the Master, on all that pertains to the great change that must pass upon all men. If any doubt this, let them procure Pettigrew's able and valuable work "Chronicles of the Tombs," lately published by H. G. Bohn, and, having read it, say whether more conclusive because incidental, evidence could be found of the small degree to which an elevated Christian spirit has pervaded the mass of society regarding the great spiritual experience that we call Death. At the solemn moment of [illegible] coming, when, if at any time, such spirit was most likely to find utterance, there has been poured forth, in its stead, a series of "ludicrous passing, satirical, degrading, denunciatory, revengeful, bombastical and ordinary" epitaphs; beside, which, the "ordinary and devotional," if not a few in number, are poor in execution, and in comparison with which the elegance of the Greek and the simplicity of the Roman epitaphs stand out as singularly beautiful.—Mr. Pettigrew and Mrs. Stone unite in commending Mr. Markland's "Remarks on English Churches, and on the expediency of rendering Sepulchral Monuments subservient to Pious and Christian Uses," as affording the best suggestions for reforming this evil to which we would add Maitland's and Northcote's works on the Catacombs, the inscriptions in which are characterized by a simplicity, humility, reverence and living faith which are but too rare in our day. Addison on Hogarth's "Epitaph for Apothecary Churchyard," and Kilke's "Church-yard Manual," may also be commended.—London Inquirer.

☞Queen Victoria contemplated a visit to the French Naval Review, at Cherbourg.

NEW ADVERTISMEENTS.

Notice to the Asthmatical—R. S. Moore
Notice—Hurst & Denne.
R. T. Brooks—Architect.

The Examiner.

THURSDAY, JULY 22, 1858.

The Seat of Government.

The decision come to in the House of Assembly, on Friday, upon Mr. Dorion's resolutions, repudiating the selection of Ottawa to be the permanent seat of government, as made by the Colonial master, seals for ever the political centre of the country, under human judgment. Of all the sites proposed as fitting to be the capital of the Province, none was thought so lightly of in the country and in the legislature, as Ottawa. Yet, by an unwise reference to uninformed and uninterested parties, the prudential reasoning of the truly concerned is set aside, and the very place of which they had expressed the least approval is preferred. There are many reasons for rejecting Ottawa; it is not a centre of population, it is not a centre of fertility, or of commerce, neither is it convenient of access. But, admitting that, under our present political association, the inhabitants of the Province might be persuaded to submit to accept it as their capital, there is still to be considered that graving for territorial aggrandizement, which is only now developing itself, in the attempt to embrace the lower provinces, and eventually the great north west, in a federal union. The earnest manner in which this matter has lately been discussed, and the disposition to regard it as a sovereign remedy for the discordant interests which perplex our statesmen, began to awaken a popular interest, and to encourage the hope that a solution of our difficulties would be found in a noble measure of expensive statesmanship. Difficult as was the task of uniting separate and distant communities in one confederacy, wherein each should feel its glory, its interest and its happiness, while there was yet nothing that was not open to arrangement, how much more difficult will it be to engage a corresponding fatherland, with the federal capital already settled, and at a place alike unsuitable for the local to the general government. For, if there be a federal union, Upper and Lower Canada should each need public buildings; the one possibly at Toronto, the other at Montreal, and with federal legislature would subject Quebec to [illegible] Now however, [illegible] charge to the treaty, stands in the way, for it may be assumed as definitely settled, that Ottawa is to receive the distraction of the capital. And as to the expenditure attendant to the purpose, who shall limit it? Who, indeed, will venture to prescribe the limits of the outside [illegible] in future times, [illegible] will it not be, if the people of one age should be required to submit only to a past state, and utterly subduing the requirements of that. The folly was, indeed, in a fit of exultation, a local question was allowed to intercept the views of local legislation, and that offered to strangers to decide, which must [illegible] according to [illegible] opinion. [illegible] It is [illegible] who first unanimously offered their preferences to other countries for our capitals. Public taste, the metropolitan [illegible] would up a State [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

BOOKS! BOOKS!!

THE Subscribers have now in Stock the following Books, to which they respectfully direct the attention of the Inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding country, viz:—

LIFE OF GENERAL HAVELOCK.
LIVINGSTONE'S TRAVELS.
ENGLISH HEARTS & ENGLISH HANDS.
LIFE OF CAPT. HAMMOND.
The Shadow on the Hearth.
Spurgeon's Life.
Sermons.
Boosher's Life Thoughts.
Jane Eyre.—By Currer Bell.
Mordaunt.—By Elder Hyde.
Westerly Anecdotes.
Life Pictures from a Pastor's Note Book.
Revival Sermons in New York in 1858.
Roger's Table Talk.
The Prince of the House of David.
Manual of Scientific Discovery for 1858.
Literary Attractions of the 19th.—Kelsey.
Baynes' Essays in Biography and Criticism.
Cecils Remains.
Laws from Heaven, for Life on Earth.
Olmstead's Mechanics of the Heavens.
Longfellow's Poetical Works.
Cats and Dogs.—By Mrs. Hugh Miller.
Flora.—A Tale, by A. L. O. E.
The Roby Family.—"
Kirke White's Works.
Twenty Years a Slave.
The English Orphans.—By Mrs. Mary J. Holmes.
Baldwin's Representative Women.
Mind of Jesus.—By Macduff.
Words of Jesus. "
Bow in the Cloud. "
Faithful Promiser. "
The City: Its Sins and Sorrows.—By Rev. Dr. Guthrie.
Gospel in Ezekiel. "
Foster's Essays.
Dick's Christian Philosopher.
Chalmers' Moral Philosophy.
Chalmers' Miscellanies.
Bonar's Land of Promise.
Brewster's Here Worlds than One.
Lectures to Young Men.
The Royal Preacher.
D'Aubigne's Reformation.
Kitto's Daily Bible Illustrations—Morning and Evening Series.
Books of Family Worship.
Family Prayers.—Macduff.
Memories of Bethany.
Footsteps of St. Paul.
McCheyne's Life and Remains.
Life of Cromwell.
Glesner's Lectures on the Pilgrim's Progress.
Dick's Astronomical Discourses.
Burder's Select Thoughts.
Memories of Gennesaret.
Shattering Children.
Bridges' on the 119 Psalm.
Bogatsky's Golden Treasury.
Anxious Inquirer.
The Coral Island.
Ungavee a tale of the Equinaux.
The Young Fur Traders.
&c., &c., &c.

ALSO, JUST RECEIVED,

A Choice Assortment of Bibles, Church Services, Psalm and Prayer Books, Wesley's Hymns, &c., &c. Toy Books for Children, in great variety.
Sunday School Reward Cards, Prize Books, &c., &c.

SAWERS & MURRAY.
New Book and Stationery Store, Burnham's Block, George Street.
Peterboro', June 9, 1858.

MUSIC! MUSIC!!

Two Musical Bequest, (Emptied), AT 6d PER SINGLE NUMBER.

THE subscribers have now in stock, the following pieces, to which they respectfully invite the attention of the Ladies of Peterborough,

QUADRILLES.

The Scotch Quadrilles.
Centennial Quadrilles.
Les Chiens, (dogs) do.
Ethiopian do.
The Don Cesar De Bazan Quadrilles.
Bolyneer do.
The British Navy do.
Les Chats, (cats) do.
Bonnie Dundee do.
Les Singes,' (monkeys) do.
Les Lanciers, do.
Les Trompettes, do.
The Irish do.
Pans in Boots do.
The Royal Lancers' do. do.
The Comic or Bachelor's do.

POLKAS.

Gay Fawkes' Polka.
The Laughing Eyes Polka.
Tomtit's do.
The Bobbin' Around do.
The Original do.
Ask Mamma do.
The Minnie do.
The Silverbair do.

FANTASIAS.

Gazelle Impromptu.
The Bank shoon Tragedy.
La Violette.
Les Cloches Du Monastere.
We're a' Noddin'.
The Last Rose of Summer.
Fantasia on Bohemian Airs.
Partant Pour La Syrie.
Minnelieder, Brilliant Fantasia.
Home, sweet Home, Wallace Medley.
Robert Le Diable.
L'Italienne Fantasia.
Grand Galop Brilante.
Premiere Etude De Concert'.
Two Musical Sketches, Mendelssohn.

POPULAR SONGS,

WITH ACCOMPANIMENTS.

Why did my Sarah roll me.
Hey Johnny Cope and the Campbells 'are coming.
Hearts and Eyes.
Ellen Dayne.
Who wrote Solid for Charlie.
For Ever Dear.
Some Folks.
Bobbing Around.
Sound Britons Sound.
Dinah is the Girl for me.
Lilly Willy Widow.
The Lass that loves a Sailor.
The Lowlie of the Forest.
Lets be gay Boys.
The Village Bells Sing.
Come again dear dream.
The Sardinian National Hymn.
Thou art my Joy.
The North Carolina Slave.
Up for the Night.
Oh let me in the dark tomb lie.
The Pilot Boy.
The Gamekeeper's Bloom.
Settle Miss Stella.
My Mary Anne.
Be Merry in the Morning.
The Spinning Wheel.
My Nannie O.
I Must Depart.
The Greenwood Bell.
My Gentle Dove.
There's Pertugo on before us Boys.

SACRED MELODIES,

WITH VARIATIONS FOR THE PIANOFORTE.

Haydn's Germon Hymn.
Vital Breath of Heavenly Flame.
Prayer from Handel's "Moss in Egypte."
The Heavens are Telling.
Adeste Fidelis.
Home Anthem, from Handel.
Hymn from my Mother Lieuth.
Hymn from my Mother Church.
Old Hundredths.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Grand Jubilate, Popular Overture.
Grand Duo.
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]

PRINTING

EVERY DESCRIPTION,

Plain, Colored, Fancy

and

Ornamental ---Bronzing,

&c., &c.,

Neatly executed on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the

EXAMINER,

Burnham's Block,

OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, JULY 29, 1858.

Volume 3.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 29.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Are Ten Shillings in Advance, for One Year; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING

Six Lines, and under, first insertion	£0	2	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	7½
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0	3	4
Each subsequent insertion	0	1
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0	0	4
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	1

☞ Advertisements without written instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognized.

Busine Directory.

MONTGOMERY TOUN,

BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

J. O'REARN,

BARRISTER, Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Ch. y, &c., Peterborough.

STAPPS. KIRKPATRICK,

BARRISTER, &c., &c., has returned to Peterboro and resumed the practice of his profession its branches.

Office over Mr. Bell gall's Store.

Peterboro,' 1854.

A. WEIR LER,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. H. J. Vinard, Esq.

MARTIN LONSFORD,

ATTORNEY Law, Solicitor in Chancery, Notaryllic, Conveyancer, &c. Office over the Night Owners, Peterborough.

R. BURNHOLE,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, &c. &c., &

Peterboro'ch 10th, 1856.

R. HOLY WELL,

HAS real his residence to Simcoe Street, two d east of Captain Rubidge's. Peterboro, Dec. 1st, 1856.

TR. JOHN McNAB,

SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professionalis at his residence, Peterboro' West.

M. S. MACDOWELL,

MECHANICAL AND MECHANICAL DENTIST.

Office over A. W. Kempt's Drug Store, Sagstreet, Peterboro.

May 38. 18

&BRO & VINDIN,

Ashion, Shipping, Forwarding

AND GENERAL AGENTS,

umber Merchants, &c.,

Port Hope, C. W.

One Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets.

A. W. KEMPT,

DRUGGIST, Dealer in Genuine Drugs and Chemicals, Patent Medicines, Paints, Oils, Colo Dye Stuffs, Perfumery, Spices, Hair, Nail Tooth Brushes, Smelling and Toilet Bottles, Fancy Soap, Culinary Essences, &c. Mill Hall, George Street, Peterboro.'

GEORGE. STEWART,

ARCHITECTS, Engineers, Land Surveyors, and Agents. Office, Mill Street, Port Hope

GEO. A. STEWART.

CHAS. E. STEWART.

Pope, May 12, 1857. 21.

JOHN HAYDEN.

IMPORTER of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, Window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c. WHOLESALE & RETAIL.

Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 35—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.

INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at the Agency as per agreement.

Peterboro', May 28th, 1857. 22

MRS. T. HEATHFIELD.

ARTIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.

COMMUNICATION THROUGH THE POST OFFICE, Peterboro' rough.

JOHNSON'S

FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by Post Office, east of the bridge.

Hope, Sept. 29, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,

Jas Street, Port Hope, CANADA WEST. SALE at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.

Peterboro', Sept. 2, 1856. 2

W. COULTER,

Druggist and Apothecary

PETERBORO'

Dealer in Medicines, English and French Chemicals, Patent Medicines Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Window and Fancy Articles, Particular attention paid to dispensing Physicians Prescriptions, Family Receipts and Cattle medicines. ALSO, English American and Garden, Field and Flower Seeds. Together with an assortment of School Books, Stationery and

A. MERCER & SONS,

TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,

HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.

Peterboro', June 3, 1858. 20—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.

HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.

A. MUNRO, Agent.

May, 1858. 19

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,

ARCHITECT, Civil Engineer, &c., Smith's Chambers, George Street.

Peterboro', July 23, 1858. 29

BOOK PAPER, PAINTING, &C.

The Subscriber offers for sale, at his shop on Water Street, a large and varied assortment of Book Paper, among which will be found particularly French and American manufactures, which he can put in at the lowest possible price, for ready cash or approved credit.

He is constantly a number of hands, who are employed in

PAPER HANGING!

[illegible]

STEVENSON.

Peterboro', May 28, 1858. 41

Details by the "Star of the West."

From Correspondence of the N. Y. Tribune.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 21, 1858.

We have had four or five arrivals of steamers from Puget Sound during the last fortnight, and they have brought down a number of letters and several persons from the mines. These letters, and the published statements of the returned miners, contain little positive information as to the extent of the Frazer River mines, but they convey the idea that the diggings, so far as examined, are rich, and that great confidence is felt that they will be found to be extensive. This is the general purport of all the news which we have received since the sailing of the last steamer. We have not heard of any good diggings being found in any place except on the bars of Frazer River, beginning about 90 miles from its mouth, and extending up its banks a distance of 80 miles. It is supposed that there are rich diggings on the bars higher up, and on the tributary streams, and on the gullies drained by the main river, and the tributary streams; and it is rumoured that rich diggings have been found along Thompson's River, and on the banks of the Shushwap Lake, but these suppositions and rumours are very untrustworthy. As to the extreme richness of the Frazer River bars, there seems to be no good reason to doubt; at least for those who have an opportunity of questioning the persons and examining the letters from the mines. Among the returned miners is an acquaintance of my own whom I have always held to be an honest man. He was here in 1849, and knows what the rivers were in 1849. He assures me that Sailor Bar on Frazer's River is richer than any bar which he prospected on the Yuba—and he examined a number in 1849. The gold, however, is extremely fine. With a common rocker—which is entirely unsuited to save such fine gold—he made from $10 to $50 a day and could easily have made twice as much with a quicksilver machine. Your readers may ask why he left such rich diggings, and he told me his reasons were that he had no provisions, and could get none except by paying enormous prices; and the river rose so high that the bar was almost covered, and he and his partners could not work in the rich ground. Therefore one partner was left in charge of the claim and the others went down to Puget Sound to get provisions and stores for the Summer's work. This miner thinks that the bars on the river will be found to be rich to within 50 miles of the mouth. The above is the substance of the news brought from Frazer's River during the last fortnight, and taken by itself does not convey any great idea of the golden wealth of New California; but it is nevertheless considered as confirming previous favourable reports. As I stated in my last letter, no matter how rich the mines may be on Frazer's River, we cannot expect to hear much favourable news until the water falls, so that men can get to the diggings, and can work them after getting there. The steamer Surprise, a well-built river steamer, which ran for a time between this city and Sacramento, and afterwards (having been fitted up for ocean service) between here and San Diego, is now running between here and Fort Hope. At our latest dates she had made but one trip up the river, but she was advertised to run regularly. The distance from the mouth of the river to Fort Hope is 100 miles; and the last 60 had never seen a steamer till the 8th inst., when the American Surprise went up. The river now belongs within the domain of civilization; and any of our readers who may wish to go by steam to the new mines, can step aboard at New York and be less than 30 days on bars where miners are now making $10 per day. There are two facts which deserve to be held as confirmatory of the rumoured richness of Frazer River; these are that none of the miners who have been there deny it; and that of all the persons who have reached the mines, as well as those who have started to get there, very few have returned. Prudent men on our side of the world may doubt, but California as a State is convinced. A most wonderful fever is raging. The excitement equals that of '49. There are now several ocean steamers running to Puget Sound, and as they make about two trips a month, they carry away multitudes of passengers. The number of persons intending to go from all portions of the mines is immense. The stages and steamers are crowded on their down trips. In some places extra stages have been put on, and the steamers from Sacramento to this city are loaded every day, even when extra boats are put on. One day last week 39 passengers left Nevada on the Sacramento stages, and 37 of them were bound for Frazer River. In Sonora, 200 persons are waiting for their turn to come down on the stages, and so it is all through the mines. Every mining camp is loosing a portion of its population; some one-tenth; some even one-half. Trade to the interior is at a stand still; the traders and boarding house keepers, gardeners and farmers of the mining districts are loosing their debtors and customers; and as they suffer so their creditors will suffer. The newspapers of the interior are in spasm about the excitement; they rennce against it, they pray against it, they ridicule it, and some of the editors would be willing to fight against it, if fighting could be of any service. The depression of business in the interior is very great. Property is falling in value, and merchants are promising that the grass shall next year grow in the streets of the largest mining towns. In Sacramento and Stockton there is no life except at the stage offices when the stages arrive, and about the steamboats when they go away. Farms and storehouses are offered for sale at great sacrifice; money is rising in value, and labor thereon. Mechanics and miners are demanding higher wages; carpenters have raised their prices from $6 and $5 to $6 per day; miners from $6 to $8; shovellers down from $5 to $6; hodmen from $3 to $4; firemen on the steamboats from $60 to $80 per month; and so on through all the branches of employment wherein men are hired by the day. The contractors of the Sacramento Valley Railroad have employed Chinamen, because of the inability to get white men. Many of the quartz mills have stopped, and almost all will have to stop if the present drain continues for two months more.

On every side, at every turn you hear of Frazer River. Every acquaintance you meet asks whether you are going to Frazer River, or tells how he is going, or would go if he could, and enumerates your acquaintances who are going. The newspapers are full of Frazer River.

All the words and all the lines
Are about the Frazer River mines!

The goods exposed in the streets are marked "Frazer River," "Blankets for Frazer River," "Beans for Frazer River," "Shovels for Frazer River," &c. Here and there you will see fixed up in front of a store some such sign as this: "Selling out at cost! going to Frazer River, sure as you're born." Every few days the newsboys run through the streets shouting "Ere's the Extra Alta. Later news from Frazer River. Gold by the bushel!" The hotels are full of people on their way to the new El Dorado, and they speak of nothing but Frazer River. Occasionally you will hear a snatch of an old song adapted to new tunes:—

"Oh, I'm going to California—that's the land for me;
I'm going to Frazer River with the washbowl on my knee."

We had a revival of religion here, but Frazer River knocked it cold. People care less apparently just now for salvation than gold. The Coroner of this city complains that the new diggings have put an end to the suicides. Several literary and political gentlemen of this city have been infected, and have gone off to dig the shining ore; they have forgotten to sigh for the land of Mignon, where the yellow oranges blaze amid the dark green leaves; they would alter Byron's lines thus:—

"Know ye the land where the gold and the Indian
Are emblems of deeds that are done in their clime?"

Really, Frazer River is turning California upside down; it will be changed so that the old residents will scarcely know the place. From some of the mining towns more than a fifth of the men have already gone to Frazer. Thus 200 have already gone from Grass Valley, which cast 960 votes last autumn, and 75 have gone from Volcano, which cast 360 votes. These, however, are extreme cases. The following table shows the vessels which have gone up to Puget Sound since the excitement arose, with the date of sailing, the tonnage, the number of passengers, and the destination of each:—

	Tonnage.	Pass.	Destination.
April 20, st. Commodore,	1,359 tons	300	Victoria.
April 24, sch. Golden State,	136 tons	15	Frazer River.
April 30, st. Constitution,	830 tons.	—	Port Townsend
May 4, st. Panama,	1,057 tons	700	Victoria.
May 11, st. Commodore,	1,359 tons	191	Victoria.
May 17, bk. Mallory,	295 tons	—	Bell Bay.
May 22, st. Panama,	1,097 tons	418	Victoria.
May 27, st. Surprise,	456 tons	—	Victoria.
May 28, bg. Electa,	152 tons	60	Victoria.
June 4, bk. California,	353 tons	1	Victoria.
June 5, bk. Gold Hunter,	230 tons	132	Ben Bay.
June 7, st. Republic,	532 tons	427	Victoria.
June 8, st. Commodore,	1,359 tons	600	Victoria.
June 10, sch. Guilelia,	215 [illegible]	85	Victoria.
June 12, st. Panama,	1,057 [illegible]	870	Victoria.
June 13, ship Georgiana,	980 tons	130	Victoria.
June 12, ship Clarice,	12 tons	—	Port Townsend
June 12, bk. Adelaide,	249 tons	100	Victoria.
June 14, ship William,	572 tons	144	Victoria.
June 15, bk. Live Yankee,	427 tons	210	Bell Bay.
June 17, st. Cortes,	1,117 tons	900	Victoria.
June 17, sch. Kosciah,	47 tons	4	Port Townsend
June 18, sch. Osprey,	73 tons	—	Victoria.
Total	22	4,241
Returned	1	144

I send you this table, not as showing the total number of emigrants to Frazer River, but as correct, so far as can be learned from the books of the Custom House. In fact, many vessels not included in the above list have carried off emigrants bound for the Frazer River mines; for going to American ports, American vessels are not compelled to report themselves at the Custom House. Thus the steamer "Pacific," which has carried several loads, is not put down at all. Besides some of the vessels whose names are given carried off many more passengers than were entered at the Custom House; the "Cortes," credited with having 900, had really 1,300, or 1,400, many having gone aboard without tickets. The total number of those who have gone from this State by sea, is probably about 8,000, and of those who have gone by land, about 1000. The number of those who have returned is entered at the Custom House as 160, but is probably 200, including those who came in vessels not entered there.

There are now seven ocean steamers running to Puget Sound, and seven sailing vessels. The rush to Frazer River has made San Francisco very lively. At no time since '53 has the city presented such a lively appearance as now; nor has so much excitement pervaded the community at any time since 1849. Indeed, 1849 has come again. California is crazy, and the rest of the world will soon be in the same condition. Commerce is to get drunk on gold again; emigrants by the million will pour in from Europe; speculation will run over the Union like flame over a sea of camphene; and individuals will amass fortunes, and the nation gain in wealth with a speed unexampled in time past. This paragraph is inconsistent with what I had before written; but I shall let it stand. I wrote this candidly, presuming, according to principles universally recognized among California miners, that where large bars are rich with fine gold near the mouth of so large a stream as Frazer River, there must be a very extensive gold-bearing district in the valley above; and when I spoke doubtingly of the extent of the mines, I was assuming the doubt which a prudent man may, and perhaps should force himself to act upon, and which seemed proper for me as your correspondent to express. Great interest is felt in the question, which is to be the great city of Puget Sound! Two months ago, Port Townsend was the chief port; it was crowded by hundreds of strangers, and the streets were thronged with business; but the people of Bellingham Bay published that they would make a trail through to the mines, and Port Townsend was deserted, and Whatcom and Sehome raised their heads in pride. Preparations were made for building an immense city; lots 60 by 120 feet in size went up to $1,000 a piece, and many holders would not sell at any price, expecting to make fortunes out of a few square feet; but the glory of Whatcom and Sehome has departed, and purchasers of lots are glad to get rid of them at almost any price. The trail is a failure; and since all persons ascending Frazer River must obtain a license in Victoria, and since that is the point whence the "Surprise" runs to Fort Hope, so Victoria is now the place, and lot speculation is very busy there; but there are great risks about it. Victoria has a small, shallow harbor, and the goods which go up Frazer River must be bought of the Hudson Bay Company. These two facts will interfere greatly with the growth of Victoria. Besides, it is said that vessels drawing 20 feet can ascend Frazer River to 50 miles from its mouth, and if so, the large city will probably be there. The agents of the Hudson's Bay Company have confiscated goods which were being taken up Frazer River without their license; and they say that if the trail were cut through from Whatcom no goods would be permitted to enter New Caledonia that way. There are several things which the British Government should do, and which are of great importance to the interests of New Caledonia, viz: first to give immediate notice that the Frazer River country will not be covered by the renewed charter of the Hudson's Bay Company, and secondly, to authorize Gov. Douglas to lay off towns in New Caledonia, and sell lots with perfect title. The American Government, on the other hand, should send out expeditions forthwith to examine, repair and report upon the various wagon roads from Fort Benton to Puget Sound, and establish forts to protect and assist next year's overland emigration. The price of passage in the steamers from here to Victoria is $60 in the cabin and $30 in the steerage; and $20 from Victoria to Fort Hope. Types, presses and Printers have gone to establish newspapers at Victoria and you may expect to receive copies of them by the next mail. The total amount of gold dust which has arrived here from Frazer River is about $20,000. The last steamer brought $10,000 to Wells, Fargo & Co. Preparations are making here for establishing all kinds of business houses in the mines. As an instance, I mention that Mr. Still, a newspapge dealer in this city since 1849, and well known by name to most Californians, told me this morning that he is preparing to start with a stock of books, stationary, and news paper, for a point forty miles above Fort Yale. That country will be developed so rapidly, that nothing but the electric telegraph would suffice to keep the civilized "posted" as to the growth of its towns and the course of its trade.

Provincial Parliament.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY.

WEDNESDAY, July 21.

REPEAL OF THE UNION.

Mr. MACKENZIE then moved that the principle of representation in the United Legislature, appointed on the basis of population, has been sanctioned by the vote of only one representative from Lower Canada, in the present session; that the proposition of a Double Majority in the Executive Council has also been considered and rejected, and that the operation of the political union which was formed between Upper and Lower Canada in 1840, under the authority of an Imperial Act, occasions great discontent in the minds of Her Majesty's faithful subjects. In supporting the above motion, the hon. member pointed out a number of the grievances which in his opinion flowed from the present union between Upper and Lower Canada. He considered it an evil that we lend our credit in the shape of Municipal Loan Fund Debentures to schemes which yielded nothing, such as the North Shore Railway, the Port Hope Railroad and the like, all for the advantage of a few politicians. Our taxation was now unbounded, and by the Bill now before the House, had reached above the smuggling point. We had, under the present system, gentlemen from Lower Canada coming up to manage our Clergy Reserve, School and Public Lands for us, while they did not contribute to the revenue one dollar for our twenty. Yet one after another for years back, it had always been a Lower Canadian who had been put in to manage our Crown Lands for us. The Union had not yet united us. Our laws had not been assimilated, our municipal laws were not the same. It was brought about against the will of Lower Canada, and he had seen that it was stated not long ago by Mr. Papineau that if polled to-morrow, a large majority of the people of Lower Canada would be for dissolving it. There was the evil too of a difference of language. One half of the members spoke in what was an unknown language to the other half.—Then at present a minority of Upper Canada members ruled Upper Canada by the aid of the Lower Canada members. What benefit could result from such a state of things as that? For five months we were shut out from any communication with the sea by the St. Lawrence. The natural sea port for Upper Canada was New York. Last year of all the Upper Canada Ministers who went to the people, only one was returned, the others being ignominiously rejected. Yet we saw the Attorney General carrying on the same policy, notwithstanding that it had been so emphatically condemned by the people. The result was that a small body of Upper Canadians, who were faithless to the interests of their own section of the Province, managed to keep the Government in their hands with the aid of Lower Canada. The only bond of Union between the two Provinces was the River St. Lawrence, and he did not think that was sufficient. The only difficulty in the way of a Repeal of the Union, was in regard to the collection of means for the payment of our debt, and the collection of the revenue. That, however, had been sufficiently well managed before 1840, and it might be so again after 1860.

Mr. GOWAN spoke briefly in favour of maintaining the Union, which he considered necessary for the well-being and progress of Canada. He stated also his conviction that the resolution affirmed what was not the case, when it said that the people of Upper Canada were dissatisfied with the working of the Union. He believed the huge majority would be sorry to see anything done to disturb it.

Mr. BROWN said that, when the member for Haldimand rose to move his resolution, he was under the impression that it was a direct proposition for the Repeal of the Union, and even if put in that shape he apprehended that to a large majority of the people of Upper Canada the proposal would cause no alarm whatever. (Hear, hear.) Personally he had always been opposed to a Repeal of the Union. He had always looked upon it as the very ultimate resort, in the event of a failure of every other remedy for the evils under which we now laboured, and a resort even the discussion of which he would approach with very great reluctance. But he could not doubt that at this moment a large majority of the people of Upper Canada were in the daily habit of discussing the question of the Repeal of the Union, without any alarm, nay, with a feeling almost of gladness at the prospect of its relieving them from a great many of the evils which now oppress the country. While a good many members of this House, both from Upper and Lower Canada, held that the only cure for our difficulties was a repeal of the Union, there could be no question that a much larger proportion of the people outside this House held the same opinion, whatever the hon member for Leeds might say to the contrary. This was the feeling not only of those who supported the Opposition, but of those who supported the Ministry, and he believed that the grand cause of it was the inequality of representation between the two sections of the Province. (Hear, hear.) There was a settled conviction in the minds of the people of Upper Canada that they had a large numerical preponderance over the people of Lower Canada, and that it was no proper Union, so long as the people of one section were denied an equality of political rights with those of the other. He believed the whole people of Upper Canada had come to the conclusion that some change must be made in our constitutional system, and if anything could add to that feeling it was the fact that hon. gentlemen sat there ruling Upper Canada, and carrying on the executive administration of its affairs, who do not possess the confidence of Upper Canada—(hear, hear)—exercising as had been shown by the member for South Ontario the other night, a tyranny over the people of Upper Canada contrary to their feelings and wishes. (Hear, hear.) There could be no question that this feeling was growing throughout the Province, and unless some constitutional change was brought about, it would grow to that point that it would be quite impossible to restrain it. He was of opinion, however, that there were other ways of settling the difficulties, which ought to be tried, before a dissolution of the Union was resorted to; and even had he made up his mind that a dissolution of the Union was the only thing which they could carry at present, he would not say that they should vote for it immediately until every other expedient had been tried. He had always been of opinion that the Union of these Provinces was a most statesmanlike measure. They had the same commercial interests, they had a noble river flowing through the country as a bond of union furnished by nature, and no conception could have been finer than that of uniting the inhabitants of the two Provinces into one homogeneous people, having a common interest and a common feeling.—But had that been the result of the Union, and the legislation which had been carried on since? Were not the two peoples farther apart than they were at the time of the Union?

Mr. GALT—How has that arisen?

Mr. BROWN said they were two distinct peoples, each having its own language, its own views, its own feelings, its own prejudices, its own peculiar local institutions, and its own peculiar religious institutions; and, unless they found common ground on which they could legislate, and brought about some harmony in their institutions, it was clear that the difficulties of carrying on the Union would be continually becoming greater.

Hon. Mr. DRUMMOND asked if the hon. gentleman meant that it was necessary that the differences in languages and religion should be done away with?

Mr. BROWN said that no one would maintain that it was necessary for the Protestants of Upper Canada to give up their Protestantism, or for the Catholics of Lower Canada to cease to be Catholics; but what he maintained was, that no religious party should force its own peculiar views on the Legislature. (Hear, hear.) They should ignore sectarian questions altogether, and leave religion to be dealt with as a matter entirely personal and individual, with which the Legislature should not attempt to interfere. (Hear, hear.)—Mr. Brown went on to express his conviction that the Union could be wrought on the Federal principle, better than on the present system, as members of the Legislature would then no longer be required to have two sets of principles, legislating on Lower Canada local questions from a Lower Canada point of view, and an Upper Canada local question from an Upper Canada point of view, but all these local questions would be settled by those whom they particularly affected. At all events, until that question was fully discussed, and the view of the Legislature ascertained upon it, he was not prepared to go for a Dissolution of the Union. The proposition contained in the hon. member's resolution, however, that the Union as at present wrought, had occasioned great discontent, was undoubtedly correct. The result had been that the views of a minority in Upper Canada had been kept dominant in the Union by the votes of Lower Canada, and that a system of reckless extravagance had been entered upon, which had brought the country into a position of extreme embarrassment. And he was satisfied that a majority of the people of Upper Canada had come to the conclusion that, unless some other speedy remedy was provided, a Dissolution of the Union must be resorted to as the only means of saving the country from bankruptcy. He thought the proposition might be seconded with advantage, and entertaining the views he did, if he had been present was made, and the resolution was put in its present shape, he should consider himself bound to vote for it.

Hon. M. CAMERON entirely dissented from the proposition contained in the resolution, that the Union was looked upon with dissatisfaction by a large portion of the people of Upper Canada. He believed there was no such feeling. Before the Union there were constant difficulties, and at that time the want of a Union caused great dissatisfaction to Upper Canada.—The Union had done much to establish our credit, and he maintained that at this moment our credit stood high, notwithstanding all the charges brought at the beginning of this session of reckless and extravagant administration of the finances. There had now been five months of an investigation, and he denied that there had been one single act of corruption on the part of the Government established. The charges of £50,000 or £60,000 having been misappropriated had all dissolved into thin air. He believed that the people were perfectly satisfied with the Union—and that the people of Upper and Lower Canada were harmonizing and understanding each other better than they did formerly, they were becoming better acquainted with each other's resources, and they were coming to see how entirely each depended upon the other. For his own part he did not know of anything which had worked inharmoniously. (Oh! oh!) Before the Union, it was thought the Seignioral Tenure would be a difficulty, but that had been amicably settled. Both parties had become exceedingly liberalized and understood each other better. As to the difference of religion and language, that was not calculated to make any difficulty, but he confessed that a difficulty had been made out of it. But those hon. gentlemen opposite now found themselves in a dilemma. Confident of victory they had cut away the bridges behind them, and had cut off all means of retreat. They had got the people of Upper Canada almost "demented," to use a Scotch phrase, by representing that the French Canadians were so very bigoted—they had thus created difficulties, and having no policy to get rid of them, they were reduced to desperation. The people were astonished to find that on some of these points, of which hon. gentlemen opposite had made great use at the election, they were very mild in the House. Had not the hon. member for Toronto declared that if the system of Separate Schools were not carried further, he did not think much harm had been done?

Mr. BROWN said he had contradicted this statement before, and he must do so once more, as the hon. gentleman had chosen to allude to it again. He had always taken the same ground on the School question. It had been argued on the other side that only 80 or 100 Separate Schools had been established, and that they could not do much harm. In meeting this, he had admitted that the statement had truth in it, as regarded country districts, but he expressly drew a distinction between the country and the cities, and said that in Toronto for example they were a great evil. And he went on to say that that argument did not meet the point, but that the evil was, that when the principle of Separate Schools was admitted, matters could not rest where they were. If they admitted that Roman Catholics were entitled to have Separate Schools they must go on and grant all they asked for. He had contended that the only correct principle was the entire separation of Church and State, the entire discontinuance of sectarianism in schools, and he had never thought of saying that he was willing to allow Separate Schools to remain as they were now.

Hon. M. CAMERON said the hon. gentleman even now had admitted that separate schools did not work much harm in the country, and that was the very ground which he (Mr. Cameron) had taken in his own county, appealing to the people whether they had ever seen a separate school, and when they said, No, asking them what was the great practical evil of it, that on that account they should destroy the harmonious working of the present system.—But hon. gentlemen on the other side had got up the religious cry, and now when they found that they had destroyed the possibility of uniting with the people of Lower Canada to form a strong Government, they were reduced to desperation, and said they must have a Dissolution of the Union, no matter though it should involve the country in war and blood shed for the next fifteen years. It would have been better if the member for Toronto had devoted his energies to producing measures better than those of the Government. Had not the Government introduced measures of the greatest importance, and of pressing necessity, which the whole people of Western Canada were anxious should become law, such as the abolition of imprisonment for debt, and the Usury Bill.

Mr. FOLEY—Why don't they go on with them?

Hon. M. CAMERON said the Government were prevented from doing so, by the obstruction offered by the Opposition. He then went on to claim credit for the Government for establishing a mail route to the Red River, which he hoped would ultimately reach the Frazer's River Gold Mines, and concluded by repeating his conviction that the people of Upper Canada were perfectly satisfied with the present state of public affairs.

Mr. FOLEY said that the positions taken by the hon gentleman who had just spoken, were exceedingly inconsistent. He started with the declaration that the people of the western portion of the country were not dissatisfied—a declaration utterly inconsistent with the position which the hon. gentleman himself had taken, as the introducer of a Bill which cut at the very foundation of the existing constitution, (hear, hear.) If it were true that the people were satisfied with things as they are, whose cause the necessity for the introduction of the hon gentleman's Bill for Representation by Population?

Hon. M. CAMERON said he [illegible] through this session, [illegible] more than the people of Lower Canada. My Bill was only to take effect after the next census; and if it should then turn out that we are 400,000 more, my friends from Lower Canada will not object to our being represented in that proportion.

Several Lower Canadian voices emphatically dissented from this proposition.

Mr. FOLEY—Are hon. gentlemen from Lower Canada prepared to concede the principle of Representation by Population, after the next census is taken? (Cries of "No! No!")

Hon. Mr. CAMERON—I did not say that. I said—if it should turn out that there was a difference of 400,000 or 500,000.

Mr. FOLEY—Well, if it turned out that Upper Canada had an excess of population to that amount, and gentlemen from Lower Canada still refused to concede the principle, would the hon gentleman be satisfied with the state of things then? The people of Upper Canada alleged that already they had that numerical preponderance, and how could they be satisfied? How could they be satisfied that a Government should remain in power against the will of a two-thirds majority of the people of Upper Canada? But he supposed that if, some time hence, the Government, instead of being in a minority of 9 from Upper Canada, should be in a minority of 30, the hon gentleman would still support them. He had accused hon gentlemen on that side of being the parties who had introduced sectarian and sectional controversies. He was astonished at the hardihood of the hon gentleman in making such a charge, when, if there was one person more than another responsible for the present state of things, it was that gentleman himself. Who commenced the agitation to break up the Government in 1849? Who took for the main plank of his platform Representation by Population, denouncing his own colleagues, and creating dissension and strife in the Reform party, because that principle was refused? The hon gentleman was then willing to destroy even a Reform Government, because they would not grant the people of Upper Canada Representation by Population. And now where did they find him? Why, with only three followers of the old Reform party, supporting a Tory Government that was opposed to the whole principles of his life, and who told him that not only would they resist Representation by Population now, but that they would resist its coming into force after the next census, as his Bill proposed. Yet he supported that Government, and thought the people of Upper Canada should be satisfied with the existing state of things, and taunted hon. gentlemen in the Opposition with desiring to perpetuate sectarian strife. He asked him to point to a single address which had been issued at the last election by gentlemen even on the Ministerial side from Western Canada which did not contain the same principles as those enunciated by the member for Toronto with regard to Representation by Population, Separate Schools, and every other question on which the two sections were divided. Indeed, had not the accusation been brought by the member for Simcoe and others on the Ministerial side, against the member for Toronto that he was not sincere in carrying out those principles, and that he did not go far enough? Mr. Foley proceeded to read passages from the address of the Ministerial candidate, now asking the suffrages of the people of Middlesex, to show that he went to the people on the very principles which were advocated by the Opposition, and for their advocacy of which they were taunted by the member for Lambton with seeking to stir up sectarian strifes. He then showed, from the manner in which the Government, representing a minority, carried on legislation for Upper Canada, and the executive administration of its affairs, against the will of the great body of its people, that there were good reasons for the dissatisfaction which prevailed, as stated in the resolution, and concluded by saying that if the member for Lambton had at his election expressed the views which he had set forth in the speech just delivered, he would never have set a foot in this House. And, if the hon. gentleman should present himself at another election, he was satisfied that he would find himself in the same position, as a large proportion of the supporters of the Ministry in the late Parliament, did at the close of the last general election, (hear, hear).

Mr. MCDOUGALL said that as long ago as 1848 and 1849, much dissatisfaction began to show in Upper Canada as to the working of this Union. It was found there was an influence in the Government of the country resisting measures which the people of Upper Canada desired to see carried out, from meeting the approbation of the Legislature. There was one question now happily removed from this arena, which at that time occupied much of the public attention—he referred to the Clergy Reserve question. It was well understood that the great obstacle to the settlement of this question, inducing the Government of the day to dally with it, was on the part of Lower Canada—Mr. Lafontaine, the Premier of that day holding views in regard to it, similar to those of the party in Upper Canada who maintained that the position of the Clergy Reserves should not be interfered with. Mr. Hincks and Mr. Baldwin the leaders of the Reform party of Upper Canada, had admitted that this opposition from Lower Canada, was the great obstacle in the way of their dealing with the question. This created great dissatisfaction in Upper Canada, and that dissatisfaction was the basis on which the member for Lambton—who had to-day addressed the House in a most extraordinary manner, casting imputation on gentlemen on that side, for raising sectarian strife—that dissatisfaction was made the basis of an agitation of which that hon. gentleman was the chief leader and chief stump orator, an agitation, the like of which had never been seen in this section of the Province. (Hear, hear.)—He had before him reports of speeches delivered by that honourable gentleman in which the very same appeals as he had just been denouncing, were made by the hon. gentleman, but so inaccurate, garbled, misreported and much less guarded than was fashionable now-a-days. He referred particularly to an address issued to the county of Halton, by the hon. gentleman and the politicians with whom he was associated, and of whom he was the acknowledged leader, appealing to the same feelings, denouncing the same Lower Canada domination, and assuming the very same tone, which the hon. member now charged on gentlemen on the Opposition side as a crime. (Hear, hear.) It appeared to him (Mr. McDougall) that the great difficulty connected with the continuance of the Union on its present basis arose from the radical injustice to which the people of Upper Canada were obliged under its operation to submit. In Lower Canada the majority of the people and their representatives acted together politically, and the events of the last few years had shown that they were willing to give up political principles, to abandon political alliances, and to associate themselves with any party in Upper Canada, by whose means they could control the Government, and advance those measures which they desired for themselves. And it was because the people of Upper Canada, and especially the Liberal party, had seen that there was no political or party alliance which could bind them,—that it was the control of the Governments, and the advantages which that control gave them, that formed the leading incentive to action to the politicians from the Lower section—it was because they saw that the Reformers of Upper Canada, who were a large majority of its people, were dissatisfied and would continue to be dissatisfied. In illustration of the way in which the principle to which he had referred was worked out, causing dissatisfaction to the people of Upper Canada! Mr. McDougall referred to the Seignorial Tenure settlement, which the Attorney General East had told his constituents of Verchères that they might well be satisfied with, as the people of Upper Canada bore the largest share of the burden—to the Grand Trunk the expense of which to the Province was caused by the unproductiveness of the portions of the Line in Lower Canada, while the portion from Toronto westward, not only paid expenses, but yielded $50 per mile of profit—to the jobs perpetrated under the name of improving the navigation of the St. Lawrence, while the people of Western Canada felt that with reciprocal free trade, the natural outlet for their produce was through the United States—and to the payment from the Provincial chest of Lower Canada local expenses, which in Upper Canada were borne by the Municipality. All these things caused in Upper Canada what he conceived to be a well-founded dissatisfaction. The expense of this system of Government, under which we had to maintain in fact two Legislatures and two Administrations caused dissatisfaction. And when an attempt was made to reduce it, and to adopt a policy of retrenchment, who had voted it down but the member for Lambton, who used to be so strong an advocate for retrenchment, but who now on all occasions voted in the teeth of the principles for which he then contended.—(Hear, hear.) Mr. McDougall then referred to the statement frequently made in debates of this kind, that Lower Canada came into the Union with an overflowing Treasury, while Upper Canada came into it deeply in debt. Whatever amount of truth there might be in that, it was evident that Upper Canada had long since made up the difference by contributing three-fourths, or certainly two-thirds of the whole revenue. He thought it unwise at the present moment to affirm the resolution moved by the member for Haldimand, until other means had been resorted to of removing the difficulties which resulted from the Union as now wrought, and of placing the Union on a sounder basis than at present. The hon. member concluded by reading some passages from Mr. Cameron's Halton address, to which he had adverted in an earlier part of his speech.

Hon. Mr. HARWOOD contended that the people of Lower Canada had contributed their fair share towards developing the greatness of the United Provinces. Lower Canada had greater territory than Upper Canada, he believed it had at least an equal population, and it had the possession of the sea-board. In these Lower Canada stood in a position of equality with Upper Canada. It had been demonstrated that the St. Lawrence was the best inlet into the heart of the continent, and he thought it not at all improbable that fifty years hence Montreal or Quebec would be the largest port in America. He thought the two Provinces could get on harmoniously. They had made immense progress in material wealth since the Union, and their best interests, he conceived, would be injured by a severance. It had been said that the representatives of Lower Canada forced legislation on Upper Canada. He denied that they had done so, on any questions affecting the local interests of Upper Canada.

Mr. DORION asked the hon. gentleman whether he had not voted with the Lower Canadian majority to prevent a majority from Upper Canada from amending their own Municipal Law, in reference to Municipalities not having the right to borrow money without the consent of the Municipal electors—whether he had not voted for the Upper Canada Jury Law condemned by a majority from Upper Canada—whether, in reference to the Marmora Railroad he had not assisted in giving it a route to which a majority of the Upper Canada representatives were opposed—whether on the Sawers Grises Bill, he had not voted to introduce into Upper Canada the principles of holding lands in mortmain which was unknown to the law of Upper Canada, although he (Mr. Dorion) who had charge of the Bill, declared his willingness to restrict its operation to Lower Canada—whether he had not voted down an inquiry regarding cert

Lower Canada being governed by a majority from Upper Canada, and the result was that a compact body of Reformers was almost unanimously returned. He ventured to say that the same thing would take place in Upper Canada at the next election—(hear, hear.)—and he warned members from Lower Canada that, if they did not want to see the recurrence of the kind of legislation which they had seen from 1844 to 1846, they had better consult a little more than they had been doing the feelings and the views of Upper Canada members. (Hear, hear.)

Hon. Mr. HARWOOD said that Lower Canadians could not be expected to be conversant with every local matter affecting Upper Canada. But the great interests of the Province required that they should be united. As regarded Upper Canada local matters, every vote he had given had been according to his conscience.

Mr. FOLEY—And always against the views of the majority of the representatives of Upper Canada.

Mr. FERGUSON said it could not be denied that there were a number of matters, in regard to which Upper Canada had felt that she had suffered through the influence of Lower Canada. One cause of complaint was the payment of the Rebellion Losses of 1837 and 1838.

Mr. McDOUGALL—It is not for you to complain of the Rebellion Losses Bill which Mr. Cayley found so useful to him the other day.

Mr. FERGUSSON then alluded to the School question, and was accusing the member for Toronto and the member for Waterloo of want of sincerity on that question, when six o'clock having arrived the Speaker left the Chair.

After the recess,

Mr. FERGUSSON continued his remarks by saying that Sectarian Schools was one of the causes which had led Upper Canada to feel aggrieved. He termed them "cursed institutions," and complained that in seeking their abolition he had not been supported by the Opposition in the firm way which the subject deserved. He hoped that though the Bill he had brought in for the abolition of the sectarian clauses of the School Act had not passed, before long an amicable conclusion would be arrived at, and thus a frightful source of agitation for the repeal of the Union would be at once removed. Another cause of discontent in Upper Canada was, that we were not placed in an advantageous a position regarding the administration of criminal justice as Lower Canada; and he hoped the day was not far distant when both Provinces were in this respect made equal. The upholding by the Province of sectarian institutions in Lower Canada had likewise agitated Upper Canada; and if members from both sections of the Province would refrain from giving Legislative aid to all denominations, Catholic and Protestant, another reason urged for the Repeal of the Union would fail to have further weight. Rather than see ourselves sent back to insignificance, he would avoid all sectional questions, and legislate for the Province as a whole. He then referred to the disclosures of the Public Accounts Committee, asserting that the charges against the Government were mere assertions, utterly void of foundation. The object of these charges was to influence the two elections now in progress. It had been said that the Bills mentioned in the Speech from the Throne had not been brought in; but to disprove this he instanced the Municipal Bill, the Jury Bill, the Franchise Bill, the Usury Bill, and other measures brought in by the Ministry. He believed the day a Repeal of the Union took place, we should lose our strength.

Mr. THIBAUDEAU expressed his indignation at the vulgarity of the remarks of the member who had just spoken. He had said Separate Schools were a curse to Upper Canada; but one would readily believe that not only were Roman Catholic Schools a curse, but that Protestant Schools were so likewise, when in the latter was educated such a coarse and vulgar man as he who had just addressed the House. (Hear, hear.) They never heard a Roman Catholic use such low language; and when to Catholics were applied such insults, he thought it his duty to repel them with the indignation they deserved. He thanked God that if Roman Catholic institutions were a curse to the country, they were not such a curse as the school in which the hon. gentleman must have received his education. (Hear, hear.) Roman Catholics had even been charged with illiberality; but they knew better how to respect the feelings of Protestants than the "liberal" member who had just taunted and insulted every Roman Catholic member in the House. (Hear, hear.) As a proof of the toleration of Roman Catholics, he referred to the Protestant members returned by Roman Catholic constituencies—by those illiberal men who had been educated in the "cursed institutions" the hon. member spoke of. (Hear, hear.) No such men as that hon. gentleman, he was happy to say, were returned from Lower Canada, and he thanked God only one such was present from Upper Canada. (Hear, hear.) He trusted, however, that after this, the hon. gentleman would be duly appreciated in his own county. The hon. gentleman came to the House like a wolf in sheep's clothing, and appealed to the members from Lower Canada, saying, "Look at the members on this side from Upper Canada, how liberal they are!—and I am one of your best friends!" (Hear, hear, and laughter.)—And yet that hon. gentleman had showed the greatest possible illiberality towards the Roman Catholics; so much so, that before a meeting held in the County of Middlesex, he denounced a Protestant member of the House for having introduced two Roman Catholics to the Catholic members of the House, from whom they solicited contributions to build a church. He should not wonder if the hon. gentleman, with his liberality, brought in a bill to make Roman Catholicism a criminal offence, and to expel Roman Catholic members from the House. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. LABERGE believed he had given notice of a motion to that effect. (Laughter.)

Mr. THIBAUDEAU said he had given the hon. member a great deal more prominence than he deserved, and he should henceforth treat his vulgarities with scorn and contempt. Let him abuse Roman Catholics as he chose after this—he (Mr. Thibaudeau) would not take the trouble to answer him, for the country would know how to estimate his accusations. We were in a world of wonders; a gentleman (Mr. Cauvret) on the (the Ministerial) side of the House had taunted the hon. member for Terrebonne with being too kind to Lower Canada. This was said by the hon. member for Lambton, one of the bosom friends of Lower Canadians. Who would think that such an accusation could come from him, he who was one of those who had promised so much for Lower Canada, one of their bosom friends to meet the member for Toronto with being too kind to French Canadians? He had one thing to say, for [illegible] to enjoy our religious rights [illegible] Lower Canadians [illegible] the [illegible] of the people of their [illegible] Province, as had been done in Upper Canada, nothing less than civil war would have been the result. He would now say a few words on the motion before the chair. When the union of the Provinces was effected, when Upper Canada was married to Lower Canada, the latter was rich, the latter was happy, and had succeeded in making Upper Canada happy and wealthy. And now this was done, he did not know that because she was ungrateful, that Lower Canada should deserve her.—Because his partner was ungrateful it was not necessary to kick her out of the House at once, but rather to instil into her better sentiments. (The hon. member on resuming his seat was loudly cheered from both sides of the House.)

Mr. FERGUSON wished to explain the words which had given so much offence to the hon. gentleman. The expression made use of, had been misunderstood by him, from the fact that he did not understand the language he (Mr. Ferguson) had used.

Mr. FOLEY—Why! he speaks a great deal better English than you do! (Hear, hear, and loud laughter, every member in the House and spectator in the Gallery, evidently coinciding in the opinion expressed by Mr. Foley.)

Mr. FERGUSSON—after a long pause—The hon. gentleman is a good judge when he is out of his cups. (Disapprobation from both sides of the House. When he (Mr. Ferguson) spoke of the Separate Schools as being a curse to the country, it was because they were made a curse. He had never said a word against the Roman Catholic religion out of this House, nor in it; but had always said that they should have had equal rights and privileges with Protestants. Further than this he had never said anything against them. When he did use that strong expression, and he would use it still, he was justified in it, because the Separate Schools did create strife and discord among the community. At last election they set one man against another. The hon. member had taxed of his (Mr. Ferguson's) vulgarity, but that, and his (Mr. Thibaudeau's) politeness were much on the same scale. He had also said a Frenchman never turned his back. Now he (Mr. Ferguson) never liked to touch that word Frenchman; but

The SPEAKER being appealed to, said that this had nothing to do with the hon. gentleman's personal explanation. Was it a personal explanation?

Mr. FERGUSON—Yes, it is a personal explanation. (Loud laughter.) After awhile, becoming conscious of the mistake, Mr. Ferguson declared he was an Irishman, and not a Frenchman, and that he never turned his back. (Laughter; and "What about the Middlesex meeting?")—All he could say about the Middlesex meeting was that the Protestant cry was raised on that (the Opposition) side of the House. He had stated the conduct of the member for Halton to show how contrary his practice was to his teaching, as shown in the matter of the Roman Catholics, who applied for assistance to build a Roman Catholic chapel; and this constituency was part and parcel of the consistency of hon. gentlemen on the opposite side. After some remarks, Mr. Ferguson concluded, by saying that Mr. White, with all his Protestantism, went away sneaking through the House to get a Roman Catholic Chapel built.

Mr. McKELLAR—Having been at the meeting in West Middlesex—

Mr. SHERWOOD rose to a question of order. He wanted to know whether it was in order to discuss what took place in West Middlesex?

The SPEAKER decided that it was not in order.

Mr. McKELLAR claimed to be permitted to speak to the question. (Applause.) The matter before the House was one of great importance. There was a feeling abroad in Upper Canada, which ought not to be passed over without some consideration from this House. Whether that feeling could be allayed by repealing the Union, or by any other method, was a subject which ought to be taken into serious consideration. There was a strong feeling in Upper Canada, and that feeling, he was sorry to say, had been strengthened by such men as the member for Simcoe, (Mr. Ferguson.) He stated that gentlemen on the Opposition side of the House had been going up and down the country creating bad feeling by the use of the "No Popery" cry, by exciting the prejudices of one class of the community against the other. He (Mr. McKellar) had canvassed a great deal, but in the course of his experience he had never heard so much of religion at any political meeting as he did from the member for Simcoe at the meeting in Middlesex the other day. Did it matter what a man's religion was if he advocated principles which he desired to be carried out? But what did the member for Simcoe say in Middlesex? Did he give out the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth when speaking to the House on that matter? He had told them it was a meeting of Clear Grits, when, in fact, it was a meeting of Conservatives, for the purpose of selecting a conservative candidate. It was a meeting of his (Mr. Ferguson's) own friends, and that might account for the strong language he made use of there. He stated upon the platform, as evidence of his strong Protestant principles, that he came across to the member for Toronto and said, "if you will go for an out and out Protestant Government, I go with you." (Applause.) Were all those who sat in this House to be ignored by this hon. gentleman who were not Protestants? He (Mr. McKellar) never heard such a declaration made by a Protestant before. And yet it was the Opposition who were charged with creating strife. Was such a sentiment ever uttered by any member among them, could anything be more calculated to create bad feeling in the country than for a man to say that he went for the ignoring of any man in the Government of the country, except those who were out and out Protestants? Did he tell this House when he was speaking of the meeting; did he say that he had made this proposition to the hon. member for Toronto?

Mr. FOLEY—It is not true that he did.

Mr. McKELLAR—No, it is not true; he never made the proposition—(applause)—but that he asserted he did so, the hon. member for Halton would bear him out in saying. No doubt by so doing, he thought the hon. member for Toronto would be cuffed out, and that he would then take his place—a place, which his intellectual and emotional powers as well entitled him to fill. (Laughter.) The hon. member then went on to declare that the last cry for the feeling which possessed the people of Upper Canada, would be for the Lower Canadians to cause further unpalatable measures upon them, and to remove a Government from office who had been again and again sustained by the votes of their representatives.

Dr. COMMON said when the debate began they were met with cries of "Question! question?" Similar cries were raised on almost all important subjects that came before the House; and within these great questions were multiplied numbers on the Opposition side of the House, the debates lengthened, and the matters went at once to the vote. Then that now before the House, there had been no more important subject brought before the Legislature; and he said this, although he might not concur with this resolution. He agreed with what had been said, that the union of the Provinces was a most statesmanlike measure, and for the Union he stood forward strongly and prominently. But let no hon. gentlemen forget the agitation which prevailed in Upper Canada. No stronger proof of the adverse feeling against the Ministry in Upper Canada could be given than the speech of the member for South Simcoe, who had hitherto been one of the strongest benchmen of the Government. Every word of the first portion of the speech he had made to-night went like a thunderbolt against the Ministry, though he afterwards turned round and praised the Government for the Bills they had brought in. And the "hear, hears" with which he was then greeted by the Ministry, showed how relieved they were by the gleam of sunshine that came after the storm, even as they were gratified the other evening by the music and noise of a party of rowdies outside the House. (Hear, hear.) Dr. Connor proceeded to discuss the measures of the Government, that had been so much applauded by the Ministerial supporters, and complained that the Upper Canada members had not been treated with unfairness, or even decency, in being refused four or five days to enquire into the Jury Bill. (Hear, hear.) They had been charged with making the Municipal Bill a party measure; but he denied it, and affirmed that the Upper Canada members gave every assistance in forwarding that Bill, only opposing such portions as they considered objectionable. But what they had to consider was the feeling of the people out of doors. Why, the Atty. General himself could not avoid, in his speech on the Address from the Throne, admitting that in the loss of three of his Upper Canadian colleagues at the polls, the Government had received a very severe blow. And so it was. The public feeling at last election was such that scarcely anything Ministerial could stand before it. They had been told, respecting the Secure Grass Bill, that it was unjust to speak whilst discussing it as though a dividing line separated the Province; but the provisions of that Bill were such as had never been admitted to prevail in an Upper Canada measure. Referring to the proposal of a Federal Union, he said this was an attempt for the people in British North America, of British race, to swamp the French Canadian race. (Hear, hear.) And was it not an evil to keep hon. gentlemen on the Treasury Benches against the wishes of the people of Upper Canada?—He believed the dissolution of the Union would be a fatal mistake, but feeling that something ought to be done in the present unfortunate state of affairs, and not desiring to give a direct negative to the motion, he moved an amendment to the effect that the Union of the two Canadas could not be attained with the happy results anticipated at the promotion of the Union, as long as a territorial distinction was maintained between Upper and Lower Canada—and the inhabitants of one section could with justice complain that they occupied an inferior position to the other. The continual rejection of the demands of the people of Upper Canada, for a just influence in the Legislature and the manner in which Upper Canada's local institutions were moulded according to Lower Canadian views, together with the maintenance in the Executive Government of representatives from Upper Canada who did not possess the confidence of the people, had produced great discontent in the minds of a large portion of the people of the Western section of the Province, and an anxious desire for such constitutional changes as would secure to Upper Canada the control of her own affairs. He said he did not envy the position in which the head of the Government was placed, as he was unable to raise his voice upon one of those great questions which tended to make or mar the country, but who was obliged to put up his followers to cry "Question! Question!" Certainly the hon. gentleman was right when the other day he said he did not sit upon a bed of roses. He had not the courage to speak on any of the important subjects which had been introduced; but had contented himself with sundry flippant observations which ended as they began—in smoke. And yet such men as he and his colleagues were kept in office by those who were driving the Province into a state of bankruptcy. They raked up old statutes which ought to have been long ago buried, and raised money under their authority by debentures, which would involve the Province in ruin. Every body saw that no other fate could be averted if the present Ministry remained in power, and great would be the responsibility of those who kept them in their Seats. (The hon. gentleman was cheered on resuming his seat.)

Mr. McGEE said he did not believe that grievances existed sufficient to justify the Repeal of the Union, and he should therefore, feel it his duty to vote against the motion. But a state of feeling existed in the Province which if it could not be remedied by timely concessions, would of itself lead to a dissolution of the Union, without a motion from the hon member for Helmond or any other member. (Hear, hear.) It would take place without Parliamentary form. The spirit of the Act of Union was fast disappearing, and after it was gone, it would be impossible to maintain the latter. The only way for the Union to be maintained was by a mutual disinclination to take advantage by either side of an accidental superiority in numbers or position, and by the exercise towards the people of each section of that etiquette which governed mankind in their social relations. He repeated that this motion was premature—if a separation of the political fortunes of the Provinces took place, it would not be heralded by discussion, but would result from the stern, democratic irresistable, popular will. It would be demanded by the voices of the English speaking people of the West and their demand would not be unheeded. When the House had not been sitting he had spent some time in the by-ways of Western Canada, and he was firmly persuaded from all he had seen that there was a spirit abroad which, if not disarmed by justice, reason mutual forbearance, and straightforward explanations would of itself repeal the Union. (Hear, hear.) He remarked upon it that by a singular coincidence the member for Middlesex had made himself famous for dissolving unions—the other day he brought in a Bill for facilitating divorce, and now he moved a resolution for dissolving our political connection. (Laughter.) It had been alleged as a ground for dissolving the sentimental union that had existed between Upper and Lower Canada since 1840, that there had been "incompatibility of temper," and he believed it had been contended by his learned friend (Dr. Connor) who had brought the case into Doctors Commons, that there had also been illnature towards one of the parties present. (Laughter.) Well, he did not think after all, that a sufficient case had been made out to warrant them in dissolving the marriage tie. The Union had done much to unite the people of Upper and Lower Canada, separated with such other hour upon the stage." In New York, he appeared night after night without interruption, and he (Mr. McGee) regretted that his countrymen by birth, who were apt to take offence, whether Protestants or Catholics, who were generally hasty as powder to the match, should have interfered with him in Montreal. Unfortunately they did so; unfortunately, also, in the parish of St. Sylvestre, a party murder had about the same time occurred which gave cause for increasing the feeling which existed in Upper Canada; the people fearing that there was growing up a spirit of interference with their religion. But he (Mr. McGee) had this session moved to look into the murder of Farrell, in the county of Wellington. He had moved for a copy of the indictment, and of the instructions given to the prosecuting counsel, and from that day to this time, more than two months ago, he had never been able to get a return. It did not suit the Attorney General West; he had the leaders of the Orange party in his pay. He (Mr. McGee) acquitted the Lower Canada section of the Government from a knowledge of his proceedings, but there was circumstantial evidence, as strong as that upon which many a man had been condemned to death, to prove that the Attorney General, finding that he could not compete with the Upper Canada majority openly and honestly, had resorted to a subterranean system of influencing the people, —of raising his political position; and had thereby proved himself to be one of those politicians who were willing to resort to any means in order to retain office, and to carry out the half-finished intrigues into which he had gone so deeply, that he could not withdraw with honour or credit. In recounting his triumphs, he (the Attorney General) had counted the member for North Leeds and Grenville, as one of his trophies since the session. The public had not forgotten the scene which took place in the House on the night when that hon. gentleman presented himself here. He (Mr. McGee) simply mentioned this as a fact, to show that he (Mr. Gowan) in giving aid and succour to the Attorney General had sought his natural affinities with his dear friend and brother. He was the sponsor and godfather for all the political foundlings of the Government. At this moment if he (Mr. McGee) was correctly informed, the gaoler of Toronto, the Grand Master, was in Wellington, opposing the ex-member for that Riding, who was not considered pure enough to sit in the immediate neighbourhood of the member for Russell—(loud laughter;—but who if he had gone to the other side of the House would have had the three members for Quebec to keep him in countenance, and be there lost in the crowd. (Renewed laughter.) Now he would ask the hon. gentlemen from the eastern Province if they were ready to defend the patronage of this (the Orange) institution by their hon. colleague? After enlarging on this point Mr. McGee proceeded to say, that he still hoped the members of the House would go home with one source of consolation—that the session of 1858 has tended to allay and discourage the religious ferment which existed in Canada West in 1857. As this was the last opportunity of addressing the House, which he would probably enjoy before the close of the session, there were one or two matters of fact upon which he wished to remark. It had been stated in the organ of the Government, that at a late meeting in this city, over the result of which the Attorney General rejoiced;—yes, the Attorney General rejoiced over a row, and he had given the ring-leader of the row a Parliamentary prominence by citing his name with that fellowship which he felt for such characters; he had called him Bob Moodie. Straws showed which way the wind blew. Would it not be strange if the gilding when taken off this Conservative, a demagogue should be found underneath? This row was rejoiced over, by the very party who ought to have looked upon it with grave disapprobation; who ought even to have "affected a virtue if he had it not." (Hear, hear. It had been stated in the organ of the Government—the world bearing Athos—it must be a milk and water world—that he (Mr. McGee) had been in collusion with the member for Toronto, whipping up parties to attend the meeting. The statement was utterly false. Another report was that some compromise or understanding of some kind or other existed between so humble an individual as himself and the gentleman who occupied so prominent a position as the hon. member for Toronto. This also was untrue; he (Mr. McGee) never heard any sentiments from the hon. member for Toronto except those he had expressed in this House. If he had shewn in his method of putting his views to the House any alteration in his method of speech for the better, then it ought to be rejoiced at. From whichever side of the House a modification of language came, it ought to be welcomed. He (Mr. McGee) would even rejoice in the conversion of the hon. member for Carleton to something like decency or common sense. (Loud laughter.) The Protestants of Upper Canada were a great people. Let them speak openly and boldly. Let Catholics speak out with equal boldness; let both parties remember their common country, and find such a common mean as would satisfy both. Then we should put down that organised bigotry which broke out everywhere when it was least expected; which from its subterranean cisterns drew up the draughts which made men mad. This country had glorious resources and a great destiny in store for it. If the Catholic was not afraid of the Protestant; and he (Mr. McGee) was afraid of no men who openly expressed their opinions; if the Protestant was not afraid of the Catholic; if both were candid with each other, and showed each other their wants;—then we should have a better, a nobler Canada. Then we should have none of those village murders, those church burnings, like that of Mount Forest the other day, no Corrigan murders, no Farrell murders; but the two races in Canada, like the waters of the Ottawa and the St. Lawrence, one river though two streams, would flow on in peace, until they met those tides of commerce and prosperity, in which both should pass to the great future that this great country must attain, if not prevented by our faults, our folly, or our fanaticism.

Mr. GOWAN moved in amendment to the amendment, "That after seventeen years' experience of the working of the Union between Upper and Lower Canada, and in view of the large responsibilities undertaken by the united Provinces, this House does not deem it desirable to take any step to weaken the Union, but rather by united forbearance and good will, to cement the ties which bind the two Provinces together."—In moving this amendment, he would take leave to make a few remarks on the conduct of the member for South Oxford, and also of the hon. member for Montreal. Having dispatched Dr. Connor, he commenced with Mr. McGee. That gentleman had condemned the Attorney General because he had cried "hear, hear" to some sentiments which were uttered by a member when speaking on the Orange Society. Was that liberal? Had not the hon. gentleman himself denounced Orangemen as murderers?—He (Mr. Gowan) hoped the time had not come when the least member of that Society was not as liberal as the member for Montreal. In reply to Mr. McGee's argument that he never had attached the Protestant religion as such, Mr. Gowan replied that as the great bulk of the Protestants in Upper Canada were Orangemen, he had, in fact, attacked the Protestant religion.—Having addressed himself to the Gavazzi and Brodeur cause, he did not deny that he went to Middlesex, but he did deny that he acted as agent for the Attorney General West. Having exhausted himself so far as the hon. member for Montreal, Mr. Gowan turned to the hon. member for Portneuf, and charged him with converting a statement made by the member for South Simcoe, in reference to Sectarian Schools, into an attack upon the Catholic Church. Whilst the hon. member was yet speaking, there were heard loud cries for "adjournment!" He moved the adjournment of the House.

Colonial Interests—A Federal Union.

From the Scottish American Journal.

The interests of a new country are essentially practical, and there, if anywhere, we may expect those who take part in public affairs to do so from a sincere desire to serve the common cause. It may be doubted, however, if there is much of this generous zeal among Canadian politicians. A good deal of the circumlocution spirit has already crept in, and the genus Barnacle has become abundant. How not to do it is very much the maxim acted on, and the Legislature accordingly spends weeks and months in discussions which issue only in a practical solution of this interesting problem in political science. The Provincial Parliament succeeds most triumphantly in doing nothing, though why it should sit so long in the hot weather for this particular purpose, it is difficult to understand, except on the hypothesis advanced by some of our contemporaries, that the £6 per day received by each member is such an all-powerful inducement, that Parliament may be expected to continue sitting as long as the dull times continue.

Questions of really practical importance seem to be of least consideration in the Provincial Parliament. Personalities rank first in point of interest, and petty warfare, as in other and older legislatures, takes the place of honest deliberation for the public good. The Ministry hold office and their opponents wish to get them out of it; everything turns upon this point. Barnacle and anti-Barnacle are designations under which almost all the members of the House may be included, and which describe their chief end.

It is scarcely to be expected, therefore, that such a question as the federal union of the Provinces should excite a very lively interest among the politicians at Toronto. There are obvious signs, we think, that they regard it with indifference, if not with jealousy. Such a union, if it involved the separation of the two Canadian Provinces, would be a peaceful solution of the principal questions about which there is any difficulty at present, and party men are seldom pleased with peaceful settlements. In such a case their old occupation is gone for the time being, and they may have difficulty in finding another. Hence even the professed friends of a federal union are lukewarm in its behalf, though the practical advantages are too obvious to be doubted.

Apart from the benefit that would be gained, by Canada in particular, in being saved from the actual dead lock to which its affairs have been brought by the legislative incorporation of the two Provinces, the material gain to all the British settlements in North America would be unquestionable. A speaker in the Provincial Parliament referred to the ignorance that prevails in Canada with reference to the Eastern Provinces as a reason against such a union, but to us this appears to be one of the strongest arguments in favor of it. Why are the Provinces ignorant of each other but from want of union? Upper Canada is more closely connected with the States of New England than with Nova Scotia or New Brunswick, railway communication having for some time been completed with the former, while with the latter it is still wanting. Appeals have been made to the Home Government to assist in supplying this deficiency, which would not have continued till now, had there been any means of common action between the different Provinces to supply the want of interest and information on Colonial matters on the part of the British Government and Legislature. With a federal union, railway communication between the different Provinces would be one of the first objects that would be effected, and a uniform tariff would be another. Canada, which is now dependent on the United States for coal, could then obtain its supplies from British territories—a matter of equal consequence alike to Canada, to the Eastern Provinces, and to British interests. Canada would be made independent of a foreign state, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia would benefit by the trade, and Britain would be freed from one of those practical arguments, on the strength of which certain people in the States are wont to assume airs of superiority, whenever an international difficulty arises. In addition to this, it must be remembered that the only existing means of communication in the winter months, between the Atlantic and the Canadian Provinces, is through the American territory, for at that season the St. Lawrence of course is closed, and for want of a railway communication overland, by way of the Eastern Provinces, is practically impossible. The United States, therefore, hold the key to Canada, and it will not be otherwise till the British Provinces are placed under the will of a central local government in so far as all affairs of common interest are concerned.

The supply of coal is a matter of very vital interest to Canada, as without possessing the command of such a supply, no country can ever become great. Now, there is no coal within the present bounds of the colony, but it exists in the British possessions both to the east and west. It abounds in the Eastern Provinces, and it has been ascertained that there are extensive coal fields beyond the Rocky Mountains. It is also supposed that coal exists on this side of the mountains, and in the neighborhood of Saskatchewan, but owing to the Hudson Bay monopoly, the interests of which require the concealment of the existence of any such resources, the fact has not been actually ascertained. Should this prove to be the case, here is another important circumstance, that will give an impetus to emigration in that direction, as soon as the will of the monopolists is at an end. As soon as the needle turns to the pole, enterprise and labor in the greatest day gravitate towards the coal regions, if there are ready means of communication and transport. But these considerations are in a manner extraneous to the Canadians, though there is no reason why they should do so. The Canadian Legislature has no power to do what is necessary to render available the resources. Nor is the want supplied by the Imperial Government, which has ever shown but feeble interest in matters of such vital importance to her population. A central administration, located in the Provinces, and not only representing the common interests, but also empowered to administer the affairs of the whole of British North America, to imperatively required. Now is the time to consider the propriety of calling such a government into being, when the charter under which the greater portion of the British possessions has hitherto been held is about to lapse, never, we hope, to be renewed under any conditions whatever.

Breeches Pocket Principles.

From the Liverpool Financial Reformer.

We know that we are a contemptible race of breeches pocket politicians. We feel that there is little attractive and nothing heroic about us. We are accustomed to be called cold blooded utilitarians, dry statisticians, dreary arrangers of melancholy facts and figures, and men with so little veneration for the great and noble that we should have broken up the pyramids to build a county gaol, and hiccied with Julius Cæsar for a quarter's salary. We cannot claim to dazzle our readers; and though a certain amount of usefulness may be unwillingly conceded to us, we must certainly never expect to become amusing. Our lot has fallen upon somewhat stony ground.—The great desert of jobbery and wasteful expenditure that we have undertaken to explore is as vast and so full of that which makes the heart sick even unto death, that our pilgrims either drop exhausted by the way or come in full of weariness and with little hope.

Our very earnestness is against our success. In a sceptical and a callous age it is not always pleasant to be the energetic advocates of justice and truth. Our wisdom is doubted and our sincerity is called in question. We are hot-headed enthusiasts—men with but one idea—or disappointed expectants who have been excluded from a fair share of the plunder. It is our misfortune to preach our doctrines from a provincial platform. At a time when political virtue seems to be a question of latitude and longitude—when what is atrocious in Algeria becomes heroic in India—when administrative foresight in Paris becomes tyranny at Naples, it is only to be expected that the principles of economical science will have a very different influence when issuing from a country town of England than when springing up triumphantly in the midst of the metropolis. We are almost of obscure agitators—ignorant babblers—readers of blue books in the bosom of our families—currency doctors—cynical town councillors, and merchants who neglect our private affairs to attend to those of the nation.

Some of the ablest and truest-hearted men in the national legislature, who may be called the representatives of our principles there, are neither admired nor respected. They are not genteel. The House of Commons appears to have grown out of the knowledge of its rude, vulgar, popular origin. It has accumulated wealth and comforts, and turned its back upon its poor relations. It has become a seminary for the proper teaching of the pronunciation of the aspirates, and a practice ground for the rejoicing attempts of electro-plated orators. The old, rough, honest, earnest zeal of practical legislation is gone, and its place is occupied with a feeble reproduction of the traditional "effect" of some over-rated political performer of the past. The incubus of Pitt and Fox is still upon the country; the dry-rot of their reckless, heartless taxation is still eating into the vital energies of the poor; and the pompous shadow of their artificial verbiarge still hovers over every floundering legislator who relies more upon empty words than upon beneficial deeds. Our representatives are not of this class. They have only prepared themselves for a Parliamentary career by a diligent study of Mill and Bentham, and have entirely left out of the account, both Horace and Virgil. They may understand and support the great modern principle of free trade in all its ramifications; but let them only give one false quantity in an ill-judged Latin quotation, and woe upon them for the rest of their public days! They may have recorded fifty votes for the benefit of their constituents and the general body of the people; they may have scrutinised estimates exposed unearned pensions, and supported reforms of all kinds at convenient or inconvenient seasons; but let them only once betray an ignorance of the date and place of some wretched scuffle in a barn between half-a-dozen gaudy cavaliers, and half-a-dozen smelly roundheads, and the floodgates of ridicule will immediately be opened upon them, by those who direct the ignorant and superficial satire of the day.

Our greatest misfortune is that we belong to a country that is so extensively ambitious and so unapproachably great. Unhappily for us, our kingdom is a kingdom upon which the sun never sets; and we have as many jewels in our crown that the cost of taking care of them becomes a frightful consideration. When the patient hard-working taxpayer asks for a little home and domestic reform in exchange for the large sums of money that he has paid towards the necessary and unnecessary expenses of the State, he is put off with the [illegible] defence of his governors, and told that they are rather too busy to attend to him just now, in consequence of a revolt amongst many millions of wretched beings at the other side of the globe whom we have been grossly misruling for the last hundred years. His money is taken, and his claims are shelved for another session, while the question that occupies the leaders of the organs and the gossips of the clubs is not whether there will be any reform, or all reform, or no reform, but whether Leadenhall-street or Cannon-row is to be left in the ascendant.

While our governors are ardent followers of annexation in what we call our own territories, and glaring examples of colossal misgovernment to every nation under the sun, they oppose the imitation of their own policy wherever they can safely do so, and set up as self-constituted champions of oppressed nationalities, and the armed proselytizers of snarling petty states all over the world. It may have struck some of our rulers, in their lucid intervals, that our moral force would be considerably greater, or [illegible], if we were known to act upon the same principles as those which we endeavour upon others. But who is to carry out such a bold, original and honest policy? Certainly not those who are interested on the lavish expenditure of Government;—who think extent of area, and not capital gives importance to a nation; and who consider it absolutely necessary to govern a state before we can profitably trade with it. We all know how America has been disgraced by the successful issue of the war of independence, how she has turned her commercial bank upon her poor old mother country—this an undeveloped child—and how we have now no trade whatever, with our revolted colonies!

We know what mean, unpatriotic, quaker-ended, despicable wretches we are when we venture to raise our voices, however feebly, not only against these gigantic errors and costly mistakes, but against half the glitter and finery of government.—Lavish expenditure is a brilliant, and in times of plenty, a rather popular thing, under the notion that it is an encouragement of labour, and not a destruction of capital.—These heroic statesmen who swallow the money like wine revel in [illegible] dignity and importance, [illegible] with his [illegible] of property, [illegible] the Alhambra [illegible] tion of nations up to from those [illegible] millions of rent—many of them [illegible] from poor peat like blood from their veins. It [illegible] a great count [illegible] that increases its [illegible] expenditure 20 [illegible] as compared the expenditure of 20 years ago; it be a great [illegible] where pride it last more by 50 [illegible] every year (another great charity) [illegible] greater extent equal population; [illegible] it may be a pregnancy that is [illegible] soon with an app and furniture [illegible] of the heats, twelve working-men [illegible] of his cottage in [illegible] road, and taking his last unctuous [illegible] chair to avoid the fund that [illegible] expenditure.

But with our [illegible] principles we are compelled to [illegible] there are [illegible] elements or great [illegible]. Eccentricity and [illegible], in [illegible] in individuals, in [illegible] places and vulgar means of [illegible] notoriety, after all. Certain eccentric [illegible], who had nothing to recommend in the shape of a character, wisdom, or actions, have obtained at last a [illegible] by drinking [illegible] out of their golden goblets of [illegible]. We do not wish to see our beloved [illegible] rising to the height or sinking [illegible] of those [illegible] performers, or take [illegible] upon nothing greater than [illegible] and its family plate. The [illegible] of [illegible] an iron bar, of throwing a [illegible] projectile in succession over [illegible], of walking 1000 miles in 100 [illegible] hours, looks imposing enough to ignorant and superficial observers, but [illegible] is discovered, is considered [illegible] proof of a weak and [illegible] strength. One day, [illegible], the trials and values of our noble [illegible] expenditure will be discovered we shall be welcomed to the [illegible] by those we are now [illegible] and due. In this [illegible] time we have learned [illegible] and to wait.

Vancouver's Island.

From the Leader.

The first Californian settlers were naturally not selected from the steadiest and most respectable [illegible] of society, and although the people of the Vigilance Committee [illegible] specimens of intermittent public [illegible] at San Francisco, a long time must elapse before the city or the State can be thought [illegible] a condition in which life [illegible] exceptionally insecure. In [illegible] character is not conspicuously [illegible] or conciliatory, and the [illegible] Indians, and half-breeds [illegible] have trained either as [illegible] or as inferior and conquered [illegible] the ruling class, too much [illegible] to hesitate to attend to politics, have [illegible] the management of public [illegible] to the hands of gamblers, ruffian [illegible]. There can be little doubt that whatever will in time work itself clear [illegible] Americans have an instinctive [illegible] checking abuses when they become [illegible], but, in the meantime, [illegible] desirable that a similar state of [illegible] should introduce itself into an [illegible] and it would seem that for the [illegible] Vancouver's Island is likely to [illegible] the social anarchy which prevails [illegible]. The account of the gold [illegible] will probably revive in different [illegible] of the Union the habitual jealousy [illegible] influence, which easily [illegible] with the natural love of [illegible] Government journalists will have no [illegible] in declaiming that the Ashburton [illegible] Oregon boundary are unjustifiable [illegible] did attempt to interfere with [illegible] treaty. There is fortunately, [illegible], no reason to apprehend for [illegible] the form of encroachment which [illegible] other frontiers of the States have [illegible] most dangerous. Although [illegible] of additional gold-producing [illegible] comparatively [illegible] to [illegible] it is not desirable that the national [illegible] be engaged in any [illegible] dispute it is a matter of congratulation [illegible] of the first body of [illegible] of subjects of the Crown, [illegible] for their temporary [illegible] American institutions. It is said [illegible] body of Cornish miners, the [illegible] class of colonists, has already left [illegible] cisco for the Vancouver gold-[illegible] it seems not improbable that [illegible] population of the different coal [illegible] will gradually [illegible] in the complete safe retreat from their [illegible] bers of California. The [illegible] of the island, like all the native [illegible] of the Hudson's Bay Company, [illegible], are friendly to the English, [illegible] is happily so conquered and [illegible] population to conciliate or to [illegible]. There is abundant room for Anglo-Saxon enterprise to spread through the [illegible] and down the coasts of the Pacific, [illegible] highly desirable that two distinct [illegible] in colonization should be [illegible] by side. As long as the settlers [illegible] lish or other than American, any [illegible] out of the question. There is [illegible] population in California to form an [illegible] army, and a detachment from [illegible] squadron will always be able to [illegible] inland any protection which may be [illegible]. It will be strange if new [illegible] of friendship or hostility hereafter [illegible] between Russia and England from [illegible] of their possessions on the [illegible] side of the globe. It is premature, [illegible], to speculate on the fortunes of [illegible] which must become practically [illegible] as soon as it acquires wealth and [illegible]; and in the meantime the gold [illegible] couver's Island will follow the [illegible] tion, whatever may be the political [illegible] tion of the Pacific coasts, as long as [illegible] continues to be the mart of the world.

The recommendation of the recent [illegible] mittee, with respect to the [illegible] Vancouver's Island by the Crown, [illegible] be carried [illegible] without further [illegible]. The peculiar character of the Hudson's [illegible] company [illegible] as a [illegible] colonies [illegible] on its policy [illegible] the indigenous tribes. Other [illegible] or foreign [illegible] have, as at New [illegible], and as the remainder of North [illegible] ica, constantly [illegible] the natives on their [illegible] as the land was [illegible] only required for the uses of [illegible] but a Fur Company, under the [illegible] an opposite [illegible], [illegible] [illegible] the same [illegible] [illegible] it [illegible] dense [illegible] [illegible] other. The [illegible] are [illegible] necessary at this [illegible], and [illegible] [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

...ation with the slightest hope of success, when the whole population is ready to support the Government with their lives and fortunes. The police, the revenue, and the political constitution of the province will demand the early interference of the Imperial Government, and it is not impossible that within ten years a thriving and peaceable community may have grown up in the remote north-eastern wilderness.

Arrival of the "North Star."?

THE ATLANTIC CABLE—ANOTHER TRIAL TO BE MADE.

The Liverpool letter to the London Mess.

Intelligence was received this day (July 5) per the telegraphic Telegraph Company, stating that the steamers Niagara and Gorgon had arrived at Queenstown with the news that the cable had parted on board the Agamemnon, when about 1,000 miles from the coast of Ireland, after paying out two hundred and fifty miles. The steamers had experienced bad weather, and would proceed after receiving a supply of coal. The Agamemnon had not arrived at Queenstown, but she was expected.

This information was received with unusual regret on the Liverpool exchange, but owing to the uncertain nature of the intelligence, it had little or no effect on the Stock Exchange. The contract in the Atlantic and Irish Channel has this year, most unfortunately, been the roughest ever known in June; and for some time past fears have been entertained that the squadron would meet with disasters.

From the York Reporter, July 5.

The Niagara and Gorgon attached to the squadron for the laying of the transatlantic cable, arrived in Queenstown at an early hour this morning. We regret having to announce that the object of the expedition has for the present failed, and we cannot give or render such particulars of the events which occurred in the course of the undertaking as we have been able to very extract. The Agamemnon and her consort the Valorous, and the Niagara and her consort the Gorgon, sailed from Plymouth on the 10th of June; each of the great vessels carrying about 1,500 miles of cable, with a new and improved apparatus for paying it out, which it was calculated would have allowed for any strain or unequal motion of the ships, on the very speed of the vessels regulated by automatic arrangements the rate at which the coil was to be discharged. After having been three days at sea another expedition was overtaken by a Sou'-Easter, which continued without intermission nine days. On the seventh day of disastrous weather the ships, which had continued to keep together, had to part company, and the Agamemnon was obliged to stand before the wind for 36 hours; the contingent which, and a coil of the cable which she had on board, was lost. It is supposed that the captain for some time considered appropriation for her safety, and when the weather cleared up the waterways were found open, and one of her ports were broken. Two of her sailors were severely injured, and one of the mariners had his person brought hight. Yet such was the consummate skill, good seamanship and intrepidity of her commander, Captain Preede, that he was enabled to bring her to the appointed rendezvous, lat. 52 deg. 2 min., long. 33 deg. 16 min. The Niagara rode out the storm gallantly, having only carried away her jibboom and one wing of the figure-head, the great American eagle. All the vessels having at length arrived at their central point of junction, the first splice of the cable was made on the 26th. After having paid out five and a half miles, owing to an accident on board the Niagara the cable parted. The ships having again met, the splice was made good, and they commenced to pay out the cable a second time; but after they had each payed out forty miles it was reported that the current was broken, and no communication could be made between the ships. Unfortunately in this instance the telegraph must have occurred at the bottom, as the electricians, from the fine calculations which their sensitive instruments allow them to make, were able to determine each to have been the fact, even before the vessels came together again. Having cut off the end they lost for the 3rd time all communication with the bottom of the cable on the 29th. [illegible] the Niagara having paid out over 150 miles of cable, all on board entertained the most sanguine anticipations of success, when the third announcement was made upon Tuesday, the 29th, at nine o'clock P. M., that the electric current had ceased to flow. The two principle electricians, Mr. Hearly and Dr. Leeman, on board the Niagara, are inclined to believe that the accident occurred on board the Agamemnon, which, as it would only implicate a faulty arrangement of some of the apparatus, would still leave hope of the ultimate success of the undertaking whereas if the separation has occurred at the bottom, its effects will be greatly to damp, if not deter, the enterprising spirit of the directors from persevering in the gigantic project. Should nothing be heard of her consort, the Niagara will after coaling, proceed to her ocean station, having still on board about 1,200 miles of the cable, which strange to say, the vessel had retained a similar amount, while still part of the junction being completed, and about thirty per cent. for contingencies. In this last trial some 300 miles of the cable was lost, and when it is calculated that it was roughly estimated that the value of the cable is about £3000 a mile, it will be seen that the sacrifice up to the present has not been so enormous as might at first sight have been supposed.

Arrival of the "Europa."?

St. John's, N. F., July 26.

The royal mail steamship Europa, from Liverpool, Saturday, 17th inst., has passed Cape Race.

The Atlantic Telegraph fleet would leave Queenstown on the 19th inst. The cable was successfully paid out from the Agamemnon for 335 miles, when the line parted in a depth of 2,000 fathoms. The Niagara picked up the end, and a splice was made, when 335 miles were paid out. The Niagara then proceeded with 22,000 miles, Agamemnon with 12,000 miles. A second attempt was made to lay the cable, but the line parted in 2,000 fathoms of water. Captain Bromage arrived at this port.

New York, July 26.

The Royal Washington correspondence, published on board the Great Eastern, was received by the Canada, which arrived at Halifax on the 24th. The Queen's letter to the President, which was sent to the Agamemnon, was received by the Niagara, which was lost on the expedition. The President's answer is carefully packed up.

Eight volunteers have been killed by the falling of the derrick. Mr. Canada Will Burn, who was under your Duke Bedford, Wilkes, has been appointed, and entered the Daughters, and the Queen's Bedford, Wilkes, and the Queen's Bedford, Wilkes, and the Queen's Bedford, Wilkes

BOOKS! BOOKS!!

THE Subscribers have now in Stock the following Books, to which they respectfully direct the attention of the inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding country, viz:—

LIFE OF GENERAL HAVELOCK.
LIVINGSTONE'S TRAVELS.
ENGLISH HEARTS & ENGLISH HANDS.
LIFE OF CAPT. HAMMOND.
The Shadow on the Hearth.
Spurgeon's Life.
" Sermons.
Beecher's Life Thoughts.
Jane Eyre.—By Currer Bell.
Mormonism.—By Elder Hyde.
Waverly Anecdotes.
Life Pictures from a Pastor's Note Book.
Revival Sermons in New York in 1858.
Roger's Table Talk.
The Prince of the House of David.
Manual of Salvation Discovery for 1858.
Literary Attractions of the Bible.—Kelsey.
Bayard Essays in Biography and Criticism.
Gentle Remedies.
Lamp from Heaven, for Life on Earth.
Olmstead's Mechanics of the Heavens.
Longfellow's Poetical Works.
Cats and Dogs.—By Mrs. Hugh Miller.
Plain—A Tale, by A. L. O. E.
The Rose Family.— "
Kirke White's Works.
Twenty Years a Slave.
The English Orphans.—By Mrs. Mary J. Holmes.
Bobbin's Representative Women.
Mind of Jesus.—By Mandeff.
Words of Jesus. "
Bow in the Cloud. "
Faithful Promiser. "
The City: Its Sins and Sorrows.—By Rev. Dr. Guthrie.
Gospel in Ezekiel. "
Baxter's Gospel. "
Dick's Christian Philosopher.
Chalmers' Moral Philosophy.
Chalmers' Miscellanies.
Bonar's Land of Promise.
Brewster's More Worlds than One.
Lectures to Young Men.
The Royal Preacher.
D'Aubigne's Reformation.
Nisbet's Daily Bible Illustrations—Morning and Evening Series.
Books of Family Worship.
Family Prayers.—Mandeff.
Memories of Bethany.
Footsteps of St. Paul.
McCheyne's Life and Remains.
Life of Cromwell.
Cheever's Lectures on the Pilgrim's Progress.
Dick's Astronomical Discourses.
Baxter's Saint's Rest.
Mansion of Happiness.
Ministering Children.
Bridges' on the 119 Psalm.
Rogusky's Golden Treasury.
Anxious Inquirer.
The Cured Head.
Ungava: a tale of the Esquimaux.
The Young Fur Traders.
&c, &c., &c.

ALSO, JUST RECEIVED,

A Choice Assortment of Bibles, Church Services, Psalm and Prayer Books, Wesley's Hymns, &c., &c. Toy Books for Children, in great variety.

Sunday School Reward Cards, Prize Books, &c., &c.

SAWERS & MURRAY.
New Book and Stationery Store, Burnham's Block, George Street.

Peterboro', June 9, 1858.

MUSIC! MUSIC!!

The Musical Bouquet, (English,
AT 44 PER SINGLE NUMBER.

THE subscribers have now in stock, the following pieces, to which they respectfully invite the attention of the Ladies of Peterborough.

QUADRILLES.

The Scotch Quadrilles.
Pizzicatomi Quadrilles.
Les Chiens, (dogs) do.
The Leaders do.
The Don Cæsar De Bazan Quadrilles.
Belphegor do.
The British Navy do.
Les Chats, (cats) do.
Bonnie Dundee do.
Les Singes, (monkeys) do.
Lucrezia Borgia do.
Les Souris, (mice) do.
The Musqueteers do.
The Irish do.
Pens in Boots do.
The Royal Lancers' do. do.
The Comte ce Rajentober's do.

POLKAS.

Guy Fawkes' Polka.
The Laughing Eyes Polka.
Tomtit's do.
The Bobbin' Around do.
The Original do.
Ask Mamma do.
The Mantz do.
The Silverhair do.

FANTASIAS.

Gazelle Impromptu.
The Bush aboon Traquair.
La Violette.
Les Cloches Du Monastere.
We're a' Noddin'.
The Last Rose of Summer.
Fantasia on Bohemian Airs.
Fortant Pour La Syrie.
Wanselieder, Brilliant Fantasia.
Scots wha hae wi' Wallace bled.
Premier Nocturne.
L'Italienne Fantasia.
Grand Galop Brilante.
Premiere Etude De Concert'.
Two Musical Sketches, Mendelssohn.

POPULAR SONGS,

WITH ACCOMPANIMENTS.

Why did my Sarah sell me.
Hay Johnny Cope and the Campbells 'are coming.
Hearts and Eyes.
Ellen Bayne.
Who wadna fecht for Charlie.
Far Away Dear.
Bonnie Polka.
Bobbing Around.
Sound Britons Sound.
Dinah is the Girl for me.
Lilly Willy Waken.
The Lass that loves a Sailor,
The Lands of the Forest.
Lest he gay Boys.
The Village Bla dan.
Come again dear dream.
The Caledonian National Hymn.
Then art my Joy.
The North Carolina Race.
Up for the Right.
Oh let me in the dark wash in.
The Fisherman's Adieu.
The Camptown Races.
Bothie Mac Sallie.
My Mary Anne.
Be Early in the Morning.
The Spinning Wheel.
My Nannie O.
I Must Depart.
The Greenwood Bell.
My Gentle Dove.
Thou'rt Fortune an before us Boys.

BALLET MELODIES,

WITH VARIATIONS FOR THE PIANOFORTE.

Pleyels German Hymn.
Vital Spark of Heavenly Flame.
Prayer from Rossini's "Moss in Egypt."
The Hunchback on Telling.
Adams Fidelio.
Oh! Susanna, from Bishop.
I Know that my Redeemer Liveth.
Robin Johnnie, Awful Thieves.
Rosa Lamentation.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Pleyel Impromptu, Pianoforte Overture.
Rondo in F flat.
Rondo Pianoforte.
Air La Speranza, Vocal Waltz.
Les Fee Polka, Vocal.
Piano in C Major.
Piano Forte Duet, for Eight Performers.
Piano Forte Duet, for Four Performers.
Piano Forte Duet, for Two Performers.
Piano Forte Duet, for Two Performers.
Piano Forte Duet, for Two

AUGUST

1858

HOOPLES PATENT.

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND
Ornamental.----Bronzing,
&c., &c., &c.,
Neatly executed, on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the
EXAMINER STEAM PRINTING ESTABLISHMENT,
BURNHAM'S BLOCK,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, AUGUST 5, 1858.

Volume 3.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 30.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

ANE TEN SHILLINGS in ADVANCE, for ONE YEAR; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING

Six Lines, and under, first insertion	£0	2	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	7½
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0	3	9
Each subsequent insertion	0	1
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0	0	4
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	1

☞ Advertisements without written instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognized.

Business Directory.

MR. DENISTOUN,
BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

E. BURNHAM,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. H. J. Vinard, Esq.

MR. MARTIN DUNSFORD,
ATTORNEY at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c. Office over the New Post Office, Peterborough.

W. B. RUMDOR,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, &c. &c., &c.
Peterboro', March 10th, 1856.

DR. HOLYWELL,
HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Rubidge's.
Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,
SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' West.

M. S. MACDOWELL,
SURGICAL AND MECHANICAL DENTIST.
OFFICE over A. W. Kempt's Drug Store, George Street, Peterboro.
May, 1858. 18

ALBRO & VINDIN,
Commission, Shipping, Forwarding
AND GENERAL AGENTS,
Lumber Merchants, &c.,
Port Hope, C. W.
OFFICE—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets.

A. W. KEMPT,
DRUGGIST, Dealer in Genuine Drugs and Chemicals, Patent Medicines, Paints, Oils, Colours, Dye Stuffs, Perfumery, Spices, Hair, Nail and Tooth Brushes, Smelling and Toilet Bottles. Fancy Soap, Culinary Essences, &c. Medical Hall, George Street, Peterboro.'

MESSRS. STEWART,
ARCHITECTS, Engineers, Land Surveyors, and Land Agents. Office, Mill Street, Port Hope.
GEO. A. STEWART.
CHAS. H. STEWART.
Port Hope, May 22, 1856. 2ft.

JOHN MAYDEN,
Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, Window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.
King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 35-6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.
INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this Agency as per agreement.
Peterboro', May 24th, 1857. 2d

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD,
PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.
COMMUNICATION THROUGH THE POST OFFICE, Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S
FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.
Port Hope, Sept. 20, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,
HUNTER STREET, PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST.
MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.
Peterboro', Sept. 2, 1856. 3

W. COULTER,
Druggist and Apothecary
PETERBORO'
Dealer in Medicines, English and French Chemicals, Patent Medicines, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Window Glass and Perfumery, Particular attention paid to putting up Physicians Prescriptions, Family Receipts and Country Medicines. ALSO, English American and Garden, Field and Flower Seeds. Together with an assortment of School Books, Stationery and fancy Articles.

A. MERCER & SONS,
TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.
Peterboro', June 9, 1856. 23—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.
A. HUNTER, Agent.
May, 1858. 19

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,
ACCOUNTANT, Civil Engineer, &c., Scott's Chambers, George Street.
Peterboro', July 23, 1856. 29

QUARRY TO LET,
Near Peterborough.
THE Subscriber offers for a term of years, the Quarry on the river side, above the residence of Charles Burnham, Esq. The building is to be undertaken to crown the river will bring the Quarry within half a mile of the centre of the town. The stone is of a superior quality, and it is easily worked.
For Terms and other particulars, apply to CHARLES DUNCAN, Dundas or
GEORGE A. STEWART,
Port Hope.
Peterborough, July 13, 1858. 27

SPLENDID INVESTMENT.
FOR SALE,
LOT No. 9, West of George Street, and South of Lot of Dunbarton Street, adjoining the Post Office and Episcopal Church Property, having a frontage of 66 ft. on George Street, by a depth of 132 ft. to a lane. There will be a Mortgage on the property, if required, for a portion of the purchase money. For terms, which will be made favourable, apply to the Subscriber, on the premises, or in building Lots, to suit purchasers.
CHARLES McCARTHY.
Peterboro' July 30, 1858. 29-tf

Law and Crime.

LADY BULWER AND INSANITY.

English ladies have been the means of bringing about several historic reforms in modern times. The horrible system of Algerine piracy, carried on with impunity in the face of all Christendom, existed for ages unchecked, until an English lady, the delight of London fashionable society, was captured on a Mediterranean summer cruise, with her husband, and carried off into Slavery in Barbary. Then London began to bestir itself; men of power and influence became disquieted, and said, "It might have been my own case!"—an exclamation which has ever been a stronger motive power towards reform than any other ever arising from the human heart. When this cry arose, on the occasion to which we refer, it resulted in the bombardment of Algiers, the liberation of thousands of Christian men and women from slavery, and the eternal abolition of the most anomalous terrorism ever known in the world; one of the weak over the strong—of barbarism over civilization. Again, our marriage laws, by which a slavery, scarcely inferior in bitterness to that of the Algerine captives, was inflicted upon hundreds of unfortunate English wives, were lately reformed, principally upon consideration of the unhappy case of a celebrated and still living English authoress, as related by herself. A third blot upon our civilization has been flagrantly demonstrated during the past week, and the victim is the unfortunate lady of Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton. It has also been known to all connected with our Metropolitan press, and probably to not a few beyond that well-informed class, that causes of dissension have induced a separation between the lady and the baronet. Sir Edward stood in this advantageous position, that while the lady was vehement and persistent in her accusations against him, he never deigned recrimination or reply, a fact which made journalists wary of comments upon the lady's published statements. Last week an announcement appeared in the journals to the effect that Lady Lytton had been incarcerated in a private lunatic asylum. This was followed, after the lapse of a day or two, by a statement that the friends of Lady Lytton had determined upon resorting to legal measures to obtain her release. Her friends! By whom then could her captivity have been projected and carried into execution? This question naturally arose, and the interest it excited was only increased by certain alleged details of her Ladyship's capture, as related by a local journal. According to the narrative published in the Somerset Co. Gazette, it appears that at Sir Edward Lytton's late re-election for Hertfordshire (rendered necessary by his acceptance of office as a Cabinet Minister), the lady, in pursuance of a previously-announced intention, presented herself upon the hustings and addressed the electors for upwards of a quarter of an hour, upon the subject of her own wrongs, real or imaginary received at his hands. Her appearance is said to have disconcerted the Baronet extremely. Since that period, Lady Lytton has been under the impression that she was still closely watched. On the 12th of June a person called in the report "Dr. Thompson," who seems, after all, to be no doctor at all, but a common apothecary, called upon Lady Lytton and requested an interview, which was granted. For five hours during which the conversation is said to have lasted, it was directed, on his part, to subjects calculated to arouse in the mind of the lady, emotions of intense anger and indignation.—Nevertheless, Lady Lytton, not unsuspicious of the event, preserved, during this long trial, unusual calmness. At length she inquired, "Is the farce ended? and, if not, how much longer is it to last?" "Doctor" Thompson answered, "It is ended, and your Ladyship will not from this hour hear any more of these painful matters." Lady Lytton was desired to put into writing certain terms upon which she was willing to desist from molestation of her husband; and, upon her compliance with this request, Mr. Thompson left, promising to see Sir Edward thereon. Lady Lytton, after the lapse of several days, having received no answer to her proposal, came up to London, and with two friends (ladies), called upon Mr. Thompson, who remarked that they had come rather early, and begged to appoint five o'clock in the evening to discuss the subject with them. They were punctual, and met at the house two policemen, two women, having the appearance of hospital nurses, and the keeper of a private lunatic asylum. She was constrained to enter a carriage at the door, and with one or two "gentlemen," and one of her friends was driven off to Brentford, where she was separated from her companion and imprisoned. Now, this certainly reads like a hard case for Lady Bulwer Lytton. Any part of it may be true or untrue, and no judgment ought to be formed upon the facts until proved before a competent tribunal. But, under that legal aspect in which alone it is our business here to view the subject, it matters not a straw whether the circumstances be true, if they be only possible. Of the actual state of Lady Lytton's mind, we have no evidence beyond the patent fact that she has recently written novels, which have been published, and that those who know her well declare her to be perfectly sane. But the grievance is not Lady Lytton's case so much as our own and that of the public in general.—Every man and woman among us, be it known, is liable to sudden incarceration amid the secret horrors of a private lunatic asylum, at the fiat-nance of any person interested in our removal who may be able to obtain, by any means whatever, the signature of two parties, of any or no principle, happening to be possessed of medical diploma. No judicial investigation, no ministerial warrant is necessary for year, or sale, capture and life-long imprisonment.—Who may escape, or upon have done, and all awful tales of revelations penetrated, and devices called into action to evade the machinery of visiting commissioners. Your Lordship will, of course, see at a glance, how excited, if not of an exciting nature, Bedlam; and, on the other side will appear in contradiction, a host of evidences, every one, if your tale be true, an accomplice defending himself and fellow-criminals. Nor is it even necessary, for your capture, that the certificate of your insanity be wilfully false. The disagreement of doctors is proverbial, and of all points there is none about which they disagree more, or know less, than that of insanity. From the highest to the humblest there is scarcely one whom, upon a partial investigation directed to that end, two obscure shop-keeping medical practitioners could not be found to declare insane. The Edinburgh Review, a few years since, published, in a remarkable article, a series of circumstances, tending to prove that the person in whose these combined must have been certainly mad, only this person was Dr. Samuel Johnston. From the foundation of Christianity itself, the best, wisest, and greatest of men have been held mad by individuals of more or less knowledge and influence. It is not necessary, nevertheless, on this account, to refrain from adopting proper measures as to the curative treatment; or, if necessary, the personal restriction of the insane. But let such means be taken, as the members of a civilized community have a right to demand, for the prevention not only of the fact, but of the suspicion of the fact, that persons in the reasonable possession of their faculties may be legally inclosed in dungeons, under privileged warders, removed beyond the reach of evidence, at the suggestion and by the contrivance of those whom private malice or interest may lead to the commission of a fearful but unpunishable crime.

Cherbourg; And its Meaning.

If there were a real alliance between the English and the French people; if those great nations lored each other so cordially that neither knaves, nor fools, nor interest, nor ambition, nor any considerations of policy could put disunion betwixt them; it would most unquestionably be a grand thing for Europe and for the world. But is there such an alliance? And do the English and French people really love each other?

It seems not. There was a time, at the first outbreak of the war against Russia, when such an alliance was possible; but, as the war proceeded, it became but too evident that it was better for England to fight alone than to fight with such an ally.—Alone the British forces might have taken Sebastopol within three months. Encumbered with the aid of France, and distracted by the counsels of an Imperial friend, who presumed to conduct the seige by telegrams from the Tuileries, it occupied two years to gain the Malakoff. At the end of that time our Imperial friend, having served his own purposes—filched all the "glory" that was fairly derivable from the feat—and being unable to raise another soldier or another thousand francs for the prosecution of the war, left his good friend England in the lurch, and proved to the dullest English man that the alliance, as far as France was concerned, was a hollow sham, and that this country had spent its treasure and shed the blood of its sons in vain. The war might have put Europe right, but owing to the conduct of France, it did nothing but put it more hopelessly wrong. Chivalrous and generous England, desired, in all honesty and simplicity, to be the friend and ally of France; but France by the instinct, the traditions, the prejudices, and the passions of her people, as well as by the overt acts and covert policy of the Emperor of her choice—repelled the proferred friendship, even when seeming to accept it; rejoiced at the humiliation of her copartner; shrunk from the sacrifices necessary to ensure the object for which she professed to strive;—and, having said to Europe and to mankind "I took the Malakoff, and England did nothing," retired amid a blaze of self-glorification. There has been no real alliance since that time; and, blink it and disguise it as we may, there will and can be no real alliance until the whole circumstances of Europe are changed; until France ceases to be jealous of England, or to dwell on the embittered remembrances of Waterloo; and until the rulers of France, whether they be Emperors, Kings, Presidents or Dictators, learn the true place of their country in the European system, and the duties they owe to the people whom they govern.

The approaching visit of Queen Victoria to the fortress and arsenal of Cherbourg will not remove the growing mistrust of the two nations. Why should the Queen of Great Britain visit such a place? We all know what Cherbourg is, and what it means. We all know for what purpose it was planned; for what purposes, through six generations, and amid the fortunes and misfortunes of three dynasties and five Republics it has been brought to completion. The purpose was avowed by Louis XIV. as well as Napoleon I. Though Napoleon III. is not a man to avow anything, his nonavowal signifies nothing. He has a proverbial talent for silence, and when he holds his tongue it causes men to think. It is of no use to say that Cherbourg is not intended as a means of offence against England. If it be not, it is the most costly and stupid folly ever perpetrated by man or nation.—As a great military power, one of the greatest in the world, France is fully able to cope with any enemies that may be raised against her from the land-ward side, or from her Mediterranean and Biscayan sea-frontier. As a naval power she can drive no enemy but England; and if it be not as a menace to, and a means of aggression against England, Cherbourg is as utterly useless and purposeless as a castle in the air or a fortress in Cloudland. We do not suppose the French to entertain the wicked as well as absurd notion of invading England without ground of quarrel. Neither do we believe that any grounds of quarrel now exist; but what we do suppose and what we know is, that the French entertain the opinion that the natural antagonism of the two nations is such that subject of quarrel must arise, and ought to arise; and that under such circumstances, it is the duty of France to be prepared to strike a great blow decisive at once and for ever, and by the crowning humiliation of that Waterloo which France can neither forgive nor forget. In fact, the French do not believe in the permanent peace or alliance of the two nations. The memory of Waterloo and other gory phantoms stand in the way. This state of feeling is highly explosive;—and though we at home in England may be perfectly quiet, and as peaceably disposed as all sensible people ought to be, we have no security against our neighbour's gunpowder, or our neighbour's antics with lighted torches.

Why, again let us ask, should the Queen of England visit such a place? Is it from motives of policy or of politeness; or is it due to the impulse of mere curiosity? The policy is not easy to understand. The politeness under the circumstances, is a farce and a make-believe that deceives neither the recipient nor the renderer. The curiosity is more inteligible. Queen Victoria, who likes to see everything that is to be seen—from General Tom Thumb to the newest revival at the Princess' Theatre—who enjoys herself by mingling in all the innocent gaities of her people, who shows her good humoured countenance everywhere and who takes a personal interest in all the doings of her contemporaries, may have a feminine and very natural curiosity to see this formidable Cherbourg of which she has heard so much. Her people will not stand in the way of her gratification. By all means let her go. Let it be understood through the length and breadth of Europe, what her visit means, and let those who go with her—her Ministers and her Counsellors, her Generals and her Admirals, her Lords and Ladies of the Bedchamber—use their eyes, so that they may be severally able to inform the whole people when they return, of the strength and efficacy of the weapon which our polite acquaintance keeps at his side in readiness for the hour when with or without warning he may be converted into our opponent. By all means let Queen Victoria go. The grim Emperor may mean to be practically facetious by showing her the strength at his command. It is possible, too, that his silent Majesty may find a tongue on the occasion, to convey that he in reality has reason to dread, among the possibilities or probabilities of his position, an invasion of France on the part of England, quite as much as England has reason to dread a similar invasion on his part. But Queen Victoria, we should think will be able to match him either in facetiousness or in argument. Grim she cannot be, for Nature and all feminine graces have rendered that impossible, but to a stern irony of the Emperor she may, with playful laughter, show him the "Fleet of Honour" that accompanies her, and oppose the invitation that he shall in a month or two hence, inspect a Channel Fleet of sufficient force to render Cherbourg useless, or to operate upon it with as deadly a certainty as that with which the combined forces of the two nations operated on the still greater arsenal and fort of Sebastopol.

All Europe is rotten; and France is its rottenest portion. Whether France is ever again to be sound is for time to determine; but England, strong in wealth, in resources in courage, in freedom, and in loyalty, is secure against all things but sudden assault. That such an assault should ruin France, and not England, is no reason why England should not save herself from the annoyance, and France from the humiliation, of making it. So let us thank Napoleon III. for showing our Queen his fortress; and let us return the courtesy by showing him our fleet—FULLY MANNED.—Illus. London News.

Massacre at Jeddah.

From the London Illustrated News.

Eight hundred, or even three hundred years ago, Christian hated Mussulmin with an intensity of hatred, aversion and scorn difficult to understand in our day. Their mutual ill-will was envenomed by fear; and intensified by theological as well as by political and military rancour. But with the decadence of the Turkish power in Europe the feeling in the minds of the Christian population has been gradually dying away, and little of it now remains but a mild form of contemptuous indifference. But not so with the Mussulman. Turk, Arab, and Persian, alike detest the Christian; and, even when they fawn to him in dread of his power, look upon him in their "heart of hearts" as an unclean dog, to rid the earth of whom would be doing God good service. Since the commencement of the great struggle in the Crimea—when the Sultan was thought by the ultra-orthodox believers of his own dominions, as well as by the rival dominion of Persia, to have degraded himself, his nation, and his faith, by accepting the alliance of Giaours—there has been more or less commotion in the Mussulman mind throughout all Asia, Europe and Africa. The War with Persia, and the Rebellion and Mutiny in India, if not caused, were exasperated, and perhaps expedited, by this animosity of old date. Christianity teaches that we should love our enemies; and Christian nations, acting upon the precept, may get so far in obedience to it as to cease hitting the Mahometans, though it is exceedingly doubtful whether many Christians, out of the cloister, ever get so far as love to them, except in a very faint, shadowy, and abstract manner. But the creed of Mahomet teaches no love. It enjoins, as a positive duty, to hate and to exterminate the unbeliever; and Asiatics, who have as much sincerity for hating as Falstaff had for sinking, need no prompting from the Koran to show their detestation of Christians; to cherish it when it is unsafe to avow it; and to feel malignancy and vindictiveness burn when they cringe and flatter. The cowardly massacre of Christians at Jeddah, with the details of which Europe has been shocked during the week, is but another proof of the cruel inveteracy of the vulgar Mahometan mind, and of the antagonism of the races and religions of which they are the representatives. Jeddah is the port of the holy city of Mecca. At Mecca itself no Christians are tolerated, and no one can obtain admittance except in disguise, and at the hazard of his life; but at Jeddah a few Christians, including the British and French Consuls, have been allowed to establish themselves. From a misunderstanding, which appears to have first arisen from the hauling down of the Ottoman flag from a British vessel that had no right to hoist it, and the substitution of the British flag, the Arab population, previously excited by the appearance in the harbour of the British war-steamer, the Cyclops, lately sent to the Red Sea for the purpose of taking soundings, suddenly, and without warning, surrounded the houses of the unsuspecting Christians. Avoiding the use of firearms, lest the Commander of the Cyclops should have suspicion of treachery, and arming themselves with knives and clubs only, the mob of Jeddah murdered every Christian on whom they could lay hands, including Mr. Page, the acting English Consul; Mr. Eveillard, the French Consul, and his wife; and eighteen other unfortunate and unoffending persons. Twenty-four others took refuge in the house of Captain Pullen, the Commander of the Cyclops; and these were only allowed to escape with their lives upon the condition extorted from Captain Pullen, by Namik Pasha, that he would not bring the artillery of the Cyclops to bear upon the town. Such is a short summary of this bloody business, full details of which are reported in letters from Alexandria of the 6th and 7th instant.

How should the British Government act in this case? Such an atrocity is not possible in Europe, or, if possible by an outbreak of popular frenzy, would be dealt with on European principles. But in Asia, if we are to prevent such atrocities in future, we must deal with the offenders in the Asiatic manner. We must not temper Justice with Mercy, but we must temper Mercy with Justice, and strike such a blow as shall make all Asia ring with the terrible recital of our avenging power. It were to be wished that no circumstances had prevented the gratification of the fierce desire that arose in the breast of every man on board of the Cyclops as soon as he was made acquainted with the dastardly villany of which the people of Jeddah had been guilty, and that Captain Pullen had laid the offending city in ashes, and left not one stone standing upon another within its whole circuit. But he is not to be blamed for the restraint which he put upon himself, for he thereby saved the lives of twenty-four innocent Europeans, and only postponed a chastisement which the delay must make more signal and condign. To go through diplomatic forms on an occasion like this, or to trust to the authority of the Sultan or of the local authorities to deal with the assassins, is but to lose character through the whole East—to invite insult, outrage, and murder, and to lay up a store of misery for future use. If the punishment of Jeddah and its vile people be not sufficient, the holy city itself must be made to receive an adequate number of armed and invincible "Giaours." A humiliation like this would teach all Islam a lesson that at the present moment it seems most urgently to need—that both the Might and the Right are with Christendom, and that, Christians as we are, we cannot treat the perpetrators and abettors of such atrocious villanies as honourable enemies, but as outlaws and murderers, or wild beasts. So foul a crime requires a merciless retribution; and, if the Government of Great Britain do not immediately exact and inflict it, we may as well give up the navigation of the Red Sea and the use of the Overland Route to India, and confine ourselves to Europe and America.

The following letter from Alexandria, dated the 6th, gives some details of this horrible affair:—

About sunset on the 15th of June the house of the English Vice-Consul at Jeddah was suddenly attacked, and invaded by some hundreds of Hadramites (inhabitants of Southern Arabia), who seized the person of the Consul, wounded him grievously, and then flung him, still alive, from the window into the street, where a mob of the same fanatics hacked his body into pieces. The house was then pillaged; the servants and two dragomen were assassinated, and the archives of the Consulate were burnt. While this horrible scene was going on similar crimes were committed at the French Consulate. This Consul, also attacked by a band of fanatics who penetrated into the house by the windows, fell mortally wounded by several sabre cuts. His wife was killed by a dagger thrust into her breast, after having defended herself courageously, killed the murderer of her husband, and wounded several others. Her daughter, eighteen years old, succeeded in escaping by a secret door. In the next room were the Chancellor of the Consulate and his servant. This latter is a Mussulman, an old soldier who formerly served in a battalion of native Algerines. These two men and the Consul's young daughter defended themselves so heroically that the murderers retreated for a moment. They soon returned to the charge. One of these wretches attacked the courageous young girl, and gave her a sabre cut across the face. She fell senseless; but the Chancellor, who had sprung to his feet, inflicted a blow on the last assassin. Meanwhile the Chancellor's servant, struggling with admirable energy against these miscreants, killed three of them, wounded several others, and so succeeded in covering the flight of Consul's daughter, of the Chancellor, and of a servant, who arrived this evening, in company with the brave soldier, at the residence of the Consul-General of France in Alexandria. While this carnage was going on all the Christians were insulted in the streets of Jeddah, and massacred. Twenty-three persons succeeded in escaping under cover of the night, and, throwing themselves into the sea, swam to the English steam dispatch-boat, which was at anchor in the port. All the other Christians, to the number of forty-five, have been killed and hacked in pieces. In the house of the brother Save, twelve persons (including the three brothers) have been murdered. The number of Mussulmans who took part in the massacre is estimated at 5,000.

At the time of these occurrences the Governor of Jeddah was at Mecca, with the troops under his command. He left only 100 men in the garrison. At his return he caused 300 of the mutineers to be arrested, and he sent to the Christians, who had taken refuge on board the Cyclops a sum of 6,000 piastres. The commander of this vessel has appointed Consuls ad interim, and proclaimed their installation by a salute of guns. The English flag was again hoisted, and the Turkish authorities attended the ceremony.

Various reasons have been assigned for this fierce fanatical outbreak. The general opinion is that the event has been in preparation for a long time. The Arab population believes, in its ignorance, that since the Eastern war the influence of the Sultan is becoming greater than before. The populace sing ballads in Arabic and Turkish, which breathe hatred of the Christians.

Provincial Parliament.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY.

WEDNESDAY, July 28.

THE SEAT OF GOVERNMENT.

The SPEAKER called upon Mr. Dorion to move the resolution of which he had given notice (but which did not appear on the notice paper) on the Seat of Government.

Mr. DORION intimated his belief that the resolution would be moved by the hon. member for Portneuf (Mr. Thibaudeau).

Mr. THIBAUDEAU then moved and proposed the following resolution;—"That an humble Address be presented to Her Gracious Majesty the Queen, to represent that this House is duly grateful to Her Majesty for complying with the Address of Her Canadian Parliament, praying Her Majesty to select a permanent Seat of Government; but that this House deeply regrets that the City which Her Majesty has been advised to select, is not acceptable to a large majority of the Canadian people."

Mr. SCOTT (Ottawa) submitted that this motion was not in order. It was the same resolution moved as an amendment on Friday week on the motion for going into Committee of Supply, and having been brought forward once could not be again introduced.

The SPEAKER said the motion was identical with that which had already been rejected by the House, and could not be put in its present shape. He therefore ruled the motion out of order.

Mr. DUFRESNE asked why the hon. member for Montreal had not brought up his second resolution, praying the Queen to name Montreal as the future capital of Canada?

Mr. DORION said that as the first motion had been declared out of order, and as Ottawa had been fixed upon as the Seat of Government, he did not intend to move in favor of Montreal.

Mr. BROWN—What, now may those gentlemen who declared they had the assurance of the Government that this question could be brought up again? (Hear, hear.)

Hon. Mr. SICOTTE said it would almost appear that there had been a combination between the member for Portneuf (Mr. Thibaudeau) and the senior member for Montreal, that this motion should be brought up in such a shape as to compel the Speaker to rule it out of order.

Mr. MORIN remarked that it appeared far more likely there had been a combination for this purpose amongst the members on the Ministerial benches.

Hon. Mr. SICOTTE said the hon. member for Terrebone, too, had lately made a political alliance with the senior member for Montreal, and called upon him to avow it.

Mr. MORIN—So I do. (Hear, hear.) And so does the hon. member for Portneuf.

Hon. Mr. SICOTTE went on to say that the Government conceived it their duty to carry out the arrangement come to last Parliament.

Mr. FOLEY said this ought to have been stated the other night. On that occasion, the Attorney General for Lower Canada gave the House an assurance that the subject could come up again in a proper shape.

Hon. Mr. SICOTTE said the Attorney General for Lower Canada was right in what he declared the other night—that it was the duty of the Government to afford the House every opportunity of examining the subject. It was surprising that a question such as this should, for local considerations, induce some members of the House to withdraw their support from the Government, and be considered a strange that the hon. member for Terrebone should have accused the Government with connivance to prevent discussion. Why did not the hon. member for Terrebone himself move in the matter, and bring before the House a proper resolution? The hon. member for Portneuf might have so altered the motion as to have prevented its being ruled out; in proof of which he quoted from the rules of the House of Commons:—"After a notice of motion has been given, the terms thereof may be altered by the member when he moves it."

Mr. THIBAUDEAU said the Speaker had declared the substance of the motion to be the same as that already rejected, and he did not see how he could have altered it, so as to have made it in order and preserved the sense.

Hon. Mr. SICOTTE said it was not within his province to inform the hon. member how the motion could have been framed so as to have been in order. The reprobation cast upon the Government of having attempted to prevent discussion, had been unjust; and did they not carry out the decision of the Imperial authorities, they would deserve the condemnation of the House.

Mr. DORION denied, in the most positive terms, having continued with the hon. member for Portneuf to bring up, in a certain manner, the motion which had been made.

When the motion was last before the House, it was voted against by several members, because an assurance had been given them by members of the Administration, that the question could come up again. (Hear, hear.) Next day, the Clerk of Routine Records informed him that his motion had been struck off the notice-paper, because he considered that the vote taken on the question on the motion for going into Committee of Supply had disposed of it. The motion having been restored, he (Mr. Dorion) was taunted the fact of Ministerial members—not one, but three—who had charged him with taking off the motion, as that the question might not come up again. He then determined to aid, by every means in his power, in again bringing up the question; and he stated the other day, when a meeting of members on the Seat of Government took place, that though he would not himself again bring it up, because it had been already rejected, he would assist any other member in introducing it. And when the House met to-day, he called the Speaker's attention to the omission of the notice from the paper. He would, therefore, leave the House to judge whether the Ministry were not more open to the charge of having broken faith with the House in saying that the motion could come up again, than he was to the charge of having abandoned the motion. (Hear, hear.)

Atty. Gen. CARTIER asked whether the matter was not arranged between the member for Montreal and the member for Portneuf, at the caucus?

Mr. DORION—The hon. member for Portneuf came to me about half an hour before the recess to-night, and asked me to take the matter up. I told him I would not take it up, and on his expressing a wish to do so, I told him where he might find the motion.

Atty. Gen. CARTIER would not any longer consent to be tricked by the hon. member. When the question was brought up last week, he had declared his willingness to have a perfect and full examination on the subject. The Government was quite ready to have had the subject discussed, and they had reason to believe the member for Montreal was sincere, but how had he acted? He said that out of deference to the House he would not propose a motion which had once been rejected, yet he would allow another person to do so, though he did not wish it. The hon. member had acted in such a way as to throw the blame of his want of candour on the Government. Why did not the member for Iberville (Mr. Laberge) bring up his own motion? The Government had thrown no obstacles in the way of the discussion.

Mr. GOWAN—I rise to a point of order. Is there any motion before the Chair?

The SPEAKER—There is no motion before the chair?

Mr. GOWAN—Then I call upon you Mr. Speaker to maintain the rules of the House. (Oh! oh!)

The SPEAKER—(to Mr. Thibaudeau, who had taken the floor)—The hon. gentleman will proceed. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. THIBAUDEAU denied that there had been any combination or plot between Mr. Dorion and himself. From the present appearance of matter, it seemed far more probable that there had been a plot on the part of the hon. gentlemen on the Ministerial benches. (Hear, hear.) Mr. Thibaudeau then proceeded to state that nothing was said at the caucus about his taking up the motion, and that the member for Montreal had correctly explained that the proposition for him (Mr. Thibaudeau) to introduce the motion made by himself.

Hon. Mr. HARWOOD—I beg to move, "That it be resolved that this House humbly prays Her Majesty to reconsider the decision she has been advised to make, and to name Quebec as the future capital of Canada." (Hear, hear.)

Mr. BROWN rose to a question of order. Was it competent for a member, half an hour after a motion had been ruled out of order, to propose another motion on the same subject, but of a totally different character?

Atty. Gen. MACDONALD said he understood the member for Montreal had left his resolutions to be brought forward by any other member of the House who chose to take charge of them. The second resolution had not been brought before the House this session, and the member for Vaudreuil (Mr. Harwood) had taken up this resolution, and simply substituted the word "Quebec" for the word "Montreal."

The SPEAKER ruled that the motion, inasmuch as it had not been taken up in the form in which Mr. Dorion had placed it upon the notice paper, was out of order.—(Hear, hear.)

Mr. DUNKIN then moved the same resolution, with the exception of naming Montreal, instead of Quebec, as the permanent Seat of Government, and went on to speak of the indecency of seeking to upset the Queen's decision, saying the result would be to continue the alternate system, which he abominated above everything else.

Mr. BROWN raised the point of order, whether the hon. gentleman should be allowed to speak against his own motion.

Mr. DUNKIN wished to be heard to the end. He considered Montreal the best place; and, if that failed, he was prepared to abide by the Queen's decision. Mr. D. proceeded to review the history of the Seat of Government question, and Mr. Dorion's motion in reference thereto during this session, declaring his impression that Mr. Dorion's course was intended to give currency to the idea that the proceedure of the Government was a tricky one. The motion he had now moved was substantially that, of which Mr. Dorion had originally given notice, which was much better than that moved in amendment to the Supplies. If they simply told Her Majesty that her decision was a bad one, it was an insult.—But if they asked her to reconsider her decision, and named another place, it was in effect throwing her that the circumstances under which they originally asked her to decide no longer existed, and that the Provincial Parliament had at length agreed among themselves, which they were unable to do before. Mr. Dunkin continued to speak at some length in favour of the superior claims of Montreal over Ottawa to be the Seat of Government.

Mr. R. SCOTT raised the point of order, that this motion had already been virtually decided.

The SPEAKER decided that it was in order.

Mr. BROWN and Hon. Mr. CAUCHON rose almost simultaneously, but it was decided that Mr. Brown was first. He said it appeared that the House was once more launched on the Mare Magnum of the Seat of Government question. Where it was to end no one could tell. But he thought there could be no doubt of this, that if a vote could have been taken deliberately without regard to party feelings, an immense majority would have declared in favor of the motion of the hon. member for Montreal the other night that Ottawa was one of the best places in Canada, which should be selected as the Seat of Government. (Hear, hear.) And he believed that as regarded the vast majority of the people of this country, the decided feeling prevailed that one of the most unhappy selections had been made which could have been made in the circumstances. His own opinion remained the same as before, that in the present state of the Colony, it was utterly absurd to fix upon a permanent Seat of Government, until the great questions now in dispute, affecting the relations of the two sections of the Province, were settled. Whatever view hon. gentlemen might take of the questions of Representation by Population, a Federal Union, or a repeal of the Union, no hon. gentleman in favor of any one of these remedies for our existing evils, could feel that the time had arrived for fixing a permanent Seat of Government. And, especially in the present state of the finances, with an expenditure far above our revenue, every one must feel that it would be exceedingly imprudent to spend an enormous sum of money on permanent buildings, when we had such buildings already in several places, where the Government could be comfortably carried on in the meantime. It was evident that the city of Ottawa was most unsuitable to be the permanent Seat of Government for the whole Province.—The Seat of Government ought to be on the regular course of travel, on the highway of traffic through the Province, at a place where members would have an opportunity of meeting with their constituents, and especially where the eye of the people would be on the Legislature. Ottawa was the last place that would be selected with a view to these considerations. If there they would have to legislate under local influences almost entirely, and not under those which should surround the Legislature of a great country like this.—The Government had to-night for the first time distinctly announced their intentions.

Hon. Mr. SICOTTE—I used the same words the other night as I did this evening.

Mr. BROWN said the hon. gentleman had failed to convey the same impression to the House. Did not the member for Lambton small him (Mr. Brown) for assuring the House that that would be the last opportunity that would be given of deliberately discussing the question, and the Government did not contradict him. Had the Commissioner of Crown Lands spoken out as clearly then as he did to-night, he was satisfied that the non-confidence in the policy of the Government would have been declared by a considerable majority. (Hear, hear.) Under all the circumstances he thought the House must be convinced that we were not now in a position to carry out the decision of Mr. Lebouchere or some one behind Mr. Lebouchere, in favor of a place which had always got the smallest vote in this House of any that had been named. He believed we were now approaching a settlement of the difficulties which divided us in the Legislature and out of it. Every one who had observed the course of events this session especially, must be satisfied that the settlement of those questions could not be much longer delayed, and he thought the best course that could now be adopted, was to stop all action as to the Seat of Government for the present. Unless this were done, the Government would go on spending money at Ottawa, and when the House assembled next session they would find it was too late to stop it. He, therefore, moved in amendment, that all the words after "that" in the original motion be struck out, and the following substituted—"an humble Address be presented to the Governor General praying his Excellency that no action may be taken towards the erection of buildings in the City of Ottawa for the permanent accommodation of the Government and the Legislature, or for the removal of the public departments to that City." (Hear, hear.)

Mr. PIERCE moved in amendment to the amendment the substitution of the following—"That in the opinion of this House the City of Ottawa ought not to be the permanent Seat of the Government of the Province."

Mr. GOWAN thought that Ottawa possessed greater elements of prosperity than other cities mentioned. It possessed great water power, far greater than either Montreal or Toronto, and it would be the largest manufacturing city in British North America. The member for Toronto ridiculed the military aspect of the question. He (Mr. Gowan) recollected the outcry the member for Toronto raised on the militia question, but surely if the House had decided that a militia was necessary to the country, that the position of the capital in a military point of view ought to be regarded. Much had been said of one race over-riding the other; but if the Seat of Government was fixed at Ottawa, neither priest nor parson, neither Frenchman nor Englishman, would have any advantage over each other. He contended that we were bound in honour to abide by the decision of the Queen. Had that decision been in favor of Quebec, Toronto or Montreal, the members from those places who condemned it, would have stood by. He went for Ottawa, and would vote against the amendment of the hon. member for Berthier.

Hon. Mr. SICOTTE read from the Globe to show that he had declared on a former occasion that the Government would carry out the Queen's decision.

Col. PLAYFAIR spoke in favor of abiding by the Queen's decision, both on account of the commercial and military position of Ottaw stood to become a great city. It had been built up by the lumber trade and that alone. Time, it might be said that land had been cleared and wheat was now grown; but no one ever believed for one moment that vessels would ever go up to Ottawa to ship grain; all must see that Montreal was the highest point that could be reached. The naming of a place as a Seat of Government and the moving of the Legislature there, would not create a population or open out the country. It had not done so at Washington, neither would it do so in Ottawa. His opinion was that the capital ought to be placed in the centre of intelligence and commerce.

Hon. Mr. Merritt said if members of the Legislature did not understand the opinions of their constituents before they come to the Seat of Government, they stood little chance of learning them afterwards. Therefore he did not pay much attention to the argument which said that the capital ought to be placed in large cities. He was in favour at present of the perambulating system, the Government came down to the House and stated calmly and fully the difficulties surrounding the question, asked Parliament to submit the matter to the Queen, and appropriate a certain sum of money for the erection of buildings in such a place as Her Majesty might fix upon. They passed a law, and the decision of the Queen upon the subject submitted to Her Majesty having been made known, it was the duty of the Government to carry out the law and make Ottawa the Seat of Government, as soon as the proper accommodations were provided there for receiving the Government. The amendment of the member for Berthier (Mr. Piche) would serve no good purpose; and if it was carried to, it would be a decided vote against the proposition for making Montreal the Seat of Government. In the rudest and most disrespectful way it declared the Queen had made a mistake. He should vote against both amendments, as well as the original motion, because he was in favour of upholding the decision of the Queen.

Mr. Thibaudeau said that last year, the Provincial Secretary had taken in hand the interests of the City of Montreal; but this year they were attended to by the member for Drummond and Arthabaska. He had not put a notice upon the paper, but had had one lying in his desk all the session, so worded that it would please everybody.—He (Mr. Dorion) gave notice of his resolutions in the way most beneficial for the city of Montreal. He had never been blind enough to suppose that if he came here and proposed Montreal instead of Ottawa, he would be able to get a vote in its favour. Why did he not move in favour of Montreal to-night? Because he knew well that the Speaker's decision would be as it was—that he would declare the matter had already been decided. The only way to get a vote in favour of Montreal was to set aside Ottawa first, and when that was done, then Montreal came fairly in competition with other cities. He was well aware that if the two motions in amendment were lost, the city of Montreal was lost also. He was, therefore, willing to adopt the member for Berthier's amendment, and would take the responsibility of so doing. He was not afraid, and he hoped other members from the district of Montreal alone would not be afraid by any idea that Montreal would be entirely set aside, merely because the House might affirm that Ottawa was not to be the Seat of Government. He assured those who had the interests of Montreal at heart that they might vote for the member for Berthier's motion, and at the same time feel perfectly assured that the name of Montreal might come in as well as any name hereafter. At all events for the adverse vote which is now to be recorded, he was not to be held accountable; that responsibility would rest upon the member for Drummond and Arthabaska, as it did last year upon the Provincial Secretary.

Hon. Mr. Cartier made a few remarks.

Hon. Mr. Drummond hoped the decision of the Queen would be sustained. He was well pleased with the speech of the Attorney General, but could wish that the Government had stated their determination to carry out at all risks the selection which had been made. [Several Voices—They have done so.]

Mr. Dunkin attempted again to speak, but was met with loud cries of "spoke," "spoke," from all sides, and gave way.

The division was then taken on Mr. Piche's amendment. Yeas, 64. Nays, 50.

Mr. W. F. Powell, (Ottawa) then moved—"That in the opinion of this House the city of Quebec ought not to be the permanent Seat of Government of this Province."

Mr Brown said he thought the House could not entertain any doubt as to the character of the vote first given—that it was an express disapproval of the whole policy of the Government on this question. The Attorney General had told us that even if this vote were carried, it would have no practical effect. It had been carried. 64 to 50 had declared that the policy of the hon. gentleman opposite should not be carried out; and it was for the members of the House to say whether they would allow their vote to be rendered a nullity. In order to test the sense of the House, he begged to move, seconded by Mr. Dorion, that the House now adjourn.

Atty. Gen. Macdonald said the hon. member for Toronto in order to get an expression of the opinion of the House, had moved that it do now adjourn. He (Mr. Macdonald) would accept the challenge.—If the majority of the House were in favour of an adjournment, the Ministry would consider that the Government had not been taken out of their hands.

Hon. Mr. Cauchon said that if the member who had voted in favour of Mr. Piche's amendment were serious in their desires, they would carry the motion for adjournment. If the House negatived the motion it would stultify itself.

Hon. Mr. Drummond thought that the hon. member for Toronto had not done well in making the motion for adjournment as there were some gentlemen who from the position of the question, would not be able to vote want of confidence at the present moment, when they might do so at another time. He himself believed that the Government was without any fixed policy, but at the same time he could not vote against them for carrying out that policy of which he himself approved. He was bound to vote against the motion for adjournment, but he wished it to be perfectly understood that his vote was not to be considered a vote of confidence. He believed that if they had brought all their influence to bear on the point, that the amendment of Mr. Piche would not have carried. He was afraid that there was not a cordial desire among them to carry out the Queen's decision. When he called upon the Government to carry out this decision, he did not look upon it that a vote of this kind was to do away with the law. (Oh! oh!) He thought the plain duty of the Government at the present moment was to obtain a decided expression of opinion against this motion, and in favour of the law from the Upper House.

Mr. Dorion said he thought that the member for Sherbrooke had just given the reason which ought to induce him to vote for the adjournment. He declared that the Government had sacrificed the interests of his city, in not using their influence, as they might, in favour of the Queen's decision. The fact was that the Administration wanted to shirk the responsibility which they had already taken upon the major question, and to throw it upon the motion of adjournment.

Hon. Mr. Sicotte said that when the member for Toronto moved the adjournment, he declared that he did so to test whether the Government were possessed of the confidence of the House or not. The hon. member for Sherbrooke had said that the Government had not used all their influence in favour of the Queen's decision. Had not the Government stated that they would carry out the law which fixed the Seat of Government at Ottawa, and he (Mr. Sicotte) while a member of the Government, would never give his consent to any undue influence being used to support that Government. The Attorney General West had declared himself that he would have preferred another place than Ottawa, and probably other members of the Government would also have preferred other places. There was a division upon the question among the Opposition themselves. But that was not the question. The question which was put by the hon. member for Toronto was mainly that the vote given by the House was a vote of want of confidence on the policy of the Ministry with regard to the Seat of Government; and the Government would not have done its duty had they not accepted the challenge the moment it was given.

Hon. J. S. Macdonald said that a more direct condemnation of any Government had not been manifested for years in the House. (Hear, hear.) Here was a policy enunciated by an administration of which the Attorney General was a prominent member; five months of this session had passed by, and only vague indications of the course the Government would pursue, had been given but the moment it had been announced that a vote of want of confidence had [illegible] The question was this, "Was the policy of the Government such as to command the confidence of the House." Then could the decision be taken in any other light than as a vote of want of confidence. Any Government after the vote was taken which had a true sense of its position would instantly have moved the adjournment of the House. (Loud cries of hear, hear.)

Mr. Powell (Ottawa) was satisfied with the conduct of the Government on this question; but the conduct of the Opposition would show Ottawa people what they had to expect from them.

Mr. Ross was bound to say that a motion of adjournment did not amount to a question of confidence; and he should vote for the adjournment. (Hear, hear.) If the Government could not sufficiently command the House as to carry out the decision of the Queen, it was for them to consider whether they ought not to retire. (Hear, hear.)

After some remarks from Mr. Roblin and Mr. Cimon,

The vote was taken on the motion for adjournment which was negatived by 61 to 50.

Mr. Cimon moved that the debate be adjourned.

The motion was negatived by a vote of 67 to 36.

Mr. Turcotte moved the adjournment of the House.

Hon. Mr. Cauchon asked if the question could be brought up again to-morrow or any other day. (No, no.) Many members had given their votes to prevent the Government being taken to Ottawa, but not with the intention of leaving the question where it at present stood.

Atty. Gen. Macdonald said that the sense of the House having been taken upon the motion proposed against the Ministry, it was now a matter of no moment to them whether the House adjourned or not.

Mr. Brown said that, if the Attorney General was satisfied with the response just given by the House, he was very easily satisfied. Those who had hitherto been his friends had risen and declared they had no confidence in his Administration, and the very men who had supported the Ministry up to the very last minute, had been loudest in their condemnation. Was the hon gentleman really satisfied with his position? Were his Lower Canada colleagues satisfied as their supporters day after day deserted them, and condemning the course the Government had taken upon almost every question that came before the House?—Were they satisfied with the condemnation of their policy with regard to the Seat of Government? They had told the House that an appeal had been made to the Queen—they had dwelt upon the sacredness of her Majesty's decision—and yet they had not the courage to say whether they would stand or fall by that decision. If, after the events of that night, the Attorney General was satisfied, he had a very low estimate, indeed, of the position which the leader of the Government should occupy. (Cheers.)

Atty. Gen. Macdonald was quite as capable of judging what course it was fitting the Ministry should pursue, as the hon. member for Toronto. He was ready to stand or fall by any policy the Government had assumed. But, as he had already stated, the Government had no policy upon the Seat of Government question. Parliament resolved to submit the matter to the Queen, and by her Majesty's decision, the Government must abide. Therefore the hon. member for Toronto had wasted his breath to no good purpose. This was no seeking of the Administration, which had just been sustained on a motion of want of confidence, although it was brought on by the Opposition when they knew that many of the Ministerial members were absent. (Ironical cries of "Hear, hear!")

Dr. Connor asked the Ministry whether, in the face of this vote, they intended to go to Ottawa.

Atty. Gen. Macdonald—You have just voted want of confidence in the Government, and, therefore, you have no right to ask the question. (Oh! oh!)

Dr. Connor—The Attorney General had not long since told them that the vote went for nothing. But was it respectful to the House that, when a member rose and asked if it was the intention of the Government to carry out the decision of the Queen, the Attorney General should give the curt reply, "You have voted want of confidence, and therefore, you have no right to ask the question?" (Cheers.) The country would know how to estimate such discourteous conduct. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Daly spoke in favour of Ottawa being the Seat of Government.

Hon. Mr. Drummond said it was impossible to conclude the discussion on this question to-night. The House evidently would not be satisfied that the session should close before this matter was settled; and he blamed the Government for not having before now carried out the Queen's decision.

The motion for adjournment was carried by a vote of 95 to 5, and

The House adjourned at two o'clock.

Thursday, July 29.

RESIGNATION OF THE GOVERNMENT.

The Speaker took the chair at twenty minutes after ten o'clock.

Atty. Gen. Macdonald then rose and said,—The Government have taken into consideration the adverse vote of the House last night, and have felt it to be their duty to offer their resignations to the Governor General. Those resignations have been accepted, and we now only hold office till our successors have been appointed. This course must have been anticipated as the result of the action of the House last night, in adopting the motion of the hon. member for Berthier. The Legislature had by an Act of Parliament made an appropriation for the erection of public buildings at whatever place might be selected by her Majesty, and it was to all intents and purposes the law of the land. We felt as a Government we could only take the course which any Government placed in like circumstances would have been bound to do—that the law of the land being so, the Government must carry it out. The House, on the motion of the member for Berthier, resolved last night that the law of the land should not be carried out. It was simply a resolution of the House that the exercise of her prerogative by her Majesty, made at the request of the Legislature, was a mistake, and that she had chosen the wrong place. It did not even ask her to re-consider her choice, and did not assign any reason why her decision should not be carried out, but simply stated—in a manner which I characterized last night as an act of discourtesy and rudeness to her Majesty—that we having asked her to select a place, and she having done so at our request, she has made a mistake. We had to consider then what our future course must be in consequence of that resolution of the House. We considered that the law of the land declared that Ottawa was the place, and that we were bound to carry it out. The House declared we should not carry it out, and we stood in this position, that we must either commit a breach of what we considered the law of the land, or act in opposition to the will of a majority of this House, a majority of 14. We came to the conclusion that the confidence of our position was so much deteriorated by that vote, that we could not, with respect to ourselves or advantage to the country, continue to hold our offices, a considerable number of those who have usually supported the Government having taken that strong view, and joined in the vote that her Majesty has made a wrong selection. Those are the grounds on which we have resigned. I may add that subsequent to that vote, there was another by which the action of the member for Toronto, who leads the Opposition, was made a test question. Upon that the Government had a majority, but we could not conceal from ourselves that several gentlemen who had formerly accorded their support to the Government, had now withdrawn, and therefore in all the circumstances, we thought right and due to ourselves, and due to this House, to offer our resignations. The Attorney General East reminds me that as the motion of the member for Berthier merely stated that Her Majesty had made a wrong selection, and did not recommend any other place, it had the effect of preventing the selection of any place whatever. With these explanations, I move that the House do now adjourn.

Hon. J. S. Macdonald—This is not the time to make any remarks on the position of the Government. Last night I viewed the vote in the same light in which the Attorney General has characterized it to-day. The House distinctly manifested want of confidence in a very important step which the Government had taken, and to which they still remained pledged, and the Administration are now sensible that the position in which that vote places them required that they would tender their resignations to the Governor General with whom is vested the authority and prerogatives of calling to his Councils those who, he considers, possess the confidence of the country. I think the Administration have acted properly in submitting their resignation, when they found the voice of the country was against them on a very important branch of their policy, and the explanations of the Attorney General are clear and distinct. But I do not think he should have taunted his side of the House with offering an insult to the Queen. It is not offering the Queen an insult to stand by our rights, for the Queen can have no object in forcing a Seat of Government upon this country. She merely deferred to the wish of this Legislature that she should select a place, and the House has said that the place selected was not the most suitable.

Mr. Dorion—I do not desire to offer any remark except on one point. The Attorney General has characterized the vote of last night as an insult to her Majesty, the resolution implied no such thing. It is not an address to the Queen telling her she was mistaken, but a mere resolution that Ottawa should not be the place. It was no more an insult to the Queen than when some years ago it was declared that Kingston was not the right place—the Queen having as much selected Kingston then as Ottawa now. Nor was it any more an insult to the Queen than when it was declared that Montreal was not the place. No one then said it was an insult to her Majesty to declare that Montreal was not the right place to be the Seat of Government.

Atty. Gen. Macdonald—The hon. gentleman is taking an unusual course.—The Government give explanations and retire, and when their places are filled then will be the time for discussion.

Mr. Dorion—I had no desire to raise any discussion, but merely to prevent the impression going abroad, that the House acquiesced in the charge that its vote of last night was an insult to her Majesty.

The motion was then agreed to and the House adjourned till three o'clock to-morrow (Friday) afternoon.

MR. BROWN SENT FOR.

Mr. Brown, shortly after the rising of the House, was sent for by His Excellency, and charged with the formation of a new Administration.

China.

From the Correspondence of the London News.

Canton, May 21, 1858.

The attacks and rumours of attacks have all died away since my last: the Cantonese are as polite as could be wished, though they are still searched at the gates. From the north every piece of intelligence is a perfect Chinese puzzle. One report says that the forts at the entrance to the Peiho had been attacked, that fighting was going on, that the Provisional Battalion of Marines had been sent for, &c., &c. The next report has it that peace was certain; that the Emperor was most tractable; and at last that the fleet are not well within sight of land; and, besides, the view is considerably obstructed by clouds of fine sand when the wind blows from the north. The only certain news is that part of the 65th Bengal N. I. have arrived. Another item of intelligence is that it is decidedly warm, and it rains almost every day, and the consequence is that the streets near the river are flooded of an afternoon. However, Canton is very healthy: it is decidedly a much superior place to Hong-Kong; and the troops inside the city are in perfect health. For my own part, I like Canton more and more every day, now that it is more peaceful, and shall leave it with considerable regret.

It is a strange thing concerning the Chinese that those who are partial to them like them excessively; whilst, on the contrary, those who are not favourably inclined hate them cordially. You will never hear any medium. One person will tell you that all Chinamen are rogues, thieves, swindlers, and cheats; another, that the Chinese are the most industrious, frugal and good-tempered, and sensible race under the sun, with many other good qualities. The latter are nearer the mark, according to my humble opinion. The city looks beautiful. The river is covered with boats, junks, and steamers: their movement is perpetual. The trees, thickly interspersed throughout the city, give it a delightfully fresh look, the White Cloud Mountain as background, for ever changing its tints, some days looking so near that you see all the little rocks and stones upon it; at other times capped with majestic clouds, and again looking like a dim cloud in the distance.

Florence Nightingale.

But by-and-by the drawing-room doors are thrown open, and the sashes and curtains, smiling a kind and gracious welcome. Behind her are her daughters; by her side, a tall, fashionable, haughty beauty. I could not help thinking how beautiful she looked; but the next instant my eyes wandered from her cold, unsatisfactory face to a lady modestly standing on the other side of Lady Stratford. At first I thought she was a nun, from her black dress and close cap. She was not introduced, and yet Edmund and I looked at each other at the same moment to whisper, "It is Miss Nightingale!" Yes, it was Florence Nightingale, greatest of all now in name and honor among women. I assure you that I was glad not to be obliged to speak just then, for I felt quite dumb as I looked at her wasted figure and the short brown hair combed over her forehead like a child's, and so, when her life was despaired of from fever but a short time ago. Her dress, as I have said, was black, made high to the throat, its only ornament being a large enamelled brooch, which looked to me like the colors of a regiment surmounted with a wreath of laurels, no doubt some grateful offering from our men. To hide the close white cap a little, she had tied a white crape handkerchief over the back of it, only allowing the border of lace to be seen: and this gave the nun-like appearance which first struck me on entering the room, otherwise Miss Nightingale is by no means striking in appearance. Only her plain black dress, quiet manner, and great renown, told so powerfully altogether in that assembly of brilliant dress and uniforms.—She is very slight, rather above the middle height; her face is long and thin, but this may be from recent illness and great fatigue. She has a very prominent nose, slightly Roman; and small dark eyes, kind, but penetrating; but her face does not give you at all the idea of great talent.—Mrs. Hornby's In and Around Stamboul.

Indians in Canada.—The censuses of Indians in the Canadian Provinces, as far as could be ascertained by a special commission recently appointed on Indian affairs, was about 8,500 in the Eastern, and 11,500 in the Western, showing a total of nearly 20,000, exclusive of wandering tribes to the North, of whom no correct information could be procured. A majority of the tribes are steadily, though slowly, increasing in numbers, and in nearly all some approaches to civilization have been made.

The Fraser River Gold Mines.

(From the New York Times.)

We have received little information from the Fraser River mines during the fortnight. A large population is collecting at Victoria. There are conflicting rumors about the condition of the Whatcom trail. Some writers aver that the trail is open and in good condition; others affirm that it will never be passable. The San Francisco Herald says:—"The general tenor of the news goes far to divest Fraser River of the hyperbolism by which it had been surrounded from the commencement of the excitement. It will be recollected that at first the great mass of the news was secondary, tertiary, and still more remote and unreliable in its character. It was generally to the effect that somebody had heard from somebody else that John Brown or John Jones had been making one hundred and fifty or two hundred dollars a-day, but none had the hardihood to state that they had met with such success in their mining operations. The great mass of the evidence establishes beyond doubt the fact that gold exists in the sands of Fraser River in tolerably large quantities, but not to an extent sufficient to set a whole people crazy. In another column will be found a letter from a miner who has been at work on Hill's Bar for several weeks. He is known to us personally, and his statements may be relied upon. He is a gentleman who is not apt to be carried away by the excitement of the moment or to give the imaginative flights either of himself or anybody else for facts. He states that the average may be set down at about $12 per day, and it would appear from the general tenor of all the news hitherto received that that amount, or even an ounce per day, may be realized on some of the bars of Fraser River, but if, in consequence of freshets, and a long, dull, dreary Winter, the work of searching for the glittering dust cannot be prosecuted for three or four months in the year, it does not require a profound knowledge of arithmetic to determine whether, in the long run, the miner in California, who makes but four or five dollars per day, and can work for eleven months out of the twelve, will the sooner attain to competence or wealth.

We learn, says the Oregonian, from Mr. Lewis Dorr, just down from the mines, that Fraser River is falling rapidly, water being now four feet below high water mark. The miners are not doing much now, but it is confidently expected that a great number will be able to work within ten days or a couple of weeks. The claim of which Mr. Dorr is one of a company in possession, is located on a bar about one mile above Fort Yale, and it is thought it will yield handsomely as soon as the river falls.—Provisions cannot be had without paying the most exorbitant prices, such as $50 per barrel for black. At Fort Hope good flour is worth $60, sugar 50 cents per pound, and other articles in proportion. At Fort Yale there is little to be had for love or money. Mining and cooking utensils are very scarce, and enormous prices are obtained for them. The Hudson Bay Company had seized the mining implements of some miners on Hill's Bar, for violating the law in regard to trafficking, which excited considerable indignation among the miners.

Mr. Dorr thinks the best way to reach the diggings on Fraser River is by water, and not the trail, as the river will be navigable for canoes within a week or two.—Mr. John F. Gleason, a well-known citizen of San Francisco writes to the Herald, from Hill's Bar, Fraser River, on the 16th ult.:

"The miners from what I have seen, are in my opinion such that any person will be satisfied with, unless those who come here expecting to make a pile in a few days or months, or those who are lazy or afraid of hard work. All along the river, that is, from ten miles below Fort Hope, so far up as can be reached, there is an opportunity to do well and make good wages. This bar is paying first rate so far, but all hands are idle at present in consequence of the rise in the river. Some of the claims at the upper end of the bar paid $20 a day to the man, and those a little lower down $15. The company I am at work with are at the lower end, and from what we have made while employed, we are satisfied when the water falls we will make from $12 to $16 each day to the hand. Our claims have been covered with water for the last three weeks, but those occupying higher ground worked up to last Sunday, when they stopped. I do not think we can commence working again for four weeks, that is, until the water recedes. Nearly all the company have put up log cabins, principally as a protection from Indian attack. The Indians steal everything they can lay their hands upon. In case of a difficulty with them we will be safer in log houses, and better able to defend ourselves. I do not think we will have any trouble if no liquor is sold to them, but it is hard to prevent whiskey being brought up the river. If the Indians get drunk they will be ready for anything. Liquor is the curse of both white men and Indians. Only last night two men left this place in a canoe to go to their camp about a mile below; they were in fine spirits, but one of them, I am sorry to say, was full of whiskey. They had not gone far when the canoe capsized, and one of them was drowned. The one that was lost was as fine a young man as I had seen on the bar. I did not learn his name.—Provisions are very high. Bacon is 75 cents per pound; beans 20 cents; flour 60 cents, and coffee 50 cents per pound; everything else is in proportion; but now, when the steamers are coming up fortnightly, it is about time I think we will get things more reasonable. As for myself, I have had a hard time of it for the last three weeks. One of my fingers got very sore—I suppose from constantly keeping my hands dirt, and I have suffered very much. At first time I thought my finger would have to be cut off, but, thank God, it is better now. It will be some time yet before I will be able to work. I left San Francisco on the 20th April, and arrived at this place on the 12th of May. You will see I am on the bar just five weeks. Had we got here two days sooner we could have got some of the best claims on the Bar.—It was our bad luck to have been delayed four days longer than we ought to have been; but I am satisfied it will turn out all right. I think I will return to San Francisco about Christmas with plenty of dust, provided I am fortunate, and keep in good health." Mr. George Creighton, an old resident of this city, says the San Francisco Herald, who returned from Fraser's River by the Panama on Friday last, showed us this morning a sample of gold dust gathered by our "Special Correspondent," on the bar opposite Fort Hope.—The sample shows us is very fine, and is said to resemble the gold found on the Feather River in this State. Mr. Creighton says that the dust gathered by our Correspondent was mixed with a quantity of black sand, which was not blown out until he reached Fort Langley, where the gold was sold by him with the sand for $16 per ounce. Mr. Creighton also says that he has no doubt that the present diggings will prove richer than any in California.—No one appears to doubt the richness of the mines, and all are anxiously waiting the falling of the river in order that they may work the rich bars. He says, miners who were at work on the river, told him, that frequently after a rain—when they had been driven from their holes by a sudden rise of the river, caused by the waters of the mountains—they have returned after the water subsided and found fresh and equally rich deposits of sands mixed with fine gold. The reason assigned for there being so little gold received from the miners up the river, is on account of the difficult and dangerous travelling at this time, the miners preferring to remain alone, and purchase their supplies, even at exorbitant prices, of the Hudson's Bay Company, rather than to encounter the dangers of the river. Mr. Creighton returns to the mines in a few days, notwithstanding that he has been fortunate enough to obtain valuable water front property at Esquimalt.

In regard to the American route to the mining region, a correspondent of the Oregon Times writes:—"The distance from Portland to the Dalles by steamboat, is less than one hundred miles; fare, including meals, $11. At the Dalles horses can be purchased at prices ranging from $25 to $45, and all the necessary accoutrements can be procured at Portland, Vancouver, and the Dalles, at prices but little, if any, above San Francisco rates. From the Dalles the route strikes out into the open country, skirting the eastern or western base of the Cascades, to Fort O'Kanagan, distance sixty miles; thence on to Fort O'Kanaghan River, to the Sammilkimo River, forty miles; thence along the eastern or western side of Lake O'Kanaghan to its head, eighty miles: thence northeast to Shuswap Lake, thirty miles; making the distance from the Dalles three hundred and thirty miles. There is another route which runs to Walla-Walla, which lengthens the distance forty miles—making three hundred and seventy miles. If a water route is preferred to a land route, the waters of the Columbia are navigable for steamboats as far as Walla-Walla—with two portages—then keel boats. Batteaus or canoes can ascend the Upper Columbia and O'Kanaghan Rivers to the head of the Lake without a portege. The Hudson's Bay Company have sent goods by this route as far as Fort Colville. The river route cannot be travelled over in the same length of time as the land route can, but goods can be taken this way and have been. The difference between the Columbia and the Fraser Rivers breaking through the Cascades, and is as twenty is to one hundred in point of difficulties. The Columbia flows through a gap which nature seems to have intended as the only outlet through the Cascade mountains, and the proper road to go into the interior.

"I will now give you the reported distance and difficulties of the Puget Sound route. The figures came to me from such a source, that I am inclined to rely upon them. I will make the point of debarkation on this route at Fort Langley, on Frazer's River, which is easily reached by sailing vessel or steamboats. About this point the current of the river becomes very strong, and is navigated with great difficulty, and by canoes only. From Fort Langley to Fort Hope, the distance is about 80 miles, and six or eight days of hard labour is acquired in ascending the river at this point, and many dangers are to be encountered. Since the tide of travelling has been turned this way, many lives and a great deal of property have been destroyed. At Fort Hope you are obliged to leave the river entirely and take a trail which crosses the Cascade over a rough craggy pass, called Mt. Marvo to a camp called Faultme, distance sixty miles; this requires from four to six days, without grass or other food for animals.—From this point the trail follows along the eastern slope of the Cascades to Sammilkimo River, distance 45 miles. Here the trail divides, one fork going to Fort Thompson, and the other to Fort Colville, or the Shuswap trail, you travel a north-easterly direction—no impediments in the way—a distance of one hundred and twenty miles, to Shuswap Lake, which is the centre of the new California gold mines. While the Puget Sound route is shorter, it will be seen that it requires twice the time to accomplish the journey by that route that it does by the Dalles route. The last-named route has been travelled in eight days, and pack trains make the trip in from ten to fourteen days, with an abundance of grass, timber and water all the way. Any one acquainted with California knows full well that the most practicable route to the Shasta mines is by going behind the coast range of mountains, and up to the Sacramento Valley. It is almost impossible to cross the range of mountains from Humboldt Bay to Shasta, on account of the rugged roads. The same objection is had against the Puget Sound route in the northern mines, and, indeed the objection is much stronger, because the mountain is higher, rougher and of greater extent; the road is also longer, the climate colder, and vegetation scarcer. You can go to Shasta quicker by travelling up the Valley of the Sacramento, and so you can go to the northern mines quicker by travelling up the Valley of the Columbia. Here is another fact of some weight: while the Hudson's Bay Company have forts along the Fraser River, yet for years they have shipped their supplies by way of Vancouver, Dalles, and Columbia River, to Fort Colville, and through the mining country. Major McDonald and a Catholic priest, who recently came from Fort Colville, say that this road can be travelled in seven days with horses or mules; and that the road can be travelled by an ox team! Mines have recently been discovered near Olympia, in the Black Hills, about a day and a day and a half's ride from Portland. Those who are acquainted with the geology of this coast, think there is but little doubt of the existence of rich mines in Oregon and Washington Territories."

Worship of "Respectability."

It appears to me that the greatest of all crimes in this country—perhaps in most other countries too—is poverty. Society can overlook and forgive many things; but poverty is the unpardonable sin. "Money answereth all things," says the wise man, and verily it does. You may be very stupid, but if you are rich you will be considered a very eligible person to enter Parliament. You may be ignorant and uneducated, but if you have money no one will detect your bad grammar; you may be intemperate, but if you are well off people will say that you are fond of a generous diet; you may be dishonest, but if you are wealthy no one will impertinently inquire how you made your wealth; in fact money covereth the multitude of sins! Keep a gig, and drive away; drive to the devil, you will still be considered a respectable man; drive to hell, and the Sunday after your burial a funeral sermon will be preached by some respectability-worshipping minister of religion, who will extol you to the skies, and pray that your relatives, who are squabbling over your Will and grasping your property, may be sustained under the heavy bereavement, and enabled to submit to this painful dispensation of Providence. I am sorry to observe that this notion of respectability obtains amongst professors of religion, just as much as among other classes. "What sort of a congregation attends such a chapel?" "Oh, a respectable, a very respectable, I may say a highly respectable congregation. Many of the leading men of the town, including several town councillors, attend. You may often see as many as thirty or forty carriages waiting at the door—a highly respectable congregation, sir." "And at so-and-so's?" "Why, you know, that's situated in a low neighbourhood; I scarcely know how it is attended. I never go myself—some of my servants, I believe, attend. The minister, I understand, is doing a great work, sir, a great work. The people you know, sir, require preaching that will rouse them—rouse them, sir. Intellectual preaching would be lost upon them,—but simple, earnest, powerful appeals to the consciences of such degraded creatures must do good, sir, —must, sir." Not long ago there appeared a regular report, week by week, of the number of the aristocracy who attended the ministry of a popular preacher in the metropolis; and it was announced once, by way of attracting extraordinary attention, that Lord Palmerston intended to be present on the following Sunday. Even Christian philanthropy is often exceedingly offensive, exceedingly snobbish, in its expressions. It, too, talks of "the masses," and the "lower orders," and talks of them as though they were peculiarly and specially depraved, and it is generally delighted when it can parade a large number of titled and fashionable folk as presidents and vice-presidents of its societies, and when it can put a live lord in the chair. Now, I really think that the masses would be justified in getting up a society for the conversion of the upper classes—for the conversion of such persons as the Directors of the British Bank, and such a person as Sir John Dean Paul, and the manufacturers of accommodation bills. House to house visitation is an excellent thing; but let us have fair play; why should the poor alone have the benefit of this agency? Why not have two missionaries, whose special object it should be to inculcate the principles of integrity amongst the commercial classes? Tract distribution by all means; but let us have not only tracts entitled "The Drunkard's Grave," "The Honest Waterman," "The Dairyman's Daughter," but tracts with some such titles as "The Bubble Blower." "Kite Flying," "The Honest Bank Director," "Don't Salt your Invoices," "The Sin of using False Weights and Measures," "Eightenpence in the Pound, or Considerations addressed to a Bankrupt," "William Palmer or the Sporting World Unmasked," "The Christian duty of Paying Tradesmen's Bills with Punctuality," "The remarkable history of a gentleman of Fortune, who made a correct return of his income to the Income-tax Commissioners," "The awful Death of an old Miser," "Physician heal thyself; or a word of advice from the Lower orders to the Higher," "Six of one and half-a-dozen of the other; or the balance of the rich and the poor," "Honesty is the best policy; or serious advice addressed to a member of Parliament," "Thou shalt not steal; dedicated to a clergyman who prigs all the sermons he preaches." Such Publications would, I know, be deemed excessively impertinent; but they are quite as much required as the tracts which abound in advice, expostulation, and warning for the working classes.—Rev. Hugh Stowell Brown.

Lynch Laws in Lexington, Ky.

Correspondence of the Louisville Courier.

Lexington, July 10.

I telegraphed you this morning a brief account of the murder of our City Marshal Joseph Beard. He was murdered about 4 o'clock this (Saturday) morning, on Water Street, while in the discharge of his official duties. The murderer, William Barker, had a knife drawn, and was attempting to stab another man, named John M'Cheesney, with whom he was disputing. Beard stepped up to arrest Barker, and in a moment was stabbed to the heart by Barker. The knife was a very large bowie and made a wound four inches in width.—Beard was stabbed in the right side, the knife cutting in twain one rib, severing the lungs, and cutting in two the right ventricle of the heart. Beard made two gasps and was a corpse.

Barker was immediately arrested and lodged in jail. The excitement, as the murder was circulated, became intense.—Large crowds gathered around the jail; the Court-House bell was rung; the fire-bells chimed in, and the cry went up, "Hang him! hang him!". A move was made up to the Court House, and soon the yard and house was a perfect jam. Some persons put the motion, that "all who were in favour of hanging Barker would say aye." A yell resounded throughout the multitude to "Hang him!" A rush was made to the jail, where an entrance was effected, by demanding the jailer to give up the key, or to submit to have it taken from him.

Barker was taken out and marched to the Court House, where one of the uprights belonging to the "county gallows" was run out of one of the windows, the rope put around Barker's neck, his hands tied behind him, he slided from the window, having a two foot fall, which snapped the rope asunder. Another rope was obtained, adjusted about his neck, when he was drawn up and left hanging one hour and a half.

Barker was told to pray. He said he had nothing to pray for, and remarked that they could hang him and be G—d d—d.

Mr. Joseph Beard was the Marshal of the city of Lexington, elected last August. He was a faithful officer, a kind man, and universally esteemed by all parties. He was a candidate for re-election and would have beyond a doubt, been re-elected for another term.

Mr. Beard leaves a wife and four children, who have the heartfelt sympathy of this community. They are left in indigent circumstances.

I would here remark, that Mr. Beard has two brothers living in this city—O. P. Beard and L. J. Beard; brother of them took the least part in the mob. I noticed them at their places of business, crying like children. They have the sympathy of every one.

Mr. James O'Hanlon and Major W. Hanson attempted to address the mob, and to advise them to let the law take its course. They were cried down and had to desist.

Water as Food.—Tell the first man you meet that water is not a whole hire nutritious than roast beef, and that common salt, or bone ash, is as much an edible as the white of an egg, and it is probable that he will throw another glance at you than the street to assure himself your keeper is at hand. Make the same statement to the first man of science you meet, and the chances are that he will think you very ignorant of organic chemistry, or that you are playing with a paradox. Nevertheless it is demonstrably true, and never would have worn the air of a paradox, if men had steadily conceived the nature of an alimentary substance. That is an aliment which nourishes; whatever we find in the organism as a constant and integral element, such forming part of its structure or one of the conditions of vital process—that, and that only, deserves the name of aliment. If "to nourish the body" means to sustain its forces and repair its waste—if food enters into the living structure, and if all the integral constituents of that structure are derived from food—there can be nothing improper in designating as nutritious, substances which have, an enormous preponderance among the integral constituents.—People who think it paradoxical to call water food will cause their surprise on learning that water forms two-thirds of the living body.—"Food and Drink" (Black-wood.)

☞ On Friday evening last a meeting of persons favourable to the organization of a society for promoting emigration to Fraser River and Vancouver's Island was held at the International Hotel, Toronto.—Much interesting and valuable information respecting the material resources, climate, &c., of the places mentioned, was communicated to the meeting by some of the gentlemen present. A committee composed of five gentlemen was appointed to draft rules and regulations for the guidance of the society, which are to be submitted for adoption at an adjourned meeting to be held at the same place Friday evening next at eight o'clock. We observe an advertisement in the Quebec papers, from which it would appear that a journey to Fraser's River is thought of by some parties there.—Globe.

The Mississippi has been ascended by a steamboat this summer, one hundred and fifty miles farther than ever steamer disturbed its waters before. The North Star made a trip up to Pakajans Falls.

The Niagara Falls Gazette says, that Canadian Engineers have been making surveys, within a few days, for a tubular bridge across the Niagara at that place.—The surveys are made for the proposed Southern Railroad through Canada.

☞ The Chatham Planet says that during the last week the wheat crop in Kent has given promise of being better that was anticipated. The weevil has effected it more or less, but only in the edge of the fields, and most of the farmers own that all kinds of grain will yield much better than they previously thought. A correspondent of the same paper, writing from Beamsville says that there can be no doubt that the weevil has destroyed a large portion of the present crop. In Illinois the wheat is as bad as in the worst part of Canada; it is rusting badly, and thousands of acres are blasted.

Slide at Goat Island.—The Niagara Gazette says another mass of rock, earth and trees slid good bye to Goat Island one day last week, and went thundering down into the chasm. This slide was from the side of last year, when several individuals came near being killed. One of the rocks will measure about sixteen feet each way. Fortunately no one happened to be on the shore below at the time of the slide.

Modern Kilkenny Cats.—The Chronicles has a smart and well-written article on the American difficulty, and sensibly concludes that relatives should not quarrel. If matters were not smoothed down, however, but year broke out, why, promptly Europe and the world would receive the following obituary notices:—I. "You are informed of the premature decease of the American stars and stripes, ruthlessly swallowed by the British lion." II. "You are requested to attend the funeral of Jan le Lion Britannique, who has just expired in consequence of having incautiously swallowed the American stars and stripes, which disagreed with and choked him." Nothing so much to the point has yet appeared in any of the so-called serious papers.

Arrival of the "Persia."

New York, Aug. 2.

The Cunard steamship Persia, Capt. Judkins, which sailed from Liverpool, at 9 o'clock, on the morning of Saturday, July 24th, arrived here at 11 o'clock this morning.

European politics quite dull.

The India Bill had finally passed both Houses of Parliament. Also, the Bill authorizing the Commons to admit Jews.

Disraeli said Government was preparing plans for submission to the United States for the visiting of suspected flowers. It is believed it will satisfactorily accomplish the end in view.

Trade at Shanghai unsettled.

Continental affairs unimportant.

Fanatical mord mobs against Christians in Turkey, are subsided.

The House of Commons on the 21st ult. passed the Bill of the House of Lords, to admit Jews to Parliament. On the 22nd Mr. Fitzgerald stated that the war steamer Cyclops was on her way to Flushing to demand ample compensation and insist on the punishment of the parties concerned in the recent massacre. The Cyclops was up heavily armed, that she could execute

In the Commons, Lord Stanley stated that between January and July 20th, 17,000 troops had been sent to India. He added that the Government was well aware of the great importance of striking an effective blow at the insurgents.

Mr. Disraeli stated that there had been no communication between the English and American Governments respecting the recent acts of British cruisers, and these communications were now in abeyance.—During the abeyance the United States Government had made a friendly overture that Her Majesty's Government should offer to the United States a plan for their consideration, which should accomplish the putting down of the slave trade, without producing misunderstanding. Her Majesty's Government had accepted that offer, and were now engaged in the consideration of a plan which they believed would satisfactorily accomplish all the objects both parties desired.

INDIA.

Gwalior was captured on the 20th June. The cavalry and artillery were in pursuit of the enemy.

Oude continued disturbed. At Rohilcund all was tranquil.

CHINA.

The news from China is nearly all anticipated. At Canton, trade is nearly at a stand. At Shanghai, May 21st, trade was unsettled.

By the news from Pieho, the new silk crop was favourably reported.

Serious alarm was felt at Canton, and quantities of goods were being sent to Hong Kong for safety.

FRANCE.

The statement that the French troops are to be withdrawn from Rome is positively contradicted.

It was thought that Prince Napoleon would be named Minister of War sooner or later.

The commandant for the French naval station of Newfoundland, wishes that he had established the basis of a treaty relative to the fisheries with the colony, of a nature to give satisfaction to all parties.

The crew of the French ship Marie Caroline, had been murdered, and the ship burnt on the coast of Madagascar.

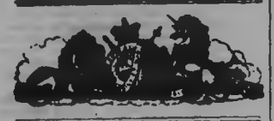
A letter from Steine reports seizure of three grenades, similar to Orsini's, and the arrest of twenty persons.

TURKEY.

A Marseilles telegram says a serious revolutionary movement has broken out amongst the Christian population in Syria. It is said that Tripoli and Latakia are in a state of insurrection. In Candia, the Christians have to barricade themselves or take to flight.

NEW ADVERTISMEENTS.

Notice—A. Morrow.
Farms to Rent—R. Thomson.
Godey's Lady's Book.—Sawers & Murray.
P. H. L. & B. Railway.
Scotland's Authors—Sawers & Murray.



The Examiner.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 5, 1858.

The New Ministry.

Since our last issue, Mr. John A. Macdonald and his cabinet have withdrawn from the government, and their places have been supplied, under the leadership of Mr. George Brown, as follows:—

UPPER CANADA.

Brown—Inspector General.
J. S. MacDonald—Attorney General West.
Mowatt—Provincial Secretary.
Jas. Morris—Speaker of Upper House.
Foley—Post Master General.
Cameron—Solicitor General West.

LOWER CANADA.

Dorion—Crown Lands Commissioner.
Holton—Board of Works.
Drummond—Atty. General East.
Lemieux—Receiver General.
Taschereau—President of the Executive Council.
Laberge—Solicitor General East.

That this combination possesses the most talent of any cabinet that has hitherto controlled the affairs of the country, nobody who knows our public men will be disposed to question. What the principles of action may be that they are agreed upon, is reserved for them yet to declare, but we do not hesitate to believe that they are as honorable to the men, as they will prove satisfactory to the country. There was nothing so essentially opposite in the demands of ministers or their supporters, while in opposition, that should preclude them from reconciling their differences, so as to allow them to unite in sincere harmony upon questions that must be settled before the public mind becomes quieted. And we are quite sure that, so far as Upper Canada is concerned, no sacrifice of principle will be made by the gentlemen who represent that section in the cabinet; though, of course, we do not pretend to suppose that there has not been a mutual approach between the leaders of the two sections, on those points which have heretofore furnished cause for animated debate. No two parties who have acted independently of each other, can be expected to unite, without a change of sentiment, but it is still compatible with their duties, that they preserve complete the principles of their separate existence. The honorable disposition of each will rapidly concede the difficulties that are fixing under both circumstances to the other, and their supporters in the House and the country will reciprocate their example. With such sentiments people are surprised to learn that, upon the announcement being made to the House by Mr. Patrick, a friend of the ministry, declaring the new formation, a vote of want of confidence was at once taken, and decided by a very large majority against the ministry. Such courage can be understood by no one, unless they know that the ministry are to be sustained by the opposition. Such a vote, taken in the absence of the ministers, was unworthy of the House, and the country will look upon the gentlemen who voted for it, as the friends of the present ministry, and the opponents of the new. Such a vote, taken upon the announcement being made to the House, will be regarded by the country as a factious opposition to the new ministry, and the gentlemen who voted for it, as the friends of the present ministry, and the opponents of the new.

Should, however, the present cabinet fail in persuading the Governor General to dissolve the House, and order a new election, there is still the consolation that the old party is entirely broken in upon, and that some other premier than Mr. John A. Macdonald, probably Mr. Galt, would be entrusted with the duty of forming an administration. We do not wish it understood that a failure on the part of Messrs. Brown and Dorion is preying upon our imagination, but such a circumstance, however much to be regretted, is quite possible; the enormous majority against them in the House being an argument to some extent against the supposed ability of the cabinet to win over the confidence of the country. A very short time will disclose the true relation of affairs, and the country will at any rate be treated to electoral contests in those places represented by the gentlemen who accepted office; and this is the peculiar hardship of the denial of the right of appeal to the country, that Mr. Brown and his friends will be exposed to the risk and expense of re-election, notwithstanding that their places in the ministry are filled up by other incumbents. We hope for the best, and nothing more, strongly than that the chief actors still possess their honor unsullied by the temptation of office.

The following is the division list, taken upon the question of want of confidence in the Brown-Dorion Administration:—

YEAS.—Messrs. Alleyn, Archambeault Beaubien, Bellingham, Benjamin, Buchanan, Burton, John Cameron, Malcolm Cameron, Campbell, Carling, Cayley, Cartier, Chapais, Cimon, Coutlee, Daly, Daoust, Desaulniers, Dionne, Dubord, Dufresne, Dunkin, Fellowes, Ferguson, Ferres, Fortier, Fournier, Galt, Gaudet, Gauvreau, Gowan, Harwood, Heath, Hogan, Labelle, Lacoste, Langevin, Laporte, Le Boutillier, Loranger, Macbeth, J. A. Macdonald, MacLeod, McCann, McMicken, Morin, Morrison, Ouimet, Panet, Playfair, Pope, William F. Powell, Price, Robinson, Roblin, Ross, Richard, W. Scott, Sicotte, Simard, Simpson, Sincennes, Sidney Smith, Starnes, Talbot, Tasse, Terrill, Tett, Turcotte, Webb, and Whitney.—71.

NAYS.—Messrs. Aikins, Bell, Biggar, Burwell, Christie, Clark, Cook, Dorland, Gould, Hebert, Holmes, Howland, Jobin, Laframboise, Donald A. Macdonald, Mackenzie, Mattice, Merritt, Munro, Notman, Papineau, Patrick, Walter Powell, Ross, Rimal, Short, Somerville, Stirton, Wallbridge, White, and Wright.—31.

Protestant Priestcraft at Work.

It is not our custom to report the proceedings of the Board of Trustees of the Grammar and Union School, because they are conducted away from the public observation, and sometimes not adapted for publication, besides that they are often uninteresting. Occasionally, however, it is befitting that the public should know what is going on, more especially when extraordinary and fundamental principles are laid down for the guidance of the Institution. Such was the character of the proceedings, on Tuesday last, at a meeting of the Board. We may premise that the School has no sectarian character, but is common to all, that it is endowed with public funds, and professes to be a purely secular institution, formed upon a model that can generate no disputation upon religious belief. The supporters of the system of common school education, pride themselves upon its openness, and condemn the withdrawal of the separatists as being unprecedented in any, the slightest cases of difference from religious opinion. The Board have just closed one of this praiseworthy establishment, and have decided that the school shall now lose its open character, and be placed under the rule ecclesiastical of certain ministers of the different divisions of the reformed church. The first resolution of this class was introduced by the Rev. J. M. Roger and Mr. D. McDonald, which reads as follows:—

"That a portion of the Scriptures of the Word of God be read daily by every class capable of that exercise—and that classes for Scripture history be taught regularly in the different departments of the School."

It will be observed that there is no choice about conforming to the ecclesiastical instruction in the school, but that the attendants who are sufficiently advanced must go through the religious exercise. This resolution, however, we are happy to say, failed for the time, after long and earnest deliberation, but that it will be proceeded with, may be gathered from the passing of the amendment, which was as follows:—

"Moved by Mr. F. Ferguson, and seconded by Rev. Mr. Scott,—That it be a rule for the future that the Sacred Scriptures shall be read in the School, and that a committee consisting of Rev. Mr. Roger, Rev. Mr. Burnham, Rev. Mr. Scott, and Rev. Mr. Gilmour, be appointed to arrange with the Principal the manner in which it will be advisable to carry out the object of this resolution."

Now this is the law of our County Grammar and Union School, and that the supporters of Common Schools may know who it is that necessitates Separate Schools, we give the names of the Trustees who voted for it. They were the Rev. J. M. Roger, Mr. Fortye, Mr. Arnott, Mr. Jas. Hall, Mr. Jas. Stevenson!! Mr. Wm. Hall, Rev. Mr. Scott, Rev. Mr. Burnham, Mr. McDonald and Mr. Ferguson!!

The Trustees who opposed the injustice to non-conformists, were Messrs. Sawers, Clarken, Conger, and Dr. Burnham.

The resolution which carried, it will be seen, partook of the same objectionable nature as its parent; the teaching religion is a rule not to be evaded, and those who are unwilling to have their children's religious sentiments moulded under the direction of other creeds, than that they profess, will be obliged to seek temporal instruction away from the public seat of learning. It is perfectly sickening to hear the hypocrisy of those zealous ranters against separating the youth of the country, in their search after useful information and mental discipline, at the same time that they attach conditions to attendance which they would not submit to themselves. The fact is well established among political disputants concerning common school teaching, that in order to refuse countenance to the Separate School system, the most perfect freedom from all religious interference must pervade the common schools. Lower Canada allows her Protestants to have their Schools, because religion is taught in the State Schools. Upper Canada has refused the concession to her Roman Catholic population, because she avers that there is no similitude of condition, her State Schools being unconnected with religious instruction. To preserve our argument, no such resolutions as the above can be admitted in the Board of Grammar and Union Schools. It is not alone that the Holy Scriptures shall be read, but clergymen are appointed to advise with the principal as to the manner of the reading. A more jesuitical device could not be devised than that of Mr. Ferguson, whereby the wedge is introduced, to pave the way for the more rigid exercise desired by the Rev. Mr. Roger. Our purpose does not end here, we are not satisfied with merely directing public attention to the action of the Board, we will go further and advise that ward meetings be held, to discuss the conduct of the trustees, in their support or condemnation of the introduction of religious strife into our Common School. The opponents of the new rule are, as is seen by the division, powerless in the Board; if the people consent to sit quietly by, they may blame themselves, when things become unbearable; our plan is to strike the blow, when its force is easily applied.

The Proposed New Stone Lock at Lindsay.

There is a class of persons, and unfortunately a very large one, who are always rejoiced at the announcement of a money appropriation from the public purse, when it is to be expended within the range of their participation, and who are at the same time utterly indifferent to the ultimate advantages to be obtained, regarding only the immediate prospect of benefit during the period of outlay. The late Inspector General, Mr. Cayley, submitted to the House, just before the defeat of the Government, certain supplementary estimates for the construction of Public Works, among which we find the demand of $50,489, to be laid out in building a new stone lock at Lindsay, and in cutting off some curves in the Scugog river, near that place. Immediately upon this announcement, the class of persons to which we have alluded, and among them of course the editor of the Peterborough Review give vent to their joy, and sing eternal praise to the liberal distributor of the public wealth. Very possibly among these estimates, containing items to the amount of some $500,000, there are more exceptionable cases than that we have singled out, but the appropriation for Lindsay is the most convenient for our illustration, as the locality and its condition are more or less familiar to this neighborhood. Our readers are aware that the first improvement of a public character carried out upon the waters known here as the back lakes, was made some twenty years ago, by the erection of a dam at Buckhorn, the lowest part of the chain to which navigation could be conveniently or profitably extended, the object being to raise the water at Bobcaygeon, and thus reduce the fall to be overcome at that point. Simultaneously and in concert with this work, a wooden lock was made at Bobcaygeon, by means of which the navigation was kept open from Lindsay on one side, to Mud Lake on the other. Before the navigation was at all needed, however, the wooden lock decayed, and the Buckhorn dam was allowed to disappear. Four years ago the Government again took up these improvements, renewing the dam at Buckhorn, and replacing the old wooden lock at Bobcaygeon, with a structure of stone.—These works have only just been completed, at a cost of some $200,000, part of which was doubtless preserved from the action of the water, by remaining in a dry spot of certain gentlemen's lower garments. Besides these erections, a wooden lock was built at Lindsay, but not until the wooden lock at Bobcaygeon had broken down.—This lock at Lindsay is now experiencing the waste of time, but it is still serviceable, and the navigation is unbroken from Port Perry, on Scugog Lake, to the landing at Mud Lake. It is now sought to have the destruction of the lock at Lindsay prepared against, by an early replacement of stone. Let us see whether there is any sufficient necessity for this expenditure of $50,489, and that of course, being only an approximate estimate, will expand as the work progresses, according to a standing rule of the late Board of Works. The original building of the locks there was the most sensible of all the Government undertakings on these waters. At that time, we had no railroads; Port Perry, 18 miles from Whitby, afforded the only available outlet for Lindsay, and its back country, then growing into notice. To complete the connection the locks were built, and they proved themselves very necessary, up to the time of the opening of the Port Hope & Lindsay Railroad. Consequent upon this event, the navigation above Lindsay was suddenly abandoned, the Town becoming the centre of the trade, for which before, it had been a thoroughfare. Two steamboats out of four, of which the back lake fleet consists, are amusing their owners, by hunting each other up and down the waters, between Lindsay and Mud Lake, neither of them ever using the locks at Lindsay, because the little that is to be done is all found below. The daily average of the earnings of these two steamboats is somewhere about fourteen dollars, out of which they find themselves; a return which would be barely sufficient to remunerate one, and that only with the utmost economy, upon which principle the Fly is constructed and managed, but the other, the Ogemah, needs twenty-four dollars a day, to make her barely remunerative, because of the lavishness of expenditure in her outfit, and the necessity of increased numbers and quality of her crew. Thus it will be seen that, in keeping two steamboats on these waters, the owners, in some kind of proportion, are subject to a daily loss of twenty-four dollars. There must, of course, be an end to this, and the whole business will be conducted by one, that one which was built on the principle of economy, as suited to the circumstances of the trade. What then is the necessity of renewing useless works at Lindsay? None so far as the public and the navigation of our inland waters are concerned; but there was a political reason, and one which is the most demoralizing and the most ruinous to our finances. Mr. John Cameron is the member for Victoria, and a thoroughly useless creature he is to his constituency and the country, but his vote was worth something to the late government, and it must be conciliated; therefore, at the solicitation of Mr. Cameron, an appropriation of $50,489 is made, to be spent among the electors of Lindsay, by which he expects to propitiate their good feeling towards him, as against the next election, and the other parts of the Province are to contribute the money. We hope Mr. Inspector General Brown will not accept this legacy of the late incumbent of his office, but that he will treat this, and all other such jobs, while he is in power, with the same ceremony that he has exercised in opposition. The lock at Lindsay must not be built with the people's money, but if the appropriation must be expended on those waters, we would recommend that a portion be laid out in the purchase of the Fly and the Ogemah, and the remainder continued as a subsidy, to such persons as are willing to keep up the amusement of hide-and-go-seek upon the back lakes. This would be doing a public benefit indeed, by securing the accommodation the people now have where it is wanted, instead of fooling away money where it is no use, and leaving the steamboats to languish in a ruinous competition.

Mr. Brown.

At a meeting of Mr. Brown's committee of election, in Toronto, on Tuesday, we learn from the Globe, that the following explanation from that gentleman was offered to his friends:—

Mr. BROWN, who had been sent for and brought away from an important and pressing engagement—entered the meeting, and was received with repeated rounds of deafening cheers. He said—I have only a very few minutes to spare; and I must ask to be allowed to interrupt Mr. Bell, in order to tell my constituents that I am the same man I was when they elected me so triumphantly last winter. [Enthusiastic cheering.] That, so far from having given up my principles, or any measure I have maintained on behalf of the people of Upper Canada, I have gone into the Cabinet with the determination to secure measures for the permanent settlement of the grievances we have so long complained of, and to secure thereby, the interests of the whole people of Canada. (Loud cheers.) I am sorry that I have to address you now, because I can only stay a few moments, but I will take an early opportunity of putting clearly before you the policy and the views on which the Administration has been formed. But you will permit me to say now that there is not a man who made those fierce speeches you heard in the House of Assembly last night, not a man from Upper Canada, nor one from Lower Canada who loves his country, who refused to give his support to this Administration, who will not live to regret that he refused to give it a full and a fair trial. (Cheers.) This is the first time when an Administration formed under the British constitution has been refused that fair and manly hearing which has been denied us. But, depend upon it, we will yet show to the country that our intentions have been as sincere, and our policy as patriotic as those of any men who ever went into office. (Loud cheers.) I hope you will excuse me from proceeding farther. I cannot enter now into a discussion of measures and principles. I must throw myself on your generosity and on the generosity of my countrymen, that you will believe I am not the man to betray the trust which has been reposed in me—that I am not about to sacrifice the consistency of my whole political life. It is a bold task we have undertaken, but we do not shrink from it, and assuredly if our efforts fail, we will not hold office for an hour longer than we can do so with honour. Mr. Brown then left the meeting amidst loud and enthusiastic cheering.

A lie always needs a truth for a handle to it, else the hand would cut itself which sought to drive it home upon another. The worst lies therefore, are those whose blade is false, but whose handle is true.

☞It is said that the Hon. John H. Cameron will contest Toronto with the Hon. George Brown. The Colonist has returned to its vomit.

Provincial Parliament.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY.

TUESDAY, Aug. 3.

THE VOTE OF LAST NIGHT.

Mr. PICHE stated that the member for Montmorrenci (Mr. Cauchon) and himself had intended to vote with the minority last night, but being accidentally out of the House when the vote was taken, their names had not been recorded. He desired that the votes and proceedings should now be amended by the insertion of their names.

Hon. Mr. CAUCHON said that, if present, he would have voted with the minority.

After a short conversation, in the course of which several members stated that it would be out of order to enter upon the votes and proceedings the names of members who were not present when the vote was taken, the matter was not pressed.

ADJOURNMENT TILL TO-MORROW.

Mr. PATRICK then moved that, in consequence of the present state of the public affairs in this Province, the House do adjourn till to-morrow at three o'clock.

Hon. J. A. MACDONALD—Before we are asked to consider the motion of the hon. gentleman to adjourn, which is so unusual a course at this early period of the day, before we have proceeded with any business, the hon. gentleman should state the reasons which induce him to make that motion—whether he makes it on his own responsibility as a member of the House or whether he makes the application on behalf of the Administration of the day.

Mr. PATRICK—I should have stated that I have been requested by the Government to make the motion.

Hon. J. A. MACDONALD,—When the hon. gentleman states that he makes his application on behalf of the Administration, I think the House, in the present state of public affairs, is bound to accede to it.

The motion was then agreed to, and the House adjourned.

A Romance.

From the Watertown (N. Y.) Journal.

A paragraph is going the rounds of the papers relating how a man named Frazer was recently arrested near Baltimore and committed to the jail near Moorestown, N. J., from whence he had escaped, when under confinement for counterfeiting. The story is touched up with a little romance concerning a sister of his, who is said to have struggled hard for a livelihood in her younger days, but who is now a great lady at the Court of France—all of which is true.

This Frazer was once a resident of our country. He came here with Lucien Murat—son of the illustrious Murat and the beautiful Pauline Bonaparte—nephew of the old and cousin of the present Emperor, Lucien, assisted by this Frazer and a French chap, whose name we cannot recall, undertook to build a "city" on Indian River, between Evan's Mills and Theresa. This was some twenty-three years ago.—This trio were a precious set. Horse racing and cock fighting were more industriously attended to than legitimate business; still a grist mill, and a few shops and a store were put up, but in the end went down under the sheriff's hammer. Thus began and ended the great city of "Joachim." The old mill is still standing as a monument of Lucien Murat's failures in this country. The wright who built the mill still holds an expressive memento of Lucien, in the form of a "promise to pay," given for eighteen hundred dollars worth of labor performed.

After our adventurers left this country, Frazer went to New York, and got rich—Murat went to Bordentown, N. J., married Frazer's sister, and remained poor. His wife actually supported him by teaching school. Meantime her brother continued to wax fat and fast. He became noted as a gentleman of wealth, leisure and pleasure, without giving a thought, it is said, to his relatives, who were then under the frowns of fortune. The throw of the dice box of destinies which gave France into the hands of Louis Napoleon, also gave peace and glory to Lucien Murat, and his very worthy and hard working wife. He is now one of the highest dignitaries of the Empire, and she is one of the first ladies of the court. Thus, while the sister occupies the Elysee Bourbon at Paris, the brother is awaiting his sentence to serve in a New Jersey State prison. So the "play" goes on.

Arrival of the Steamship "Vanderbilt."

NEW YORK, August 1.

The steamer Vanderbilt arrived here this morning at five o'clock, bringing Liverpool dates to the evening of the same day. She brings nearly 200 passengers. Reports very favourable weather for laying the ocean cable. Passed the steamship Ariel off the Start, on the the morning of sailing. The Niagara passed Cape Clear on the morning of the 18th, and the Agamemnon was off Kinsale the same afternoon.

The Liverpool cotton, breadstuff and provision market were steady but dull.—London money market very easy. Consols for money and account 95¼ to 95¾.

Weather in England favourable, and wheat crops, very promising. General news unimportant. There was an interesting debate in the House of Lords on the Jeddah massacre, in which Lord Malmesbury said all necessary steps had been taken to demand immediate redress from Turkey. There was no intention of occupying Massowa.

The House of Commons discussed at some length a motion of Mr. Roebuck's, that the privileges of the Hudson's Bay Company, about to expire, ought not to be renewed, and that such territory held by them was needed for purposes of colonization, and ought to be assumed by Government. The motion was finally withdrawn.

The attempt to raise funds for the completion of the steamship Great Eastern has failed, and it is now proposed to raise a new company to purchase her.

The challenge of the Americans backing Paul Morphy against Staunton the English champion, chess player, for 1,000 guineas has been accepted by the latter.—The contest will commence in September.

The Cotton Supply Association of England, was very actively engaged in collecting subscriptions. They are about to open an exhibition of an extensive collection of cotton samples from various countries.

There has been a sudden change in the programme of Queen Victoria's visit to Berlin. There is to be no salutes and no demonstrations usual on such occasions.—The cause of this change is not known, but there are rumours of the ill-health of Princess Frederick William.

The Paris Moniteur says that the French Government will join England in demanding reparation for the Jeddah massacre.

There is nothing later from the Telegraph Fleet than is reported by the Vanderbilt.

INDIA AND CHINA.

An official telegraph to the Foreign Office, received on the 22nd of July, states that the Steamer Candia arrived at Suez on the 17th, with dates from Calcutta to the 19th, Madras to the 25th, and Galli to the 29th of June, Hong Kong to the 7th of June, and Aden to the 11th of July.

The forces under Sir Hugh Rose had retaken Gwalior after a severe fight of four hours.

The remainder of the India news is of an unimportant description.

The fort at the mouth of the river Peiho mounting 138 guns, and backed by a larger body of troops was attacked on the 20th May, by English and French gunboats and taken. The loss of the Allies was trifling. The Chinese stood to their guns very fairly. On the 23nd the forces commenced advancing up the river. The weather was cool, and the squadron was in good health and spirits. Six thousand French troops, originally destined for Cochin, China, were on their way to Peebella. From Canton, information was received that on the 2nd of June, an ineffectual attempt was made by the Allies to rout the Chinese braves on the mountains in the vicinity. Nangpo was in possession of the rebels, and the English merchants had gone on board Her Majesty's ship Surprise.

FRANCE.

The Moniteur ridicules the idea of a French invasion of England.

The Paris Conference closes on the 15th of August.

Prince Napoleon's Agent complains of the severity of the treatment of the Press in French Colonies.

The epidemic at Kergasse was diminishing.

GREAT BRITAIN.

A despatch from Queenstown dated on the 18th July says:—

The Atlantic Telegraph squadron, consisting of Her Majesty's ship Agamemnon the tenders Gorgon and Valorous, and the United States frigate Niagara, left early this morning for the rendezvous.

The London Times publishes the following:—

LIVERPOOL, Tuesday, July 20, 1858.

The United States frigate Niagara, was off Cape Clear, on the 18th, at 6 A. M., and the Agamemnon was off Kinsale at 11 A. M., on same day, with the Atlantic cable.

The East India Company have taken up ten ships for the conveyance of the additional reinforcements to India.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times writes:—Queen Victoria will arrive at Cherbourg on the evening of the 4th August, and the Emperor and Empress will make their entrance into the town on the afternoon of the same day. Their Imperial Majesties will remain at Cherbourg on the 5th, 6th, and 7th, and on Sunday the 8th, will embark on board the Bretagne screw, line of battle ships to proceed to Brest. The first interview between the Sovereigns of France and England will take place on the 5th. Their Majesties will pass the 6th on the roadstead. On the 7th the inauguration, benediction and immersion of the dock Napoleon III will take place, and in the afternoon the Ville de Nantes, screw liner, which has been built on one of the slips of the new dock, will be launched. In the evening there will be a grand ball offered by the town. A grand dinner will be given by the Emperor to all the persons attached to the suite. It will take place under a tent fitted up on the dock of the Bretagne. All the plenipotentiaries forming part of the Conference of Paris have received invitations for the fetes at Cherbourg.

The French Inspector General of Hydraulic Works, M. Reibell, has been summoned to attend the Emperor at Plombiers, and explain to him the mode by which the dock at Cherbourg is to be filled with water. He will proceed to Cherbourg in a few days to superintend the final preparations. On the occasion of the Emperor's visit an extensive promotion in the Order of the Legion of Honor is expected to take place. A great batch of Senators is also spoken of, among whom will probably be found the name of Baron Gros, the French Plenipotentiary in China.

It had been decided that during the absence of the Emperor the Cabinet Councils shall be held under the presidency of Prince Jerome. The funeral car of the late Emperor Napoleon, about to be presented to the French, is at length finally ordered to be completed at Woolwich. In addition to the men who acted as coachmen to Sir Hudson Lowe at St. Helena, and who has given some information descriptive of the decoration and other portions of the carriage, as arranged for the funeral bier, and which are at present wanting, a second veteran, who also served as guard over the Imperial captive, and who assisted in preparing the carriage for the purpose of the funeral, has been met with, and has described every particular required, so that no difficulty now remains in transforming it to its original condition.

The London Herald says:—We understand that a general officer has been sent to Jeddah by the Turkish Government, and that this officer has been entrusted with power of life and death. The Paris Moniteur announces that the son of M. Evrillard, the French Consul at Jeddah, who was murdered by the fanatical Arabs, has been nominated to a scholarship in the Imperial Lyceum of St. Louis; and his sister, the courageous young woman who struggled to defend her parents, and actually killed one of the assailants, has been provided by the Empress Eugenie with a handsome dowry. The Paris Moniteur announces that the Imperial Government, in concert with that of her Britannic Majesty, will take measures to exact reparation for quarities committed at Jeddah.

A letter received by the Cotton Supply Association of England, from Mr. R. D. Ross, Cape Castle, which appears in the London Times, states emphatically that cotton, which is indigenous to Africa, and grows abundantly in Ashantee, might be obtained equal to that of Georgia, both in quantity and quality. Mr. Ross thinks the Africans would readily profit by instruction, and that Africa would before long compete hard with the slave States of America, if capitalists would establish an organization in central districts to purchase and prepare for export all the cotton which the natives should be left to grow themselves. The London News adds:—The funds of the Society have received an addition of nearly £2,000 in subscriptions obtained during seven days. The canvass is still proceeding satisfactorily. The committee intend shortly to make public the more valuable communications received as to the prospects of cotton cultivation in different parts of the world, and also to exhibit at the offices an extensive collection of cotton samples from various countries.

Communications.

For the Examiner.

Complimentary Tea and Address to Mr. L. Maguire.

Last Thursday evening, (notwithstanding the unpropitious state of the weather,) was celebrated by one of those pleasing events which ever characterize the "happy family." The friends of Mr. Maguire were not willing that he should take his departure from amongst them without bearing with him warm assurances of their good will and the elevated position which he occupied in their esteem,—thus, according to previous arrangement the Wesleyan Sabbath School Teachers, and a number of others who desired to participate in the proceedings, met in the School Room at a social Tea given in compliment to their guest. After the party, (a large proportion of whom were ladies,) had regaled themselves with the excellent refreshments, a meeting was duly organized for the occasion by moving Mr. Rodney Moore into the chair. Proceeding at once to business, the subjoined Address was read by the Rev. Mr. Scott, and presented to Mr. Maguire, which elicited a very handsome reply, and which will also be found below:—

ADDRESS TO BRO. L. MAGUIRE FROM THE TEACHERS OF THE PETERBORO' WESLEYAN METHODIST SUNDAY SCHOOL:—

Dear Brother:—We have met here on this occasion for the purpose of expressing the deep sense we entertain of your moral worth and excellency, and also to give assurance to you of our ferrent desire for your future happiness and prosperity.

Associated with us as you have been for some time past, in the arduous and responsible office of Sabbath School Teacher, we cannot allow your removal from this Town, without expressing our high sense of your integrity and perseverance, as well as your promptitude and punctuality in the discharge of every duty assigned you. We deeply regret that the School with which we are connected is to be deprived of your valuable services, nevertheless we bow to the decision you have come to, with the persuasion that you have looked to Him for direction who hath promised to direct the path of those who acknowledge him in all their ways. It is for us to imitate your praiseworthy example, and pray that God would speedily supply one who shall honorably fill your place.

We commend you to God and to the word of his grace, with a firm conviction that although we may lose your services locally, yet that in the providence of God, you will be more eminently useful in that part of the Lord's vineyard where you propose to settle. Should there be in that place a lack of efficient labourers in the Sabbath School cause, we entertain the conviction that you will evince a readiness to co-operate in every good word and work, and by your zeal and generosity will be made the means of stimulating many others to the more earnest discharge of Christian duty in striving to save souls from perdition by bringing them to the Lord Jesus Christ.

We unitedly pray that God may by his Holy Spirit sanctify and keep you from evil, and by his providence guide you safely and happily through your whole life, and finally give you an inheritance in Heaven.

Signed in behalf of the Sabbath School Teachers of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, Peterboro', C. W.

R. RUTHERFORD,
Superintendent.

Peterboro', July 29th, 1858.

TO THE SUPERINTENDENT AND TEACHERS OF THE WESLEYAN METHODIST SABBATH SCHOOL, PETERBOROUGH.

My Dear Friends:—I receive with gratitude this expression of your kindness and confidence, which is the more acceptable as it was altogether unexpected. I can lay no claim to any such consideration, for I am only conscious of trying to do my duty in that sphere which Providence seems to have pointed out, and I am painfully persuaded that in many things I have come short. But you have considerately borne with my weaknesses, and in your forbearance and good will, I have had cause for thankfulness. In my new sphere of duty this occasion will be one of the most pleasing reminiscences of my life, and I shall by the recollection of your confidence and affection as expressed in this pleasing interview, be prompted to more diligence and perseverance in the good work of Sabbath School instruction. I shall often look back with pleasure to the period of my association with you, and reckoning on your patient perseverance in well doing, shall pray God our Father to bless you with abundant success.

LAWRENCE MAGUIRE.

Peterboro', July 29, 1858.

Then came the speeches, which were remarkably good; and several most valuable suggestions were thrown out with regard to the conduct of Sabbath Schools. The Speakers were the Rev. Mr. Scott, Messrs. R. Rutherford, — McBurney, S. P. Ford, Sen'r, W. Mason, S. P. Ford, Jun., J. C. Dundas, and Jas. Dumble. The statements of all these gentlemen indicated a spirit of the highest regard and the deepest solicitude for the welfare of our worthy neighbour, congratulating him on his success in attaining and retaining the noblest character of our race—the character of a Christian. May it last forever. About 11 o'clock the meeting broke up, sorry to part with their old friend.

SPECTATOR.

Peterborough, Aug 2, 1858.

Toronto Markets.

MONDAY August 2, 1858.

The reports from the country grow much more encouraging. The fall wheat harvest for which there has been the most brilliant weather, is nearly completed, and from all we can learn there is every reason to expect at least an average yield. The samples brought into the market of the new crop are excellent, and far superior to the crop of last year. The spring crops too promise abundantly. These favourable circumstances, together with the high price does much to remove the depressed feeling that had begun to take hold of the public mind.

On Saturday there was a large number of farmers on the market with various articles of produce, which moved off rapidly and at good prices.

WHEAT.—For very fine samples 8s 7d a 8s 9d, and in one case 8s 9d was realized. For ordinary lots of old wheat 8s 6d were the current rates. There is a good demand for new wheat, and high rates will be paid in order to get cargoes forward into the Eastern market before the supplies from the Western States shall have got down, and farmers who can conveniently get to market now, should bring out their wheat immediately, as the above rates are, probably, as high as will be paid this year, and are at least remunerative.

FLOUR is exceedingly dull and beyond a few light sales for local consumption we hear of no transactions. The nominal quotations are: Superfine, $3 a 4.05; Fancy, 4.15 a 4.25; Extra, 4.50 a 4.60 per barrel.

SPRING WHEAT—at 8s 9d to 8s 10d per bushel.

BARLEY—3s 10½d a 4s for ordinary, and 4s 3d for prime.

RYE—2s 9d a 3s per bushel.

OATS—in moderate supply at 1s 9d per bushel.

PEAS—Scarce at 2s 9d a 3s.

POTATOES—New $1 a $1.25 per bushel; Old 4s 5d a 5s per bushel.

BUTTER—Fresh, more plentiful and selling slowly at 9d a 11d per lb.

EGGS—9d a 10d per dozen.

CHICKENS—1s 2d a 1s 10½ per pair, for all kinds.

DUCKS—2s a 2s 3d per pair.

BEEF—The very best is quoted at $5, medium 4.40, and inferior 4 per 100 lbs, sinking one-third.

SHEEP—$3 a 6 each. Lambs, 1,50 a 3 each.

CALVES—$4 a 7, and plentiful.

WOOL—1s 2d per lb. Sheepskins 3s 3d a 4s 6d each. Calfskins 6d per lb. Beefhides $6 per 100 lbs.

Married.

At Peterboro' on Friday 30th ult., by the Rev. Mr. Rogers, of the Presbyterian Church Mr. John Cranstone, of Ramskillen, C. W., to Miss Margaret Neilman, of Redcastleand, by Peebles, Scotland, passenger by steamship Indian.

Jedburgh and Peebles papers please copy.

NOTICE.

FARMERS AND OTHERS, trading in produce, liable to Market fees, are hereby notified that I have purchased the right to collect such fees, under the Market By-law by which they are authorized, and in order to conform to the Market rules, all persons interested are respectfully requested to go of their own accord to the Market Square, and give no unnecessary trouble by attempted dodging. The law will be enforced with the utmost rigor.

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.

Peterboro', Aug. 4th, 1858.

FARMS IN MONAGHAN TO RENT.

THE Subscriber offers to rent Lot No. 4 in the 11th concession of Monaghan, of which 100 acres are cleared and in good cultivation, with a brick cottage, good barns, stables and sheds. The farm is well-watered and well-fenced, and every way suited for a good farmer.—It is situated between the gravel road and the old road leading to Port Hope, and is five miles from Peterborough.

ALSO, the south half of west half of Lot No. 1, in the 11th concession of Monaghan, adjoining the village of Springville, containing fifty acres well cleared and well fenced and well cultivated. There is A good Frame Barn upon it, and plenty of water.

ALSO, the SAW MILL, with eight acres of ground, on Lot No. 3, in the 13th concession of Monaghan, five miles from Peterborough.

For terms, length of lease and other particulars, apply at this office, or to the proprietor on Lot No. 3, in the 11th concession of Monaghan.

ROBERT THOMSON.

Monaghan, August 5, 1858. 2m

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK,

THE best of the monthlies for the Ladies, and now so well known, as to render description unnecessary, is always on hand, for sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'

☞ August Number received, price 25 cts.

P. H. L. & B. RAILWAY, AND Peterborough Section.

ON and after MONDAY, AUGUST 2nd 1858. Trains will run as follows:—

Leave Lindsay, 6 40 A. M., arrive at Port Hope, 10 10 A. M.

Leave Port Hope, 3 10 P. M., arrive at Lindsay, 5 40 P. M.

Leave Port Hope, 6 A. M., arrive at Peterborough, 8 10 A. M.

Leave Peterborough, 9 A M., arrive at Port Hope 11 10 A. M.

Leave Peterborough 2 50 P. M., arrive at Port Hope, 5 P. M.

Trains run by Port Hope time.

Port Hope, August 2, 1858. 2m

SCOTLAND'S AUTHORS.

Arnott's, Rev. Wm.—Laws from Heaven for Life on Earth, or Illustrations of the Book of Proverbs $1,50
Bonar's Desert of Sinai, 2 plates 1,00
Do. Land of Promise, 5 plates 1,25
Do. Night of Weeping 0,30
Do. Morning of Joy 0,40
Do. Story of Grace 0,30
Do. Truth and Error 0,40
Do. Man, his Religion and his World 0,40
Do. Eternal Day 0,50
Boston's Four-Fold Estate 0,50
Do. Crook in the Lot 0,30
Brewster's—More World's than One 0,40
Brown's Concordance, gilt 30 cts., plain 0,20
Chalmers's Dr., Miscellanies 1,50
Do. Moral Philosophy 0,60
Do. Astronomical Discourses 0,60
Dick, Dr.,—Christian Philosopher 1,00
Duncan's—Tales of the Scottish Peasantry, Illustrated 0,30
Do. Cottage Firesides, Illustrated 0,60
Family Worship—A series of Prayers adapted to Domestic

M'LEOD & CO.,

PORT HOPE, C. W.

KEEP Constantly in Stock a good supply of ENGLISH, GERMAN AND AMERICAN

HARDWARE.

ALSO

They are extensively engaged in the Manufacture of

WINDOW BLINDS, SASH AND DOORS, AND MOULDINGS.

READER,—Call and inspect their large establishment.

McLEOD & Co.

Port Hope, November 2, 1857. 44.

Notice to the Asthmatical.

Asthma Cured for 9s!

THE UNDERSIGNED is in possession of a quick and certain remedy for this most distressing disease, and persons afflicted with it may apply to him with the utmost confidence of being restored to perfect health in a period of time almost incredibly short. Payment to be made in advance; notwithstanding, No Cure, no Pay.

Address, (if by letter, post paid,) to

R. A. MOORE.

Residence—Corner of Shortbrooke and Aylmer Streets.

P. S.—Packages with directions, sent by mail, when desired, to any part of the country.

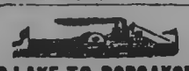
Peterborough, July 29, 1858. 28

CAUTION!

ALL PERSONS are hereby cautioned against giving credit in my name, without my written authority, as I will not be responsible for the same.

RICHARD WISCH.

Peterborough, July 15, 1858. 27



MUD LAKE TO BOBCAYGEON.

CHANGE OF ROUTE.

THE STEAMER "FLY,"

HAS discontinued running between Bobcaygeon and Lindsay. She will now make daily trips between Mud Lake and Bobcaygeon only; leaving Dunbar's wharf, Mud Lake, at 9 o'clock, returning in the afternoon. By this arrangement, parties seeking relief from the land heat, will be able to enjoy themselves a day on the back lakes where there is always a refreshing breeze, and return home in the cool of the evening. The fare each each way is two shillings and sixpence, but families, making parties, will be allowed a reduction, proportionate to the number of persons in each. No better fishing ground is to be found than that at Bobcaygeon. Pope's Stage takes passengers and freight to and from the "Fly." The Stage fare is is 10½d. Families bringing their own carriages, will find plenty of accommodation at the different hotels at the Lake.

Peterboro', June 24, 1858. 24

MUSIC! MUSIC!!

The Musical Bouquet, (English, AT 44 PER SINGLE NUMBER.

THE subscribers have now in stock, the following pieces, to which they respectfully invite the attention of the Ladies of Peterborough.

QUADRILLES.

The Scotch Quadrilles.
Piccolomini Quadrilles.
Les Chiens, (dogs) do.
The Lancers do.
The Don Cæsar De Bazan Quadrilles.
Helpsheger do.
The British Navy do.
Les Chats, (cats) do.
Bonnie Dundee do.
Les Singes, (monkeys) do.
Lucrezia Borgia do.
Les Souris, (mice) do.
The Musquetoes do.
The Irish do.
Fun in Roots do.
The Royal Lancers' do. do.
The Comic or Ratcatcher's do.

POLKAS.

Guy Fawkes' Polka.
The Laughing Eyes Polka.
Tomtit's do.
The Bobbin' Around do.
The Original do.
Ask Mamma do.
The Minnie do.
The Silverhair do.

FANTASIAS.

Gazelle Impromptu.
The Bush aboon Traquair.
La Violette.
Les Cloches Du Monastere.
We're a' Noddin'.
The Last Rose of Summer.
Fantasia on Bohemian Airs.
Partant Pour La Syrie.
Minnelieder, Brilliant Fantasia.
Roots wha hae wi' Wallace bled.
Premier Nocturne.
L'Italienne Fantasia.
Grand Galop Brilante.
Premiere Etude De Concert'.
Two Musical Sketches, Mendelssohn.

POPULAR SONGS,

WITH ACCOMPANIMENTS.

Why did my Sarah sell me.
Hey Johnny Cope and the Campbells 'are coming.
Hearts and Eyes.
Ellen Bayne.
Wha wadna fecht for Charlie.
For Ever Dear.
Some Folks.
Robbing Around.
Sound Britons Sound.
Dinah is the Girl for me.
Lilly Willy Woken.
The Lass that loves a Sailor,
The Lords of the Forest.
Lets be gay Boys.
The Village Maiden.
Come again dear dream.
The Sardinian National Hymn.
Thou art my Joy.
The North Carolina Rose.
Up for the Right.
Oh let me in the dark tomb lie.
The Fishermaiden.
The Camptown Races.
Strike Men Strike.
My Mary Anne.
Be Early in the Morning.
The Spinning Wheel.
My Nannie O.
I Must Depart.
The Greenwood Bell.
My Gentle Dove.
There's Fortune on before us Boys.

SACRED MELODIES,

WITH VARIATIONS FOR THE PIANOFORTE.

Playel's German Hymn.
Vital Spark of Heavenly Flame.
Prayer from Rossini's "Mose in Egitto."
The Heavens are Telling.
Adeste Fidelos.
Quies Animam, from Rossini.
I Know that my Redeemer Liveth.
Judges Jehovah's Awful Throne.
Eve's Lamentation.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Krazni Javolenni, Popular Cavatina.
Rondo in E flat.
Giovinne Florentines.
Ah Le Morte, from Bellini.
Les Perles Deux Valses,
D'Amore ah L'Ame.
Hurrahs Grand Galop.
Seven admired Airs from Il Trovatore.
The Druid's March.
Souvenir De Varsovie Mazurka.
Robert Toi Que J'Aime, &c.
Una Voce Poco Fa.
A la Cosa.
Still Soothy dwelling.
Rose Softly Blooming.
Vespa Vespa, from Rollini.

Any piece not in stock, procured on the shortest notice,

—ALSO—

100	Popular Songs, Music and Words	25cts.
100	Henry Russell's Songs, &c.	25 "
100	Songs of Scotland, &c.	25 "
100	Songs of England &c.	25 "
100	Popular Comic Songs, &c.	25 "
100	Negro & Americans Sk. &c.	25 "

at the

NEW BOOK, STATIONERY & MUSIC STORE,

Burnham's Block, George St. Peterborough.

SAWERS & MURRAY.

June 21, 1858 24

Miscellaneous.

RIVERS & DERIOUS'

Grand Dramatic

EQUESTRIAN COMPANY

Gymnastic, Acrobatic,

BALLET TROUPES!

☞This Establishment has been thoroughly re-organized for this season, and its strength is generally increased by the addition of some of THE FIRST ARTISTS IN THE WORLD selected in all parts by experienced Agents,—which will enable the Proprietors to give an Entertainment second to none on this continent.

WILL EXHIBIT AT PETERBORO',

On Saturday, Aug 7, 1858.

AFTERNOON PERFORMANCE AT 2, EVENING AT 7.

Price of Admission.—Boxes 50 cents, Children half price. Pit 25 cents. No half price.

Among the Grand Performances will be presented a Grand

EQUESTRIAN SPECTACLE

DENOTED THE

MUTINY IN INDIA,

OR THE

Siege of Lucknow!

With appropriate Costumes, &c. &c.

IN CONNECTION WITH

2 Grand Cavalcade

(All in Pairs,)

By 16 Ladies and Gentlemen, and followed by DASHING

EQUESTRIANISM

AND VARIOUS

Gymnastic Feats

AND

ACROBATIC EXPLOITS!

By the following Performers:

RICHARD RIVERS,
E. DERIOUS,
F. RIVERS,
G. DERIOUS,
C. RIVERS,
Mons. LETORT,
Mons. GIBINO,
E. WOODS,

The MOTLEY BROTHERS

Masters J. & T. BONDAR.

THE GROTESQUE

CONTORTIONISTS

Mons. TREXLONY and Mons. MAFFITT,

AND

The American Acrobats!

The Wonders of the Age.

LADY EQUESTRIANISM,

BY

Madlle MARGUERITE,
Madlle MARIE,
Madlle ANNETTE.

The Juvenile Corps

CONSISTING OF

Master OLONZA,
Master FREDERICK,
Master WASHINGTON,

Les Petites

INEZ, ELIZE and CLARA.

Among the Gymnastic Performers will be the following

Clowns & Jesters!

H. NICHOLS,
TOM BOLINO,
RICHARD RIVERS,
DAN,
YOUNG DAN,

Each of whom is noted for his finishing of merriment and comic and witty sayings.

POST'S

Philadelphia Brass Band!

Will enliven the entertainment with choice and appropriate Music

☞For particulars, See Show Bills.

This Company will exhibit in the following Towns:—

Percy, - - - -	Thursday,	August 5.
Norwood, - -	Friday,	" 6.
Lindsay, - - -	Monday,	" 9.
Millbrook, - -	Tuesday,	" 10.

F. COULDOCK.

Peterboro', July 29, 1858. 29

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

THE attention of Clergymen, Teachers, and others interested in Sunday Schools is respectfully invited to our large and varied assortment of

Reward Books, Tickets, Admission Cards, &c., &c., &c.,

Especially adapted for Sunday Schools, and which we will sell on the best possible terms.

A CALL SOLICITED,

SAWERS & MURRAY,

NEW BOOK AND STATIONARY STORE,

Burnham's Block, George Street Peterboro'.

Hotels, &c.,

UNION HOTEL.

Peterborough.

GEORGE ALLEN

RESPECTFULLY intimates to his friends and the public generally, that his establishment is still open for the reception of guests in his usual good style.

The house is new and beautifully situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, where travellers will find a quiet and desirable retreat.

☞A limited number of respectable BOARDERS can be accommodated.

Good Stabics and Sheds

On the premises. An Ostler in attendance, who will give the best attention to horses entrusted to his care.

Peterborough, Oct. 20th 1857. 43.

NORTH AMERICAN HOTEL.

DIVISION STREET, COBOURG.

THE above Hotel having been recently repaired, painted, and newly fitted up, and being now entirely complete in all its appointments, is now opened for the reception of the travelling public.

The House is commodious, and neither pains nor expense will be spared to make it one of the best in the Province.

The Liquors are of the best brands, and the Larder will be constantly supplied with all the delicacies of the Season.

The Stables are commodious, and an attentive Ostler is always in attendance.

The proprietor pledges himself that every attention will be paid to the wants of his guests.

☞Omnibusses will attend at the Cars and Boats to carry passengers to the Hotel free of charge.

RALPH FRANCIS,
Proprietor.

Cobourg, August, 1857. 26

AMERICAN HOTEL.

PETERBORO'.

THE undersigned, Proprietor, begs to return his sincere thanks to the travelling community and the country as well as the townspeople, for the very handsome support his Hotel has received from them. He hopes by continued attention to their wants, and careful management of the House to retain the successful business which has attended his previous efforts

The Bar

Will always be stocked with the best Liquors and Cigars.

Good care taken the in selection of servants and careful Ostlers always in attendance at the stables.

Passengers by or to the cars carried free, and stagehouse regular.

LOUIS McGREGOR.

Peterboro', 1856. 3-65

Insurances.

TIMES AND BEACON

ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....£250,000 STG.

£140,000 PAID UP.

HEAD OFFICE IN CANADA, KINGSTON, C.W.

CANADA BOARD OF DIRECTORS OR TRUSTEES:

The HON. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES MORTON, Esq., Kingston.

DIRECTORS

Chairman—M. U. STRANGE, Esq.

Vice Chairman—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.

JAMES MORTON, Esq., | A. J. McDONELL, Esq.
JOHN MOWAT, Esq., | JAMES HARBY, Esq.

AUDITORS

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Esq., Kingston,
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.

Standing Counsel—A. J. MACDONELL, Esq.

Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.

LOCAL MANAGER:

W. CLUXTON, Peterboro'.

Peterboro', March 21, 1857. 13.

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON

Fire & Life Insurance Co.

CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.

Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.

RESPONSIBILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS UNLIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTREAL.

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on almost every description of property, at as reasonable rates as any other responsible office.

Losses paid without references to the Old Country.

W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.

Peterboro.' March 24th, 1857. 12

WESTERN

Insurance Company.

CAPITAL £500,000.

Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF

FIRE & MARINE ASSURANCE

BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',

W. CLUXTON.

Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

UNITY FIRE AND UNITY GENERAL

INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS OF ENGLAND.

FOR every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.

CAPITAL £2,500,00 Sterling.

CHIEF OFFICE,—Unity Buildings, Canon St., London. Agent for Peterboro',

W. EASTLAND.

Peterboro', July, 1856.

Provincial Insurance Company.

OF TORONTO, C. W.

Subscribed Capital, $1,097,800. Paid up Capital, $120,956.

PRESIDENT, J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
VICE-PRESIDENT, HON. J. H. CAMERON.

Directors.

HON. W. B. ROBINSON.
GEO. DUNCAN, Jr., Esq.
J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
WM. L. PERRIN, Esq.
HON. J. H. CAMERON.
CAPT. P. WALLACE.
E. F. WHITTEMORE, Esq.
GEO. CRAWFORD, Esq.
JOHN CAMERON, Esq., M.P.P.
A. M. CLARKE, Esq., M.D.
DUNCAN MCDONELL, Esq.

MANAGER AND SECRETARY:

HON. J. LEANDER STARR.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY:

J. JOSEPA WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK.—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS:—Messrs. DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE:

TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurance business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as in any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Brokers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.

Toronto, April 20, 1858. 42

THE COLONIAL

Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

HEAD OFFICE—Edinburgh, Scotland, and MONTREAL, CANADA.

Proposals for assurance diligently and in Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Adviser for Peterboro,—Dr. Nesbitt.

AGENT,

W. B. READ.

Peterboro', July 20th, 1857. 30

OTONABEE WOOLEN MILL!

PETERBORO' EAST.

THE Subscribers having commenced business in the above-named Establishment, beg to state to their customers and the public generally that they have made large improvement in the Mill, thus rendering it one of the most complete in Upper Canada, and are now prepared to execute every description of

CUSTOM WORK,

INCLUDING

CARDING, SPINNING, WEAVING, FULLING, DYING, FINISHING, &c.

In first class style, and hope by strict attention to their business, to enjoy a share of public patronage.

They offer FOR SALE, or will exchange for Wool: Full Cloth, Tweeds, Satinette, Flannels, and Stocking Yarn.

Customers and the public generally are requested to give us a call and examine for themselves.

NEWTON & TEMPLETON,

Peterboro'. April 2nd, 1858. 14.

PETERBORO

TEMPERANCE HOUSE.

THE subscriber respectfully informs travellers and residents, that he has taken the building on Water Street, near Cubitt's Hotel, on a lease from Mr. John Robinson, and he intends to conduct it on strictly Temperance principles, he being himself a member of the Temperance Society. He also intends keeping

BOARDERS.

The accommodation will be such as every person will be entitled to expect, and he trusts to receive a fair share of the public patronage.

GEORGE TENNYSON

Peterboro', [illegible] 1858.

Business Notices.

PETERBOROUGH LIVERY STABLE

THE SUBSCRIBER begs to inform the public that he is always ready to furnish them with horses, sleighs, carriages, and every thing required at a Livery, on the shortest notice, and on reasonable terms. His horses are in fine condition, and everything about his establishment is in good order.

He very reluctantly has to withdraw from the long credit system, and begs all who may favor him with their patronage, to remember that he can only continue to accommodate the public, by them, in turn, enabling him to keep up his business, that is, by ready pay.

THOS. EASTLAND.

Peterboro Livery Stables, Hunter Street, Jan. 1st, 1858. 1

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC IN GENERAL.

BARNARD McGARRITY & PARTNER respectfully beg to give notice that they intend to carry on the best horse-shoeing establishment in this town. Foundered feet and every kind of foot-lameness will be attended as well as at any shop in the Province. Blacksmith jobbing of all descriptions done to order. The shop is on Bethune Street near Mr. James Hall's brick dwelling.

Peterboro', Dec. 15, 1857. 50

NOTICE.

ALL indebted to the late firm of HARVEY & THOMSON, will please call and settle without delay; and all having claims against said firm, will please hand in the same before 20th inst.

Peterboro', April 7th, 1858. 14

NOTICE.

THE Subscriber bees leare to intimate that he has sold out his Boot and Shoe Shop to A. ROSS. All debts standing out up to date, May, 27th, must be paid to him, at his Tannery, Peterboro' East.

JNO. CLARK,
Tanner.

Peterboro' East, June 8, 1858. 23

EVERY SCOTCHMAN

SHOULD read the "Scottish American Journal," published weekly. It contains the best summary of old country news of any paper published in this country, and has besides a series of articles on the "Highland Bonnets," or Achievement of the Scottish Regiments in India and Elsewhere. For sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'. Price $2,50 per year in advance, or 3d per single number.

NOTICE.

THE PARTNERSHIP existing between us, and known as the firm of Hurst & Deane is this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All Debts due to, and by, the said firm, will be settled by Henry Deane, who will grant receipts for the same.

WALTER HURST,
HENRY DENNE.

The business will hereafter be carried on by W. Hurst, who respectfully solicits a share of the Public patronage.

Blythe Mills, Peterboro', July 20, 1858. 28

BOOTS & SHOES

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform the late customers of Mr. Thomas Russell, and the public in general, that they have entered into partnership, and have made arrangements with him to succeed him in his business. They desire to assure all who favor them with their custom, that their wants will be punctually attended to, and their work done in a manner that will ensure satisfaction. They will always be found ready to receive orders, and they hope by such assiduity in their business to receive a share of the public patronage.

All kinds of ready made work kept constantly on hand, and sold on the most reasonable terms for Cash or short approved credit.

Remember the old stand opposite the Eastern entrance to the Town Hall.

O'BRIEN & MAGRATH.

Peterboro', January 12th, 1858. 2

NOTICE.

I HEREBY forbid all persons purchasing a note of hand for Thirty Dollars in Carpenters work, payable on demand, dated Dummer, 28th June, 1858, and payable to Peter McNaughton; as I have not received value for the same.

DUNCAN McKELLAR.

Warsaw, July 21, 1858.

FOR SALE.

ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND IN THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH.

THAT excellent farm of land, situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, being composed of the south parts of lots Nos. 27 and 28, in the 6th Concession of Smith, 6 miles from Peterborough, is offered for sale. The farm is thoroughly improved; has a first rate house, barn, &c., and a capital water frontage. The soil is equal to any in that section of country.

For particulars of price and terms apply to the proprietor in Peterborough.

A. SAWERS.

Smith, July 29, 1858.

Livingstone & Creighton's

PALE ALE.

THE Subscriber having made arrangements with Messrs. Livingstone & Creighton, for the sale of their ALE in this place and neighborhood, begs to inform his friends and customers in Port Hope, Rice Lake, and Peterboro, that he will be constantly supplied with the above article in Kegs and Barrels at Kingston Prices.

R. G. BLACKHAM.

Port Hope, July 20, 1858. 29—1m

LOOK OUT!

SAVE YOUR MONEY

AND REMEMBER THIS,—

"ONE DOLLAR SAVED IS TWO EARNED."

IT is a certain fact which we offer to prove to any purchaser who would wish to visit our immense Stock of

Summer Ready-made Clothing,

That we will offer for sale, (to begin the 16th instant,) at 25 per cent. under the ordinary prices.

SMALL COATS, PANTS & VESTS, FOR BOYS, Of all descriptions, may be had also.

The undersigned, in calling the public attention, will not fail to give

CHEAP BARGAINS,

To any who patronize them.

☞TERMS—STRICTLY CASH.☜

F. & L. LEMAY.

Peterborough, July 13, 1858. 27

ROOM PAPER, PAINTING, &C.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, at his shop on Brock Street, a large and varied assortment of Room Paper, among which will be found patterns of English, French and American manufacture, which he has just received, and which he will sell at the lowest possible prices, for ready pay, or short approved credit.

He keeps constantly a number of hands, who can be employed in

PAPER HANGING!

And he recommends his Stock and Workmanship to the public.

The Papers range in price from 5d per Roll, up to 17s 6d per roll, and from their great variety, he flatters himself that purchasers will find their choice.

The Painting, Glazing and Finishing business carried on as usual.

ROBERT STEVENSON.

Brock Street, Peterboro', April 6, 1858. 41

Farms, &c., For Sale.

VALUABLE FARM FOR SALE.

125 ACRES OF LAND.

THE Subscriber offers for sale 75 acres, being the west half of 23; and 50 acres, being the south east quarter of Lot No. 22, on the 7th concession of the Township of Smith. There are 60 acres cleared, a good log house and log barn two wells of good spring water on the premises The farm is in a good state of cultivation, the road runs along the front of the land; within 7 miles of Peterboro', and 3 miles of the thriving village of Lakefield.

For further particulars apply to the Subscriber, on the premises,

CHARLES FITZGERALD.

Smith, June 23, 1858. 24-tf

FARM FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale East half 6 on 7th con. and East half of 7 in 7th con. Dummer, containing 100 acres, of which

80 ARE CLEARED

In good cultivation and well fenced; a good

CEDAR LOG HOUSE,

And two large barns, with other good out houses, and a superior well close at hand.

The property is three miles from

NORWOOD,

On an excellent road, and will be sold for £2 10s an acre. From one third to one half to be paid down, the payment of the balances as agreed upon.

HENRY GARDNER.

Dummer, July 10th 1857. 26.

VALUABLE FARM, SAW-MILL, FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber is desirous of selling his property, consisting of 250 acres, 50 of which are under cultivation, comprising a

FINE YOUNG GRAFTED ORCHARD.

There is an excellent DWELLING HOUSE, with Barns, Sheds, and all other necessary Out-Houses, a good water

SAW MILL,

in good running order. The premises consist of Lot No. 9, and south-east quarter of Lot No. 8, in the 11th Concession of the Township of Monaghan. The Farm is one of the finest in the County, and most favorably situated on the Gravel Road, two miles from Peterboro. The wood land consists of hardwood and cedar, and the whole lot is furnished with a good supply of running water.

For further particulars as to terms, &c., apply on the Premises to

W. W. BOSWELL,

Peterboro, Sept. 8, 1857. 36

FOR SALE.

THE SUBSCRIBER offers for sale north half of east half of Lot No. 5, in the 5th Concession of Douro, adjoining the Church, 50 acres, 40 acres cleared, the balance in good clean wood land. There is a good House, Barns, Out-Houses, Stables, Spring, and every convenience for a good Farmer. The land is well fenced, and has been well cultivated.

The terms and price will be made known on application to the proprietor on the premises.

MICHAEL WELSH, Jr.

Lot No. 5, 5th Con. Douro, March 9th 1858.

TO LET.

TWO NEW BRICK STORES fronting on George Street, one for Dry Goods, the other for Groceries. Both finished in the newest and finest style of workmanship, and elegantly painted and varnished, equal to any in Town; the basement stories are well lighted and perfectly dry, and warranted against frost. Application to be made to the proprietor on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.

Peterboro', Feb. 1st, 1858. 5

TO LET.

That Splendid Three Story Brick Store, lately occupied by Mr. E. Peplow on Hunter Street.

Also 16 Town Lots for sale. Terms easy.

Apply to the Subscriber on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.

Peterboro', June 2, 1858. 22

NOTICE

IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Partnership lately subsisting between HENRY MORROW & ALEX. MORROW, both of the town of Peterboro', under the firm of Morrow & Brother, was this day dissolved by mutual consent

All debts owing to the said partners will be received by the said Henry Morrow and all debts due by the said firm will be paid by him.

HENRY MORROW,
ALEX. MORROW.

Peterboro', July 1st, 1858.

IN REFERENCE TO THE ABOVE, I would take the opportunity to inform my friends and the public that I will continue the business carried on by the firm in the same premises, and I hope by strict attention to business, and a thorough knowledge of the wants of my customers, to merit and receive a continuance of the patronage so liberally extended to the late firm.

HENRY MORROW.

Peterboro', July 1st, 1858. 26

Hardware.

New Stove Warehouse!!!

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform their friends and the Public that they have entered into Partnership as Stove-Dealers, Tinsmiths, &c., and respectfully invite public inspection to their new styles of Stoves, consisting in part of

The Improved Burr,
The Star of the West,
The Wide World,
The Commodore,
The Improved Canadian Farmer,
The Buffalo,
The Black Rover,
The King Stove,
The Premium.

Besides a variety of Parlor and Plate Stoves.

They also receive orders for all kinds of

COPPER, SHEET-IRON AND TIN WORK.

Which their Patrons may depend upon getting done in a manner which will give the greatest satisfaction.

A large stock of TIN-WARE, STOVE-PIPES, and other such articles belonging to their business, kept constantly on hand.

Their premises are on George Street, lately occupied by Messrs. Harvey & Thomson, and next door to Messrs. Glover & Robinson.

BIGELOW & ROBINSON.

Peterboro', October 27, 1857. 43

AXES BY STEAM

THE subscriber invites public attention to his increased facility of making the

SUPERIOR AXES

he has so long supplied to the community, and begs to assure his patrons that he will be unremitting in his efforts to retain for his work the good reputation it has hitherto enjoyed. He offers

Narrow and Broad Axes,

AND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF

EDGE TOOLS,

WHOLESALE and RETAIL, as cheap as they can be purchased here or in any other market, and of a quality that cannot be surpassed.

His premises are located on GEORGE ST., opposite the OLD BURYING GROUND, and is enable him to supply his manufactures in sufficient quantity, and at moderate prices, to be enabled to stem power to his assistance.

☞Axes Ground and Ground to grind to order.

W. BOCOCK.

Peterboro', Sept. 22, 1857.

Miscellaneous.

HATS! HATS!

THE New York and Canadian Style of Hats is now ready for inspection. Also, a large assortment of Fur Hats and Cloth Caps, &c., &c.

The Trade Supplied as Usual.

A. SECOR,
Hatter &c.

Cobourg, March 19, 1858. 12

CABINET BOOMS

RE OPENED!

THE subscriber informs his old customers and the public generally, that he has recovered from the effects of the late fire, and has erected a new building on the old site which he has fitted up as a show room. He is daily receiving and making up a choice assortment of

FURNITURE & CABINET WARE,

Of every description, which, as usual, he offers at moderate prices.

He has removed his workshop to the building just erected by Mr. Mocock, where by the use of Steam and the most recent improvements in

LABOUR SAVING MACHINERY,

He will as prepared to manufacture for sale or to order every description of Furniture, at prices unprecedent, in this Town.

W. Y. SWAYNE.

Peterboro', July 8th, 1857. 18.

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE LOT OF LAND, on the Gravel Road, about 3 miles from Peterborough, containing 35 acres, being part of the eastern portion of the North-East quarter of Lot No. 7, 11th Concession North Monaghan, on the West of John Green's Tavern, and adjoining it. Apply to the Subscriber,

WILLIAM BELL.

Monaghan, Jan. 11, 1837. 2

HORSE SHOEING.

BARNARD McGARRITY and WILLIAM MILLER, beg to inform the public, that their horse shoeing prices are as follows:—

A full set, new 6s,

Each remove 6d.

their terms are, if not Cash, well-approved credit.

Peterborough, Jan. 1st, 1858. 1

PERIODICALS, MAGAZINES, &C.

THE subscribers receive every Saturday the Weekly Periodicals in the following list, and on the third Saturday of each month the Monthlies for the next ensuing month, all of which they are prepared to supply on the annexed terms.

Orders respectfully solicited.

PER YEAR.		PER NO.
$2,25 ..	New York Ledger.....	0s 3d.
2,50 ..	Harper's Weekly.....	0 3½
2,00 ..	Ballou's Pictorial.....	0 4
3,25 ..	Waverly Magazine.....	0 4
1,50 ..	Yankee Notions.....	0 1½
2,50 ..	New York Clipper.....	0 3½
2,50 ..	Flag of Our Union.....	0 3½
2,50 ..	Scottish Amer. Journal..	0 3
3,25 ..	Leslie's Illustrated..	0 4
9,00 ..	Illustrated London News	1 0
5,50 ..	" " Times	0 1½
2,50 ..	Punch.....	0 1½
3,00 ..	Harper's Magazine.....	1 3
3,00 ..	Household Words.....	1 3
2,00 ..	Chamber's Journal.....	1 0
2,20 ..	Mrs. Stephen's Journal..	1 0
2,20 ..	Peterson's Journal.....	1 0
3,00 ..	Godey's Lady's Book....	1 3
3,00 ..	Atlantic Monthly.....	1 3
2,50 ..	New York Mercury.....	0 3
2,50 ..	" Weekly.....	0 3
2,50 ..	Rural New Yorker.....	0 3

YEARLY SUBSCRIPTIONS

MUST BE STRICTLY

In Advance.

Back Nos. must be paid for when ordered.

SAWERS & MURRAY.

Peterboro', June 23, 1858. 2

LOOK HERE.

ONLY ONE QUARTER DOLLAR!

FOR THE

VICTORIA PAPETERIE,

OR

CHEAP PACKET OF WRITING MATERIALS

WHICH CONTAINS

12	Sheets fine ruled Letter paper usually sold for.....	7½d
12	Sheets fine ruled Note paper "	4
12	Large sized Envelopes adhesive "	3
12	Note " " " "	2
3	Steel Pens.....	1
1	Holder.....	1
1	Pencil.....	1
1	Sheet Blotting paper.....	½
	Making a total of.....	1s 8d.

NOW SOLD FOR

ONE QUARTER DOLLAR,

BY

SAWERS & MURRAY,

AT THE

NEW BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE,

Burnham's Block George-st, Peterborough.

June 22nd, 1858. 24

FRESH TEAS.

JUST RECEIVED from the Ship "Cambria," direct from China, an assortment of

Hyson, Young Hyson.
Gunpowder, Twankay,

R. E. CURRY, & Co.

Peterboro', 20th June, 1858. 25

A GOOD PEN

IS A REAL BLESSING.

BUY ONE DOZEN GILT PENS, IN BOX,

FOR

ONE QUARTER OF A DOLLAR,

At Sawers & Murray's Stationery Store.

LETTER AND NOTE PAPERS.

CREAM and Blue Colors, ruled and plain.—Envelopes, all sizes and qualities to match. A very complete stock on hand. Merchants supplied on liberal terms.

SAWERS & MURRAY,
Stationers, &c., Peterboro'.

DR. J. B. ALFORD'S

ECLECTIC, MEDICAL & SURGICAL OFFICE.

CORNER OF HUNTER AND AYLMER STREETS,

Near the Residence of James Hall, Esq.,

PETERBOROUGH.

DR. A. would announce to the citizens of Peterborough and vicinity, that he has located in this place for the purpose of attending to the duties of his profession. His system of treatment is purely Eclectic, using only those agents which are safe and reliable. INVALIDS however despairing, are invited to call, as no expense will be incurred without a corresponding prospect of recovery.

Residence—American Hotel.

Peterboro', Oct. 16, 1857. 41

FARM FOR SALE.

EAST HALF Lot No. 14, in the 11th Concession of Asphodel, three miles from the Village of Norwood. There are fifty acres cleared, and good Stables, and a never-failing spring of pure water upon the premises. The Land is of a superior quality.

Terms, Liberal.

For further particulars apply to ROBERT MILLER, Otonabee, or upon the premises to W. S. SCOTT.

Asphodel, 10th June, 1858. 24tf

Miscellaneous.

BY-LAW, No.—

A By-Law to authorize the Warden of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria to issue Debentures for, and to raise by way of Loan the sum of Six Thousand Pounds for the purposes therein mentioned.

Be it Therefore enacted by the Municipal Council of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, that it shall and may be lawful for the Warden of the said United Counties to raise by way of loan and at a rate of interest not exceeding six per cent per annum from any person or persons, body corporate or politic, who may be willing to advance the same upon the credit of the Debentures hereafter mentioned, a sum of money not exceeding in the whole the sum of six thousand pounds, and cause the same to be paid into the hands of the Treasurer of the said United Counties.

And be it enacted that it shall and may be lawful for the Warden aforesaid to issue any number of Debentures for such sum or sums of money not exceeding in the whole the sum of six thousand pounds, to as many person or persons body corporate or politic as shall agree to advance on the credit of the said United Counties, such Debentures to be under the common seal of the said United Counties signed by the Warden and countersigned by the Treasurer thereof and made out in such manner and form, and payable at such periods not exceeding ten years from and after the day when this By-law shall come into operation as said Warden shall see fit.

And be it enacted that the interest on such Debentures shall be payable half-yearly at the office of the Treasurer aforesaid and the sum of six hundred pounds being the tenth part of the said sum of six thousand pounds shall also be made payable yearly at the office of the said Treasurer.

And be it enacted that the special rates enumerated and above declared shall be raised, levied and collected over and above all other rates for the years above-mentioned upon all the rateable property, according to law as above specified and defined in the said United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria for the purpose of paying the said sum of six thousand pounds with interest thereon, and the proceeds of such special rate so to be raised, levied and collected, shall be applied solely to the payment and satisfaction of such Debentures and the interest thereof until the same are fully paid and satisfied.

And be it enacted that the said sum of six thousand pounds when so loaned by the issuing of said Debentures and paid by the said Warden into the hands of the said Treasurer shall be appropriated as above mentioned.

And be it enacted that this By-law shall take effect and come into operation on the fifth day of October in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Fifty-eight.

NOTICE.

THE above is a true copy of a proposed By-Law to be taken into consideration by the Municipal Council of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria at the County Council Chamber in the Town of Peterborough on the 5th day of October, 1858, at the hour of 12 o'clock noon, at which time and place the members of the said Municipal Council are hereby required to attend for the purpose aforesaid.

WALTER SHERIDAN,
Counties Clerk.

County Clerk's Office, Peterborough, July 3rd, 1858. 26

RITCHIE'S HOTEL,

BOBCAYGEON.

THE Subscriber begs to acquaint the travelling community that he has refitted and completely furnished his Hotel for the accommodation of residents and transient visitors. He trusts that his determination to keep a first class house, and to make the visitor and traveller comfortable, will be encouraged through their support. His TABLE and BAR will always be furnished with the very best of Provisions and Liquors. The situation of the house is the best on the Island, being in the immediate vicinity of the Mills, the Steamboat Landing, the Post Office, the Government Land Agency Office, and all the important stations. Emigrants moving to the new settlement will meet with every attention, and persons seeking information about the neighborhood can depend upon the accuracy with which it will be given.

JOHN RITCHIE.

Bobcaygeon, May 26, 1858. 24

NOTICE

IS hereby given, that application will be made to the Legislature at its next sitting for a Charter to construct a Railroad from the Town of Peterborough to the Georgian Bay on Lake Huron.

Peterborough, 15th Feb'y, 1858. 8

HASTINGS' HOUSE,

PORT HOPE.

THE subscribers most sincere pleasure in announcing to the public, that they have taken the above Hotel (formerly Strange's) and have had it completely renewed and refurnished. They hope to give satisfaction to travellers and all who call upon them so to continue in their good will, everything will be done by them to secure this object,

T. W. HASTINGS & SON.

Port Hope, Dec. 1857. 21

PEOPLE'S

EXCELSIOR SKY-LIGHT DAGUERREAN GALLERY.

RICHARD PLEASE, BURNHAM'S BLOCK, GEORGE

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND
Ornamental.----Bronzing,
&c., &c., &c.,
Neatly executed, on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the
EXAMINER AND TIMES JOB PRINTING ESTABLISHMENT,
Burnham's Block,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, AUGUST 12, 1858.

Volume 3.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 31.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

Are Ten Shillings in Advance, for One Year; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING

Six lines, and under, first insertion	£0	3	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	7½
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0	5	0
Each subsequent insertion	0	1	3
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0	0	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	1

☞ Advertisements without written instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognized.

Business Directory.

MR. DENNISTOUN,
BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

E. BURNHAM,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. H. J. Vinard, Esq.

W. B. RUBIDGE,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, &c. &c. &c.
Peterboro', March 10th, 1856.

DR. HOLYWELL,
HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Babidge's.
Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,
SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' West.

M. S. MACDOWELL,
DENTAL AND MECHANICAL DENTIST.
OFFICE over A. W. Kempt's Drug Store, George Street, Peterboro.
May, 1858. 18

ALBRO & VINDIN,
Commission, Shipping, Forwarding
AND GENERAL AGENTS,
Lumber Merchants, &c.,
Port Hope, C. W.
Office—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets.

A. W. KEMPT,
DRUGGIST, Dealer in Genuine Drugs and Chemicals, Patent Medicines, Paints, Oils, Colours, Dye Stuffs, Perfumery, Spices, Hair, Nail and Tooth Brushes, Smelling and Toilet Bottles, Fancy Soaps, Culinary Essences, &c. Medical Hall, George Street, Peterboro.

HIRAM STEWART,
ACTUARY, Engineer, Land Surveyor, and Land Agent. Office, Mill Street, Port Hope.
GEO. A. STEWART.
CHAS. E. STEWART.
Port Hope, May 22, 1857. 21

JOHN HAYDEN,
Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, Window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.
King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 35—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.
INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.
Peterboro', May 20th, 1857. 22

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD,
PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.
COMMUNICATION THROUGH THE POST OFFICE,
Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S
FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.
Port Hope, Sept. 30, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,
HUNTER STREET, PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST.
MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.
Peterboro', Sept. 2, 1856. 3

W. COULTER,
Druggist and Apothecary
PETERBORO'
Dealer in Medicines, English and French Chemicals, Patent Medicines, Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Window Glass and Perfumery. Particular attention paid to putting up Physicians' Prescriptions, Family Receipts and Cattle medicines. ALSO, English American and Garden, Field and Flower Seeds. Together with an assortment of School Books, Stationery and Fancy Articles.

A. MERCER & SONS,
TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.
Peterboro', June 4, 1857. 23—ly

BANK OF TORONTO.
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.
A. MUNRO, Agent.
May, 1858. 19

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,
ARCHITECT, Civil Engineer, &c., Scotia Chambers, Queen Street.
Toronto, July 22, 1858. 30

QUARRY TO LET,
Near Peterborough.
THE subscriber offers for a term of years, the well known and well situated quarry, about one mile and a half from Peterborough, on the road to Lakefield, formerly occupied by Messrs. Chamberlain & Stewart, and now by Mr. Thomas Stewart. For further particulars, apply to
THOMAS STEWART.
Peterborough, July 15, 1858. 29

Notice to the Authentical.
Address Carte for Sale.

Provincial Parliament.

RESIGNATION OF MINISTERS.

Wednesday, Aug. 4.

Mr. Wallbridge then said—Mr. Speaker, I rise to move the adjournment of this House; and, in so doing, I beg to inform this House that the Administration have placed their resignation in the hands of his Excellency the Governor General who has signified his acceptance of the same. I am requested to add, that immediately after the vote of Monday night, the Government came to the conclusion that their only course was to ask for a dissolution. This they demanded from his Excellency, who at two o'clock this day conveyed to them his answer, refusing to grant a dissolution. The Ministry immediately tendered their resignation. His Excellency immediately accepted that resignation, and gave leave to communicate to this House, the correspondence had between them and his Excellency, which I beg leave to now read:—

On Thursday the following note was received by Mr. Brown,

(COPY.)

Toronto, Thursday July 29, 1858.

"The members of the Executive Council have tendered their resignation to his Excellency the Governor General, and they now retain their several offices only till their successors shall be appointed.

"Under these circumstances his Excellency feels it right to have recourse to you as the most prominent member of the Opposition, and he hereby offers you a seat in the Council as the leader of a new Administration. In the event of your accepting this offer, his Excellency requests you to signify such acceptance to him in writing, in order, that he may be at once in a position to confer with you as one of his responsible advisers.

"His Excellency's first object will be to consult you as to the names of your future colleagues, and as to the assignment of the offices about to be vacated, to the men most capable of filling them.

(Signed) "EDMUND HEAD."

"George Brown, Esq., M.P.P."

Immediately on the receipt of it Mr. Brown waited on his Excellency, and asked time to consult with his friends. On Friday morning he waited on his Excellency again, and stated that he had been consulting with his friends, and that he would give his final answer on Saturday. On that day he gave his answer as follows:

(COPY.)

"Saturday.

"Mr. Brown has the honour to inform his Excellency the Governor General, that he accepts the duty proposed to him in his Excellency's communication of 29th inst., and undertakes the formation of a new Administration.

"Church street,

"31st July, 1858."

On Sunday night at 10 o'clock, Mr. Brown was waited upon by the Governor General's aid-de-camp, who handed him the following memorandum:—

"His Excellency the Governor General forwards the enclosed memorandum to Mr. Brown to-night, because it may be convenient for him to have it in his hand in good time to-morrow morning.

"The part which relates to a dissolution is in substance a repetition of what his Excellency said yesterday at his interview with Mr. Brown.

"The portion having reference to the prorogation or adjournment of Parliament is important in determining the propriety of the course to be pursued.

"His Excellency therefore requests Mr. Brown to communicate the memorandum to his future colleagues, in order to avoid all misapprehension hereafter.

"Government House, Toronto, }
"August 1, 1858." }

MEMORANDUM.

"His Excellency the Governor General wishes Mr. Brown to consider this memorandum, and to communicate it to the gentlemen whose names he proposes to submit to his Excellency as members of the new Government.

"The Governor General gives no pledge or promise, express or implied, with reference to dissolving Parliament. When advice is tendered to his Excellency on this subject, he will make up his mind according to the circumstances then existing, and the reasons then laid before him.

"The Governor General has no objection to prorogue the Parliament without the members of the new Administration taking their seats in the present session.—But, if it does so, it ought, his Excellency thinks, to be on an express understanding that Parliament shall meet again as soon as possible—say in November or December. Until the new Ministers meet Parliament, his Excellency has no assurance that they possess the confidence of the majority of the House.

"The business transacted in the interval ought, in his opinion, to be confined to matters customary for the ordinary administration of the Government of the Province.

"If Parliament is prorogued, his Excellency would think it very desirable that the bill for the Registration of Voters, and that containing the prohibition of fraudulent assignments and gifts by traders, should be proceeded with and become law—subject, of course to such modifications as the wisdom of other Houses may suggest. Besides this, any item of supply absolutely necessary should be provided for by a vote of credit, and the money for repairs of the canals, which cannot be postponed should be voted.

"His Excellency can hardly prorogue until these necessary steps are taken. If Parliament merely adjourns until after the re-election of the members of the Government, the case is different, and the responsibility is on the House itself. A prorogation is the act of His Excellency, and in this particular case, such act would be performed without the advice of ministers who had already received his confidence as members of Parliament. His Excellency's own opinion would be in favour of prorogation, if the conditions above specified can be obtained, and if Mr. Brown and his colleagues see no objection.

(Signed) "EDMUND HEAD.

"Government House,
"Toronto, July 31, 1858."

Early on Monday morning Mr. Brown, on his own personal responsibility, without consulting any of his colleagues, sent the following note to his Excellency:—

"Mr. Brown has the honour to acknowledge receipt of his Excellency the Governor General's note of last night with accompanying memorandum.

"Before receiving his Excellency's note Mr. Brown had successfully fulfilled the duty entrusted to him by the Governor General, and will be prepared, at the appointed hour this morning, to submit for his Excellency's approval the names of the gentlemen whom he proposes to be associated with himself in the new Government.

"Mr. Brown respectfully submits that until they have assumed the functions of constitutional advisers of the Crown, he and his proposed colleagues will not be in a position to discuss the important measures and questions of public policy referred to in his Excellency's memorandum.

"Church Street, Monday morning 2nd Aug., 1858."

On Monday at half-past 10, Mr. Brown waited on his Excellency and gave in the names of the members of his government, and at noon they took the oaths of office. On Monday evening the vote of want of confidence was passed. On the following day, Mr. Brown advised the Governor General that he wished to have a prorogation of the House with a view to a dissolution, and handed him the following memorandum:—

"Memorandum for the consideration of his Excellency the Governor General.

"His Excellency's present advisers having accepted office on his Excellency's invitation, after the late Administration had, by their resignation, admitted their inability successful to conduct the affairs of the country in Parliament summoned under their own advice, and being unanimously of opinion that the constitutional recourse of an appeal to the people affords the best, if not the only solution of existing difficulties, respectfully advise his Excellency to prorogue Parliament immediately with a view to a dissolution.

"When his Excellency's present advisers accepted office, they did not conceal from themselves the probability that they would be unable to carry on the Government with the present House of Assembly. That House they believe does not possess the confidence of the country, and the public dissatisfaction has been greatly increased by the numerous and glaring acts of corruption and fraud by which many seats were obtained at the last general election, and for which acts the House, though earnestly petioned so to do, has failed to afford a remedy.

"For some years past strong sectional feelings have arisen in the country, which, especially during the present session, have seriously impeded the carrying on of the Administrative and Legislative functions of the Government. The late Administration made no attempt to meet these difficulties or to suggest a remedy for them, and thereby the evil has been greatly aggravated.

"His Excellency's present advisers have entered the Government with the fixed determination to propose constitutional measures for the establishment of that harmony between Upper and Lower Canada, which is essential to the prosperity of the Province. They respectfully submit that they have a right to claim all the support his Excellency can constitutionally extend to them in the prosecution of this all-important object.

"The unprecedented and unparliamentary course pursued by the House of Assembly, which immediately after having, by their vote, compelled the late Ministry to retire, proceeded to pass a vote of want of confidence in the present Administration, without notice, within a few hours of their appointment, in their absence from the House, and before their policy had been announced, affords the most convincing proof that the affairs of the country cannot be efficiently conducted under the control of the present House as now constituted.

To this an answer was returned by his Excellency, as follows:

"Memorandum.

"His Excellency the Governor General has received the advice of the Executive Council to the effect that a dissolution of Parliament should take place.

"His Excellency is no doubt bound to deal fairly with all political parties; but he has also a duty to perform to the Queen, and the people of Canada paramount to that which he owes to any one party, or to all parties whatsoever.

"The question for his Excellency to decide is not—what is advantageous or fair for a particular party? but what upon the whole is most advantageous and fair for the people of this Province.

"The resignation of the late Government was tendered in consequence of a vote of the House, which did not assert directly any want of confidence in them.

"The vote of Monday night was a direct vote of want of confidence on the part of both Houses. It was carried in the Assembly by a majority of forty in a House of a hundred and two, out of one hundred and thirty members, consequently by a majority of the whole House, even if every seat had been full at the time of the vote.

"In addition to this a similar vote was carried into the Upper House by sixteen against eight, and an address founded on same was adopted.

"It is clear that under such circumstances a dissolution, to be of any avail must be immediate. His Excellency the Governor General cannot do any act other than that of advising Parliament by the advice of a Ministry who possess the confidence of a majority in both branches of the Legislature."

"Is it then the duty of his Excellency to dissolve Parliament?

"It is not the duty of the Governor General to dissolve whatever the action of the two Houses on Monday night was, or was not in accordance with the usual courtesy of Parliament towards an incoming Administration. The two Houses are the judges of the propriety of their own proceedings. His Excellency has to do with the conclusions at which they arrive, provided only, that the forms observed are such as to give legal and constitutional force to their votes.

"There are many points which require careful consideration with reference to a dissolution at the present time. Amongst these are the following:—

"I. It has been alleged that the present House may be assumed not to represent the people; if such were the case there was no sufficient reason why on being in minority in that House, the late Government should have given place to the present. His Excellency cannot constitutionally adopt this view.

"II. An election took place only last winter. This fact is not conclusive against a second election now, but the cost and inconvenience of such a proceeding are so great that they ought not to be increased a second time without very strong grounds.

"III. The business before Parliament is not yet finished. It is perhaps true that very little which is absolutely essential for the country remains to be done. A portion, however, of the estimates and two bills, at least, of great importance are still before the Legislative Assembly, irrespective of the private business.

"In addition to this the resolutions respecting the Hudson's Bay Territory have not been considered, and no answer on that subject can be given to the British Government.

"IV. The time of year and the state of affairs would make a general election at this moment peculiarly inconvenient and burthensome, inasmuch as the harvest is now going on in a large portion of the country, and the presence of the late money crisis has not passed away.

"V. The following considerations are strongly pressed by his Excellency's present advisers as reasons why he should authorise an appeal to the people, and thereby retain their advisers in the Council:

1st. The corruption and bribery alleged to have been practiced at the last election, and the taint which on that account is said to attach to the present Legislative Assembly.

"2nd. The existence of a little sectional feeling between Upper and Lower Canada, and the ultimate danger to the Union as at present constituted, which is likely to arise from such feeling.

"If the first of these points has seemed as true, it must be asked what assurance can his Excellency have that a new election, under precisely the same laws, held within six or eight months of the last, will differ in its character from that which then took place?

"If the facts are as they are stated to be, they might be urged as a reason why a general election should be avoided as long as possible; at any rate until the laws are made more stringent, and the precautions against such evils shall have been increased by the wisdom of Parliament. Until this is done the speedy recurrence of the opportunity of practising such abuses would be likely to aggravate this character and confirm the habit of resorting to them.

"The second consideration, as to the feeling between Upper and Lower Canada, and the ultimate danger of such feelings to the Union, is one of a very grave kind. It would furnish to his Excellency the strongest possible motive for a dissolution of Parliament, and for the retention of the present Government at all hazards, if two points will only be conclusively established—that is to say, if it can be shown that the measure likely to be adopted by Mr. Brown and his colleagues will be a specific, and the only specific, for these evils, and that the members of the present Council will be the only men in the country likely to calm the passions, and allay the jealousies, so unhappily existing. It may be that both these propositions are true, but unless they are established to his Excellency's complete satisfaction, the mere existence of the mischief is not in itself decisive as to the propriety of resorting to a general election at the present moment. The certainty, or, at any rate, the great probability of the cure by the course proposed, and by that alone, would require to be also proved. Without this, a great present evil would be voluntarily incurred for the chance of a remote good.

"VI. It would seem to be the duty of his Excellency to exhaust every possible alternative before subjecting the Province for the second time in the same year to the cost, the inconvenience, and the demoralization of such a proceeding.

"The Governor General is by no means satisfied that every alternative has been thus exhausted, or that it would be impossible for him to secure a Ministry who would close the business of this session, and carry on the administration of the Government during the recess with the confidence of a majority of the Legislative Assembly.

"After full and mature deliberation on the arguments submitted to him by word of mouth, and in writing, and with every respect for the opinion of the Council, his Excellency declines to dissolve Parliament at the present time.

(Signed) "EDMUND HEAD.

"Government House,
Toronto, C. W., Aug. 4, 1858."

After this the Ministry tendered their resignation in the following words:

"Mr. Brown has the honour to inform his Excellency the Governor General that, in consequence of his Excellency's memorandum of this afternoon, declining the advice of the Council to prorogue Parliament with a view to a dissolution, he has now on behalf of himself and colleagues to tender their resignation.

"Executive Council Chamber,
4th August, 1858."

Hon. Mr. Cauchon—We ought to be informed why has been entrusted with forming a new Administration. It has been usual on such occasions to make some announcement. (Cries of "No! No!") Perhaps it is well known—at least it is known that the member for Glengarry has been sent for. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. McGee then addressed the House. He said—I had not the advantage of being here on Monday night, when the question of want of confidence in the new Administration was before this House. Nor would I rise now on the question of adjournment, but that my own name has been very frequently mixed up, in organs that are known to represent the late Administration, with some circumstances connected with the recent arrangements; and I presume that a member of this House is always in order when he is defending the trust committed to him by his constituents, and when he is showing that he has not betrayed the confidence they have reposed in him. I have read on my way back to my seat in this House—from which I was absent but a single day—I have read in journals known to represent the Administration which resigned on Thursday morning last, statements given with great circumstantiality, with great appearance of authenticity, and which it may hardly be necessary to particularise, except to say that, so far as my name has been mentioned, and so far as they are put forth to excite hostility against any member of the Government, which has just resigned, they were from beginning to end a simple fabrication. (Cheers.) I need not particularize the statements. Some of them were very absurd. Some said that I held pledges in writing, and when I went down to Montreal I found myself disposed of by half a dozen different rumors in half a dozen different methods to the satisfaction of half a dozen different cliques, who felt pleasure in propagating the half-dozen different falsehoods. (Laughter.) Such things, I suppose, are to be expected on the occasion of such crises as that we have just gone through—or at least the early stage of it—for we have this day only seen the beginning of it, unless I have entirely mistaken the public sentiment of the city I have the honour to represent, and along the line of road I have travelled during the last day or two. I believe we have only passed through one stage of the crisis, and whatever may be its other stages, I feel assured that persons who have hitherto stood high in this country will be made to experience that there is a public opinion in Canada.—(Hear, hear.) I do not wish to refer to the documents which have been read, but I presume they are public property, and I think no one can fail to see through those documents an animus in them, a dexter hand appearing through them, a lawyer like cunning and sagacity all through them.—(Cries of Order!) All my life I have been a student of style, and I can tell a professional form of expression from a non-professional, and I say a skilful technical hand has been at the framing of those documents. (Hear, hear.) The country can trace that hand, and the spirit which guided it, and the country will draw its own conclusions and act upon them. Though I have been absent during the transaction of some of the scenes which have given rise to this correspondence, the result does not surprise me. In the city of Montreal, from intimates of the Macdonald-Cartier Administration, I heard that would be the result. And at Cobourg on my way here from a respectable gentleman who had it from an intimate friend of a member of that Administration, I heard that would be the result, that the Executive would not dissolve this House, whatever advice might be tendered to him.

Mr. Gowan—Every person of common sense knew that.

Mr. Mr. McGee—Every person of common sense, that is, I suppose every supporter of the Macdonald-Cartier Administration, knew that would be the result. Well, we are learning a new lesson, and have turned a new leaf in the history of Responsible Government in this country. Every one, says the hon. gentleman, knew that the Executive of this country would not take a certain course, notwithstanding his sworn advisers might constitutionally have advised him to take that course! Every one knew the Executive would not be bound by the advice of the men he had called to his Council! If that were true, I say it would be a mockery of all Government—that anywhere in Europe or America such a course would dishonor any private or public person who resorted to it—especially a gentleman in high station. Such an one would deserve to have his arms reversed, and to have the sword that dubbed him by the title he wears broken before his face.—(Cheers and cries of order!) To go through the mockery of swearing in twelve gentlemen to be his constitutional advisers, having previously resolved that their advice he would not take, was enough, if that were true, to dishonour any gentleman occupying that high station. We are learning new lessons in Responsible Government, and before we leave this floor to-night, the representatives of Canada ought to have the fullest and most detailed explanations, in order to justify the statement made here by a habitual supporter of the late Administration, that a Government was formed, whose advice the supporters of the previous Administration knew that His Excellency would not take. (Hear, hear.) If this be so, then it appears that the new Administration, while they were going through the form of being sworn in, and getting their portfolios—that the new Administration had not, but that the old Administration still had the confidence of his Excellency—that the men he had called in and invited to be his advisers were the men whom he mistrusted and distrusted, while the men who had been discarded from his councils, the men who last Thursday went through the farce and the mockery of a resignation, were the men who still in secret retained his confidence! (Hear, hear.) If we look at the spirit which was visible and the scenes we witnessed last Thursday; and day by day afterwards, we will see carrying to confirm us in that view. On Thursday morning, the hon. gentleman went through the solemn farce, as we now see, of tendering the resignation of the Ministry, which he had been, up till midnight of the preceding day, engaged in forming. [illegible] Then, when he came down to the House, he [illegible] and that the whole plan was arranged—(Cries of order! from the Macdonald side.) Then the gibes, and jokes, and jests about changing sides, and offering the keys of desks, were all in consistency with the expectation of a successful result from the cunningly devised scheme. The hon. member for Leeds spoke about common sense, but nothing is more adverse to common sense than its counterfeit—a low, mole-like cunning. (Hear, hear.) The characteristic of the Commons of England had not been such a cunning, but an out-spoken candour. The members of the Commons House of England, of which we are but imitators, have always spoken boldly, sometimes rudely, when the rights of the people were assailed, and have told the majesty of kings to bow before the elder majesty of the people, when the two came into collision. Look at the Wilkes trials, and the time of the passing of the Reform Bill, which was referred to the other night for a precedent which was no precedent. Sometimes, Mr. Speaker, those who held your position, had to put forth all their authority, and sometimes in vain, to restrain those bold, outspoken representatives of the people, who would not be cheated of their rights by any dexterous caballing.

Mr. Mackenzie—And won't now.—(Cheers.)

Mr. McGee said he was glad to hear that response from the oldest sentinel of public liberty in Canada, and he said they ought not to leave this room until they gave a clear expression of their opinion on the trick which had disfranchised ten constituencies—a trick which, according to the member for Leeds, every common sense supporter of the Macdonald-Cartier Administration knew before-hand would be perpetrated—a trick which had deprived the country of the services of men, the most capable of governing the Province, and the most honest in their intentions to do equal justice to all classes, whether in Upper or in Lower Canada. (Cheers.) To return to the point from which he had diverged, he had said that on Thursday morning, on the occasion of their resignation, the hon seemed to be all on the side of the late Ministry. Towards evening their sky seemed somewhat overcast. On Friday it brightened a little, but there were still clouds, and in the afternoon it became squally. On Saturday it was rumoured about that after all, the gentleman who had been called in to form a Government was likely to succeed. Then there was nothing but blue despondency. He met some of the members of the late Cabinet that day, and he had never seen them looking so fagged, notwithstanding the rest they had had from their official duties. Yet their friends remained confident that the old set would soon be back, and expressed as much to him. He was absent on Monday, but he had read in the journals the extraordinary proceedings which then took place—hon. gentlemen pronounced sentence of execution upon absent members, unheard. The leaders of the late Macdonald-Cartier Government confined themselves to acting the part of prompters. They did not lead the indecent assaults on their successors in office—they only instigated them. It was the camp-followers, the sutlers, who were let loose on the reputation of men whose names were honorably interwoven with the history of this Province. (Hear, hear.)—And they took as the ground of their attack, the demand that the Administration should communicate a programme of their policy before they had been three hours in office! Why the House had had to wait five months for a policy at the hands of those hon. gentlemen who demanded that their successors should have one ready, cut and dry, in as many hours. They desired to put the hon. member for Grenville (Mr. Patrick) in a false position, by endeavouring to induce him to get up and state the intentions of a Government, who had probably held their first meeting on that very day. (Hear, hear.) On Monday night, the ex-Commissioner of Crown Lands (Mr. Sicotte) for whom—notwithstanding his evil associates—he (Mr. McGee) entertained great respect—the hon. gentleman who was so full of English precedents, could only find one precedent for the vote about to be taken, and that precedent was no precedent at all, as was shown at that time by the hon. member for Montmorenci (Mr. Cauchon.) The ex-Commissioner of Crown Lands referred to the instance which occurred in 1832 in the Parliament of England as justifying a vote of non-confidence in a Government who had not yet gone to their constituents, who had no seats in the House, and who in consequence of the restraints placed upon them by the acceptance of office, could not have permitted any other member to explain their policy for them, because had they divulged their policy to a member on the first day, before they had counselled the Executive, they would have been false to the Executive and false to their official position. But this precedent was not at all a case in point with the spectacle presented here on Monday night. On that evening a Ministry, who had only a few hours before been sworn into office and taken their official positions, whose seats had not yet been declared vacant, for whose constituencies the writs had not yet been moved, were called upon to give explanations, as if to form a policy was such plain sailing in Canada that it was the work of an hour. He appealed to any man of candour, to any one of the gentlemen opposite who was not blinded by passion or prejudice, if it really was such plain sailing in Canada—if the people were so homogeneous—if there were no questions of creed, of tongue, of blood, of history in front—that in eight or twelve hours, twelve men could, regardless of the Council board for the first time, could shape an official policy that they would afterwards like to come down and endorse as their policy for the future government of the country!—(Hear, hear.) And they have twelve regular [illegible] and they have [illegible] and all against the [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] and the moment my father felt compelled to authorise those steps which have been made the subject of so much misrepresentation, his anxiety was to obtain the opinion of the most experienced and able physicians, in order that my mother should not be subject to restraint for one moment longer than was strictly justifiable. Such was his charge to me. The certificates given by Dr. Forbes Winslow and Dr. Conolly are subjoined; and I ought to add that Dr. Conolly was the physician whom my father had requested to see Lady Lytton; that Dr. Forbes Winslow was consulted by my mother's legal advisers; and I felt anxious to obtain the additional authority of the opinion of the latter gentleman, and requested my friend Mr. Edwin James to place himself in communication with him. I trust that such journals as have given publicity to partial and inaccurate statements, will do me the justice to publish this communication, to which I need add no more than to say that this painful matter has been arranged, as it ought to be, by the members of the family, whom it exclusively regards.

Dr. Forbes Winslow gives the following certificate:

Having, at your request, examined Lady B. Lytton this day as to her state of mind, I beg to report to you that in my opinion, it is such as to justify her liberation from restraint. I think it but an act of justice to Sir Edward B. Lytton to state that, upon the facts which I have ascertained were submitted to him, and upon the certificates of the medical men whom he was advised to consult, the course which he has pursued throughout these painful proceedings cannot be considered as harsh or unjustifiable.

Dr. Conolly, in his certificate to Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton, says,

Notwithstanding the decided opinion which I felt it my duty to express with reference to Lady Lytton, after my visit to her at the private residence of Mr. and Mrs. Hill, and which, I need not repeat, justified the course you adopted, I have much satisfaction in hearing of the arrangements which have been made for her leaving their family in the society of her son, and of her female friend.

Cuba.

The question arising out of the difficulty regarding the right of visit has at length reached that position which we predicted from the first as the inevitable consequence. The British Government throws upon Spain the onus of terminating a traffic which survives only in the colonies of that power, and the Times, representing British sentiment, under the full sense of the responsibility of its position which of late years, more especially, has distinguished that journal, shows the desirableness in every point of view—with reference to the suppression of the slave trade, as well as the advancement both of American and British interests—of the United States being permitted or enabled, we may almost go the length of saying assisted, to annex Cuba. That sooner or later this object will be attained, we have as little doubt as we have that American institutions will continue to extend into the forest and prairies of the West.

It is no business of ours to advocate encroachment by the United States on the territories of other powers, though certainly we cannot pretend indifference to the progress of our own race, wherever the establishment of its power can be a gain to the common interests of civilization. In this point of view it is desirable that Cuba, as well as other regions in the South, should, at as early a period as possible, be brought under the dominion of the stars and stripes. We have justified the policy of annexation, however, with more immediate reference to the final suppression of the slave trade, and that not as an expedient that might be devised, but as the inevitable issue of circumstances, or, to use the current phrase, as the direction of "manifest destiny." Will any one disposed to call this in question, and to deprecate any further gratification the American lust for territory, be so good as to inform us in what other way the slave trade can be put down? Is Spain to be trusted if she should promise a pledge herself to suppress the traffic? She has given such pledges before, she is a party to a treaty for the express purpose of using efforts for this object, she has been subsidized by Britain for pretended co-operation in the common aim, and with unparalleled selfishness and duplicity she has not only pocketed the money in place of appropriating it as she promised, but she has also permitted the free importation of negroes into her possessions, and allowed the representatives of her authority to levy a tax on these live imports, yielding, it is believed, not less than £100,000 a year. There is every reason to credit the assertion that the Captain-General of Cuba shares this revenue with the Government at Madrid; for though that official always grows rich in a very short space of time, it is not likely that the ministers of the crown will permit such illegal plunder without partaking of it themselves. After this, what would a promise from Spain be worth under present circumstances? Would it be sufficient to warrant Great Britain to withdraw her squadron for watching the slave trade, in the belief that the trade was at an end? We imagine not. A Spanish minister is as full of good promises as a certain place is said to be full of good intentions, and you may trust to the one just as much as to the other. Is the farce, then, still to "go on?" Is the hunting of slavers to go on, at a cost to Great Britain of nearly half a million per annum? Is the slave trade itself to go on? Away with such a miserably mockery of philanthropy and political justice. In the name of common sense and humanity let us have no more of this practical hypocrisy. Deal with Spain as she deserves, and in pursuing a policy which will put an end to the slave trade, have no consideration for the perfidious coldness which alone has perpetuated it, and now renders it necessary to despise Spain of a dominion which she has abused for such nefarious purposes.—The appeal ad misericordiam which she has so often addressed to her neighbours will not in this case, it is hoped, avail her to ward off the infliction of a just retribution.

The United States have gained such a decided advantage in connection with this matter it is to be hoped that the Government will carefully guard against any course which can weaken its position. It must be satisfied to pursue its aim by straightforward diplomacy in accordance with the national dignity, without seeking to bring about a settlement, either by untimely reliance on its own part, or by permitting illegal expeditions by American citizens. In this respect it will need to avoid the course it has followed with rashness to Central America, whose its interests have been injuriously affected thereby to such an extent that the establishment of its claims is now more distant than ever. It is neither by a violent attempt at annexation, nor by so encouraging the filibustiers of Americans, that America is likely to succeed in adding Cuba to the Union. The object can be attained without losing reputation to become so unworthy of a great nation, and so calculated, as regards filibusterism, to inspire other powers with contempt for a Government which has not the strength to control even its own subjects. If America desires to acquire Cuba, let her cultivate a close and honorable alliance with Great Britain, whose pecuniary claims on Spain, and her relations to her with reference to the matter of the slave trade, cannot fail to render any representations she may make with reference to Cuba well nigh irresistable. With the light that has just been thrown on the subject, it is not likely that Britain will any longer maintain an expensive squadron for the purpose of suppressing a slave trade that is exclusively Spanish. But unless she does so there is not the slightest reason to suppose but that the trade will be re-opened with an impunity that has not been known for the last fifty years. In honor and consistency this is a result which cannot be tolerated, unless the end of the whole business is to be a practical admission that the interests of Spain in its West India possessions are of greater consequence than that cause of humanity for which Britain has made so many sacrifices, and expended such a vast amount of eloquent enthusiasm during half a century. The point of all this is obvious. Britain is bound to deal with Spain in a practical manner with reference to this difficulty, and that she is disposed to do so in a way likely to serve American interest there is every reason to believe. It is gratifying to observe that the belief is now getting thoroughly established at the other side that Britain's most serviceable, as well as most natural ally is America, and the people of the United States have only to reciprocate this belief by a spirit of equal confidence to reap many important benefits from the alliance.—Scottish American Journal.

The Agamemnon in a Storm.

The correspondent of the London Times who accompanied the telegraph fleet gives a graphic and thrilling account of the storm which almost made a wreck of the Agamemnon. A scene on board is thus described:—

Daybreak on Monday ushered in as fearful a gale as ever swept over the Atlantic. The ship was almost as wet inside as out, and so things went on till eight or nine o'clock, everything getting adrift and being smashed, and every one on board jamming themselves up in corners, or holding on to beams to prevent their going adrift likewise. At ten o'clock the Agamemnon was rolling and labouring fearfully, with the sky getting darker, and both wind and sea increasing every minute. About half-past ten o'clock, three or four gigantic waves were seen approaching the ship, coming heavily and slowly on through the mist, nearer and nearer, rolling on like green hills of water, with a crown of foam that seemed to double their height. The Agamemnon rose heavily to the first, and then went down quickly into the deep trough of the sea, falling over as she did so as almost to capsize on the port side. There was a fearful crashing as she lay over this way, for everything broke adrift, whether secured or not, and the uproar and confusion was terrific for a minute; then back she came again on the starboard beam in the same manner, only quicker, and still deeper than before. Again there was the same noise and crashing, and the officers in the ward room, who knew the danger of the ship, struggled to their feet and opened the door leading to the main deck. Here, for an instant, the scene almost defied description. Amid loud shouts and efforts to save themselves, a confused mass of sailors, boys, and marines, with deck buckets, ropes, ladders, and everything that could get loose, and which had fallen back again to the port side, were being again hurled in a mass across the ship to starboard. Dimly, and only for an instant could this be seen, with groups of men clinging to the beams with all their might, with a mass of water, which had forced its way in through ports and decks, surging about; and then, with a tremendous crash, as the ship fell still deeper over, the coals stowed on the main deck broke loose, and smashing everything before them, went over among the rest to leeward. The coal dust hid everything on the main deck in an instant; but the crashing could still be heard in all directions, as the lumps and sacks of coal, with stanchions, ladders and mess tins, went leaping about the decks, pouring down the hatchways, and crashing through the glass skylights into the engine room below. Still, it was not done, and, surging again over another tremendous wave, the Agamemnon dropped down still more to port, and the coals on the starboard side of the lower deck gave way, also, and carried everything before them. Matters now became most serious, for it was evident that two or three more such lurches and the masts would go like reeds, while half of the crew might be maimed or killed below. Captain Preedy was already on the poop, with Lieutenant Gibson, and it was "Hands, wear ship," at once, while Mr. Brown the indefatigable engineer, was ordered to get steam up immediately. The crew gained the deck with difficulty, and not till after a lapse of some minutes, for all the ladders had been broken away, and the men were grimed with coal dust, and many bore still more serious marks upon their faces of how they had been knocked about below. There was some confusion at first, for the storm was fearful; the officers were quite inaudible, and a wild dangerous sea, running mountains high, heeled the great ship backwards and forwards, so that the crew were unable to keep their feet, even for an instant, and in some cases were thrown across the deck in a dreadful manner; two marines went with a rush head foremost into the paying-out machine, as if they meant to butt it over the side; yet, strange to say, neither the men nor the machine suffered. What made matters worse, the ship's barge, though lashed down to the deck, had partly broken loose, and dropping from side to side, as the vessel lurched, it threatened to crush any who ventured to pass it. The regular discipline of the ship, however, soon prevailed, and the crew set to work to wear round the ship on the starboard tack, while Lieutenants Robinson and Murray went below to see after those who had been hurt, and about the number of whom extravagant rumours prevailed among the men. There were, however, unfortunately but too many. The marine sentry outside the ward-room door on the main deck had not had time to escape, and was completely buried under the coals. Some time elapsed before he could get out, for one of the beams used to shore up the sacks, which had crushed his arm very badly, still lay across the mangled limb, jamming it in such a manner that it was found impossible to move it without risking the man's life. Saws, therefore, had to be sent for, and the timber cut away before the poor fellow could be extricated. Another marine on the lower deck endeavored to save himself by catching hold of what seemed a plug in the planks, but, unfortunately, it was only covered by the bowsprit heel, and, of course, came out in the fearful lurch. They "Heads again, and scrambled to their feet. One of the sailors had received a severe cut on the head, and another had his arm broken. Barney [illegible] was severely bruised on the [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] of the ship were [illegible] at the degrees each way for five times in rapid succession. The galley coppers were only half filled with soup yet, nevertheless, it nearly all poured out, and scalded some of the poor fellows who were extended on the decks, holding on to anything in reach. These, with a dislocation, were the chief casualties; but there were others of bruises and contusions, more or less severe, and of course, a long list of escapes more marvellous than any injury. One poor fellow went head first from the main deck into the hold, without being hurt, and one on the orlop deck was "chevied" about for some ten minutes by three large casks of oil which had got adrift, and any one of which would have flattened him like a pancake had it overtaken him.

A Norfolk Island Story.

A good man struggling with affliction, is according to the old heathen saying, a spectacle for the Gods. If we might confound times and places, we should say that the old shadowy worthies of Olympus and the Capitol must, upon this principle, have received the most intense satisfaction from the relations lately existing at Norfolk Island between one Major Child and that unfortunate Mr. Barber, of whose wrongful condemnation and sufferings all the world has heard. We are about to call the attention of our readers to a very dreadful story; many of the details are of a very unsavory character but this we cannot help. The shame is in doing such things, not in denouncing them to public indignation. We are well aware that in telling the tale in the following fashion we shall be liable to the reproach of relying upon an ex parte statement. We take, however, Major Child's story from his own lips, and Mr. Barber is not heard in reply. Still let it go for what it is worth. This is the story which Major Child himself, anxious to place his conduct in the point of view most favorable to himself, would have us accept as truth. Better than he himself has represented it his conduct could not have been—worse, infinitely worse, it may have been—but we shut Mr. Barber out of court, and take the account of the relations of his cruel adversary and himself from the adversary's own lips. Even so, what a tale!

It is right to premise that the following narrative was extracted from Major Child a day or two ago by a Committee of the House of Commons:—Major Child was commandant of Norfolk Island at the time when Mr. Barber and Fletcher, his guilty partner, disembarked, as convicts, at that miserable place. Applications were made to Major Child by persons who had been willing to employ Mr. Barber in the capacity of clerk, but their applications were sternly refused. There were regulations, according to Major Childs statement, made by Sir Eardley Wilmot, the governor, to the effect that no prisoner should be employed in any light labor until he had been twelve months on the island. This was a general order with regard to all convicts. It appeared however, that Fletcher, the man who really perpetrated the crime of which Mr. Barber had been wrongfully accused and wrongfully convicted, was from the time he arrived on the island employed as a medical dispenser and never in any other way. He had a private apartment and superior rations. Augustus Dalmas, who was convicted of the murder on Battersea Bridge, was similarly employed as a chemist. Several other great criminals—murderers among others—were kept at light occupations. Now, Mr. Barber, a man of education, of weak frame, and with his health shattered by the persecutions he had undergone, was immediately upon his arrival in the island made a wardsman.—Major Child describes the duties of the office thus: "He was put to the offensive employment of cleaning and scrubbing out the urinals of about 200 prisoners." He was compelled to sleep at night with those wretched creatures. The natural consequence was that his health gave way, and repeatedly he had to be sent to the hospital, but as frequently as he came out he was consigned again to his noisesome occupation. The medical superintendent at last, upon his own authority, as we read Major Child's story, sent him to break stones on road as a relief, and such relief to a man who was spending one week of his life in an hospital and the next week out of it!—Major Child, however appears to have grudged even this slight measure of relief in the shape of open air and outdoor exercise to the man whom he had determined to reform by suffering. A few days after Mr. Barber had been set to stone-breaking on the roads Major Child was out taking an airing on horseback, and, as ill-luck would have it, came across the unfortunate convict. He pulled up, and said, "What do you here?" Mr. Barber answered, "Sir, I am ordered to break stones by the medical superintendent." Major Child's reply was simple, but to the purpose—"I will not have that." He rode up to the station and gave orders that this unfortunate gentleman should be consigned once more to his loathsome occupation. One day, when he was engaged upon it, Major Child came in and asked him, "What is your objection to cleaning your ward?"—Mr. Barber answered, "I have made no objection; it is destroying my health, but I have made no objection." Major Child asked, "How does it injure your health?" Mr. Barber endeavoured to explain that the work was the most disgusting that could be imagined; he cared not how hard the task might be which was imposed on him in lieu of an office so humiliating and so nauseous; but all was unavailing. Major Child simply rejoined as before, "How does it injure your health?" Mr. Barber replied, "That is of no use, they will soon get filled with water." "Then take them off?"—With this humorous rejoinder Major Child strode away, according to Mr. Barber's account, laughing at his own wit. The only modification of the story which Major Child could suggest to the Committee of the House of Commons the other day, was, "I do not think I laughed at his misery."—With this difference he acknowledged that the account might stand.

This state of things continued for a time and Major Child kept this unfortunate gentleman, whom unfavard fate had placed in his power, hard at work upon his daily occupation of emptying and scrubbing the urine-tubs of 200 convicts. He was repeatedly entreated to have mercy, but mercy he would not have. It was not until the medical superintendent and chaplain threatened that if he would not liberate Mr. Barber from an occupation which was killing him they would hold him responsible for the death of the innocent convict that he desisted from this form of persecution. Mercy he had at last, but this mercy consisted of setting Mr. Barber to hard stone breaking on the roads. "Then," said Mr. Barber, "I will work no more." Major Child's reply was, "Then you will be flogged." Mr. Barber replied, "I will not be flogged." Major Child's reply was, "Then you will be hanged." Mr. Barber replied, "I will not be hanged." Major Child's reply was, "Then you will be shot." Mr. Barber replied, "I will not be shot." Major Child's reply was, "Then you will be sent to Sydney." Mr. Barber replied, "I will not be sent to Sydney." Major Child's reply was, "Then you will be sent to Hell." Mr. Barber replied, "I will not be sent to Hell." Major Child's reply was, "Then you will be sent to Norfolk Island." Mr. Barber replied, "I am sent to Norfolk Island

THE ATLANTIC CABLE.

MR. FIELD'S LOG OF THE OPERATIONS.

Opening Expected in a Few Days.

TRINITY BAY, Aug. 7.

Mr. Field's log states that the Niagara arrived at the rendezvous on the 23d, and the Valorous on the 25th, the Gorgon on the 27th, and the Agamemnon on the 28th. The splice was made on the morning of the 29th, at 7-45. In the evening signals from the Agamemnon ceased, and the electricians reported a want of continuity of cable, but insulation perfect. We kept on paying out, and at half-past 11 o'clock. p. m., again commenced receiving perfect signals from the Agamemnon. 30th—Distance 99 miles; payed out 131 miles, depth of water 1150 to 1975 fathoms. 31st—Distance 137 miles; payed out 159 miles, depth 1,637 to 2,200 fathoms. 1st—Distance run, 145 miles; payed out 164, depth 1,950 to 2,400 fathoms. 2nd—Distance run, 154 miles; payed out 177, depth 1,900 to 2,200 fathoms. Niagara getting light and rolling much and not considered safe—carrying sail to steady the ship, for in case of accident it might be necessary to stop the ship as soon as possible. At 2-30 in the morning, imperfect insulation detected in sending and receiving signals. All right at 3-40—fault in the after part of the cable, or about sixty miles from the lower end, which was cut out and taken out of circuit. 3rd—Distance 147 miles; payed out 169, depth 740 to 1,920 fathoms. At 1-15 a. m., received signals from the Agamemnon that she had payed out 780 miles. Nine o'clock, p. m.—Received signals from the Agamemnon that she was in 200 fathoms water. Ten o'clock p. m. —Niagara in the same depth. 4th—Distance 146 miles; payed out 154, depth under 200 fathoms. Made land at the entrance of Trinity Bay at eight o'clock in the evening. Entered the Bay at half-past 12. 5th, 1-45 a. m.—Anchored.—Distance 64 miles; payed out 66. Total —1,016 miles. Distance 882 miles.—Two o'clock a. m.—Landed. Informed the telegraph companies that the fleet had arrived. Forty-five minutes past 2 a. m. —Received a signal from the Agamemnon that she had payed out 1,010 miles. Fifteen minutes past five a. m.—Cable landed. Six o'clock, a. m.—Cable carried to the Telegraph House, where a strong current was received from the other side of the Atlantic. Captain Hudson read prayers and made some remarks. One o'clock p. m.—Gorgon fired a Royal salute of 21 guns. 6th—Receiving strong electric signals from Valentia all day. Note—Landed here in the woods until the instruments were ready and perfectly adjusted. Communications cannot pass between the continents, but electric currents pass freely. It may be some days before the line is in working order.

TRINITY BAY, Aug. 8.

The people here seem to have little faith in the laying of the cable—they have made very slight preparations. One end of the Atlantic cable was landed on the Irish coast, by the Niagara, on the 5th of August, 1857. The shore end from the Valentia laid last year, remains; so that both ends have been naturally laid by the Niagara.

NEW YORK, Aug 9.

We understand that the recording instruments for the Atlantic cable are in such a state of forwardness as to ensure the early opening of the line for business. It is understood that the transmission of the Queen's and the President's first message through the cable will take place early in the afternoon, and probably in the course of the present week. Instantly after the transmission of the President's reply to the Queen's communication, the two messages, by consent of the President and co-operation of the managers and employees of the telegraph lines throughout the country, will be made public, from Quebec to the boundary of civilization in the north-west. We have assurances from all points that as soon as the Queen's and President's messages are received, there will be public and private demonstrations of joy by the ringing of bells, firing of salutes, &c., in every city, town and village throughout the whole country. It is understood that Mr. Field will cause notice to be given in advance of the day when the first message will be transmitted through the cable.

DEDFORD, PA., Aug. 7.

A large crowd assembled to day to congratulate the President on the success of the Atlantic cable. It is estimated that 1500 persons were present. The following is Mr. Field's reply to the President: —"Trinity Bay, Aug. 7.—To His Excellency Jeems Buchanan, President of the United States, Bedford Springs.—Your telegraph dispatch is received. We landed here in a wilderness, and until the telegraph instruments are all perfectly adjusted no message can be recorded over the cable. You shall have the earliest information, but some days may elapse before all is effected. The first message will be from the Queen to yourself, and the first from America to England your reply. With great respect, very truly your friend,—C. W. FIELD."

Arrival of the "Nova-Scotian."

Quebec, Aug. 8th, 1858.

The Nova-Scotian sailed at 11 a.m. on the 28th.

GREAT BRITAIN.

In the House of Lords on the 27th, the subject of right of search was debated.

Lord Lyndhurst raised profusion of correspondence with the American Government, and expressed a strong opinion that except as a belligerent right, no country was entitled to exercise a right of visitation.

Lord Malmesbury promised to lay the correspondence on the table as far as it had gone. He stated that the opinion of the law officers of the Crown coincided with that of Lord Lyndhurst; Government consequently responded to the American government its intention to give up the assumption of the right of visitation search, at the same time suggesting, that measures be taken to secure a verification of the nationality of vessels. The French and American Governments expressed a willingness to consider any suggestion made on the subject.

Lord Aberdeen stated that in 1842, he had written in Washington, announcing the intention by the British government to visit and search American vessels in time of peace, except there were grounds for believing that the flag had been fraudulently assumed. He feared the recent difficulty had been produced by the zeal of cruisers converting into rule what was only intended as exception.

Lord Malmesbury observed that the difficulty had arisen in consequence of the American government pertinaciously refusing their vessels carrying the American flag to be examined, whether the flag were fraudulently applied or not.

The Bishop of New Caledonia is now called "Bishop of Columbia," and under that title, a bill making provision for its Government has passed the second time in the House of Commons on the 27th.

In the Commons the Lords Amendments Bill was considered, and several clauses agreed to. In one incidental division Government was left in a minority of thirteen.

Sir John Buller was raised to the peerage under the title of Lord Charleton.

Mr. Barber, lately acting British Consul at Naples, where he took a prominent part in the Cagliari affair, has been appointed Consul at Richmond, Va., vice James, who takes Consulate at Venice.

It is officially announced that Victoria and Prince Albert will pay a private visit to their daughter Princess Frederick William at Potsdam in August.

The customary ministerial whitebait dinner at Greenwich, in celebration of the approaching prorogation of Parliament, took place on the 24th; all ministers present.

The returns of the British board of trade for June, show continued falling off in exports, though not to the same extent as in previous months.

At a public meeting of the Jews in London, a committee was appointed to consider the best method of celebrating the admission of Jews into Parliament.

Furious storms with rain had prevailed in England; crops in some parts had suffered. Shipping on the coast had sustained numerous disasters with loss of life. American ships are known to have been damaged.

London Times reports funds weak on 27th. India and China news produced no effect on bullion. Operations at the Bank quite unimportant.

FRANCE.

Count Cavour, the Sardinian minister, has been on a visit to Emperor Napoleon at Plombieres. A conference between them on the affairs of Italy, is said to have taken place.

Symptoms of revival of trade in France continue to be manifested. Large orders from the United States had reached Lyons.

Wheat crop although not so abundant as last year, ranked among the best fair average crops.

The speech for the inauguration at Cherbourg is said to have been elaborated by the Emperor, and will embody the whole policy of France, as well as announce the pacific result arrived at by the Paris Conference sittings, which were expected to terminate before the Cherbourg festival took place. It is stated the Conference resolved that Moldavia should pay 2,500,000 Turkish piastres as annual tribute to the Sultan; and Wallachia one million five hundred thousand piastres.

ITALY.

Trial at Salerno of Baron Meatra and others, charged with a revolutionary attempt last year, had resulted in seven prisoners being condemned to death, several others to fifteen years in irons; some to less severe penalties, and many set at liberty. Orders were issued to suspend sentence of death. It was thought that sentence would not be carried into effect.

SWITZERLAND.

A Berne telegram says the Committee of Council of States has unanimously recommended the rejection of the application of the Genoese Government against the expulsion or sending into the interior of political refugees.

The election for President resulted in victory to the moderate liberal party. Frei Herose, of Basle, was chosen President.

EGYPT.

Advices from Alexandria mention Christians being threatened and insulted in that city, but offenders were immediately arrested. The garrison of 8,000 men, and energetic measures adopted, prevented all apprehensions of danger.

Disturbances among the mountain tribes in Syria continued.

CHINA.

The last China news shows that the forts at the mouth of the Peiho were carried in two hours and occupied by 15,000 of the Allies, who demolished the works. A fleet of junks in the river were burnt. The Allies had 88 men disabled in an unsuccessful attack of the braves around Canton.—Some 60 men were disabled by sun-stroke, while 18 were killed, wounded, or made prisoners.

Lord Elgin's intention was said to be to push forward and negotiate at Pekin.

Mr. Reid, U. S. Commissioner, is said to have been very useful as a "go between."

INDIA.

Calcutta mails to June 18, had reached England, but contain nothing important.

It was reported that Sir Colin Campbell had been suffering from illness.

The condition of affairs in Oude were considered most disastrous.

So hot a season has not been known for years. The troops are housed all over the north west.

AN ISRAELITE COLONY.—Duke's Place as the costers have christened it, is a large square yard, with a dead wall forming one entire side and a gas lamp on a circular pavement in the centre. Every householder in it is a Jew. The place looks as if it were devoted to money making, for it is quiet and dirty. Over the shops are no names in gilt letters; there is no display of plate glass or glass mouldings, such as in the crowded thoroughfares where the customer is to be caught by show. The Israelite gorebeasts know their trade to be so certain that they are content to let the London smoke do their painter's work.—Never did property in Chancery look more ruinous, for every house seems in the last stage of dilapidation. The beams and ceilings are as black as if fire had raged in the dwelling—not a shop in the market but is windowless and open as a cookshed—and beyond the few baskets of nuts exposed for sale, they are empty, the walls within being blackened with dirt, and the paint without blistered by the sun, while the door-posts are worn round with the shoulders of the customers, and blackened as if charred.—A few dejected-looking bens wander about, turning over the heaps of dried leaves that the oranges have been packed in, or scape the time away roosting on the rails and wheels of the nearest truck. Excepting on certain market days, business is slack in Duke's Place, as that many of the shops have one of two shutters up, in if death had taken place, and the large yard is as quiet as that of a quondam posting-house. At a little distance the warehouses, with low ceilings, open fronts, and black sides, seem like dark holes. Were it not for the mahogany backs of chairs visible at the first floors, nobody would believe that the houses are inhabited, but in these drawing-rooms the floors are covered with thick Turkey carpets—old paintings in georgeous frames hang against the walls, and most comfortable easy chairs stand on each side of the fire-place. There are not handsomer mahogany chairs, richer pier-glasses, or more elegant chandeliers to be found in a west-end mansion than those with which these Jewish saloons are furnished.—Pearl cuth Child.

We understand that Mr. Thos. D'Arcy McGee has given notice of his intention to establish a Daily Paper in this city.—Montreal Paper.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Property in Omemee For Sale—Joshua Dawson.

Opening of the Good Templars' Hall.

The Examiner.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 12, 1858.

The Cartier—Macdonald Ministry.

LOWER CANADA.

Cartier—Attorney General and Premier.
Galt—Inspector General.
Alleyn—Provincial Secretary.
Belleau—Speaker Legislative Council.
Sicotte—Com. Public Works.
Rose—Solicitor General East.

UPPER CANADA.

Macdonald—Attorney General.
Rose—President of the Council.
Vankoughnet—Com. Crown Lands.
Smith—Post Master General.
Sherwood—Receiver General.
Solicitor Generalship vacant.

The Ministerial Changes.

Hardly had the construction of Mr. Brown's Government been announced, when the House of Assembly and the Legislative Council voted a want of confidence, and that even before either had informed itself of the policy it had agreed to sustain.—Consequent upon this vote, it devolved upon the Cabinet to submit to his Excellency the Governor General a proposition for adjournment preparatory to a dissolution.—Sir Edmund Head rejected their advice, as will be seen by a written memorandum which we copy, and consulted Mr. A. T. Galt, of Sherbrooke. This gentleman declined to engage himself in the task of forming an administration, and Mr. Cartier was sent for. Under his auspices, a Cabinet was formed, being composed of the late administration, led by Mr. John A. Macdonald, excepting only two, Messrs. Loranger and Cayley, they making way for Messrs. Galt, and Sherwood of Brockville. Having thus reformed the Cabinet, the next thing to do was, to avoid sending the old Ministers for re-election to their constituencies. This they managed in a most unworthy manner. The law, as it is explained by "The Independence of Members of Parliament Act," being that members accepting the departments must, thereupon, be re-elected, unless only where there has been a relinquishment of one office, and an acceptance of another, within a month.—In the instance before us, there has been no such interchange. The government of Mr. Macdonald went out, and the gentlemen of which it was composed returned to the simplicity of their original condition, as before they were appointed. Mr. Brown's government succeeded them, and though it lived but a few hours, it entirely separated the connexion between the late Cabinet, and the one which then followed. Yet Mr. Cartier's administration claim that the month's grace continues good to them by their adopting the tortuous course of accepting, for the moment, other departments than they held before. The object of the remedial clause in the Act was to facilitate the departmental arrangements of the government, and secure the efficiency of the public officers; to make it operative now, is to misconstrue the intention of the House, when it was passed, and all to secure the delinquents from their just deserts, at the hands of the country. The House has, however, decided to sustain them in the trick.

Separate Schools.

The School Question is, without doubt, the most difficult of settlement, of all the disputed subjects of Upper Canadian legislation that at this time press themselves upon the attention of the country and the government. On one side, there is a powerful party claiming upon the most forcible of all arguments, the dictates of conscience, that the State shall not interrupt their system of secular and religious instruction, according to which they desire their children to be taught, by requiring them to support common schools without a religious foundation, granting relief only as an indulgence, and not as matter of right, and in such measure as the State thinks expedient. On the other side, by far the most powerful party insist that religious instruction is not for the State, but belongs exclusively to the parent and the spiritual director, and that, therefore, the public endowments for education should be confined to such establishments as recognize this fundamental principle of their policy. Much argument has been expended on both sides, during which the Roman Catholics, by calling to their aid their co-religionists of Lower Canada, succeeded in forcing the Legislature to insert a clause in the School Act, intended to enable them to separate from the great body of school supporters, and establish with the funds of their own contribution, schools upon their own peculiar model. Although the Roman Catholics still complain that the relief so granted to them is not as complete as they could desire, they have, nevertheless, taken advantage of it, in some neighborhoods, to carry out their purpose of separation, but not in every instance with success; the common schools often proving to be the better seats of learning, from the larger numbers that attend them contributing larger sums of money to their support. Thus it is remarked that, having their choice, many Roman Catholics are led to prefer the common schools, and send their children to them, to the great satisfaction of all who conscientiously desire to see the youth of the country grow up in mutual confidence and good-fellowship. In this Town there is an instance of the working of the separate school clause, in the erection and support of a Separate School, but it also furnishes instances of continued confidence in the Common School, as has been witnessed by the attendance of Roman Catholics who made it their choice. But it is to be feared that this state of happiness cannot survive the rude shock which has been aimed at its secular character by the introduction of the religious element, under the authority of the Board of Trustees. There are, it is to be hoped, few among the liberal minded of this community who endorse the surly doctrine of the Peterborough Review, that, there being a Separate School in existence here, no further regard is to be had for the feelings of such as might send their children to it, but who prefer to place them under the charge of the Board of Grammar and Union School Trustees. According to the Review the erection of a Separate School transforms its parent immediately also into a Sectarian School, and those who are admissible into the Separate School, if they remain in the Common School, become intruders. Here is his language upon the resolution of the Board, making four Clergymen, members of the Board, directors of the manner in which the Sacred Scriptures shall be read in the School:

"Were there no separate school in Town we should object strongly to the resolution; but the only parties who could feel aggrieved by the introduction of the Bible as a reading Book, having voluntarily separated themselves, we cannot see that any objection can be urged to the resolution, the hifalutten trash of one of the members, notwithstanding. We cannot afford to allow separatists to control their own schools and ours too."

In regard to the last paragraph we may remind this liberal champion of separate schools that the Clergy Reserve money, coming to this Municipality, to be disposed of as its Council should think fit, was passed from them to the Grammar and Union School, and, when application was made from the Separate School, for what would be their share if it was divided, they were refused, on the ground that the Union School was common to all. Is the Review willing to retain all the money and all the advantage at the same time?

As to the denial that Upper Canada refuses to encourage Separate Schools, no better proof need be offered than that almost every one of her representatives in parliament is pledged to oppose them; the separate school clause was forced on Upper Canada by the representatives from Lower Canada.

Nothing can be more unfortunate, at the present time, to the cause of Common Schools, than that their advocates should seize upon every excuse for widening the breach that is already too large. If they are really sincere in their professed desire for the exclusion of the sectarian principle, they would not surely excuse themselves for adopting it, that they had the opportunity. Nobody ever does anything without an opportunity, and if that were a good reason, no wrong would ever go undone, that promised advantage. The principle ought to be one of conciliation as well as good policy. If we cannot keep those who desire to separate, from making their experiments, we ought at any rate to hold ourselves in readiness to receive them on their return. We profess to admire the common school principle, yet we do not hesitate to change it for sectarianism, when it is to our fancy; can we then claim confidence in our sincerity, from those who already view us with suspicion, and who fear they see in our system a disposition to destroy the faith of their youthful members in the altars of their fathers. Better and more honest were it for those pretended friends of common schools to throw off the mask at once, and proclaim their doctrine of religious edneation at the expense of the State, rather than unworthily drag in the Bible, as an instrument to accomplish their designs. The man who will circumscribe its teaching, by refusing to have its difficult passages made intelligible to enquiring minds, does not partake of it's spirit. Such are they who are content that it shall be read in school where instruction only is sought after, without note or comment. If the Bible is to be a class book, let it be treated, not as a dead letter, nor as an English reader, but as the giver of life, requiring more attention, and affording more instruction, according as it is understood, than any other book. And if it is determined that it is necessary to educate the youth in it's principles, at the same time that they receive the education in the things of the world, let it be done openly and without reserve, and then let every religious body teach according to its own doctrine; a determination which involves the entire destruction of the common school system, and the consequent withdrawal of opportunities for learning from a large proportion of the youth of the country. We need not say how averse we are to such a consummation of error, but to avoid it, there must be no smuggling of religion into school. By the mixed state of our population, nothing suits so well as the Common School without religious teaching, and the church, the sabbath school, and parental guardianship with it.

The Atlantic Telegraph.

The whole continent knows by this time that the Atlantic Cable has been successfully laid. There have been no messages as yet, but in a few days all is expected to be perfect. The doubtful part of the experiment is entirely removed. The greatest undertaking that ever sprung from the imagination of man is now completed, and the two continents are made one.

☞The Circus performances of Messrs. Rivers & Dorion, on Saturday were of a superior kind. The horses were good and well conditioned, and the riders quite up in their equestrianism. The tumbling was extraordinary, and the gymnastic feats of strength and activity, admirable. The music was very good; and the bearing and appearance of the whole corps showed that these did first rank among artists of their class, as well from the excellence of their performances as by the apparent respectability of the performers.

The Toronto Election.

The days of nomination and polling, in Toronto, are not yet announced. Mr. John Hillyard Cameron contests the city with Mr. Brown, as he says in his address, "upon the broad constitutional issue that has been raised between the Representative of her Majesty and the Brown Administration." If there is any justice in reason, Mr. Cameron will lose, for the Representative was wrong when he concluded to act independently of the advice of his Council, before he knew what that advice would be; and the Representative was also wrong, when he refused to dissolve the House, under the advice tendered by his Council. The Governor General had no more right to call upon Mr. Brown to advise him, when his mind was made up not to be advised, than Mr. Brown would have had to stipulate for the use of the prerogative, before he took office. Mr. Brown's answer to his Excellency's memorandum of Sunday evening, throws back upon him his declaration of what he would do, if asked to dissolve. Mr. Brown tells him very curtly that it was an impertinence, and it would be time enough to open such correspondence when there would be a cabinet to correspond with. If the Representative did not like Mr. Brown's answer, he could have told him his mind was changed, and that he did not want him; there would then have been no harm done, Mr. Brown and his friends would not have vacated their seats. Sir Edmund Head has not added to his laurels, by the part he has played in the late ministerial crisis.

Close of the Session.

Attorney-General Macdonald gave notice in the House, yesterday, that the Session would close on Saturday next. The elections following the vacating of seats by the members of the Brown-Dorion Administration, will, for the time, supply the political excitement, that would otherwise, in a great measure, subside with the prorogation of Parliament.

The Society of Good Templars

Open their new Hall, in Lundy's Block, on Thursday next. The supporters of the Temperance cause will, no doubt, be eager to assist this excellent organization, in its ambition to do good to mankind. The encouragement of public sympathy goes very far to sustain unpaid exertions in the service of other people, and, as there can be no opposite opinion concerning the general advantage of such associations, it is to be hoped that no ordinary excuse will be made, by the friends who may not find it convenient to aid the cause by participation in the promised enjoyments of the evening.

Provincial Parliament.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY.

SATURDAY, Aug. 7, 1858.

The Speaker took the Chair at 11 o'clock and informed the House that he had received a communication from the Governor General, that it was his Excellency's intention to come down at 4 o'clock that day to give his assent to bills.

THE BOARD OF WORKS.

Mr. DUBORD said that, by some little exertion in the Committee of Public Accounts, he had succeeded in bringing the state of the Board of Works prominently before the public. He had shewn that the system under which a man was not responsible to the people, practically controlled that department, was calculated to lead to great corruption. But, looking at the list of the new Ministry, he was glad to see that a gentleman was now at the head of that department (Mr. Sicotte) who was not to be trifled with. After some further remarks, Mr. Dubord moved for leave to introduce a Bill, intituled, an Act to amend the law relative to Public Works, and to abolish the office of Assistant Commissioner.

Mr. MACKENZIE said that the introduction of this Bill at the end of the session was a bit of clap-trap. He objected to the motion being put without notice.

Mr. DUBORD then withdrew his motion, and gave notice of it for a future day.

THE NEW MINISTRY.

Hon. Mr. CARTIER then rose and said, —I have the honour to announce to the House that on Wednesday afternoon, after the resignation of the late Government, His Excellency the Governor General called upon the late member for Sherbrooke (Mr. Galt) seeking from him his help in a formation of a new Government. After some interviews between His Excellency the Governor General and Mr. Galt, Mr. Galt declined that important duty. Upon that, His Excellency conveyed to Mr. Galt his desire that he should be kind enough to wait upon me, in order that I should at once repair to the Government House to see His Excellency. The message of His Excellency was intrusted to me late on Wednesday night, during the sitting of the House, and it was impossible for me to go at once to the Government House; but I got an appointment for 10 o'clock the following morning. At the appointed hour, I had an interview with His Excellency, who communicated to me his desire that I should undertake the task of forming a Government. I said to His Excellency that I would have no objection to undertake that important duty; but, before doing so, I would like to ascertain from His Excellency if he had any objection that, in that important task, I should be assisted by, in fact act in conjunction with my present hon. colleague, the Attorney General for Upper Canada. His Excellency told me that I was free to act as I pleased, and that he would be pleased with anything that I should do. (Laughter.) I intimated to His Excellency that I knew that Mr. Macdonald, on account, of the state of his health, was desirous of retiring from public life.

Mr. MACKENZIE—Dear me! Old age and infirmities. (Laughter.)

Mr. CARTIER—But I mentioned to His Excellency that I hoped Mr. Macdonald would yield to my desire. So I went to Mr. Macdonald and communicated to him the object of my visit, and it was with great reluctance that my friend at last yielded to assist had charge with me in the formation of the new Government.

Mr. MACKENZIE—That's very fair.

Mr. CARTIER—Well, Mr. Speaker, I am happy to announce to the House that my friend and myself have been successful in the task undertaken, and that I have to announce the formation of a Government. Yesterday His Excellency was pleased to make the following appointments:—Hon. J. A. Macdonald to be a member of the Executive Council, and to be Postmaster General of the Province, in room of Hon. M. H. Foley, resigned. Myself to be a member of the Executive Council, and Inspector General in room of Hon. George Brown, resigned. Hon. P. M. Vankoughnet to be a Member of the Executive Council, and Commissioner of Crown Lands, in room of Hon. A. A. Dorion, resigned.—Hon. Mr. Sicotte, to be a member of the Executive Council, and Chief Commissioner of Public Works, in room of Hon. L. H. Holton, resigned. Hon. Mr. Belleau, to be a member of the Executive Council, and Speaker of the Legislative Council, in room of Hon. J. Morris, resigned. Hon. C. Alleyn, to be a member of the Executive Council, and Provincial Secretary, in room of Hon. O. Mowat, resigned. Hon. S. Smith, to be a member of the Executive Council, and President of the Committees of Council, in room of Hon. Mr. Thibaudeau, resigned. Mr. A. T. Galt, to be a member of the Executive Council. Mr. John Rose, to be a member of the Executive Council and Receiver General of the Province, in room of Hon. F. Lemieux, resigned. Mr. George Sherwood to be a member of the Executive Council. This morning His Excellency was pleased to make the following appointments:—Hon. John Ross, to be a member of the Executive Council, and President of the Committees of Council, in room of Hon. S. Smith, resigned. Hon. John A. Macdonald, to be Attorney General for Upper Canada, in room of Hon. J. S. Macdonald, resigned. Myself, to be Attorney General for Lower Canada, in room of Hon. Mr. Drummond, resigned. Hon. S. Smith, to be Postmaster General, in room of Hon. J. A. Macdonald, resigned. (Oh! oh!)—Hon. T. Galt, to be Inspector General in place of myself, resigned. (Shouts of laughter.) Hon. John Rose to be Solicitor General for Lower Canada, in room of Hon. Charles Laberge, resigned. Hon. George Sherwood, to be Receiver General in room of Hon. John Rose, resigned.—(Renewed laughter.) Mr. Speaker, continued Mr. Cartier, I presume that every member of this House, conversant with the law providing for the independence of members of the Legislature, will understand precisely the necessity of the appointments in the manner in which they were made.—(Derisive cheers.) By the law passed last session, introduced by the present Speaker, it is enacted that if any member of either branch of the Legislature, holding any departmental office, should happen to resign, and should within one month afterwards accept any other of the public offices, he may do so without returning to his constituents. Well, in the present case, and we announce it fairly and honestly to the House, in order to meet the letter of the law—(hear, hear) —and the spirit of the law too—(oh! oh!) His Excellency was pleased yesterday to appoint my hon. colleague, the present Attorney General for Upper Canada, Postmaster General, and myself, Inspector Gen. of the Province—(laughter)—and the hon. John Rose, Receiver General. (Oh! oh!) Well, these honourable appointments having been conferred upon every one of us, we announced to His Excellency that he would be pleased to accept our resignation of these respective offices. (Hear, hear, and Opposition cheers)—and His Excellency accepted of the same. (Laughter.)

Mr. MACKENZIE—A richer farce never was played.

Mr. SPEAKER—Order!

Mr. MACKENZIE—I am perfectly in order!

Mr. CARTIER.—His Excellency was then pleased to make the appointments of this morning, by which my friend is made Attorney General for Upper Canada, and myself Attorney General for Lower Canada.

Mr. MACKENZIE—I wish to put a question. (Cries of order! and chair!) I do not know that I understand this change of offices rightly, and I wish to put a question for information. (Chair! chair!)

Mr. CARTIER—I hope the hon. member will not interrupt me. When I have made the announcements which I have to make, I will be ready to answer any question which the member for Haldimand or any other member of the House may put to me.—Well, by the appointments of this morning, my friend, Mr. Rose, is appointed Solicitor General for Lower Canada. As I have said, the course followed in the appointments was to meet the requirements of the law, and, at the same time, with a view to prevent any unnecessary election. (Cries of "Hear, hear," from the Opposition.) Hon. members may find fault with the appointments, or with the policy, or with the announcement which I am making; but, at the same time, we are ready to submit to the opinion of the House. (Cries of—"No doubt of that.")

Mr. RYMAL—Not of the country, though. (Hear, hear.)

Hon. Mr. CARTIER—I will add, as the hon. gentleman has mentioned the country —of the country too.

Mr. MACKENZIE—By not going to the country. A most excellent way of submitting to the opinion of the country, I must say. (Hear, hear.)

Hon. Mr. CARTIER—In the formation of the new Government, the members of this House ought to see that the Hon. Mr. Galt is appointed Inspector General of the Province.

Mr. MACKENZIE—And the Grand Trunk besides. It is a shame and a disgrace.

Mr. SPEAKER—Order! The hon. gentleman must pay respect to the rules of the House.

Mr. MACKENZIE—So I do, but they are putting all rules at defiance.

Hon. Mr. CARTIER—I was going on to announce that Mr. Galt is no longer a Director of the Grand Trunk.

Mr. MACKENZIE—Is he to become a Director again to-morrow, on the same principle that the other shifts have been made.

Hon. Mr. CARTIER proceeded—The services of Mr. Galt having been essential to the Government and the country as Financial Minister of the Province, this necessarily implied that a seat in the Cabinet should be made for him from the Lower Canada section, and I have much pleasure to announce here that all of my late colleagues in the Government, of which I was a member, intimated to His Excellency their readiness to retire, in order to be in a position to appoint the new Government. The services of Mr. Galt, as Financial Minister of the Province. In the arrangement of the Government of which I was formerly a member, there was an object kept in view, that what we call in Lower Canada the two great political sections, the political section of Quebec, and the political section of Montreal should as much as possible be kept in view. (Hear, hear.) My hon. friend the member for Lavergne (Mr. Loranger) insisted upon this, and as he considered himself the youngest member of the Government and as he came from the political centre of the District of Montreal, I agreed to that with the view to the Cabinet. I hope, in saying that, we should secure the services of the Hon. Mr. Galt. And I trust my this that in the future instances of continued confidence in the Common School, as has been witnessed by the attendance of Roman Catholics who made it their choice. But it is to be feared that this state of happiness cannot survive the rude shock which has been aimed at its secular character by the introduction of the religious element, under the authority of the Board of Trustees. There are, it is to be hoped, few among the liberal minded of this community who endorse the surly doctrine of the Peterborough Review, that, there being a Separate School in existence here, no further regard is to be had for the feelings of such as might send their children to it, but who prefer to place them under the charge of the Board of Grammar and Union School Trustees. According to the Review the erection of a Separate School transforms its parent immediately also into a Sectarian School, and those who are admissible into the Separate School, if they remain in the Common School, become intruders. Here is his language upon the resolution of the Board, making four Clergymen, members of the Board, directors of the manner in which the Sacred Scriptures shall be read in the School:

"Were there no separate school in Town we should object strongly to the resolution; but the only parties who could feel aggrieved by the introduction of the Bible as a reading Book, having voluntarily separated themselves, we cannot see that any objection can be urged to the resolution, the hifalutten trash of one of the members, notwithstanding. We cannot afford to allow separatists to control their own schools and ours too."

In regard to the last paragraph we may remind this liberal champion of separate schools that the Clergy Reserve money, coming to this Municipality, to be disposed of as its Council should think fit, was passed from them to the Grammar and Union School, and, when application was made from the Separate School, for what would be their share if it was divided, they were refused, on the ground that the Union School was common to all. Is the Review willing to retain all the money and all the advantage at the same time?

As to the denial that Upper Canada refuses to encourage Separate Schools, no better proof need be offered than that almost every one of her representatives in parliament is pledged to oppose them; the separate school clause was forced on Upper Canada by the representatives from Lower Canada.

Nothing can be more unfortunate, at the present time, to the cause of Common Schools, than that their advocates should seize upon every excuse for widening the breach that is already too large. If they are really sincere in their professed desire for the exclusion of the sectarian principle, they would not surely excuse themselves for adopting it, that they had the opportunity. Nobody ever does anything without an opportunity, and if that were a good reason, no wrong would ever go undone, that promised advantage. The principle ought to be one of conciliation as well as good policy. If we cannot keep those who desire to separate, from making their experiments, we ought at any rate to hold ourselves in readiness to receive them on their return. We profess to admire the common school principle, yet we do not hesitate to change it for sectarianism, when it is to our fancy; can we then claim confidence in our sincerity, from those who already view us with suspicion, and who fear they see in our system a disposition to destroy the faith of their youthful members in the altars of their fathers. Better and more honest were it for those pretended friends of common schools to throw off the mask at once, and proclaim their doctrine of religious edneation at the expense of the State, rather than unworthily drag in the Bible, as an instrument to accomplish their designs. The man who will circumscribe its teaching, by refusing to have its difficult passages made intelligible to enquiring minds, does not partake of it's spirit. Such are they who are content that it shall be read in school where instruction only is sought after, without note or comment. If the Bible is to be a class book, let it be treated, not as a dead letter, nor as an English reader, but as the giver of life, requiring more attention, and affording more instruction, according as it is understood, than any other book. And if it is determined that it is necessary to educate the youth in it's principles, at the same time that they receive the education in the things of the world, let it be done openly and without reserve, and then let every religious body teach according to its own doctrine; a determination which involves the entire destruction of the common school system, and the consequent withdrawal of opportunities for learning from a large proportion of the youth of the country. We need not say how averse we are to such a consummation of error, but to avoid it, there must be no smuggling of religion into school. By the mixed state of our population, nothing suits so well as the Common School without religious teaching, and the church, the sabbath school, and parental guardianship with it.

The Atlantic Telegraph.

The whole continent knows by this time that the Atlantic Cable has been successfully laid. There have been no messages as yet, but in a few days all is expected to be perfect. The doubtful part of the experiment is entirely removed. The greatest undertaking that ever sprung from the imagination of man is now completed, and the two continents are made one.

☞The Circus performances of Messrs. Rivers & Dorion, on Saturday were of a superior kind. The horses were good and well conditioned, and the riders quite up in their equestrianism. The tumbling was extraordinary, and the gymnastic feats of strength and activity, admirable. The music was very good; and the bearing and appearance of the whole corps showed that these did first rank among artists of their class, as well from the excellence of their performances as by the apparent respectability of the performers.

The Toronto Election.

The days of nomination and polling, in Toronto, are not yet announced. Mr. John Hillyard Cameron contests the city with Mr. Brown, as he says in his address, "upon the broad constitutional issue that has been raised between the Representative of her Majesty and the Brown Administration." If there is any justice in reason, Mr. Cameron will lose, for the Representative was wrong when he concluded to act independently of the advice of his Council, before he knew what that advice would be; and the Representative was also wrong, when he refused to dissolve the House, under the advice tendered by his Council. The Governor General had no more right to call upon Mr. Brown to advise him, when his mind was made up not to be advised, than Mr. Brown would have had to stipulate for the use of the prerogative, before he took office. Mr. Brown's answer to his Excellency's memorandum of Sunday evening, throws back upon him his declaration of what he would do, if asked to dissolve. Mr. Brown tells him very curtly that it was an impertinence, and it would be time enough to open such correspondence when there would be a cabinet to correspond with. If the Representative did not like Mr. Brown's answer, he could have told him his mind was changed, and that he did not want him; there would then have been no harm done, Mr. Brown and his friends would not have vacated their seats. Sir Edmund Head has not added to his laurels, by the part he has played in the late ministerial crisis.

Close of the Session.

Attorney-General Macdonald gave notice in the House, yesterday, that the Session would close on Saturday next. The elections following the vacating of seats by the members of the Brown-Dorion Administration, will, for the time, supply the political excitement, that would otherwise, in a great measure, subside with the prorogation of Parliament.

The Society of Good Templars

Open their new Hall, in Lundy's Block, on Thursday next. The supporters of the Temperance cause will, no doubt, be eager to assist this excellent organization, in its ambition to do good to mankind. The encouragement of public sympathy goes very far to sustain unpaid exertions in the service of other people, and, as there can be no opposite opinion concerning the general advantage of such associations, it is to be hoped that no ordinary excuse will be made, by the friends who may not find it convenient to aid the cause by participation in the promised enjoyments of the evening.

Provincial Parliament.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY.

SATURDAY, Aug. 7, 1858.

The Speaker took the Chair at 11 o'clock and informed the House that he had received a communication from the Governor General, that it was his Excellency's intention to come down at 4 o'clock that day to give his assent to bills.

THE BOARD OF WORKS.

Mr. DUBORD said that, by some little exertion in the Committee of Public Accounts, he had succeeded in bringing the state of the Board of Works prominently before the public. He had shewn that the system under which a man was not responsible to the people, practically controlled that department, was calculated to lead to great corruption. But, looking at the list of the new Ministry, he was glad to see that a gentleman was now at the head of that department (Mr. Sicotte) who was not to be trifled with. After some further remarks, Mr. Dubord moved for leave to introduce a Bill, intituled, an Act to amend the law relative to Public Works, and to abolish the office of Assistant Commissioner.

Mr. MACKENZIE said that the introduction of this Bill at the end of the session was a bit of clap-trap. He objected to the motion being put without notice.

Mr. DUBORD then withdrew his motion, and gave notice of it for a future day.

THE NEW MINISTRY.

Hon. Mr. CARTIER then rose and said, —I have the honour to announce to the House that on Wednesday afternoon, after the resignation of the late Government, His Excellency the Governor General called upon the late member for Sherbrooke (Mr. Galt) seeking from him his help in a formation of a new Government. After some interviews between His Excellency the Governor General and Mr. Galt, Mr. Galt declined that important duty. Upon that, His Excellency conveyed to Mr. Galt his desire that he should be kind enough to wait upon me, in order that I should at once repair to the Government House to see His Excellency. The message of His Excellency was intrusted to me late on Wednesday night, during the sitting of the House, and it was impossible for me to go at once to the Government House; but I got an appointment for 10 o'clock the following morning. At the appointed hour, I had an interview with His Excellency, who communicated to me his desire that I should undertake the task of forming a Government. I said to His Excellency that I would have no objection to undertake that important duty; but, before doing so, I would like to ascertain from His Excellency if he had any objection that, in that important task, I should be assisted by, in fact act in conjunction with my present hon. colleague, the Attorney General for Upper Canada. His Excellency told me that I was free to act as I pleased, and that he would be pleased with anything that I should do. (Laughter.) I intimated to His Excellency that I knew that Mr. Macdonald, on account, of the state of his health, was desirous of retiring from public life.

Mr. MACKENZIE—Dear me! Old age and infirmities. (Laughter.)

Mr. CARTIER—But I mentioned to His Excellency that

A Notable Slave Case.—The Rapides (La.) Democrat tells a curious story of a slave who, six years ago, ran away from his master in Georgia, married a white woman, who had several children by him, and settled near Bertrand's Prairie, Rapides parish. His personal appearance had never led any one to suspect his African blood; but his old master by some means learned his hiding place, and came on in pursuit of him two or three weeks since. He and his companion, armed with shot guns, met and recognized the slave, and on his attempting to escape, shot him twice, wounding him, but not severely enough to prevent his escape. His owner offers a reward of $250 for his arrest. O Liberty! what horrible deeds are done in thy name. Ye boasting Yankees, show us your equal rights!

The Protestant Confessional in Lombot.—An open-air-demonstration of the "Protestant inhabitants of Edgravin and its vicinity" was held on Monday evening, in the grounds of the Pavilion, Sloane street, to adopt a memorial to the Queen, and to petition Parliament to take such measures as might be deemed advisable for the immediate suppression of the confessional system attempted to be introduced into the Church of England. According to a reporter of the Daily News, it was estimated that nearly ten thousand persons were present. The chair was taken at half-past six by the Hon. Colonel Verekar, M. P., who said it was uncontradicted and beyond dispute, namely, that confession, in some shape or other, was practised in the Church of England. The evil was a most gigantic one, and called for decided and stringent measures. If this evil were allowed to go on it would produce the most frightful results, not merely to our religious but even to our civil liberties. If the confessional were allowed to spread throughout the country it would pave the way for the Inquisition of Rome. Mr. Edward Harper then moved a resolution and memorial to the Queen. He said the attempt to introduce the confessional system was only a small portion of a vast conspiracy which had now continued for a long period, and the object of which was to reconcile this country to the use of Rome, and to subjugate her liberties—religious, social, and political. The process of undermining the Protestant Church commenced about a quarter of a century ago. It had proceeded slowly, but none the less certainly.—Should it, he asked, continue for a quarter of a century longer? (Cries of "No, no!") A petition to Parliament was adopted, and the meeting concluded by singing the National Anthem.

Logic.—A correspondent of the Melbourne Argus, in noticing a series of lectures there, quotes a specimen—"Who was Junius? Let the matter be forever set at rest; it was Sir Philip Francis. If it was not Sir Philip Francis, who was it?" Mr. Blair (the lecturer) must have been perusing Irving's works, where the question arises as to how was America first peopled, and is then settled: A Welsh prince went out with his wife in an open boat on the coast of Wales; a storm arose; they never returned; and if they didn't go to America, where did they go?

In an Irish provincial journal there is an advertisement running thus: "Wanted, a handy labourer, who can plough a married man and a Protestant, with a son or daughter." There is an N. B., which reads as follows:—"A house that has a good deal of milk will be given."

Miscellaneous.

SCOTLAND'S AUTHORS.

Arnott's, Rev. Wm.—Laws from Heaven for Life on Earth, or Illustrations of the Book of Proverbs	$1,25
Bonar's Desert of Sinai, 3 plates	1,25
De. Land of Promise, 5 plates	1,25
De. Night of Weeping	0,40
De. Morning of Joy	0,40
De. Story of Grace	0,30
De. Truth and Error	0,40
De. Man, his Religion and his World	0,40
De. Eternal Day	0,50
Boston's Four-Fold Estate	0,50
De. Crook in the Lot	0,30
Brewster's—Here World's than One	0,60
Brown's Concordance, gilt 30 cts., plain	0,30
Chalmer's Dr., Miscellanies	1,50
De. Moral Philosophy	0,60
De. Astronomical Discourses	0,60
Dick, Dr.,—Christian Philosopher	1,00
Duncan's—Tales of the Scottish Peasantry, illustrated	0,50
De. Cottage Fireside, illustrated	0,60
Family Worship—A series of Prayers adapted to Domestic Worship, by one hundred and eighty Clergymen of Scotland, 320 pages	3,00
Gillilan's Martyrs, Heroes and Bards of the Scottish Covenant	0,60
Gentlin's, Dr., Gospel in Ezekiel	1,00
De. The City, its Sins and Sorrows	0,50
Hetherington's History of the Church of Scotland up to the disruption	1,50
Howe's Scots Worthies, or Historical account of those who suffered for the Reformation	1,50
Martyrs and Covenanters of Scotland	0,40
Macduff's Memories of Gennesaret	1,00
De. Sow in the Cloud, and the First Bereavement	0,40
De. Morning and Night Watches	0,60
De. Footsteps of St. Paul, with plates	1,00
De. Words of Jesus	0,40
De. Mind of Jesus	0,40
De. Family Prayers	0,75
De. Great Journey or Pilgrimage to Mount Zion	0,30
De. Faithful Promiser and Altar Stones	0,25
De. Memories of Bethany	0,60
Mabel Grant,—A Highland Story	0,60
McCheyne's Life, Letters, Lectures and Sons of Elon	1,50
McCosh's Method of Divine Government	2,00
Montcastle, Mrs.,—Lays of the Kirk and Covenant	0,50
Pearson's Infidelity, its Aspect, Causes, and Agencies	1,00
Pollok's Tales of the Covenanters	0,30
Scott's Bards—The Choicest productions of the Scottish Poets with Biographies	2,00
Turnbull's Genius of Scotland	1,00
Wardlaw on Miracles	0,75
Wilson's Lights and Shadows of Scottish Life, Illustrated	0,75

For Sale at the New Book Store of
SAWERS & MURRAY.
George st., Peterboro'.
August 5, 1858. 30

P. H. L. & B. RAILWAY,
AND
Peterborough Section.

On and after MONDAY, AUGUST 2nd 1858. Trains will run as follows:—

Leave Lindsay, 6 40 A. M., arrive at Port Hope, 10 10 A. M.
Leave Port Hope, 2 10 P. M., arrive at Lindsay, 6 40 P. M.

Leave Port Hope, 6 A. M., arrive at Peterborough, 9 10 A. M.
Leave Port Hope, 10 A. M., embrace Peterborough, 1 10 P. M.
Leave Peterborough, 9 A. M., arrive at Port Hope 11 10 A. M.
Leave Peterborough 2 30 P. M., arrive at Port Hope, 5 P. M.

Trains run by Port Hope time.
Port Hope, August 2, 1858. 30

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

The attention of Clergymen, Teachers, and others interested in Sunday Schools is respectfully invited to an inspection of a varied assortment of Reward Books, Tickets, Admission Cards, &c., &c., &c.

Especially adapted for Sunday Schools, and for sale at Church of England prices, by

SAWERS & MURRAY,
Sawers' Block, Corner Water Street.

Miscellaneous.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK,

The best of the monthlies for the Ladies, and now as well known, as to render description unnecessary, is always on hand, for sale at Sawers & Murray's New Book Store, Peterboro' 15th August Number received, price 25 cts.

PETERBOROUGH LIVERY STABLE

The Subscriber begs to inform the public that he is always ready to furnish them with horses, sleighs, carriages, and every thing required at a Livery, on the shortest notice, and on reasonable terms. His horses are in fine condition, and everything about his establishment is in good order.

He very reluctantly has to withdraw from the long credit system, and begs all who may favor him with their patronage, to remember that he can only continue to accommodate the public, by them, in turn, enabling him to keep up his business, that is, by ready pay.

Peterboro Livery Stables, } 1
Hunter Street, Jan. 1st, 1858. } 1

UNION HOTEL.
Peterborough.

GEORGE ALLEN

Respectfully intimates to his friends and the public generally, that his establishment is still open for the reception of guests in his usual good style.

The house is new and beautifully situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, where travellers will find a quiet and desirable retreat.

☞A limited number of respectable BOARDERS can be accommodated.

Good Stables and Sheds

On the premises. An Ostler in attendance, who will give the best attention to horses entrusted to his care.

Peterborough, Oct. 20th 1857. 42.

NORTH AMERICAN HOTEL,

DUNDAS STREET, CORNWALL.

The above Hotel having been recently repaired, painted, and newly fitted up, and being now entirely complete in all its appointments, is now opened for the reception of the travelling public.

The House is commodious, and neither pains nor expense will be spared to make it one of the best in the Province.

The Liquors are of the best brands, and the Larder will be constantly supplied with all the delicacies of the Season.

The Stables are commodious, and an attentive Ostler is always in attendance.

The proprietor pledges himself that every attention will be paid to the wants of his guests

☞Omnibusses will attend at the Cars and Boats to carry passengers to the Hotel free of charge.

RALPH FRANCIS,
Proprietor,
Cobourg, August, 1857. 35

MUSIC! MUSIC!!

The Musical Bequet, (English, At 3d PER SINGLE NUMBER.

The subscribers have now in stock, the following pieces, to which they respectfully invite the attention of the Ladies of Peterborough.

QUADRILLES.

The Scotch Quadrilles.
Piccolomini Quadrilles.
Les Chiens, (dogs) do.
The Lancers do.
The Don Cæsar De Bazan Quadrilles.
Belphegor do.
The British Navy do.
Les Chats, (cats) do.
Bonnie Dundee do.
Les Singes, (monkeys) do.
Lucrecia Borgia do.
Les Souris, (mice) do.
The Masqueteers do.
The Irish do.
Puss in Boots do.
The Royal Lancers' do. do.
The Comic or Entertainer's do.

POLKAS.

Guy Fawkes' Polka.
The Laughing Eyes Polka.
Tomtit's do.
The Bobbin' Around do.
The Original do.
Ask Mamma do.
The Minnie do.
The Silverbair do.

FANTASIAS.

Gazelle Impromptu.
The Bush shoon Traguair.
La Violette.
Les Cloches Du Monastero.
We're a' Noddin'.
The Last Rose of Summer.
Fantasia on Bohemian Airs.
Fantasia Pour La Syria.
Mianeltedr, Brilliant Fantasia.
Boots who has wi' Wallace bled.
Premier Nocturne.
L'Italienne Fantasia.
Grand Galop Britanic.
Premiere Etude De Concert'.
Two Musical Sketches, Mendelssohn.

POPULAR SONGS,

WITH ACCOMPANIMENTS.

Why did my Sarah sell me.
Hey Johnny Cope and the Campbells 'are coming.
Hearts and Eyes.
Ellen Bayne.
Wha wadna fecht for Charlie.
For Ever Dear.
Some Folks.
Bobbing Around.
Sound Britons Sound.
Dinah is the Girl for me.
Lilly Willy Wokus.
The Lass that loves a Sailor,
The Lords of the Forest.
Lets be gay Boys.
The Village Maiden.
Come again dear dream.
The Sardinian National Hymn.
Thou art my Joy.
The North Carolina Rose.
Up for the Right.
Ok let me in the dark tomb lie.
The Fisherwaidden.
The Campdown Races.
Strike Men Strike.
My Mary Anne.
So Early in the Morning.
The Spinning Wheel.
My Nannie O.
I Mun Depart.
The Greenwood Bell.
My Gentle Dove.
There's Fortune on before us Boys.

SACRED MELODIES,

WITH VARIATIONS FOR THE PIANOFORTE.

Pleyel's German Hymn.
Vital Spark of Heavenly Flame.
Prayer from Rossini's "Moss in Egotto."
The Heavens are Telling.
Adeste Fidelis.
Ogloa Anlmam, from Rossini.
I Know that my Redeemer Liveth.
Before Jehovah's Awful Throne.
Eve's Lamentation.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Bristol Involuntl, Popular Cavatina.
Rondo in B flat.
Mozart Procession.
Ah Le Morte, from Bellini.
Les Furies Rossy Valses.
L'Amo ah L'Amo.
Hercule Grand Gallop.
Seven admiral Airs from H Traveiers.
The Dandy's March.
Souvenir De Vaucrein Mazurka.
Robert Tal Que J'Aime, &c.
Una Voce Poco Fa.
A la o Cosa.
Bell Gently Gurgling.
Rose Softly Blooming.
Vega Vega, from Bellini.

Any piece not in stock, procured on the shortest notice.

—ALSO—

100 Popular Songs, Music and Words	25cts.
100 Fancy Dance Songs, &c.	25 "
100 Songs of Ireland	25 "
100 Songs of Scotland	25 "
100 Comic Comic Songs, &c.	25 "
100 Negro & Jumbeo Sc. &c.	25 "

at the

NEW BOOK, STATIONERY & MUSIC STORE,
Sawers' Block, George St., Peterborough.
SAWERS & MURRAY.
June 24, 1857 36

Insurances.

TIMES AND BEACON ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....£200,000 STG.

£140,000 PAID UP.

HEAD OFFICE IN CANADA, KINGSTON, C.W.

CANADA BOARD OF DIRECTORS OR TRUSTEES:

The HON. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES MORTON, Esq., Kingston.

DIRECTORS

Chairman—M. U. STRANGE, Esq.

Vice Chairman—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.

James Morton, Esq., | A. J. McDonell, Esq.
John Mowat, Esq., | James Hardy, Esq

AUDITORS

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Esq., Kingston,
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.,

Standing Counsel—A. J. MACDONELL, Esq.

Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.

LOCAL MANAGER:

W. CLUXTON, Peterboro'.
Peterboro', March 21, 1857. 13.

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON
Fire & Life Insurance Co.

CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.

Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.

RESPONSIBILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS UNLIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTREAL.

The Undersigned continues to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on almost every description of property, at as reasonable rates as any other responsible office.

Losses paid without reference to the Old Country.

W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.
Peterboro.' March 24th, 1857. 12

WESTERN
Insurance Company.

CAPITAL £500,000.

Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF
FIRE & MARINE ASSURANCE
BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',
W. CLUXTON.
Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

UNITY FIRE AND UNITY GENERAL
INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS OF ENGLAND.

For every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.

CAPITAL £2,500,00 Sterling.

Chief Office,—Unity Buildings, Canon St., London. Agent for Peterboro',
W. EASTLAND.
Peterboro', July, 1856.

Provincial Insurance Company.

OF TORONTO, C. W.

Subscribed Capital, $1,997,600, Paid up Capital, $420,266.

President, J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
Vice-President, Hon. J. H. Cameron.

Directors.

Hon. W. B. Robinson, | E. F. Whitehead, Esq.
Geo. Duggan, Jr., Esq. | Geo. Crawford, Esq.
J. S. Howard, Esq. | John Cameron, Esq., M.P.
Wm. L. Perrin, Esq. | J. McCabe, Esq., M.D.
Hon. J. H. Cameron, | Duncan McDonnell, Esq.
Capt. P. Wallace,

Manager and Secretary:
HON. J. LEANDER STARR.
Assistant Secretary:
J. JOSEPH WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK.—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS:—Messrs. DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE:
TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurance business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as in any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Brokers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.

Toronto, April 20, 1858. 42

THE COLONIAL
Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

Head Office—Edinburgh, Scotland, and Montreal, Canada.

Proposals for assurance disposed of in Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Adviser for Peterboro,—Dr. MacNab.

AGENT,
W. B. READ.
Peterboro', July 28th, 1857. 30

ALL ABOARD!

The Subscriber respectfully begs leave to announce to the Public, that his House at Bridgenorth, (Mud Lake) is always supplied with the best accommodation and entertainment for travellers.

GOOD STABLING, DRIVING HOUSE, YARD ROOM AND STORAGE.

He also runs a STAGE to and from Peterboro' in connection with the Boats, leaving McGregor's Hotel, Peterboro', at half-past seven, a. m., to meet the boats at Bridgenorth, returning to Peterboro' on the arrival of the Boats, about 4 o'clock, p. m.

For freight or passage, enquire at McGregor's Hotel, Peterboro', or at the Subscribers Hotel, Bridgenorth. Fare cash only 1s. 10½d.

JOHN POPE.
Bridgenorth June 12, 1858.

AMERICAN HOTEL.
PETERBORO'.

The undersigned, Proprietor, begs to return his sincere thanks to the travelling community, and the country, as well as the surrounding, for the very handsome support his Hotel has received from them. He hopes by continued attention to their wants, and careful management of the House to retain the patronage which has attended his previous efforts.

Choice Wines

Will always be stocked with the best Liquors and Cigars.

Grand duty follows that his selection of comforts and varieties will continue through the changes of the season.

Passengers conveyed to the cars landed free, and attended to on arrival.

Peterboro', 1857.

Business Notices.

SPLENDID INVESTMENT.
FOR SALE,

Lot No. 9, West of George Street, and South of Charlotte Street, adjoining the Port Hope and Peterboro' Railroad Depot, having three good buildings on it the situation is adapted to any public business. Those who desire to profit by such a rare chance, will please address the undersigned, by letter (post-paid) to Lindsay.

N. B.—It will be sold altogether or in building lots, to suit purchasers.

CHARLES McCARTHY.
Peterboro' July 29, 1858. 29-tf

FARMS IN MONAGHAN
TO RENT.

The Subscriber offers to rent Lot No. 2 in the 11th concession of Monaghan, of which 100 acres are cleared and in good cultivation, with a brick cottage, good barns, stables and sheds. The farm is well-watered and well-fenced, and every way suited for a good farmer.—It is situated between the gravel road and the old road leading to Port Hope, and is five miles from Peterborough.

ALSO, the south half of west half of Lot No 1, in the 11th concession of Monaghan, adjoining the village of Springville, containing fifty acres well cleared and well fenced and well cultivated. There is a good Frame Barn upon it, and plenty of water.

ALSO, the SAW MILL, with eight acres of ground, on Lot No. 2, in the 13th concession of Monaghan, five miles from Peterborough.

For terms, length of lease and other particulars, apply at this office, or to the proprietor on Lot No. 3, in the 11th concession of Monaghan.

ROBERT THOMSON.
Monaghan, August 5, 1858. 30

NOTICE.

The Subscriber begs leave to intimate that he has sold out his Boot and Shoe Shop to A. ROSS. All debts standing out up to date, May, 27th, must be paid to him, at his Tannery, Peterboro' East.

JNO. CLARK,
Tanner.
Peterboro' East, June 8, 1858. 23

EVERY SCOTCHMAN

Should read the "Scottish American Journal," published weekly. It contains the best summary of old country news of any paper published in this country, and has besides a series of articles on the "Highland Bonnets," or Achievement of the Scottish Regiments in India and elsewhere. For sale at Sawers & Murray's New Book Store, Peterboro'. Price $2,50 per year in advance, or 3d per single number.

NOTICE.

The partnership existing between us, and known as the firm of Hurst & Deane is this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts due to, and by, the said firm, will be settled by Henry Deane, who will grant receipts for the same.

WALTER HURST,
HENRY DENNE.

The business will hereafter be carried on by W. Hurst, who respectfully solicits a share of the Public patronage.

Blythe Mills, Peterboro', } 28
July 20, 1858. }

BOOTS & SHOES

The Subscribers beg to inform the late customers of Mr. Thomas Russell, and the public in general, that they have entered into partnership, and have made arrangements with him to succeed him in his business. They desire to assure all who favor them with their custom, that their wants will be punctually attended to, and their work done in a manner that will ensure satisfaction. They will always be found ready to receive orders, and they hope by such assiduity in their business to receive a share of the public patronage.

All kinds of ready made work kept constantly on hand, and sold on the most reasonable terms for Cash or short approved credit.

Remember the old stand opposite the Eastern entrance to the Town Hall.

O'BRIEN & MAGRATH.
Peterboro', January 12th, 1858. 2

NOTICE.

I hereby forbid all persons purchasing a note of hand for Thirty Dollars in Carpenters work, payable on demand, dated Dummer, 28th June, 1858, and payable to Peter McNaughton; as I have not received value for the same.

DUNCAN McKELLAR.
Warsaw, July 21, 1858.

FOR SALE.

ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND IN THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH.

That excellent farm of land, situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, being composed of the south parts of lots Nos. 27 and 28, in the 6th Concession of Smith, 6 miles from Peterborough, is offered for sale. The farm is thoroughly improved; has a first rate house, barn, &c., and a capital water frontage. The soil is equal to any in that section of country.

For particulars of price and terms apply to the proprietor in Peterborough.

A. SAWERS.
Smith, July 29, 1858.

Livingstone & Creighton's
PALE ALE.

The Subscriber having made arrangements with Messrs. Livingstone & Creighton, for the sale of their ALE in this place and neighborhood, begs to inform his friends and customers in Port Hope, Rice Lake, and Peterboro, that he will be constantly supplied with the above article in Kegs and Barrels at Kingston Prices.

R. G. BLACKHAM.
Port Hope, July 20, 1858. 29—1st

LOOK OUT!
SAVE YOUR MONEY
AND REMEMBER THIS,—
"ONE DOLLAR SAVED IS TWO EARNED."

It is a certain fact which we offer to prove to any purchaser who would wish to visit our immense Stock of

Summer Ready-made Clothing,

That we will offer for sale, (to begin the 16th instant,) at 25 per cent. under the ordinary prices.

SMALL COATS, PANTS & VESTS, FOR BOYS, Of all descriptions, may be had also.

The undersigned, in calling the public attention, will not fail to give

CHEAP BARGAINS,

To any who patronize them.

☞TERMS—STRICTLY CASH.☜
F. & L. LEMAY.
Peterborough, July 13, 1858. 27

ROOM PAPER, PAINTING, &c.

The Subscriber offer for sale, at his shop on Brock Street, a large and varied assortment of Room Paper, among which will be found patterns of English, French and American manufacture, which he has just received, and which he will sell at the lowest possible price, for ready pay, or short approved credit.

He keeps constantly a number of hands, who can be employed in

PAPER HANGING!

And he recommends his Stock and Workmanship to the public.

The Papers range in price from 5d per Roll, up to 1 5s 6d per roll, and from their great variety, he is sure the most fastidious will find their choice.

Also Painting, Glazing and Plastering business carried on as usual.

ROBERT STEVENSON.
Brock Street, Peterboro, April 6, 1858. 41

Farms, &c., For Sale.

VALUABLE FARM FOR SALE.
125 ACRES OF LAND.

The Subscriber offers for sale 75 acres, being the west half of 23; and 50 acres, being the south east quarter of Lot No. 22, on the 7th concession of the Township of Smith. There are 60 acres cleared, a good log house and log barn two wells of good spring water on the premises The farm is in a good state of cultivation, the road runs along the front of the land; within 7 miles of Peterboro', and 2 miles of the thriving village of Lakefield.

For further particulars apply to the Subscriber, on the premises,

CHARLES FITZGERALD.
Smith, June 23, 1858. 24-tf

FARM FOR SALE.

The subscriber offers for sale East half 6 in 7th con. and East half of 7 in 7th con. Dummer, containing 100 acres, of which

80 ARE CLEARED

In good cultivation and well fenced; a good

CEDAR LOG HOUSE,

And two large barns, with other good out houses, and a superior well close at hand.

The property is three miles from

NORWOOD,

On an excellent road, and will be sold for £2 10s an acre. From one third to one half to be paid down, the payment of the balance as agreed upon.

HENRY GARDNER.
Dummer, July 10th 1857. 28.

VALUABLE FARM, SAW-MILL, FOR SALE.

The Subscriber is desirous of selling his property, consisting of 250 acres, 50 of which are under cultivation, comprising a

FINE YOUNG GRAFTED ORCHARD.

There is an excellent DWELLING HOUSE, with Barns, Sheds, and all other necessary Out-Houses, a good water

SAW MILL,

in good running order. The premises consist of Lot No. 9, and south-east quarter of Lot No. 8, in the 11th Concession of the Township of Monaghan. The Farm is one of the finest in the County, and most favorably situated on the Gravel Road, two miles from Peterboro. The wood land consists of hardwood and cedar, and the whole lot is furnished with a good supply of running water.

For further particulars as to terms, &c., apply on the Premises to

W. W. BOSWELL,
Peterboro, Sept. 8, 1857. 36

FOR SALE.

The Subscriber offers for sale north half of east half of Lot No. 5, in the 5th Concession of Douro, adjoining the Church, 50 acres, 40 acres cleared. the balance in good clean wood land. There is a good House, Barns, Out-Houses, Stables, Spring, and every convenience for a good Farmer. The land is well fenced, and has been well cultivated.

The terms and price will be made known on application to the proprietor on the premises.

MICHAEL WELSH, Jr,
Lot No. 5, 5th Con. Douro, March 9th 1858.

TO LET.

TWO NEW BRICK STORES fronting on George Street, one for Dry Goods, the other for Groceries. Both finished in the newest and finest style of workmanship, and elegantly painted and varnished, equal to any in Town; the basement stories are well lighted and perfectly dry, and warranted against frost. Application to be made to the proprietor on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', Feb. 1st, 1858. 5

TO LET.

That Splendid Three Story Brick Store, lately occupied by Mr. E. Peplow on Hunter Street.

Also 18 Town Lots for sale. Terms easy.

Apply to the Subscriber on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', June 2, 1858. 22

NOTICE

Is hereby given, that the Partnership, lately subsisting between HENRY MORROW & ALEX. MORROW, both of the town of Peterboro', under the firm of Morrow & Brother, was this day dissolved by mutual consent

All debts owing to the said partners will be received by the said Henry Morrow and all debts due by the said firm will be paid by him.

HENRY MORROW,
ALEX. MORROW.
Peterboro', July 1st, 1858.

In reference to the above, I would take the opportunity to inform my friends and the public that I will continue the business carried on by the firm in the same premises, and I hope by strict attention to business, and a thorough knowledge of the wants of my customers, to merit and receive a continuance of the patronage so liberally extended to the late firm.

HENRY MORROW.
Peterboro', July 1st, 1858. 26

Hardware.

New Stove Warehouse!!!

The subscribers beg to inform their friends and the Public that they have entered into Partnership as Stove-Dealers, Tinsmiths, &c., and respectfully invite public inspection to their new styles of Stoves, consisting in part of

The Improved Burr,
The Star of the West,
The Wide World,
The Commodore,
The Improved Canadian Farmer,
The Buffalo,
The Black Rover,
The King Stove,
The Premium.

Besides a variety of Parlor and Plate Stoves.

They also receive orders for all kinds of

COPPER, SHEET-IRON AND TIN WORK.

Which their Patrons may depend upon getting done in a manner which will give the greatest satisfaction.

A large stock of TIN-WARE, STOVE-PIPES, and other such articles belonging to their business, kept constantly on hand.

Their premises are on George Street, lately occupied by Messrs. Harvey & Thomson, and next door to Messrs. Glover & Robinson

BIGELOW & ROBINSON.
Peterboro', October 27, 1857. 43

AXES BY STEAM

The subscriber invites public attention to his increased facility of making the

SUPERIOR AXES

he has so long supplied to the community, and begs to assure his patrons that he will be unremitting in his efforts to retain for his work the good reputation it has hitherto enjoyed. He offers

Narrow and Broad Axes,
AND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF
EDGE TOOLS,

WHOLESALE and RETAIL, as cheap as they can be purchased here or in any other market, and of a quality that cannot be surpassed.

His premises are located on GEORGE ST., opposite the OLD HUNTING GROUND, and to enable him to supply his customers in sufficient quantity, and at modern prices, he has added in steam power to his machinery.

☞Axes Jumped and Ground to point order.

W. HOGOCK.
Peterboro', Sept. 22, 1857.

Miscellaneous.

HATS! HATS!

The New York and Canadian Style of Hats is now ready for inspection. Also, a large assortment of Fur Hats and Cloth Caps, &c., &c.

The Trade Supplied as Usual.

A. SECOR,
Hatter, &c.
Cobourg, March 19, 1858. 12

CABINET ROOMS
RE OPENED!

The subscriber informs his old customers and the public generally, that he has recovered from the effects of the late fire, and has erected a new building on the old site which he has fitted up as a show room. He is daily receiving and making up a choice assortment of

FURNITURE & CABINET WARE,

Of every description, which, as usual, he offers at moderate prices.

He has removed his workshop to the building just erected by Mr. Mocock, where by the use of Steam and the most recent improvements in

LABOUR SAVING MACHINERY,

He will be prepared to manufacture for sale or to order every description of Furniture, at prices unprecedent, in this Town.

W. Y. SWAYNE.
Peterboro', July 8th, 1857. 18.

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.

An eligible lot of land, on the Gravel Road, about 3 miles from Peterborough, containing 25 acres, being part of the eastern portion of the North-East quarter of Lot No. 7, 11th Concession North Monaghan, on the West of John Green's Tavern, and adjoining it. Apply to the Subscriber,

WILLIAM BELL.
Monaghan, Jan. 11, 1857. 2

HORSE SHOEING.

BARNARD McGARRITY and WILLIAM MILLER, beg to inform the public, that their horse shoeing prices are as follows:—

A full set, new 6s,
Each remove 6d.

their terms are, if not Cash, well-approved credit.

Peterborough, Jan. 1st, 1858. 1

PERIODICALS, MAGAZINES, &C.

The subscribers receive every Saturday the Weekly Periodicals in the following list, and on the third Saturday of each month the Monthlies for the next ensuing month, all of which they are prepared to supply on the annexed terms.

Orders respectfully solicited.

PER YEAR.		PER NO.
$2,25 ..	New York Ledger	0s 3d.
2,50 ..	Harper's Weekly	0 3½
3,00 ..	Ballou's Pictorial	0 4
3,25 ..	Waverly Magazine	0 4
1,50 ..	Yankee Notions	0 1½
2,50 ..	New York Clipper	0 3½
2,50 ..	Flag of Our Union	0 3½
2,50 ..	Scottish Amer. Journal	0 3
3,25 ..	Leslie's Illustrated	0 4
9,00 ..	Illustrated London News	1 0
5,50 ..	" Times	0 7½
5,50 ..	Punch	0 7½
3,00 ..	Harper's Magazine	1 3
3,00 ..	Household Words	1 3
2,00 ..	Chamber's Journal	1 0
2,20 ..	Mrs. Stephen's Journal	1 0
2,20 ..	Peterson's Journal	1 0
3,00 ..	Godey's Lady's Book	1 3
3,00 ..	Atlantic Monthly	1 3
2,50 ..	New York Mercury	0 3
2,50 ..	" " Weekly	0 3
2,50 ..	Rural New Yorker	0 3

YEARLY SUBSCRIPTIONS
MUST BE STRICTLY
In Advance.

Back Nos. must be paid for when ordered.

SAWERS & MURRAY.
Peterboro', June 23, 1858. 2

LOOK HERE.

ONLY ONE QUARTER DOLLAR!
FOR THE
VICTORIA PAPETERIE,
OR
CHEAP PACKET OF WRITING MATERIALS
WHICH CONTAINS

12	Sheets fine ruled Letter paper usually sold for	7½d
12	Sheets fine ruled Note paper "	4
12	Large sized Envelopes adhesive "	3
12	Note " " " "	2
3	Steel Pens	1
1	Holder	1
1	Pencil	1
1	Sheet Blotting paper	½

Making a total of..... 1s 8d.
NOW SOLD FOR
ONE QUARTER DOLLAR,
BY
SAWERS & MURRAY.
AT THE
NEW BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE,
Burnham's Block George-st, Peterborough.
June 22nd, 1858. 24

FRESH TEAS.

Just received from the Ship "Cambaia," direct from China, an assortment of

Hyson, Young Hyson.
Gunpowder, Twankay.

S. E. CURRY, & Co.
Peterboro', 29th June, 1858. 25

A GOOD PEN

IS A REAL BLESSING.

BUY ONE DOZEN GILT PENS, IN BOX, FOR

ONE QUARTER OF A DOLLAR,
At Sawers & Murray's Stationery Store.

LETTER AND NOTE PAPERS.

Cream and Blue Colors, ruled and plain.—Envelopes, all sizes and qualities to match. A very complete stock on hand. Merchants supplied on liberal terms.

SAWERS & MURRAY,
Stationers, &c., Peterboro'.

Dr. J. B. ALFORD'S
ECLECTIC, MEDICAL & SURGICAL OFFICE:

Corner of Hunter and Aylmer Streets,
Near the Residence of James Hall, Esq.,
PETERBOROUGH.

Dr. A. would announce to the citizens of Peterborough and vicinity, that he has located in this place for the purpose of attending to the duties of his profession. His system of treatment is purely Eclectic, using only those agents which are safe and reliable. INVALIDS howsoever despairing, are invited to call, as no expense will be incurred without a corresponding prospect of recovery.

Residence—American Hotel.
Peterboro', Oct, 14, 1857. 41

FARM FOR SALE.

East Half Lot No. 14, in the 11th Concession of Asphodel, three miles from the Village of Norwood. There are fifty acres cleared, and good Stables, and a never-failing spring of pure water on the premises. The Land is of a superior quality.

Terms, Liberal.

For further particulars apply to James Hulme, Otonabee, or upon the premises, to

W. R. SCOTT
Asphodel, 19th June, 1858. 24tf

Miscellaneous.

BY-LAW, No.—

A By-Law for creating and issuing Debentures of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria to the amount of Six Thousand Pounds, or the purposes therein mentioned.

Whereas it is desirable to raise by loan on the credit of this Municipality the sum of Six Thousand Pounds for constructing and repairing the Roads and Bridges in the said United Counties.

And Whereas—It will require the sum of Seven Thousand Nine Hundred and Eighty Pounds to be raised by a special rate for the payment of such loan and interest for the space of ten years, to be computed from the fifth day of October now next ensuing, until the fifth day of October A. D. One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Eight exclusive of the first and last days by annual amounts as follows—that is to say,

For the first year—Nine Hundred and Sixty Pounds.

For the second year—Nine Hundred and Twenty-four Pounds.

For the third year—Eight Hundred and Eighty-eight Pounds.

For the fourth year—Eight Hundred and Fifty-two Pounds.

For the fifth year—Eight Hundred and Sixteen Pounds.

For the sixth year—Seven Hundred and Eighty Pounds.

For the seventh year—Seven Hundred and Forty-four Pounds.

For the eighth year—Seven Hundred and Eight Pounds.

For the ninth year—Six Hundred and Seventy-two Pounds.

And for the tenth year the sum of Six Hundred and Thirty-two Pounds.

According to the one hundred and seventy-seventh clause of the Upper Canada Municipal Corporations Act of One Thousand Eight Hundred and Forty-nine.

And Whereas—The value of the whole rateable property of the said United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria according to the Assessment returns of the last financial year amounts to the sum of One Million Five Hundred and Seventy-eight Thousand Six Hundred and Ten Pounds.

And Whereas—It is necessary for the payment of the interest aforesaid and for the creation of a sinking fund for the payment of the principal of such loan to raise ten annual special rates in the pound upon the total value of the whole of the rateable property as hereafter described—that is to say,

For the year 1859—	96/677	of a penny in the pound
" [1860—	92/677	"	"
" 1861—	89/677	"	"
" 1862—	86/677	"	"
" 1863—	83/677	"	"
" 1864—	78/677	"	"
" 1865—	74/677	"	"
" 1866—	71/677	"	"
" 1867—	67/677	"	"
" 1868—	64/677	"	"

Be it therefore enacted by the Municipal Council of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, that it shall and may be lawful for the Warden of the said United Counties to raise by way of loan and at a rate of interest not exceeding six per cent per annum from any person or persons, body corporate or politic, who may be willing to advance the same upon the credit of the Debentures hereafter mentioned, a sum of money not exceeding in the whole the sum of six thousand pounds, and cause the same to be paid into the hands of the Treasurer of the said United Counties.

And be it enacted that it shall and may be lawful for the Warden aforesaid to issue any number of Deb

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND
Ornamental.----Bronzing,
&c., &., &c.,
Neatly executed, on the shortest notic. and in the latest style, at the Office of the EXAMINER.
BURNHAM'S BLOCK,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, AUGUST 19, 1858.

Volume 3.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 32.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

Are Ten Shillings in Advance, if One Year; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING

Six Lines, and under, first insertion	£0	2	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	7½
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0	3	4
Each subsequent insertion	0	1	1
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0	0	4
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	1

☞ Advertisements without written instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognized.

Business Directory.

MR. DENNISTOUN,
BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

E. BURNHAM,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. H. J. Vinard, Esq.

W. B. RUBIDGE,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, &c. &c., &c.
Peterboro', March 10th, 1856.

DR. HOLYWELL,
HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Rubidge's, Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,
SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' West.

M. S. MACDOWELL,
SURGICAL AND MECHANICAL DENTIST.
OFFICE over A. W. Kempt's Drug Store, George Street, Peterboro.
May, 1858. 18

ALBRO & VINDIN,
Commission, Shipping, Forwarding
AND GENERAL AGENTS,
Lumber Merchants, &c.,
Port Hope, C. W.
OFFICE—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets.

A. W. KEMPT,
DRUGGIST, Dealer in Genuine Drugs and Chemicals, Patent Medicines, Paints, Oils, Colours, Dye Stuffs, Perfumery, Spices, Hair, Nail and Tooth Brushes, Smelling and Toilet Bottles. Fancy Soap, Culinary Essences, &c. Medical Hall, George Street, Peterboro'.

MESSRS. STEWART,
ARCHITECTS, Engineers, Land Surveyors, and Land Agents. Office, Mill Street, Port Hope.
GEO. A. STEWART.
CHAS. E. STEWART.
Port Hope, May 22, 1857. 21.

JOHN HAYDEN,
Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, Window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.
King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 35—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.
INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.
Peterboro', May 28th, 1857. 22

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD.
PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.
COMMUNICATION THROUGH THE POST OFFICE, Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S
FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.
Port Hope, Sept. 29, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,
HUNTER STREET, PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST.
MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.
Peterboro', Sept. 2, 1856. 3

W. COULTER,
Druggist and Apothecary
PETERBORO'
Dealer in Medicines, English and French Chemicals, Patent Medicines Paints, Oils, Varnishes, Dye Stuffs, Window Glass and Perfumery, Particular attention paid to putting up Physicians Prescriptions, Family Receipts and Cattle medicines. ALSO, English American and Garden, Field and Flower Seeds. Together with an assortment of School Books, Stationery and fancy Articles.

A. MERCER & SONS,
TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.
Peterboro', June 9, 1858. 23—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.
A. MUNRO, Agent.
May, 1858. 19

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,
ARCHITECT, Civil Engineer, &c., Scott's Chambers, George Street.
Peterboro', July 22, 1858. 29

QUARRY TO LET,
Near Peterborough.
THE Subscriber offers for a term of years, the Quarry on the river side, above the residence of Charles Dunlop, Esq. The bridge in contemplation to cross the river will bring the Quarry within half a mile of the centre of the Town. The stone is of a superior quality, and it is easily worked.
For Terms and other particulars, apply to CHARLES DUNLOP, Douro, or
GEORGE A. STEWART,
Port Hope.
Peterborough, July 15, 1858. 27

Notice to the Asthmatical.
Asthma Cured for 6d!
THE UNDERSIGNED is in possession of a quick and certain remedy for the most distressing disease, the paroxysms whereof (if any ever) to him only, the period of their attack is known. He proposes to be unable to attend to business; and will, for the benefit of the Public, for 6d. Cash, in Post Address, (if by letters post paid) to
R. S. HOOKER,
Herbalist—Student of Hahnemann and Aphoristic Science.
R. S.—Packages with directions, sent by mail, when desired, to any part of the country.
Peterborough, July 29, 1858. 31

Provincial Parliament.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY.

TUESDAY, Aug. 10, 1858.

THE PROVINCIAL STOCK.

When the Speaker resumed the chair at three o'clock,

On motion of Hon. Mr. CAYLEY,

The Bill to make more advantageous provision for the redemption of Provincial Debentures and the consolidation of the public debt, was read a second time at length, and ordered to be read a third time to-morrow.

THIRD READINGS.

The following Bills were read a third time and passed.

Bill to amend the law of Scire Facias.

Bill to amend the Prison Inspection Act of 1857.

Bill further to amend the law in Upper Canada respecting the Court of Error and Appeal.

IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT.

On motion of Attorney General MACDONALD,

The Bill to abolish arrest in civil actions in certain cases, and to provide for the better prevention and more effectual punishment of fraud, was then taken up.

Mr. WALLBRIDGE said that this measure did not give satisfaction to the country.—The public expected a Bill which would entirely abolish imprisonment for debt, but this could only be considered a half measure, which fell very far short of what was required. He had received letters during this session from several persons, asking whether they should run away. They were willing to give up all the property they had in the world to satisfy their creditors, and they wished to know whether, on doing so, they could be saved from being thrown into gaol, which could serve no good object.—In a country like this all persons could not be successful in business, and he did not think that those who failed, through no criminality, should be exposed to the horrors of imprisonment. He moved that the Bill be recommitted, with a view to the insertion of a clause that imprisonment for debt should be totally abolished.

Mr. DUNKIN said that this Bill was an assimilation to the Law of Lower Canada, under which practically there was no such thing as imprisonment for debt. Since the present law came into operation in Lower Canada, he had only had four cases of arrest in his practice.

Mr. D. A. MACDONALD, as one connected with the Montreal trade, said he knew that the merchants of Montreal were opposed to the system of imprisoning for debt, and for his own part he would be glad to see the system entirely done away with. He did not think this Bill would afford the relief which the country required, and he should vote with much pleasure for the amendment.

Mr. NOTMAN moved another amendment to the effect of striking out from the Bill the whole of the first clause after the sixth line, and all subsequent provisions in reference to arrest in civil cases, except that contained in the first clause. He thought this would meet the object sought by his hon. friend from South Hastings. He was the oldest practitioner in Upper Canada at the present day, having practised for thirty three years at the bar of Upper Canada. Under the old law, and under that now in operation, he knew there had been and still was an amount of perjury committed by creditors, often from malignant motives, which was frightful to contemplate. What was necessary was to abolish imprisonment for debt, and this Bill did not at all accomplish that object.

Atty. Gen. MACDONALD complained of the conduct of the Opposition, in raising another discussion on a Bill which had been sufficiently discussed at previous stages.—If the amendment was carried, the Bill would be destroyed, and the result would be that the present law, which was so much complained of, would remain in operation.

Hon. M. CAMERON attacked the Opposition for stating what was not true in regard to the Bill under consideration, and said their conduct was of a piece with the editorials of newspapers, the statements in which were not borne out by the reports of the Debates.

Mr. Wallbridge's amendment having been withdrawn, Mr. Notman's was negatived by 58 to 25.

The Bill was then read a third time, and passed.

THE SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES.

The House again went into Committee of Supply, to consider the Supplementary Estimates for Public Works.

The items, $50,000 for enlarging the Welland canal, and $13,000 for the completion of lighthouses in Lake Huron, were passed without much discussion.

On the item $30,500 for the completion of the lighthouse, &c., on Pointe Pelee Reef,

Mr. MCKELLAR urged that the remainder of the work should be given out to tender.

Mr. D. A. MACDONALD, after twenty-five years' experience in such matters, was strongly of opinion that it would be advantageous to give out all public works on tender. At the same time, the Department should have the power of increasing or diminishing the estimate, as the exigencies of the work required.

Mr. FERRES expressed the opinion that that Department should not be compelled to accept the lowest tender. With regard to the Pointe Pelee Works, he understood they were of such a nature that they could not be given out on contract.

Hon. Mr. SICOTTE said the law did not require the Board of Works to accept the lowest tender. They were authorized to accept the best tender.

The item was then agreed to.

On the next item, $60,489 for improvement of Back Waters, Newcastle District, improvements in Bengog River, and erection of new stone lock at Lindsay.

Mr. D. A. MACDONALD asked whether the work at Lindsay had been given on tender, or to a favourite of the Assistant Commissioner of Public Works, without a tender?

No answer being given by the Government,

Mr. MCGEE said he insisted on an answer being given to the question.

Atty. Gen. MACDONALD—Insist! (Hear, hear.) That is not the way to get an answer to a question.

Hon. Mr. SICOTTE said the member for Montreal had been somewhat hasty. When that hon. gentleman rose, he (Mr. Sicotte) was putting the question to his predecessor in office, that he might be able to give an answer to the House. The answer was that these works were not given out on tenders, asked for in a public manner.—[Hear, hear.] From what he had heard of these works from parties well acquainted with them, it would be his duty not to expend more money on them, until they had a report from a party in whose integrity the department could have confidence. Only enough would be expended therefore, in the meantime, as it was necessary not to lose the advantage of the works already constructed.

Mr. WHITE spoke warmly of the vicious system pursued by the Public Works Department, and referred to the building of the Burlington Lighthouse.

Hon. S. SMITH—What has that to do with the item?

Mr. WHITE said it had everything to do with it, and that he would tell the Postmaster General that he knew there had been similar jobs in the Post Office Department, under the regime of his predecessor, in giving out mail contracts.

Mr. ROBLIN—Where?

Mr. WHITE—In Lennox and Addington.

Mr. ROBLIN said he could give the statement a flat denial.

Mr. WHITE said it was part of the system, and he presumed Mr. Spence had no knowledge of it, but he would be prepared to state the whole matter in writing to-morrow. And he knew that in Halton the carrying of the mail was let by tender.

The item was then agreed to.

The next item was $25,645 for the building of permanent Light Houses at Burlington Bay Canal, and re-construction of piers.

Mr. WHITE asked if this work had been given out to tender, or to a favourite of some one. He understood the Government agent on the work was an employee of the contractor, occupying the same relation as Gauvreau to Mr. Baby.

Hon. Mr. ALLEYN stated that the work had been let, and not given out to contract.

After some discussion the item was agreed to, as were also—$30,000 for repairs, rents, &c., of Public Buildings;—$6,951 to complete Hamilton Custom House; $16,553 for the London Post Office; and $12,000 for the Kingston Custom House and Post Office. On the next item, $100,000 for completion of the Quebec Custom House,

Mr. MCDOUGALL required some explanation of this large amount.

Hon. Mr. CAYLEY said the site was on the water-edge, and that there had been an erroneous estimate as to the nature of the soil. The result had been that the original estimate being £28,000, it was now found that an additional £25,000 was required to complete the work.

The item was then agreed to. On the next, $20,000 for Ottawa Survey,

Mr. WHITE was of opinion that in view of the assistance about to be given to the Northern Railway, the Ottawa Survey should be stopped.

Mr. D. A. MACDONALD differed from his hon. friend. He would cheerfully support the appropriation, even it were twice the amount.

Mr. HOGAN said there was a difference of opinion whether the Ottawa route or the Toronto and Georgian Bay route was the better for a Canal. And he thought it unfair that an appropriation of $20,000 should be made to the one route, and none to the other.

Mr. WALLBRIDGE was glad to see that something was being done to open up the Ottawa region. Between North Hastings and Ottawa lay a tract, a hundred miles in length, of the best land in Canada, which did not now sustain a human being, although it was capable of sustaining a million. He thought it was right to do something to open up this territory.

After some further discussion, the item was agreed to; also $6,000 for Gaspe Road, $6,000 for Metapediac Road, and $6,000 for Matane and Cap Chat Road. On the item $14,060 for completion of Slides and Dams in Saguenay, commenced under estimate laid before the Legislature last session.

Mr. CIMON said he desired to explain the reason which induced some settlers of Chicoutami to oppose the constructions of the slides in that county. These slides, they said, were useful, but it was not right therefore to settle the Saguenay. It was 18 years since the county was settled.—The population consisted of some 18,000 or 20,000 souls, and it was a pity to see such a large population without roads, whereby they might communicate with the rest of the country. He wished to call the attention of the Government to this fact.

After some remarks from Mr. CHAPAIS and some other members,

Mr. BELLINGHAM spoke at considerable length on the claims of the Ottawa country on the Lower Canada side, which the Government had done almost nothing to open up.

The item was then agreed to. On the next item, $2,000 for improving Port Road from Malbaie to Grande Baie.

Mr. D. A. MACDONALD remarked on the inexpediency of paying for these Lower Canada Roads out of public funds, while in Upper Canada the roads were maintained by local taxation.

The item was agreed to; also $8,000 for North Shore Road below Tadousac.—While the House was discussing the next item, $30,000 towards completion of the Jesuscosta Road, (another of the Baby contracts), six o'clock arrived, and the Speaker left the chair till half-past seven.

Grand Demonstration.

ENTHUSIASTIC RECEPTION OF OUR POPULAR MEMBER, HON. A. A. DORION.

(From the Montreal Argus.)

So soon as it was known that our esteemed member the Hon. A. A. Dorion, was about to return to Montreal to give an account of his stewardship, and to represent himself to the constituency, than one feeling pervaded the Liberal party, that it was but a simple act of justice—a tribute to tried worth and incorruptible honesty—to meet and welcome him and assure him how highly his constituents appreciate the noble manner in which he, with his fellow-members of the Liberal party, and especially the members of the Brown-Dorion Cabinet, have fought the battle of Freedom and Constitutional Reform, against the combined force of corruption in the Legislature, backed with a corrupt Administration, and sustained by an equally corrupt and unprincipled Governor General.

To the Irish electors, ever prompt in action when the cause of Reform is at stake, we may fairly yield the palm of precedency. With characteristic warmth of feeling have they resented the slights and insults to their race of a Cartier and a Loranger, the former of whom had the insolence to declare on the floor of the Legislative Assembly, after he found that not a single Irishman worthy of the name would vote for him, that he despised and repudiated their vote. Mr. Loranger's sneers at Mr. McGee as "the member for Griffintown," a distinction of which as much as of Laprairie, were it an electoral district, Mr. Loranger or any other member might well be proud, is not effaced from the memory of the electors he insulted.

The electors of that quarter, we have said, took the lead, marking, thereby, their cordial feeling towards the Canadian member, Mr. Dorion, whose liberal principles accord so completely with their own. On learning the hour when his arrival was expected they engaged a splendid carriage, with four gray horses, to meet him at Wellington Bridge, and receive and escort him through their quarter of the city to Mr. Dorion's residence. We ought to mention here that Mr. Dorion, not being made aware of the preparations, had come down by the Grand Trunk train, and consequently had arrived in the city early in the day, but he, of course, determined to meet his friends at the appointed hour. At Wellington Bridge then, he was met, as already mentioned, by a number of citizens of St. Ann's Ward; and accompanied by the hon. L. H. Holton, with J. O'Meara, Esq., and J. Sadlier, Esq., entered the carriage provided for his reception. The procession that escorted this party through the suburbs was of the most imposing character. Torches and variagated lamps were supplied in profusion, and Hardy's brass band enlivened the procession with the most spirit stirring strains. The streets along the line were brilliantly illuminated; and crowded with spectators, who gave their member the ceud mille faulthea—an Irish welcome. We wish Messrs. Cartier and Loranger—the corruptionist maligners of the fair fame of this portion of our city—could have witnessed the homage paid to the virtues of Mr. Dorion, our priceless and incorruptible representative, and the hearty cheers with which the arrival of that gentleman was greeted, it would have taught them the lesson, that although a majority of the members may be bought, the heart of the country—its bone and sinew, the hard-working sons of toil—are unpurchasable. We commend the spectacle to the notice of the Government, who so unsparingly disparage the merits of the voters of St. Ann's Ward, because they are too honest to "take the shilling" and list in the corruptionist service.

Having passed through St. Ann's Ward, the procession moved on to the head of McGill street, where it was joined by a large number of our fellow-citizens, Canadians and others. After a feu de joie of rockets and other fireworks from the Haymarket Square, the procession then marched through McGill street, Place D'Armes, and Notre Dame street, to the St. Nicholas Hotel, Jacques Cartier Square, where an immense crowd—not less than six thousand people in number—were assembled.—Mr. Dorion with his cortege entered the hotel amid the most enthusiastic cheering, and shortly after appeared on the balcony and addressed the multitude in the following speech:

He said he felt most grateful after the many expressions of confidence he had obtained at the hands of the citizens of Montreal, to meet with such a reception as they were now offering to him. He had ever since the late events by which the seat which he owed to their suffrages had been vacated, wished for the earliest opportunity to meet his constituents, and lay before them the course he had thought it his duty to pursue, not only during the recent Ministerial crisis, but also during the whole session, and this opportunity they had offered to him in a most unexpected and flattering manner; so unexpected was it on his part, that he had actually reached Montreal in the morning, when his friends expected him in the evening, and were preparing to receive him in the handsome manner they did, and which would ever be remembered by him. When elected last winter, he was placed in a most difficult position, by the fact that he had lost the most valuable assistance of several friends, who had been defeated by the corruption and frauds by which the last general elections had been carried. Though few in number, the Opposition members from Lower Canada, powerfully aided by the Liberal party in Upper Canada, made strong but vain efforts to obtain redress for the injured constituencies. A compact majority, increased by all those whose seats were contested, and assisted by a partizan Speaker, baffled all inquiry on the most miserable quibble to that extent that a member who was declared by the unanimous vote of the House to have obtained upwards of three hundred fraudulent votes, while his majority was only fourteen, was allowed to retain his seat; that those others, with the force of an election whereby they got 15,000 votes recognized, and several others with almost equally doubtful right, were allowed to sit and to vote away the rights of constituencies which they really did not represent. There was no act, however contrary to the feelings of the country, for which the Ministry did not at first find a complacent majority ready to back them, even to the justification of the buying and selling of public offices, as was the case with the Shrievalty for the County of Norfolk. This covering up of so gross frauds and improper transactions, soon aroused public opinion, which by a reaction on the members themselves by degrees reduced the majority of the Government, until at last, on that most suicidal measure for the interests of the Province, and more particularly of Lower Canada, the re-establishment of the tonnage dues on all ships visiting the ports of Quebec and Montreal, long since abolished, they were found in a minority of two.—Though this vote affected most materially the financial policy of the Government, those who composed it did not resign. But a still more important vote was in reserve. The decision of the Imperial authorities fixing the Seat of Government at Ottawa, had created general dissatisfaction, and from an early period of the session he had given notice of resolutions expressive of the feelings of the country against Ottawa, and also of his views that Montreal should be the place selected for the permanent Seat of Government. After waiting several months without an opportunity to bring the question under the consideration of the House, and after several fruitless attempts to do so, he was at last enabled to move a resolution disapproving the choice which Her Majesty had been advised to make of the city of Ottawa. By promises of all kinds the Ministry were enabled to obtain the rejection of that motion, but they engaged themselves to offer every opportunity to discuss again the question at a future day;—this day came sooner than they expected, and a member proposed Montreal, without regard to its interests, and before disposing of the decision fixing Ottawa, which alone would inevitably have destroyed all chances this city might otherwise have had of becoming the Seat of Government. This, however, was avoided by a well-prepared motion of Mr. Piche's declaring that Ottawa ought not to be the Seat of Government, and which was carried against the Government by a majority of fourteen. Twice the Ministry including Messrs. Cartier and Rose—had voted that Ottawa was the proper place for the Seat of Government; twice they had declared that they were bound to carry out the law appropriating money for constructing public buildings in that city. Under such a direct vote of censure, they could not do otherwise than resign which they did. He (Mr. Dorion) had been accused, in connection with his vote on this question, of two heinous crimes; first he had sacrificed the interests of Montreal; and second, he had shown disrespect to the decision of the Queen. He frankly admitted that he could not yet discover how, by voting that Ottawa should not be the Seat of Government he had impaired the chances of Montreal, and, how those who voted that Ottawa should be the Seat of Government had showed that they were friendly to Montreal; and, as to any disrespect afforded to the Queen, it was sufficient to say that the Queen had an infinitesimal share in the selection of the Seat of Government, and that respect to the will of the people is as much a duty in a representative as respect of the decision of a Colonial Secretary, utterly ignorant of the wants of this country, and on whose advice alone the Queen could act. But his weak opponents, in coming back to power, had offered the best excuse possible against those charges. They had declared that they would not begin buildings in Ottawa till the House had an opportunity of expressing its opinion on the subject. They had thereby admitted that the House can express views adverse to the decision of the Imperial authorities, without offering an insult to Her Majesty, and that another place than Ottawa, perhaps Montreal, can be selected. On the resignation of the Ministry, Mr. Brown was invited to form a Government, and claimed his (Dorion's) assistance. Mr. Brown has long been represented to you as a fanatic, and an opponent to the interests and institutions of Lower Canada. But since he had the honour of having a seat in Parliament, he had constantly acted with him in opposition, and had learned to appreciate in him not only abilities of the highest order as a public man, but also his thorough liberal views on all questions of general policy he was not to be deterred by the outcries of interested parties who represented him to be a political impossibility. And against those charges brought against Mr. Brown, he confidently appealed to the composition of the Cabinet which he had formed, and asked if there was to be found in it any sign of fanaticism, of exclusiveness or unfairness of any kind; if on the contrary, all classes and all interests, were not most fairly represented from among the most liberal section of the present House? He could also say that in accepting office with Mr. Brown, he did so without any sacrifice of principle, and that on those few questions upon which he had differed from him and which were those on which all Lower Canada differed from all Upper Canada, such as Representation by Population, they entered into their discussion with an earnest desire of settling those difficulties existing between the two sections of the Province; and they found that those difficulties could be met to the satisfaction of both sections of the Province either by the adoption of Federal Union or such other modifications of our present constitution on the basis of Representation by Population as would, with proper checks and restrictions fully guarantee the interests and institutions of either section. Mr. Brown's Cabinet was further pledged to two other questions of importance; the first to make the Seat of Government a Cabinet question, and to finally settle the Seigniorial Tenure, and provide the means necessary for that purpose without any injustice to any part or section of the Province; and upon all these points they would have been ready to submit measures, at the next session of Parliament, and to stand or fall by them. It was known by wint cable, a most extraordinary and unprecedented vote of want of confidence was obtained in both Houses against the new Administration, while they were absent and had no opportunity to defend themselves or explain their policy and how that vote was followed by the refusal of the Governor, contrary to the advice of his constitutional advisers, to dissolve Parliament. Forced to resign, after having vacated their seats in the House, the members of Mr. Brown's Administration have to seek re-election, while their successors, by a fraud and shift of offices have managed to avoid going back to their constituents. As one of those who had been condemned without a hearing, to whom even that fairness and justice granted to criminals had been denied, he appealed from the decision of that Assembly to the tribunal of the electors of the city of Montreal, whose judgment he never yet had occasion to distrust, and to which he was willing to submit, and on the great constitutional question now raised before the country. This demonstration he did not consider as a personal compliment to himself, but as an approbation of his course in vindicating what he considered the most important political rights of the people. (Cheers.)

Mr. Dorion then returned his thanks to the meeting, and in a few words in English expressed the high gratification he had in publicly acknowledging the aid and assistance afforded to him by all the members of the Liberal party in Liberal Canada, and more particularly by his colleague Mr. McGee, to whose talents he paid a high tribute of praise and admiration.

Seldom, indeed, have we been present at so cordial a reception as that of Mr. Dorion. At every sentence he was greeted with the loudest applause; and as he proceeded to narrate the recent stirring events in Toronto, to explain and justify his connection with Mr. Brown, Mr. Holton, and other members of his short-lived Administration, the expressions of approbation were loud and reiterated; and in the same manner was greeted the brief notice of the policy of his Government. As he proceeded in guarded and moderate terms to describe the difficulties with which he had been beset, and the heartless and black treachery of Sir Edmund Head and his corrupt advisers, the indignation of the audience knew no bounds and expressed itself in terms sufficiently indicative of the honest feeling excited by the narrative. It was plain that Mr. Dorion so far from having suffered in the estimation of his late constituency, had gained a still stronger hold on their affections.—The unmistakeable manner in which they were demonstrated, argues that to contest an election with him, would be an act of temerity, and to succeed in it utterly impracticable.

After Mr. Dorion retired, the Hon. Mr. Holton was loudly called for, and on appearing was greeted as cordially as was our ex-member Mr. Dorion. He addressed the meeting in nearly the following terms, his remarks being interrupted throughout with the most vociferous cheering.

Mr. Holton said that as other opportunities would speedily present themselves of discussing fully the exciting topics of the day, he would not at that advanced hour of the night trespass upon the patience of the meeting with any lengthened remarks.—This magnificent demonstration must be as gratifying to their late distinguished representative as it was creditable to the liberal and patriotic electors of Montreal. It afforded another proof that whatever difficulties might beset the path of a public man—however trying the circumstances in which he might be placed—if he were but true to his mission, and faithful to the principles he professed on entering public life, the great honest heart of the people would be with him to sustain him and carry him triumphantly through every difficulty and trial. Mr. Dorion at that moment occupied the most prominent position of any public man in Lower Canada—the most prominent position in fact occupied by any Lower Canadian politician since Mr. Lafontaine led his countrymen in the great struggle with another Governor, which resulted in the attainment of that measure of constitutional freedom which we have recently enjoyed. The duties of that position Mr. Dorion was by his qualities of mind and character eminently fitted to discharge with honour to himself and advantage to his country; and it was for the electors of Montreal to testify their appreciation of the blessings of constitutional government—the very foundations of which were imperilled by the unprecedented conduct of the present Head of the Government—by restoring him triumphantly to the seat in Parliament which he adorned, and of which he had been momentarily deprived by a process which he would not now characterize. Before closing he might perhaps be permitted to say a word of another representative of the city. He alluded to his friend, Mr. McGee. From circumstances connected with the last city election, he had watched the course of that gentleman in Parliament with great interest, he felt bound to say that if it had been his fortune to be his colleague, as he ought to have been, if justice had been done,—there have been few occasions on which he would have felt it to be his duty to pursue a different course from that pursued by Mr. McGee. He was, by common consent, the most eloquent member of the House, and his admirable conduct throughout the late crisis had shown him to possess in a high degree the less brilliant, but less useful qualities of judgment, of tact and above all, of unswerving fidelity to his political friends.—(Vociferous cheers.)

Mr. Devlin being loudly demanded, came forward and addressed the assembly in a most powerful speech, during which he was at his always is on such occasions, enthusiastically cheered.

Mr. Papin made a most eloquent oration, and was followed by several other gentlemen; and after giving loud cheers for Mr. Dorion, Mr. Holton and the Liberal cause, the meeting separated. A large number of citizens escorted Mr. Dorion to his residence, where he again briefly addressed them, thanking them for the kind reception of which he was the subject.

The Empress of Austria is expected to be confined in the middle of August.

The Fraser River Gold-Fields.

(From the New York Tribune.)

The British Parliament and Press are discussing the topography, climate, soil and prospects of "New-Caledonia," as they call the Fraser River and its adjuncts, with an interest which seems out of proportion to the knowledge embodied in their statements. It seems to be the cue especially of the Times to disparage British America, westward of the Great Lakes, to extol the achievements of the Hudson's Bay Company in that region, and to suspect most sagaciously that the Canadian Government will be loth to take this region (including the fee simple) as a gift, on the usual conditions of undertaking to provide the machinery of justice and protection for the settlers, open roads, &c., &c. We cannot concur in these views—can scarcely realize that they are seriously entertained. The Hudson's Bay Company is a money-making corporation, which never attempted anything further than to hunt and trap profitably the vast region in question, having a monopoly of its trade; and in this it has succeeded, keeping the savages meantime in good humor with itself and each other. It may readily be conceded that the influence of the Hudson's Bay Company on the vast district subjected to its sway has on the whole been beneficient; though the sway of that Company over the valleys of the Red River of the North, Saskatchewan and Fraser, ought now to terminate. But that Canada should refuse or hesitate, to accept this region, if offered, is not credible. Even though the bargain should prove a hard one, there cannot fail to be fat pickings at the outset for the rulers of Canada and their favourites; and these are never refused by rulers anywhere. That Canada has yet vast tracts of unimproved land, is very true; but so has this country; yet we are none the less eager to "annex" all that lies within reach. Then it is untrue that the country in question is generally sterile and its climate intolerable. The Fraser River region is mainly mountainous and unfruitful; but it embraces some valleys of decided fertility, while its winters are far milder than those of Eastern or Lower Canada. We believe the valley of the Saskatchewan has also warmer winters than Canada East, with four times the area of arable soil. Under proper regulations, a very considerable settlement along the whole British frontier from Lake Superior to the Pacific, will be effected within the next ten years. As to the new Gold Region, it seems exceedingly probable that it will for the present be overdone—that thousands more will rush thither than can find room to dig profitably or food to eat, and that great disappointment and suffering will be experienced, especially during the present season. Still, the gold is there; some of the diggings have yielded bountifully, and there is every prospect that many others will do as well if not better. Whoever may make or lose, live or die, the whole region will be traversed and explored. The accessible gold will in due time be dug and washed out of it; and then the great mass of the diggers will vanish, leaving a moderate residuum of white population engaged in vein-mining, lumbering, stock-raising, &c. But let Great Britain push through her line of railway from the Gulf of St. Lawrence to that of Georgia, and there can be no further doubt that the population not only of the newly-opened region but of Canada also will rapidly increase, and that a great British Emporium, the rival of San Francisco, will grow up around the western terminus of that magnificent artery. That railway completed, the vexed question of a North-West Passage will have been practically solved, and the foundations of British commercial ascendancy sensibly enlarged and strengthened.—Must we wait for the spur of British rivalry to induce us to construct a Railroad to the Pacific?

The House of Lords and the Jew Bill.

(From the London Times.)

St. Augustin said of the fine gentlemen of his day, that he would rather be accused of any number of crimes than have it imputed to him that he had dropped the aspirate from the word "homo." Some people in later days would be more ashamed of committing a false quantity in a pentameter than of giving a false warranty with a quadruped. To upset a table of old china as you are backing out of a drawing-room is much more ridiculous than to run away with your friend's wife. That debased school of ethics which holds that a blunder is worse than a crime would have gone further, and held that a gaucherie is worse than a blunder.

The best-bred gentlemen in the world have, in Parliament assembled, just committed a gaucherie of the grossest description. Twenty Jews dressed in full gabardines, and swearing by Moses, could not have inflicted so staggering a blow to the dignity of our House of Lords as that House has in its blindness dealt itself. The Lords have spoken brave words and have eaten the leek. They have emancipated the Jews, and have favoured the House of Commons with certain "Reasons" why they ever had refused and ever would refuse to emancipate them. They have not yielded with a protest; they have not said, with a certain lordly scorn, "Well, well, let them clamorous Commons have their own way; it is scarcely decorous for us to contend longer with them;" but they have themselves initiated the thing they abhor. The Jew Bill is a Lords' Bill—volunteered by the Lords—passed by the Lords. The position of Lord Derby and his Peers is not that of the tolerant Mussulman who allows a Christian to eat pig in his presence, merely holding his own nose and turning away his eyes from the abomination. Their act is that of the obsequious Modern who goes and fetches the pork, offering it to his Christian master, but saying out all the time that the Prophet would horribly punish all who eat pork. "Never," say the House of Lords, "will we pass the Oaths Bill, because the Jews always were excluded because exclusion from seats in Parliament on the ground of religious opinion is a principle, because the Jewish disbelief constitutes a moral unfitness to take part in legislation, and because we have always shown a firm adherence to the principle of keeping Parliament an exclusively Christian assembly. We can't do it—it is impossible.—But while we are discussing Parliamentary matters, here is a bill which we have passed and which we should be glad if you will consent to. It is called 'A Bill for the Relief of her Majesty's subjects professing the Jewish Religion.' It is to enable the Jews to sit in either House of Parliament."—Anybody who can read may see that this is a fair abstract of the Lords' "Reasons" and of the Lords' Jew Bill. What can be said to such implacable talkers and to such docile actors? Lord John Russell wished to say something spiteful. He proposed to accept the profitable deed, and to dismiss the blustering benefactors with a sharp epigram:—"This House does not consider it necessary to examine the reasons offered by the Lords for insisting upon the exclusion of the Jews from Parliament, as by a bill of the present session their Lordships have provided for the admission of persons professing the Jewish religion to seats in the Legislature." This would be scarcely magnanimous. The Lords make a ridiculous face, but they swallowed the draught. It would not be generous in Lord John to hold up a looking-glass before them and bid the world laugh. It is better to do a wise thing and say a foolish one than to do a foolish thing and say wise one. It is the common practice of every comedy uncle to scold the scapegrace hero most just, when he is about to allow him to marry to his heart's content. "Never, no never will I consent to your marrying that miscreant." "Take your Jew, and be happy, my children." We have all heard sentences like these come in almost the same scene,—not quite so close, perhaps, as we heard them the other day at St. Stephen's, but very close together. The Lords' "Reasons" must be taken, like Mrs. Robinson's journal, as a picture of what they would like people to think they had been about; the bill represents the sober and unromantic fact. There was a man at the Court of the Regent Duke of Orleans of whom he used to say that he simulated the few vices that he wanted. So if we were to believe the Peers, they would try to persuade us they are bigots of the oldest order of bigotry, smacking their lips over good old intolerant principles of the 1828 vintage.—But the real old bats of bigotry at once detected the deceit; they would take part in no such symposium. Never were steady people so thoroughly changed in their habits as were the old friends of the British Constitution when they heard the Peers' "Reasons" and saw the Peers' Bill. Mr. Knightley grew lively and almost logical. Mr. Beutinck came forth to defend the Jews from the insult put upon them by the Lords, and Mr. Spooner went into the wrong lobby and came out a Jew Emancipator. Poor Mr. Spooner, with the "Reasons" and the Bill, is like Moses in the "Vicar of Wakefield;" he remembers the fine language about the Cosmogony, but he looks at the green spectacles.

No doubt, we ought to be glad to have finished the contest at any price. But why could it not have been gracefully done?—Concession always contains opportunities for graceful acts. A man may surrender his sword with so much gentle breeding that the conqueror may be more embarrassed than the captive. If the Lords were resolved to give way, it was surely better to follow the sure counsels of the veteran Lyndhurst than the suggestions of the Dragoon officer who ordered the Balaklava charge. Had the Lords held out for five years longer they would not have done their Order so much harm as they have by the manner of this surrender. We English have a great admiration for dignity, but we have a very critical eye for the article. We have, moreover, a strong sense of the ridiculous; and surely nothing can be more ridiculous that presenting your sword hilt, and at the same moment shouting out "No surrender!" Between the Commons' Oaths Bill and the Lords' "Jews Bill," there is practically not a fibu of difference. Had the Lords passed the Oaths Bill saying that they did so in deference to the repeatedly expressed wishes of the House of Commons, they would have done a wise act in a dignified manner. Unfortunately, they have acted under the counsels of some who seem to think that it is not inconsistent with the true dignity of English gentlemen to say one thing and do another.

The Journal de Debats makes the following remarks:—We admit that there exists among us individuals who believe that their birth or aristocratic pretensions command to feel the disasters of Crecy, Poitiers and Agincourt more actively than the remainder of the nation, and to exhibit a great desire to avenge them; we also possess zealous Catholics who consider a war with Protestant England as the first of duties.

DEFEAT OF THE RUSSIANS.—The Oesterreichische Post learns that the Russians have received a very severe check in Daghestan and Leghistan. With 5,000 regulars, 10,000 irregulars, two heavy and as many light field batteries, they last month attempted to obtain possession of some highly important defiles near Kondo Koda. The place mentioned was taken by storm by four battalions of the line and 6,000 irregulars, and Sultan Daniel and his followers retreated in disorder. "The Russians being chased by their victory, entered the pass, and, while cooking, were surprised by the mountaineers. After losing 1,900 men and eight guns, the Russians retreated in the greatest disorder to Rissur, but they could not maintain their position there, and fell back on Seirvan."

We learn from Egypt that the operations on the railway between Cairo and Suez have been resumed, and 6,000 labourers are now employed on the unfinished and levellings of the still unfinished portion of the line. Notwithstanding this numerical strength, the completion of the entire railway is not looked for before the spring of 1859.—*Malta

Arrival of the "St. Louis."

NEWS FROM THE FRAZER RIVER.

Arrival of the first Shipment of Gold from the new Placers—condition of affairs at the Mines—efforts of the Californians to discourage emigration.

San Francisco, July 20, 1858.

There can be no doubt that the excitement respecting the gold discoveries upon Fraser and Thompson rivers, in the British possessions, is much less now than it was two weeks ago. Letters upon letters have been received from parties who, having failed immediately to accomplish the object of their emigration, made their communications the reflection of their own individual feelings. These letters have been published extensively in the newspapers of this city and all over the State. The effect is as might be expected. A revulsion in public opinion has taken place concerning the mines, and where the fullest faith was held of their richness and extent incredulity and ridicule of the matter are now expressed. Several causes have united to bring about the change. The great majority of the journals published in California have waged a war against the excitement, mainly to check the emigration which seriously threatened to depopulate the State. The inhospitable climate of Fraser river, the scarcity of provisions and the difficulty of supplying the large number of miners with the necessaries of life, the illiberal policy of the Hudson's Bay Company, which exercised a rigid monopoly of all trade, and the perils of river navigation, were all depicted with power and telling effect. Add to this the well known richness of the California mines, which at no time for the past ten years yielded with more abundance the precious metal. It was shown that there was room for four or five times the present number of placer miners, with chances fully equal to those already at work, who are now making first rate wages. Hills almost without number in the interior of California, are known to be rich in gold, only wanting to be bored to the base within to procure untold wealth.

Looking at the excitement dispassionately from its commencement to date, it seems that there is just as much cause for the sudden revulsion in public sentiment concerning the new mines, as there was for the sudden blaze of excitement and the consequent emigration of about thirty thousand of our citizens to a land of which very little was known. A retrospect of the mania will show that gold was found on the bars of Frazer river in the months of April and June in such quantities as to pay miners from twenty to fifty dollars a day. When the waters rose and the bars became submerged, of course mining operations were at an end. The river yet remains high, and will continue so until August, when the same returns will be found for the labour of the digger. These facts were known generally throughout California, and the men who now express bitter disappointment have no reason to do so on just grounds. However, the emigration is stopped; it is well so far. Enough of people are on the ground until more is known of the country. Many will say they have been deceived, but such statements are only the emanations of men who rashly went into an enterprise without bringing reason and experience to their assistance beforehand. Because the laws of nature could not be set aside at will; because the river refused to fall while the snows were yet melting in the mountains, and because, therefore the bars on which the gold deposits exist did not become workable at as early a period as they had anticipated, these parties do not hesitate to denounce the embryo mines as a deception. What most of them say simply amounts to nothing. Their disgust in July is about as well grounded as their excitement was in May. All the difficulties they have experienced, and all the dangers which they have encountered, were foreseen and pointed out to them nearly three months ago. It was evident that a river which had its origin and its course for a long distance through precipitous mountains could not fail as long as the hot summer sun continued to melt the snow. It was evident that if the river did not fall, mining to any extent could not be commenced for months, unless dry diggings were discovered. It was evident, also, that the country about Frazer River was rugged and difficult of access, and that land avenues of communication could not be immediately constructed. It was known that the Hudson's Bay Company would not permit the introduction of sufficient quantities of provisions. It was foreseen that over twenty thousand men pouring into an unexplored and almost inaccessible territory, many of them without provisions or the means of purchasing them, unable to realize a return for their labour for months, and unable to make their way out of a country to which they have so improvidently emigrated, would be exposed to great hardships and sufferings, perhaps to starvation and death. All these things were perceived and published by a portion of the press. But it was no use. The people of California stubbornly set their facts against facts, reason and arguments. They know more about the climate of British America than persons who had lived there for 20 years. They were better acquainted with its topography than the natives themselves. They They were perfectly competent to judge of the richness and extent of the new mines, though they made up their opinions upon assertions that had never been authenticated, and about a region of which the best geographers know scarcely anything. They were determined to be blind, and they were blind. They rushed to San Francisco from all portions of the State with their blankets, their shovels, and picks and rockers. It seemed as if the hard experience of California had been lost upon them.—Few stopped to fix themselves out with provisions and clothing; fewer to inquire the means by which they were to reach the new El Dorado. They believed all they heard no matter how fabulous, though perhaps it is questionable if they knew whether Victoria was an an island or on a peninsula or whether Fraser river flowed through Vancouver's Island or the continent. They crowded the steamer and sailing vessels beyond their utmost capacity. The decks, the cabins, every nook and corner of the ships literally were choked with people who had sacrificed everything and were ready to risk their lives to get another look at the elephant. They arrived at Victoria, Whatcom, Gaboma, Port Townsend, Bellingham Bay, and other towns on Puget Sound.—They precipitated themselves into canoes light and feeble, and braved the waves of the bay and the swift current of the river. Some were drowned, but several thousands succeeded in reaching Fort Hope, Fort Langley, Fort Yale, and intermediate and higher points on Fraser River. The adventurers gained those places—many without proper clothing, provisions or money—and they found out precisely what all persons who had taken the trouble to investigate the subject had told them at the start, and which they had disregarded in the violence of the fever from which they suffered. They discovered the sun would not cease to shine, nor would the snow cease to melt; the river would not cease to rise because they had travelled over a thousand miles in search of gold, and because they were without the opportunity of earning money and had not the means to support themselves. They found out three things, and now they act just as the disappointed miners in California did in 1849 and 1850. They alternate between condemnation of the country and abuse of the people whose representations induced them to emigrate to it. They forget that they know scarcely anything more now about the quality or extent of the new mines than they knew when they left San Francisco. At a fair estimate not more than five thousand people—about one-sixth of the whole immigration—has succeeded in reaching Frazer River. The balance yet remains in towns on Puget Sound—seven thousand of the number being at Victoria, Vancouver's Island. These people now forget that they were warned of the consequences they have brought upon themselves. They also forget that, having arrived upon Frazer River, they have been unable to ascertain the full richness of its bars, and that they have made no systematic efforts to prospect the surrounding country. The truth is as said before, the change of public feeling is as groundless to-day as the fever which infected the people, and which has continued until within the past fortnight, was groundless during its existence.

We know little more about Frazer and Thompson rivers now than we knew three weeks ago, and the little addition that has been made to our stock of knowledge upon the subject is almost entirely confirmatory of the first reports. We know beyond caval or question that the bars upon Frazer River, wherever they have been prospected, have been found to contain gold, and that sums have been made with rockers which fully justify the belief that when the water falls, and a regular system of mining is commenced, a large amount of gold will be extracted from those bars. We are informed on good authority that coarse gold has been found in considerable quantities upon Thompson River, and that discoveries have been made on Harrison River, and upon a river which discharges itself upwards of a hundred miles north of the mouth of Frazer River. It is well established that the representatives of the Hudson's Bay Company have been aware of the existence of gold deposits at all those points for several years, and that they have had considerable amounts of dust in their possession at intervals during that time. From all these facts the conclusions are inevitable, unless removed by evidence more worthy of belief that the statements of parties who never proceeded further than Victoria, that there is gold within the British territory upon the bars of the rivers, and that there is sufficient quantity of mineral ground to warrant a large immigration at the proper season.—Whether there are rich dry diggings between the Cascade range of mountains and the Rocky Mountains is to be ascertained hereafter, but the indications are strongly in favour of the supposition. The gold found upon the bars of Frazer River is very fine and has apparently been washed down from deposits above. It would be contrary to every precedent if this were not the case; and strongly in favour of such a view as the fact that upon Thompson River the gold is coarse and heavy, and that upon Frazer River, above the former, the gold likewise alters its character. All this region, lying between the Cascade and Rocky Mountains, is yet unexplored, and about the time Frazer River falls, which will be towards the beginning of September, the various routes through from Fort Yale, from Whatcom and Seattle, will probably be completed. So we may expect to know with at least approximate accuracy the extent and richness of the whole country by the month of November. At present everything looks as favourable as in May; though there will be unquestionably destitution and suffering among those inconsiderate individuals who have rushed north and have found as yet, no gold and nothing to eat.

The steamer Oregon arrived yesterday morning from Victoria, bringing down about four hundred passengers. Food still remained scarce, but a sufficient supply has been sent on to last for six months. Many cargoes must have arrived before this time. The danger of famine or hunger is, therefore, happily removed. The United States steamer Shubrick, now in the Sound, and the sloop St. Mary's, will be in a few days despatched from our Navy yard for the same destination. They will be of great service to the miners who go up Frazer river. The impression among them is that the Hudson's Bay Company is not entitled to exclusive trade, and that as two English men-of-war, the Satellite and Plumber, are continually at the mouth of the river to enforce the wishes of Gov. Douglass, it is proper that the American flag should appear in those waters. A letter from Victoria written five days ago, appears in the Alta of yesterday. It is stated that Victoria "was thrown into an extra degree of excitement the day before by the arrival from the Frazer river country, of a California miner named Post, who for the last six weeks has been perambulating among the fastnesses of the far interior in quest of gold. He started from Fort Hope and went as he asserts, about two hundred miles northward, prospecting most of the way, and examining with a miners eye the gold-producing capabilities of the country. Mr. Post only worked two whole days in different places, and took out about two hundred each day. This he exhibited yesterday to a few of us. It was coarse and dull-looking, worn by attrition, and very coarse——from seventy-five cents up to half-ounce pieces. He penetrated further than any other white man has been known to do, and only returned when starved out. He is perfectly satisfied of the extreme richness of the rivers, and says Frazer River is the richest he ever knew—is not exceeded by the most famous in California. Where he went the gold was found outside the bed of the river, and how much treasure remained under the seething cauldrons of the stream, now at the highest, he says, can be imagined from what he found along the banks."

This account is favorable enough, and indicates the re-opening of emigration from here to Frazer River in September.

Cherbourg.

From the London Saturday Review.

The five-and-thirty years which elapsed before 1851, were distinguished from any preceding period of general peace by the cordial and unsuspicious intercourse which, on the whole, prevailed among nations. For this honourable characteristic the period in question is indebted to the number of free constitutions which existed in Europe. Every government knew exactly when there was reason for alarm, and when there was excuse for security, simply because the affairs of the greatest commonwealths in Europe were always freely discussed in the face of day by their journals and parliaments. The system of peaceful diplomacy which prevailed differed wholly from that which distinguished the century preceding. When all the nations of the Continent, except one or two insignificant republics, were controlled by hereditary despotisms, it was thoroughly understood that the profoundest sleep of peace might have a waking in war.—Frederick the Great systematically plotted his attacks for the moment when his destined victims were lapped in security, and his enemies learned from him the grievous example. But the great pacification of 1815 endowed Europe with some great free States, whose mode of managing their policy put an end to such calamitous surprises.—Kings had to feel the pulse of their subjects before they compromised them in the heaviest of all national misfortunes. During this process the whole brewing of the storm, from the cloud like a man's hand to the heaven black with clouds and wind, was open and visible to the civilized world. States had time to wrap themselves round with defences; the strength of each rival was clearly ascertained before the crisis; and the result always was that repentance came in time, and the sky of Europe again grew bright.

The re-establishment of despotism in France has thrown us back on the fears, jealousies, and suspicions of the eighteenth century. Once again we do not know what a cordial alliance means. The world has not the slightest idea what symptoms are menacing and what are reassuring. The most delicate and considerate compliments, and the most acrimonious philippics, are alike valueless to the observer. One week of a free parliament, one day of a free press, one hour's genuine audit of the Imperial budget, would set at rest almost every doubt which Englishmen feel; but short of this, they know that all inquiry into the designs of our neighbour must be the merest guesswork, and that worst of all guesswork which strives to penetrate the springs of action in a single human being. If we were merely engaged in study of character, we might be at liberty to see much in the Emperor of the French that is reassuring. He does certainly seem to have carried with him from England some respect and regard for English idiosyncrasies. He appeared to enjoy the popularity which attended his visit to the Queen. And one may reasonably believe that his freedom from some of the ordinary weaknesses of his subjects opens his eyes to the fact that the long-enduring, long-remembering animosity of Great Britain is one of the most terrible dangers which a nation or a dynasty can call up. But then, it must be again and again repeated, he is the author of the coup d'etat. They too who suffered by that catastrophe imagined that they understood his character. M. Leon Faucher, one of the honestest men in France, pledged his word that Louis Napoleon was sincere. M. Thiers, one of the shrewdest men in Europe, all but publicly declared that he was a fool. But he lived to undeceive them both. M. Faucher died of chagrin at having been made an unwitting accomplice in a conspiracy against freedom; and M. Thiers has recently written of the man whom he despised with a respect which promises to slide into adulation.

The paucity of data for estimating the proximity or remoteness of war is the real cause of the uneasiness which has been caused in England by the army of Cherbourg. We all feel that no assumptions as to the Emperor's habits of mind can be allowed to stand against the great fact of this gigantic arsenal. The Moniteur de la Flotte is not required to tell us that Cherbourg is "the result of the long-continued rivalry between the two nations." We all know that. We know that it was conceived to threaten England, founded to threaten her, and carried to completion as a standing menace against her. Everybody who can find Portsmouth and Plymouth on the map can find Cherbourg also, and can tell what it is meant for. For all time to come there will be a great naval port fronting our coasts, with marvellous docks, fortifications like those of Sebastopol, and a railway which, at a day's notice, can crowd it with soldiers and sailors. We look at this, and we have nothing to neutralize the impression it produces, except the paradox of a French official writer, to the effect that the completion of Cherbourg naturally accompanies the extinction of the ancient rivalry which created it. Turn it how we may, the armament of Cherbourg is an unfriendly act. It is unfriendly, because it drives a Power, careful of its safety, and not too spiritless to wish for something more than safety, to multiply, strengthen, and renew its defences. It is unfriendly, because it necessarily puts us to the cost of a Channel fleet. It is unfriendly, because the Emperor, whatever be his own design, can give no guarantee against the use to which a successor may put a colossal instrument of attack. The invitation to our own Sovereign to attend the inauguration of these great works may be some reason for thinking that no immediate aggression is intended; but, in truth, it was the conspicuous unfriendliness of the step which he had been taking that rendered such an invitation necessary to mask and dissemble it. In short, whatever may be the Emperor's real objects and intentions, he has clearly left us no alternative but to provide for all contingencies; and we trust that our rulers will see the prudence and necessity of immediately placing such a fleet in the Channel as may be adequate, under any conceivable circumstances, to the effectual protection of our coasts.

The Theology of Cards.

The following curious broadside is taken from an English newspaper of the year 1774 and is there called Cards Spiritualized, or "The Perpetual Almanac, or Soldier's Prayer book, giving an account of Richard Lane, a private belonging to the 47 Regiment of Foot, who was taken before the mayor of the town of Glasgow, for playing at cards during Divine service."

The sergeant commanded the soldier at church, and when the parson had read the prayers he took his text. Those who had a Bible took it out; but this soldier had neither Bible nor Common Prayer-book, but pulling out a pack of cards, he spread them out before him. He first looked at one card, and then at the other. The sergeant of the company saw him, and said,

"Richard, put up the cards, this is no place for them."

"Never mind that," said Richard.

When the service was over, the constable took Richard prisoner, and brought him before the mayor.

"Well," says the mayer, "what have you brought that soldier here for?"

"For playing at cards in church."

"Well soldier, what have you to say for yourself?"

"Much, Sir, I hope."

"Very good; if not I will punish you more than ever man was punished."

"I have been," says the soldier, "about six weeks on the march. I have had but little to subsist on. I have neither Bible nor Common Prayer-book. I have nothing but a pack of cards, and I hope to satisfy your worship of the purity of my intentions."

"Very good," said the mayer.

Then, spreading the cards before the mayor, he began with the Ace:

"When I see the Ace, it reminds me there is only one God.

"When I see the Deuce, it reminds me of Father and Son.

"When I see the Tray, it reminds me of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.

"When I see the Four it reminds me of the Four Evangelists that preached—viz., Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John.

"When I see the Five, it reminds me of the Five Wise Virgins that trimmed their lamps. There were ten, but five were wise, and five foolish, and were shut out.

"When I see the Six, it reminds me that in Six days the Lord made heaven and earth.

"When I see the Seven, it reminds me that on the Seventh day God rested from the works which He had made, and hallowed it.

"When I see the Eight, it reminds me of the Eight Righteous Persons that were saved when God drowned the world—viz., Noah and his wife, his three sons and their wives.

"When I see the Nine, it reminds me of the Nine Lepers that were cleansed by our Saviour. There were ten, but nine never returned thanks.

"When I see the Ten, it reminds me of the Ten Commandments which God handed down to Moses on a table of stone.

"When I see the King," said the soldier "it reminds of the Great King of Heaven, which is God Almighty.

"When I see the Queen, it reminds me of the Queen of Sheba, who went to hear the wisdom of Soloman; for she was as wise a woman as he was a man. She brought with her fifty boys and fifty girls, all dressed in boy's apparel, for king Soloman to tell which were girls. King Soloman sent for water to wash themselves; the girls wired to the elbows, and the boys only the wrists so King Soloman told by that.

"Well," said the mayor, "you have given a description of all the cards in the pack except one."

"What is that?" said the soldier.

"The Knave," said the mayor.

"I will give your honour a description of that too, if you will not be angry."

"I will not," said the mayor, "if you will not term me to be the Knave."

"Well," said the soldier, "the greatest Knave I know is the constable that brought me here."

"I do not know," said the mayor, whether he is the greatest knave, but I know he is the greatest fool.

"When I count how many spots in a pack of cards, I find 365—as many days as there are in a year.

"When I count the number of cards in a pack, I find there are fifty-two—as many weeks as there are in a year. And I find four suits—the number of weeks in a month.

"I find that there are twelve picture-cards in the pack, representing the number of months in the year; and on counting the tricks, I find thirteen—the number of weeks in quarter. So you see, Sir, the pack of cards serves for a Bible, almanac, and Common Prayer-book to me."

The Common-Sense View of Late Political Events.

(From the Montreal Herald.)

It appears that the defenders of the Governor and his advisers are seeking to gain an easy victory by long quotations of authorities in support of principles which no one is disposed to controvert. For instance, the Governor General's instructions are cited to prove that the representative of her Majesty could constitutionally refuse the advice of his ministers. Undoubtedly just as the Queen could do so; both Queen and Governor however being subject to this risk that if they cannot get other ministers to assume the responsibility of the refusal they must retract it. This negative power no one denies; but its exercise is subject to the ordinary rule that governs the exercise of other discretionary powers,—that it shall not be employed absurdly or capriciously, or in such a way, especially as to cause public injury or private mortification. The unconstitutional act of the Governor General, in the late crisis, was not the refusal of the advice of ministers; but the putting forward a set of opinions without any advice at all. This he did when he insisted upon the passage of the measures mentioned in his memorandum. The question therefore, is not whether in refusing a dissolution the Governor General acted within the power granted him; but whether doing so, he did nevertheless act in such a manner as to nullify the very constitution under which he governs. It is very possible thus to use a power to destroy the source from which power comes. Providence has given to every live man the power of cutting his own throat; yet the exercise of that power will destroy the very life in virtue of which it exists. What is the logical consequence worked out by the recent action of the Governor General? He sent for Mr. Brown, not because his late Ministry had lost the confidence of the House of Assembly, but because the had resigned, as a consequence of a defeat sustained on a particular subject—we do not care now whether it was important or unimportant—for the Governor General thought it authorized the resignation of his Cabinet, or he would not have accepted the resignation. Mr. Brown being sent for, then, what was he to do? Was he to tell the Governor General "I can only accept office on condition that you dissolve the House?" That would have been an expression of doubt of the Governor's good faith, not very respectful in itself, and declared to be unconstitutional by Lord Metcalfe, who complained that his ministers wished to "stipulate" with him as by a direct declaration made in Parliament, at the desire of Lord Metcalfe's ex-ministers, who—right or wrong in the dispute as to the fact—agreed in acknowledging that they would have been wrong to do so. At first sight we were disposed to think Mr. Brown might properly have "stipulated," and we believe, ample precedent could be found in English history for such a course, when the incoming Minister was dealing with a monarch who he suspected to be personally hostile. But of late years the monarch, or the monarch's representative, is supposed to be hostile to no one; and on reflection, we are convinced that the doctrine laid down by Lord Metcalfe and his ministers on this point was the correct one. Mr. Brown, therefore could have nothing else to depend upon, than the constant practice in England and in this country, as manifested in the two recent cases of the dissolution by Mr. Hincks on his defeat at Quebec, and of that of Lord Derby under circumstances exactly akin to those in which Mr. Brown took office a fortnight ago. He was not to suppose that the Governor sent for him to do a thing, all the while knowing that, in fact, he would not allow him to do it; or, that his case was to form a single exception, without parallel, in the history of ministrie. But, what is the result of his having been disappointed in his just expectations? Plainly this, that hereafter, unless their be a clear majority in Parliament against an out-going ministry, no gentleman can, with common self-respect, accept the task of forming a new Ministry, without treating the representative of the Sovereign as he would a tricky huckster, and getting a sort of notorial engagement put into writing, "stipulating" for those things which are plainly necessary, and most strictly in accordance with practice. In short, no man can, hereafter, accept the duty of forming a new ministry, unless sure beforehand of a majority of the House, or made secure of the fair means of carrying on his task by that step, which the highest authorities have declared to be indecent, and unconstitutional. To test this matter, let us suppose that when Lord Derby came into Parliament on the defeat of the ministry on the Chinese question, there had been any doubt whether he would have the power to dissolve,—can any one believe that that high-minded nobleman would have submitted to the possible partiality of even a royal mind, which might deliver him bound hand and foot to his enemies, and might induce him to make a laughing-stock of his friends? Suppose again, that Mr. John A. Macdonald once more thinks fit to resign, on a defeat such as he has judged to be a proper cause of resignation, and such as Lord Palmerston and all English statesmen have judged to be so too, will any one submit to run the risk of going through the same farce as that to which Mr. Brown has been a victim? Or will not any man of spirit, who may be sent for in such circumstances, be forced to reply, that he cannot undertake a task which may be defeated by the caprice of the very person who asks him to attempt it?

The logical consequence, then, of the conduct of the Governor-General is this, that he can hereafter ask no one to form a ministry under the circumstances in which he asked Mr. Brown to do so, without going through a degrading bargaining, such as every sagacious man makes when he deals with one who has already committed a wrong.

A Telegraphic Jubilee.

The irrepressible outburst of enthusiastic joy in all parts of the country in the success of the Atlantic Telegraph, indicates that the proper time has now arrived for a grand jubilee to celebrate the greatest triumph which this noblest of modern inventions can achieve. Whatever may be accomplished hereafter will be a matter of course. The great problem of ocean telegraphing has been solved. The disconnected and spontaneous demonstrations which are now taking place are not sufficient for the greatness of the occasion, which should be simultaneously celebrated on both sides of the Atlantic in a systematic manner. The proper time for this great demonstration would seem to be on the passing to and fro of the first message. The Atlantic Telegraph is felt to be one of these great achievements "beyond the reaches of the soul." It gives excuse for such exultations as leaped to the lips of Kepler, when the glories of spheral harmonies burst upon his vision, and he exclaimed, "Nothing holds me; I will indulge in my sacred fury. I will triumph over mankind by the honest confession that I have stolen the golden vases of the Egyptians to build up a tabernacle for my God far away from the confines of Egypt. The die is cast; the book is written, to be read now or by posterity, I care not which. It may well afford to wait a century for a reader, as God has waited six thousand years for an observer."

Of the significance of this event it is scarcely yet possible for us to grasp the whole scope. Immense as it is as a scientific and social triumph, it has also other bearings far-reaching and profound. In the motion of man's creative energy all is interchained by suitable links. The external acts on the internal, and the internal on the external. Bonds of closest connection bind the political and social life of an age to its prevalent intellectual conceptions.—Periods of despotism have always had their correspondent of a lifeless and mechanical science; and the mighty movements of the past century, for freer solutions of political and social life, have been tallied by a new opening of the mind to the truths of nature and by the sciences that have sprung from the new mode of vision. Magnetism, Electricity, Chemistry—the dead mechanical spell that had so long bound men's minds departing before the thought of the universe as a living, organic whole.

We accept this new divine boon as an audacious provoker to new realizations of human power and possibilities. This seizing of the magnetic currents of life that circulate through the globe may well be a sublime augury of a more real and vital connection of man with man and of humanity with nature. It is impossible the old national hostilities and exclusions can long withstand this bond of brotherhood. The old selfishness and slavery must depart before this new harbinger of liberty and love.

From some such source must the deep joy that seizes all minds at the thought of this unapproachable triumph spring. It is true thought that it has metaphysical roots and relations that makes it sublime—that this audacious scaling of the beetling heights and seizing of the Promethean fire is but the torch into deeper vistas of mental and moral life.

The creation of the science of Electro-Magnetism and its embodiment in the Telegraph undoubtedly ranks foremost among that series of mighty discoveries that have gone to subjugate matter under the domain of mind. All tends to closer affinity of man and the planet. Piercing to the secret of Nature, man makes himself symmetrical with nature. Penetrating to the working of creative energies, he becomes himself a creator.—New York Daily Times.

The Scottish American Journal is now entering on its second year, after making a more successful start in life than any journal which has preceded it of the same class. It is a clever, well got-up paper, full of racy interesting matter, with no old fogy notions to interfere with the successful prosecution of its business. The Scottish news is well selected and there are now passing through its columns a series of articles on the achievements of the Highland regiments of the British army which have made quite a sensation all through the States and have been copied by Canadian journals. Readers will find nothing in the Journal which is not spirited and interesting, and its contents are imbued with good taste and sound principle. ☞ For sale at Sawers and Murray's Book Store, Peterboro'.

The Conception and History of an International Telegraph.

To the Editor of the Boston Journal.

The "Short History of the Atlantic Telegraph Enterprise" in this morning's "Journal" is correct, but the origin of the enterprise must be dated several years anterior to "the year 1856, when Cyrus W. Field visited England"; and though to the generous liberality and unconquerable perseverance of Mr. Field, a native of our own State, the now united nations are more indebted for the completion of the work than to any other man, yet the grand conception originated with F. N. Gisborne in 1850 or '51, through whose exertions the company was formed and the enterprise commenced which has been so successfully completed. As a brief sketch of the conception and early history of the enterprise will be read with interest at this time, I will give the facts in as few words as possible. In 1851-2, we find young Gisborne, then only recently from England, his native place, engaged in a telegraph office in Montreal. After availing himself of all the scientific results then evolved in regard to telegraphic communication, he conceived the feasibility of a transatlantic line. He proceeded to Halifax full of enthusiasm.—Preliminary to the work, he must have a line from Halifax through New Brunswick to the United States. He met with ridicule, but succeeded in getting Howe and Young, leading government officials, together at a dinner at the House of the latter. He sat opposite to Howe, who was then Provincial Secretary. There he urged the importance and feasibility of the enterprise with so much clearness as to induce them to make a line across the province a government measure. It was built and proved a profitable investment. Gisborne's next move—still with the same great object in view—was to throw a submarine line across the gulf from the main land to Prince Edwards Island, by way of experiment. In this, too, he succeeded, and the line is still in good working order, notwithstanding the immense quantities of floating ice with which that coast is visited during the winter season. The next step was to reach Newfoundland from Cape Breton. To accomplish this, he came to New York, where he succeeded in forming a company to carry out the enterprise. He returned to Nova Scotia, and in his little steamer, the F. N. Gisborne he proceeded to Newfoundland, where with six picked Indians, he started on a survey across the Island, some 300 miles through dense forests. His Indians failed under the labor and fatigue of the journey, and one after another gave out, and had to be provided for, until he finally got through alone, with his hatchet in his hand and pack of stale provisions on his back. The route was considerably favourable, and a gang of laborers were engaged to clear a way for the wires across the Island. For a while the work prospered, promising the early completion of a submarine line from the Island to Cape Breton, where it would connect with the wires of the United States, and from uninterrupted communication from the States to the eastern extremity of Newfoundland, where the steamers from Europe would be visited by newsboats, as at present. (alas! their occupation is gone!) and the news forwarded from the Island from our cities, until the line across the Atlantic might be completed. But a cloud of adversity burst over Gisborne's head, which paralyzed his efforts for a time.—The New York Company, upon whom he relied for his pecuniary aid failed, and his drafts were returned dishonored. The work was suspended, and a posse of unpaid Irish laborers surrounded the projector and superintendant of the enterprise, threatening even his life if their bills were not settled. He gave up all his own property, but this did not satisfy the clamour of his hungry creditors, who had him arrested and imprisoned. To add to his grief his young and lovely wife died, and left him with blighted prospects, both in his pecuniary and his social prosperity. But those whose minds are capable of grasping such an enterprise as that in which he had been engaged, are not easily crushed. He sent to the head member of the Judiciary, and asked the favour of an interview at his cell. To him he stated, that as he had surrendered all his property, he could do no more there; but if released, and protected from molestation, he would reorganize a new company, and pay all claims. He was taken at his word. Measures were adopted to release him at once, and the Colonial Parliament, then in session (Spring 1854), passed an act granting an appropriation as a loan, from the Provincial Treasury, to pay in part the claim of those laborers whose families were suffering. Gisborne came on to New York. The company was found to be insolvent. His next effort was to get up a new one. Among strangers, the reader may well imagine the difficulties he must necessarily encounter in this step of his progress. Where will he find the man who will even stop to listen to his history, much less risk a fortune in such an unparalleled project? He did find the man, and that man was Cyrus W. Field, with whom he succeeded in enlisting the co-operation of Peter Cooper, the millionare, and four or five others, whose wealth and energies were thrown into the enterprise. The result was the formation of a new company. Gisborne returned in May, 1854, to Newfoundland, as the superintendent of the enterprise, backed by a responsible company, who assumed all the obligations of the insolvent concern, and paid off all claims. Operations were pushed forward from this date with energy. The line between Nova Scotia and Newfoundland was successfully laid, and has proved entirely satisfactory, notwithstanding that both ends of the cable rest on shores visited by icebergs, but from which no injury has been sustained. At the completion of this part of the line, a general superintendent of the telegraph was required. Gisborne had the first offer of the office; but he over-shot the mark in naming as a salary $10,000, or something in that vicinity, and the office was given to young McKay, that very efficient superintendent of the Nova Scotia line. Here, unfortunately I think both for himself and the stockholders, Gisborne's connection with the company ceased. Sensible of his scientific attainments and unconquerable perseverance, the merchants of Newfoundland invited Mr. Gisborne to a public dinner, and he was soon after elected President of the Mining Association of that Island.

I am yours, &c.,
JOHN STILES.
18 State Street, Boston,
Aug. 6, 1858.

A TRAGEDY.—A family in Belgravia (says the Court Circular) has been plunged into great grief from melancholy and most singular circumstances. When Sir Colin Campbell left England many brave and manly hearts accompanied him, among whom was the eldest son of a reverend prelate high in the church. This young gentleman left a lady behind him to whom he was passionately attached and had promised to marry. Her fortune being small, the clerical dignitary threatened to disinherit his son if he did; and to alienate his affections from the party in question he was sent to India. His father charged him at his departure never to think of her more if he wished to be remembered by him. The lover got safe to his destination, but his heart beat with undiminished affection. He could not avoid communicating his constancy, and wrote to his beloved, assuring her that no threats or anger of his unfeeling parent should ever banish the tender recollection of their reciprocal passion. Having occasion at the same time to write to his father for additional supplies, he demanded them on the ground that he had renounced his mistress forever. By a most unfortunate accident the two letters came to England misdirected—the one intended for the parent falling into the hands of the lady, and that intended for the lady into those of the parent. The latter, on receipt of his epistle, sent back such an indignant answer as fully awakened the son to the consequences of the fatal mistake he had made in the direction of the letters. Possessing the finest sensibilities, and not able to combat a feeling of shame for the unintentional error he had committed, he shot himself.

Nebraska is the largest Territory of the United States, and it is said will make about eighty states as large as New Hampshire.

Provincial Parliament.

Legislative Council Chamber.

Toronto, 16th August, 1858.

This day, at one o'clock p. m., His EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR GENERAL proceeded in state to the Chamber of the Legislative Council in the Parliament Building. The Members of the Legislative Council being assembled, His Excellency was pleased to command the attendance of the Legislative Assembly, and that House being present, the following Bills were assented to in Her Majesty's name by His Excellency the Governor General, viz:—

(Here follow the titles of a large number of Bills—including.)

An Act to amend the Acts relating to the Cobourg and Peterborough Railway Company, and to grant further facilities to the said Company.

An Act to annex certain new Townships to the Counties of Victoria and Peterboro' and the North Riding of the County of Hastings.

An Act to legalize certain By-laws and Debentures of the Town Council of Cobourg, and to amend the Act vesting the Cobourg Harbour in the Municipal Corporation of the Town of Cobourg, and for other purposes.

After which His EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR GENERAL was pleased to close the First Session of the Sixth Provincial Parliament with the following

SPEECH:

Honorable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council. Gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly:

I congratulate you on having closed the business of this lengthened Session, and I am happy to find that the subjects which I recommended to your consideration have received attention at your hands.

The Act abolishing imprisonment for Debt in certain cases, and preventing preferential assignments in Upper Canada, will, so far as it goes, tend to assimilate the Laws of the two sections of the Province, and must, I think, be beneficial in its operation.

The Jury Laws, and the Municipal Law of Upper Canada, have, in like manner, been dealt with by you, and measures have been adopted for diminishing the cost, and facilitating the administration of Criminal Justice in Lower Canada.

In my Speech, at the opening of the present Session, I adverted to the expediency of providing for the registration and protection of persons qualified to vote at the election of members of the Legislature. I rejoice to find that a Bill on this important subject has been passed by you.

I trust that the Act relating to the Fisheries will succeed in encouraging this branch of industry.

Our steam communication with Europe has continued to work successfully, and I have little doubt that you have done well in providing for a regular mail service by steam during the season to Gaspe and the Lower Provinces. The appropriation for establishing a postal line to the Red River, will open a continuous mail route under the control of the Canadian Government from that settlement to Nova Scotia.

Another link in our Railways has been completed by the opening of the Buffalo and Lake Huron Line. Everything which tends to increase the commerce of the Lakes is, in my opinion, of great importance.

Gentlemen of the Legislative Council:

I am glad to find that our Customs' Tariff has undergone your revision. I hope that, without undue pressure on the people, it may suffice to maintain the public credit, and may work advantageously for the commerce and productive industry of the country. It is also a source of pleasure to me to find that a measure relaxing in some degree the restriction on the interest of money, so much desired by the commercial community, has been favourably considered by you.

I thank you for the supplies which you have granted to Her Majesty, and I assure you that I will not fail to use all due vigilance and economy in the regulation of the several departments, and the administration of the funds entrusted to me.

Hon. Gentlemen, and Gentlemen:

I regret that I cannot speak of the commercial crisis which has pressed on the country as something which has entirely passed away. The recovery from such difficulties must be gradual. But I earnestly pray that the complete restoration of our prosperity may not be long delayed.

I will not fail to forward to Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen your address relating to the territory of the Hudson's Bay Company, as well as that which solicits Her consideration for the scheme of the inter-colonial Railway.

I propose in the course of the recess to communicate with Her Majesty's Government, and with the Governments of our sister Colonies, on another matter of very great importance. I am desirous of inviting them to discuss with us the principles on which a bond of a federal character uniting the Provinces of British North America may perhaps hereafter be practicable.

I now release you from your labours by proroguing the present Parliament.

Arrival of the Arabia.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F. Aug. 15.

The Royal mail steamship Europa, Capt. Leitch, from Boston, via Halifax to Liverpool, arrived at this port at 1 o'clock p. m. to-day. She was ran foul of on Saturday night at 10.30 p. m., by the Royal mail steamship Arabia from Liverpool on the 7th inst., bound for New York. The Arabia, it appears, mistook the lights of the Europa for Cape Race Light House. The Europa lost her cut water, and had her stern knocked off, besides receiving other damage, and will have to be repaired here. The Arabia after boarding her, lay by her for some time and then proceeded to New York. She is not so much injured as the Europa. The Arabia's despatches for the press were not put on board the Europa, but we have Liverpool advices to the 7th inst., the Arabia's day of sailing. The political news by the Arabia, at a glance do not seem to be particularly important or interesting. The news of the success of the cable was received on 'Change with glorious enthusiasm, from the fact that the electric union of Great Britain and America may lead to the unity of all nations. The announcement of the arrival of the Agamemnon is not in the papers come to hand, but if we can possibly gather the particulars of her trip, they shall be forwarded.

The rebellion in Central India has been effectually put down. Lord Canning's proclamation was, that no hopes of pardon need be entertained by any person immediately concerned in the murder of British subjects.

Vienna advices report the concentration of an Austrian corps of 33,000 men on the Danube, Southern Hungary, south points, nearest Turkey, on the Bosnian and Servian frontiers.

Mr. D'Israeli favours the repeal of the paper tax if the Exchequer can spare the income resulting therefrom.

There had been a large embarkment of troops for India.

TRINITY BAY, August 14.

To the Directors of the Atlantic Telegraph Co., N. Y.:—The cause of our not transmitting and receiving intelligence through, in that the instruments require a great deal of care in adjusting and getting them ready. I am doing this as fast as it is possible. You should not look upon the cable as an ordinary short telegraph line that can be worked through directly. The cable has been successfully laid, and telegraphic signals are passed through it at our pleasure, but we have encountered a little difficulty which requires time and many experiments to entirely overcome; but we see no reason to doubt that we shall be able, in a few days, to surmount all difficulties. I will send you the earliest intimation of the probable time when the Queen's message may be expected.

(Signed) D. E. SANTY.

NOTE.—In addition to the above we have seen a private despatch from a reliable gentleman at St. John's, who is in a position to obtain the earliest and most correct official intelligence concerning the cable, which states that the instruments at Trinity Bay received with a good degree of success the communication from the electricians at the Valentia office, but that owing to some unexplained reason it has been impossible to send that or any other intelligence to the operators at Valentia. This is a state of things which often occurs upon a land line, that one officer can receive correctly from a distant operator, and yet be unable to send a word in return; and the difficulty sooner or latter is found to be in the battery, its connections or the instruments, and there is no reason to doubt that the present difficulties in working the cable will as soon as the electricians, compare notes, be entirely overcome.

(Signed.) REPORTER.

The Atlantic Telegraph.

From the Scottish American Journal.

The great event of the week, and the greatest of the age, is the successful laying of the Atlantic cable

Hudson's Bay Company.

SIR BULWER LYTTON.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, Tuesday, July 20.

Sir B. LYTTON said the question involved interests so great, and the probability that the answer from Canada would be unfavorable was so notorious, that great care was necessary in dealing with the matter. That such a vast territory should be entirely devoted to the fur trade must inspire every Englishman with feelings of humiliation; and it was scarcely possible to believe that so large a portion of the earth should have been so long abandoned to wandering savages and wild animals. (Hear.) We ought not to force civilization, but we ought not to obstruct it. Now every one must agree that a trade which preserved wild animals and excluded men did obstruct civilization. But there was a very large portion of the territory which no civilized man was disposed to inhabit, and the general evidence before the committee was summed up most justly by two propositions submitted to the House by the Right Hon. gentleman (Mr. Gladstone.) The first was, that the country which is incapable of colonization should be left to the jurisdiction of the Hudson's Bay Company. The second was that the country which is capable of colonization should be withdrawn from that jurisdiction. He believed that to be the compromise of a practical statesman, who desired to secure for civilization all which civilization at the time asked for, and to reserve to the natives that portion of territory which was necessary for trade, and to keep them under a proper guardianship. These were reasons which must weigh with the Government in considering the renewal of the license. The license gave no territorial right, involved no compensation for land, and was only to be regarded as an instrument which might afford a general safeguard against violence. The Government had made up their minds not to renew the licence over any portion of the Indian territories in which there was the slightest prospect of civilization or settlement. (Hear, hear.) Some matters, however, were reserved for further deliberation. If there should be any doubt as to whether the land that was incapable of colonization should be left to the Hudson's Bay Company, it might be a question in what mode it should be left to them to deal with. But, granting that the land incapable of colonization might be left to their management, few could doubt that the land which was capable of colonization should be withdrawn from their jurisdiction. (Hear, hear.) It was gratifying to witness the progress of colonization in Vancouver's Island, and also the formation of the great territory west of the Rocky Mountains into a colony, which, he had no doubt, would hereafter become a magnificent abode for the human race. At the Red River settlement there was the nucleus of a new colony, which he considered an essential arch in the great viaduct, by which we hoped to unite the harbors of Vancouver's Island with the Gulf of the St. Lawrence. (Hear, hear.) There was great reasons for supposing that Canada would not like to take charge of the responsibility of a new colony. And if that was the case there were only two options. One was to leave to a great extent the jurisdiction of the Hudson's Bay Company—a course which nothing but necessity could justify—the other was to take into our own hands the formation of a separate colony, which might hereafter become a confederate part of the Canadian system, and for the time be carried on in concurrence with Canada. The objection to that idea was that the colony would not be peopled by Canadians but by Americans. He must own that such a prospect did not at all alarm him, for although a great portion of emigrants might come from the American frontier, it was by no means certain that they would all be Americans, for a great portion of them might be our own countrymen, and especially Scotchmen.—But even if they should be chiefly Americans, if they once settled amongst English colonists, they would soon identify themselves with the land of their choice, and the conditions of the Imperial Government.—This was a known privilege of general application. He believed it did not signify where a man came from, but that if once planted on ground hallowed by English freedom and overshadowed by English law he would become English in sentiment.—(Hear, hear.) With regard to the settlement at the Red River, he would take the opinion of the Hudson's Bay Company themselves. In a despatch addressed by the company to Lord Glenelg, in February, 1837, when they applied for a license, they stated that the soil and climate of the Red River settlement were favorable to cultivation, and that it was about to be colonized by the English. But these hopes had not been realized under the auspices of the company. In a despatch from the Lieutenant-General commanding in British North America, it appeared that the settlement consisted of 2000 English, Irish, and Scotch, and that there were 6000 chiefly half breeds. Now, when the land of a district was taken the trade went with the land, and the monopoly of the Hudson's Bay Company at the Red River settlement had almost virtually ceased. (Hear.) Now came the difficulty with respect to the territory under charter. If the charter was valid, the land belonged to the company.—It had been said, 'you must try the validity of the charter.'" But, according to the opinion of the late law officers of the Crown, the rights of the company were to be deemed valid. The matter had not been examined by the present law officers, but it should receive their most careful consideration, with the view of ascertaining whether in strict justice and equity the Crown could raise the question, or if not, what mode her Majesty's Government might be advised to recommend to Parliament for that purpose. Further than that he did not think at the present moment, they would wish him to say. But he was bound to say on behalf of the company that it was far from showing itself stubborn or impracticable. The company did not say, "that is our land, our charter covers it." The company said on the contrary, "Take what land you please, but"—and here came the difficulty—"but we rely upon your honesty, and we cannot suppose that you will take that which we have long possessed, unless you can prove you have no right to possess it. We cannot suppose you will take it away from us unless you pay us for it." It was in that sense that the Right Hon. gentleman the member for Taunton propounded his scheme for uniting the objects they had in view with a fair treatment of the company. He proposed to cede the territory to Canada if Canada should give satisfactory evidence of intention to lay out roads and townships, and accepting the administration of the district. There, he thought, was the pitch, and as to the Hudson's Bay Company, he proposed to renew its license for twenty-one years. He also proposed that three commissioners—one appointed by the company, one by Canada, and one by the Imperial Government—should consider what compensation ought, under all the circumstances, to be paid to the company. If Canada rejected these propositions, their hands were free for fresh negotiations, and he was bound to say that he thought the company were disposed to act in a reasonable spirit of concession, and he hoped that he should be able at the commencement of the next session to propose a scheme which should receive the sanction of Parliament. With regard to these three propositions of his Right Hon. friend he said, first, that the license certainly would not be renewed for any district where there was a prospect of colonization. Her Majesty's Government, however, reserved the question, whether it was desirable to renew the license over more remote districts. With regard to the question of the charter, they proposed to submit the whole of that question to their law officers; and with regard to colonization, he granted the expediency—for it was after all, that—of strengthening our empire in British North America. He trusted that the arrangements they would be able to make would be conciliatory to all parties concerned, and that they would be able to lay the foundation of a civilized community in that large territory on principles of justice. There might be great difficulty, but the Government would look with confidence to the indulgence of the House of Commons. Hoping that what he said would convince the hon. and learned gentleman that his views were all taken into serious consideration by the Government, he would not further detain the House.

Railway Collision.

Another fearful accident has occurred near Huddersfield, attended with injury to upwards of 20 persons, but happily with no loss of life. It cannot be said, however, that all the sufferers are yet out of danger. The particulars of the unfortunate affair are as follows:—The place where the collision occurred, is about two miles from Huddersfield. The collision, which occurred on Monday afternoon was between a passenger train from Leeds and Huddersfield (on its way to Manchester) and a coal train. The passenger train arrived at Huddersfield from Leeds at 1.38 p. m., being eight minutes past its time, and was duly despatched for Manchester. A coal train had previously been sent on the same line.—While some loaded waggons were being shunted at the Longwood station the distance signal was put on by the porter at the station in order to warn the passenger train of the obstruction. Some of the coal waggons had been shunted on the siding next the down line, and the pointsman had just crossed the line and turned the points for the engine of the coal train, which had shunted the waggons, to recross and take the remaining waggons towards Manchester. The engine had passed up the points and gone up the line a short distance, when the passenger train from Huddersfield came up at such a speed that it was evident the signals had been disregarded. It run into the van of the coal train, smashing the van and one of the coal waggons to pieces, injuring another, and doing great injury to the engine of the passenger train, the chimney being broken off and the buffers splintered. The passenger train consisted of the following carriages:—The engine and van, a first-class carriage, second ditto, and three third ditto. The first and second class carriages were comparatively uninjured, but the three thirds were considerably damaged by the collision, nearly the whole of the divisions forming the compartments being forced out. The force of the collision was such that the passengers were thrown against each other and the sides and ends of the carriages with force as to inflict upon them many severe contusions and wounds. The scene presented was one of a very fearful character, and it is little less than miraculous that no person was killed. The passengers—men, women, and children—were crushed together, being thrown from their seats and the seats forced out of their places. As soon as possible after the accident medical and other assistance was rendered to the sufferers. All but three of the passengers, after being duly attended to by the medical men, left in the course of the afternoon for their respective homes, or proceeded on their journey. The guard states that although he was in the van next the engine he did not notice that the distance signal was up at Longwood Station. So far as can be ascertained the blame of the accident rests with the driver of the passenger train, John Luty, who ought to have noticed, on emerging from the deep cutting at Paddock, that the distance signal of the Longwood Station was up. If he had done this he would have had sufficient time to stop the train, and to have prevented the collision. He states, as his reason for not noticing that the signal was on, that he and the stoker were looking at the buffer boxes of his engine which were making an unusual noise at the time. Although he has been in the company's service many years he has only been engine-driver about nine months, and is reputed to be a very steady and cautious man. The line was cleared for traffic and new rails were laid in about an hour and a half.—Times.

Arrival of the "Saxonia."

NEW YORK, August 17.

The steamship Saxonia arrived this evening from Hamburg and Southampton, 4th inst. The Africa arrived out on the second.

Parliament was prorogued by commission on the 2nd.

Her Majesty's Speech says the session has been productive of many important measures. Her Majesty looks with confidence to the preservation of a general peace. She trusts that the labours of the Paris conference may lead to a satisfactory solution of the questions referred to them. She alludes to the gallantry and devotedness of the troops in India, and hopes that those efforts have already so far been crowned with success, and that the revolt may be speedily suppressed. She has given willing assent to the bill for transferring the Government of India to her direct authority, and hopes that by a just and impartial administration of the law to secure the advantages to her subjects of every race and creed. The Queen thanks the Commons for the judicious liberality with which they have provided for the exigencies of the public service. The rest of the Speech is devoted to local matters. Parliament was then prorogued until Oct. 19.

The Queen's speech is attacked by the Times in severe terms, which expresses unaffected thankfulness that her Majesty's lips had not been insulted with its utterance.

Two million and a half dollars in specie had been received from Australia.

The arrangements to lay the Red Sea Cable are completed.

Mr. Synge is appointed Secretary to Sir Gore Ouseley's special mission to Central America.

France and England have come to an understanding in reference to the recent horrible events at Jeddah. All offenders will be punished, irrespective of rank and indemnities be payable by towns who have had any hand in the massacre, to all injured persons. Two hundered persons have been arrested at Jeddah.

Upwards of a dozen vessels had foundered in the North Sea in a gale.

Ismael Pasha, Ottoman Commissioner had arrived at Jeddah.

The Bombay mail had reached England Sir Hugh Rose had been appointed to a command, in consequence of his brilliant service.

The recent battle between the Turks and the Christians on the frontier is said to have been very sanguinary. The Christians were victorious at all points. The Turks rallied near Kosarog, bombarded and destroyed the village and drove the Christians to the Austrian frontier.

Sir C. Campbell has ordered the troops into cantonment until after the rainy season The Princess of Jhansi had been killed.

Commercial intelligence has been anticipated. English funds were firm. Consols on Tuesday were 96 to 96¼ for money, and 96¼ for the 7th September.

REMEMBER

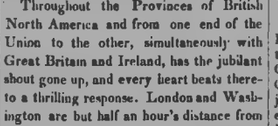
THE OPENING OF THE

GOOD TEMPLARS HALL

TO-NIGHT.

TICKETS only 25 Cents.

Peterboro', August 19, 1858. 32



The Examiner.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 19, 1858.

Prorogation of Parliament.

On Monday as previously intimated, his Excellency the Governor General proceeded in State to Parliament Assembled, and having given the Royal Assent to such Bills as had passed through both Houses, closed the first Session of the Sixth Provincial Parliament by the speech which we publish in another column. In the unavoidable absence of the Editor, we refrain from remarks on political matters, and this too will serve as an apology for the meagreness of the editorial.

The Atlantic Telegraph.

The great work is complete. Britain and America are united in bonds of brotherhood more indissoluble than ever, and no prophetic eye is needed to see that even this great triumph of science subserved to human intelligence and perseverance may be but the stepping stone to a yet more strongly marked fraternal intercourse between the two great Anglo-Saxon nations. And it is meet it should be so; common origin, common language, and to a large extent common interests mark the destinies of the two nations though on separate continents and separated by a mighty ocean, as one; and while they are and always will be emulative rivals in science, commerce, literature and art, that time can never come when the throes of war and bloodshed shall echo between them, for every year, every day, every hour is giving birth to a new bond of union, and the last and perhaps greatest bond of all is the triumphant completion of the Atlantic telegraph.

Throughout the Provinces of British North America and from one end of the Union to the other, simultaneously with Great Britain and Ireland, has the jubilant shout gone up, and every heart beats thereto a thrilling response. London and Washington are but half an hour's distance from each other, and nation now hails nation as friend and brother over the wonder working wires. The message of our Queen to the President of the United States and the President's reply as published in another column are fit and becoming congratulations on the completion of this great work. All will join the prayer that "the Atlantic Telegraph under the blessing of Heaven may prove to be the bond of perpetual peace and friendship between the kindred nations." The congratulations of His Excellency the Governor General to the Queen, and those of the Mayor of New York to the Lord Mayor of London, complete the preliminary transmissions and for the present the line is closed. In a few days days however it will be opened for business, and then only will be realized in any degree the incalculable benefit which the successful completion of this enterprise will be to the world at large.

Amidst the almost universal rejoicing over this great event where is our own town Peterborough? On the receipt of the intelligence of the success of the work, a unanimous feeling as to the propriety of some public demonstration of joy was manifested here; but it has died away. No one seemed to care about assuming the responsibility. Our Mayor and Council have not encouraged any such demonstration and the spirit of rejoicing is apparently dead. But it is not yet too late; while others join the exultant shout raised over the land shall Peterborough be silent? Surely no; let us be really harmonious and unanimous for once, and let the heartfelt joy of all find vent in one grand jubilee over the success of the greatest work of the age—the Atlantic Telegraph.

The Histrionic Club.

This Club, assisted by an Amateur from Quebec, gave an entertainment in the Town Hall last night. The pieces selected were "Still Waters Run Deep" and "The Idiot Witness." The attendance was good and the audience on the whole seemed to relish the evening's amusement. From Amateurs we cannot look for that ability and tact we expect to find in professionals, and so must judge of their performances by a different standard than that of the theatrical critic. As a whole the acting was creditable to the Club, although in some there was a strange want of energy, and little sympathy with the stirring incidents of the pieces. Captain Hawksley in the first piece sustained his character remarkably well, supported in a very creditable manner by Mr. Potter, Jeff. Mildmay, and Dunbilk, the latter character drawing rounds of applause. The Ladies of the piece deserve every commendation considering the difficulty of their task in renouncing the sterner nature of the "lords of the creation."

The after piece was gone through in pretty good style, although the dullness of some of the performers damaged materially the effect of the whole. Le Sieur Arnaal is a good actor, and by practice might reach profiteness. The Idiot was also life like, we did not anticipate such a faithful representation; he cast off his assumed idiocy a little too soon, but the finale was in good keeping. Paul Tugscull (the Dunbilk of the first piece) drew forth hearty applause; he alone thoroughly identifies himself with his part, and so succeeds in carrying his audience along with him. Mr. Templeton Brown added considerably to the evening's enjoyment by giving in character the stirring song of the "Bould Soldier Boy."

We approve of a taste for such entertainments in our midst, but we doubt much if it be the best method to cultivate such by these displays of our amateurs. It is questionable also if the time they devote to preparation for such be best spent thus, we think not. If we will have theatrical performances let us have professionals, the audience will better appreciate and so benefit more, and the talent thrown away by our amateurs may be made useful in a far higher degree in some other channel.

A FAITHFUL DOG.—The Syracuse Journal mentions the following incident of the death of Wm. Kehoe, mail carrier at Amsterdam:—"He was the owner of a large black dog who usually accompanied him while in the performance of his duties, and a mail bag was generally given him to carry to the cars. On the morning of the fatal accident, Mr. Kehoe had put his bags aboard, and turned to take the one from his faithful dog, when the engine struck him and killed him almost instantly. On Tuesday morning the dog appeared at the post-office at the usual hour, and a bag was thrown him, but nothing could induce him to touch it. He followed the carrier to the cars, remained until the mail was safe in the car, all the while running up and down the track as if seeking his master."

Important additions to the fortifications of Gibralter are being rapidly completed.

THE ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH.

The Queen's Message—The President's Reply—Governor General's Address.

NEW YORK, August 17.

The following message was received from Trinity Bay for Mr. Archibald, one of the Honorary Directors of the Atlantic Telegraph Company:—

TRINITY BAY, August 17.

To E. M. Archibald:

The Queen's Message was completed at five o'clock this morning. It was commenced yesterday, and during its reception Valentia desisted sending in order to make some slight repairs in the cable. The part received was sent, through mistake, south, as if it constituted the whole message.

(Signed) D. E. SAUNTY.

THE QUEEN'S MESSAGE.

London, (England), Aug. 16.

To His Excellency the President of the United States:—

Her Majesty desires to congratulate the President upon the successful completion of the great international work in which the Queen has taken the deepest interest. The Queen is convinced that the President will join with her in fervently hoping that the electric cable which now connects Great Britain with the United States will prove an additional link between the nations, whose friendship is founded upon their common interest and reciprocal esteem. The Queen has much pleasure in thus communicating with the President, and in renewing to him her wishes for the prosperity of the United States.

NEW YORK, August 17.

The following was immediately sent to Washington together with that from Mr. Archibald:—

From New York to the President of the United States, Washington:—

I beg leave to transmit a message this moment received from Trinity Bay, explaining the cause of the whole of the Queen's Message not being telegraphed from Valentia. Shall we consider your message to Her Majesty a full reply, and date it this day accordingly? The operators at Trinity Bay await your answer.

(Signed) PETER COOPER.

WASHINGTON, August 17.

The President authorizes the transmission of his message to the Queen of England, precisely as it is, and without change of date.

THE PRESIDENT'S REPLY.

Washington City, Aug. 16.

To Her Majesty Victoria Queen of Great Britain:—

The President cordially reciprocates the congratulation of Her Majesty the Queen on the success of the great international enterprise, accomplished by the science, skill, and indomitable energy of the two countries. It is a triumph more glorious, because far more useful to mankind, than was ever won by conqueror on the field of battle.

May the Atlantic Telegraph, under the blessing of Heaven, prove to be the bond of perpetual peace and friendship between the kindred nations, and an instrument destined by Divine Providence, to diffuse religion, civilization, liberty, and law throughout the world. In this view will not all nations of Christendom spontaneously unite in the declaration, that it shall be forever neutral, and that its communications shall be held sacred in the passage to their places of destination, even in the midst of hostilities.

JAS. BUCHANAN.

Mr. Fox of the Toronto office received the above despatches, and sent off that of the Governor.

Cyrus Station (Eng.), Aug. 16.

To the Directors of the Atlantic Telegraph Company, N. Y.:

Europe and America are now united by telegraph. Glory to God in the highest; on earth, peace, good-will towards men.

Signed,

DIRECTOR,

Atlantic Telegraph Co., Great Britain.

THE GOV. GENERAL'S ADDRESS.

Toronto, August 16—6 P. M.

To the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for the Colonies, London, (England.)

The Governor General of British North America presents his humble duty to the Queen, and respectfully congratulates Her Majesty on the completion of the telegraphic communication between Great Britain and these Colonies.

EDMUND HEAD.

New York, Aug. 16—8 P. M.

The bells of Old Trinity are now ringing a merry peal, flags are flying, cannon firing and the greatest enthusiasm everywhere prevails at the joyful intelligence of the Union of America and Europe by telegraph.

NEW YORK, August 17.

A salute of 100 guns will be fired to-day. This evening every public and many private buildings will be illuminated, numerous bonfires will be lighted in various parts of the city. Should the Niagara arrive, grand salutes will be fired in honour of her. The great celebration depends upon the day to be fixed by the authorities of London and throughout the world. The celebration in honour of the Atlantic cable commenced today at sunrise, by firing salutes from the Battery, Park, and Central Park. Flags were displayed on the public buildings, hotels, and many private edifices. The shipping generally were decorated—another salute of 100 guns at noon with ringing of bells. Business was suspended to some extent and an extempore holiday prevailed.

The following message was sent to-day by Mayor Tieman to the Lord Mayor of London:—

I congratulate your Lordship upon the successful laying of the Atlantic Cable, uniting the contents of Europe and America and the cities of London and New York; the work of Great Britain and the United States; the triumph of science and energy over space, thus uniting more closely the bonds of peace and commercial prosperity, introducing an era into the world's history, pregnant with results beyond the conception of finite man. To God be all the praise.

(Signed) D. F. TIEMANN,
Mayor of New York City.

The Indian Mutiny the Result of Misplaced Confidence.

(From the London Times.)

If the catastrophies of 1857 gave a rude shock to our position in India, we are at least entitled to reflect that the rebellion was invited by our own excess of confidence in the intentions of our Administration, and the affections of our subjects. No Government in the most anciently settled States was ever more thoroughly paternal than that of the alien and conquering Company in India. Two years ago our Eastern Empire was absolutely in the hands of Hindoos and Mussulmans. With the exception of some 30,000 European troops thinly scattered over those prodigious territories, we relied upon Asiatic soldiers for every species of military service. Native troops, armed, equipped, disciplined and organized by British instructors, and on the British model, swarmed in every station throughout India. They constituted, often without the addition of a single European, the garrisons of our largest cities, our strongest forts, and our richest arsenals.—No secrets of military science were withheld from them. They were taught engineering, gunnery, and rifle practice; indeed, many Sepoy battalions had their special companies, and their trained Artillerymen. There was no duty, as we have found to our cost, with which these troopers were not as conversant as ourselves. In no department of administration, excepting the higher State functions, did any political jealousy operate to the exclusion of natives. We kept nothing to ourselves but the chief ranks of the Civil Service and the chief places of the Army, and even in these respects we relied upon native agency for the execution of our behests. Outside the pale of the two services our practice was more liberal still. Any chief in any Province maintained exactly such an establishment as he thought proper. Without a pretext of justification, or even the privilege of going to war at all, he might mount the walls of his residence with cannon, store up munitions, and multiply retainers as he pleased. Any man of any rank might, so far as we were concerned, keep or carry any species of arms. Against any possible conspiracy, plot or movement there existed not the least security whatever. There was no detective police, no espionage, no system of inspection or patrol. The Sepoys of Lahore might have communicated their traitorous designs to the Sepoys of Calcutta through the Government Post Office, and very probably did so. We walked abroad in the country without fear, suspicion, or precaution, leaving every post to native custody, and the whole power of the sword in native hands. There was only a single exception to that system, and that was in the Punjaub. The succession of Sikh wars had alarmed us, and the Punjaub population had been accordingly disarmed.

Having now learnt by fearful experience the dangers which such a policy involves, we may as well make practical application of a lesson at once so simple and so obvious. The only real source of danger to British rule in India lies in the military power which we ourselves choose to create. The Hindoos, if they had no strong or positive affection for us—a thing hardly to be anticipated,—have at least no aversion for our supremacy, and are quite prepared to acquiesce in the existing Government.—Even the contagion and excitement of a year's rebellion have only very partially and in a few particular districts, disturbed the contentment or indifference of the people. Our adversaries have been found in the levies of our own raising, or in the little armies which we permitted others to maintain, the great Bengal force being the worst of all. We need add but little on this point. Everybody now sees that our chief, in fact our only peril has lain in a Sepoy army, and that, except for this establishment, there would have been no rebellion. Once or twice in Parliament it has been remarked, as if to show the indispensibility of native troops, that we have at this minute a greater number of such troops in our pay than before the mutiny, but the fact simply proves that one native army has called for another native army to put it down. It is perfectly true that we have enrolled Sikhs and Punjabees by scores of thousands, but this is solely because the scores of thousands of Hindostanees enrolled before them turned out traitors and rebels. Of course, the present state of India calls for such levies, but it is an exceptional state, not a natural one.

There is another point, however, on which our policy may not be so clearly apprehended. It cannot, we should imagine, consist either with common prudence or political propriety to permit entire Provinces to be bristling with arms, in the absence of any possible occasion for their legitimate use. The princes of India still recognized as independent most, of course, be allowed the Asiatic taste for military display, and, indeed, in more than one recent instance it has been shown that these irregular levies may be employed for our advantage. Scindia's own army succeeded for some time in neutralizing the mutiny of the Contingent we had forced upon him, and several of the Northern Hill Rajahs brought their retainers into the field on our side. In cases, however, where there is no pretension to independence, and no reasonable pretext for armament, it must needs be unwise to permit displays which cannot be useful, and which are likely enough to be dangerous. It is not merely for the sake of our supremacy, but in the general interests of tranquility and order, that this policy should be observed. If proof be wanting it can be found very conspicuously presented in the two Provinces of Oude and the Punjaub. In the latter country the disarming of the population having been resolved upon after the Sikh war, the decision was effectually carried out, and the result is seen, not simply in a province so well affected to our rule as to furnish us with inexhaustible levies, but in a community, industrious, peaceable, and thriving. Oude is an example of the very opposite system.—In no territory of India are there so many armed forts or so many people habituated to the use of offensive weapons; and the consequences are visible not only in the trouble experienced by our commanders, but in the shocking misrule and insecurity pervading the whole country for years past. It was not to be expected that the policy so successfully applied to the Punjaub could yet be enforced in other parts of India. In the Sikh territories everything favoured the experiment. We had just been conquerors in a desperate war, we were occupying every principal station of the district, and the military strength of British India was long concentrated in the province or on its borders. In Hindostan we have still work of another kind to engage us, but wherever disarming is feasable it should certainly be accomplished. Fortunately, a good deal has been done in this way in the South Mahratta country and other territories by the Bombay Government, which has been enabled, in the absence of any extensive disturbance, to take these desirable measures for general security.

There can be no tyranny in depriving people of arms which they could only employ against ourselves or against each other. The relations of mutual confidence formerly existing between Hindoos and their rulers need only be modified on points where experience has shown that change is indispensible. Up to a certain time the Sepoy was probably a really honest and faithful soldier, but his honesty and fidelity were rather damaged than otherwise by that excess of confidence which seemed to lodge everything in his hands. He was well affected to his masters because he was well paid and well treated, and because he recognized a superiority of race in the conquerors of his country. But when our native army was swelled from thousands to hundreds of thousands, when Sepoys held every arsenal and garrisoned every fort, when it depended upon their own will, as they plainly saw, to become masters of guns, treasure, munitions, and all that might seem to convey military ascendancy, the very temptation itself would naturally be conducive to crime. The best of servants are the better for being saved from seductions. These temptations should be destroyed for the future. With all the strong places of India in our hands, with the implements of war removed from common use; and a native army confined to auxiliary duties, we can again renew our efforts for the general improvement of India, and this time, we trust, without risk of that violent interruption which our own confidence facilitated.

The Great Empire of the North.

From the Newburyport (Mass.) Herald.

In this country all our tendencies are southward, and we overlook that which is north of the Union, though it corresponds in latitude and climate to the great heart of civilization in Europe. We think how grand it would be to annex Cuba, Mexico, or the Central American States, ignoring the fact, that north of us are better lands for settlement by the whites, and quite as important in a commercial or political point of view, that are already in the hands of the Anglo-Norman race, as cultivated, as enterprising, and as brave a people as are found on the face of the earth, and the only people who will compete with us in the race for empire on the North American Continent.

But why call attention to this northern country now? Because there, now, are transpiring events of more importance to the world than the Russian war, or the Indian revolt, and of far more interest to us than any other foreign matters. These events are, first, the union of the North American British Provinces; second, the discovery of gold in New Caledonia—the Fraser River country; and, third, the building of a railway that shall connect all the Provinces from Nova Scotia to the Pacific, and be the highway for the travel of the world between Europe and Eastern Asia.

The provinces now labour under the same disadvantages that our states would, independent of each other. They have no comprehensive power that embraces the interests of all—that acts for the prosperity of the sea coast and the interior—of commerce and agreculture, where they are seemingly rivals—that gives a uniformity in tariffs and taxes, and the encouragement that should be extended to fishing, mining, manufacturing, &c. A diversity of interests in peace is annoying, and in war might be destructive. Therefore it is that for many years the wisest statesmen of England—Lord Brougham, and Lord Durham, Mr. Roebuck, and others—and the strongest men who have acted as governors of the provinces or belonged to British America, have advocated some plan of consolidation. A union between the Canadas has been successful, and they seek to extend it to embrace all the territories, after the manner of our Federal Union. This would give to them public credit—infuse into them new life, fresh enterprise, and greater industry.

What are the British provinces? We know them by name; and we have some knowledge of their position and character, though, as we have said, in our longings for southern territory, away down to the Amazon—lands that were overrun by Cortez, Pizarro, and the old Spanish filibusters of their day, we have given them little thought. Do we conceive and fully embrace the idea that they have an area of four million square miles, which is more than the whole of Europe, and is in fact one ninth part of the whole globe? At present it is but little settled, little cultivated, and little valued; but Canada alone is equal in size to Great Britain, France and Prussia united, and is to be the home of ten millions of people playing as important a part on the theatre of life as the French, English or Germans. It already has a population larger than any one of the South American republics and larger than many of the independent nations of Europe. Newfoundland also has more square miles of territory than Ireland or Portugal—Vancouver's Island is as large as Vermont and New Hampshire combined—New Brunswick is as large as Sardinia, and Nova Scotia larger than Switzerland; while the Hudson's Bay country is larger than Russia, and with southern sections not inferior to the Baltic or Black Sea provinces, have a maritime region equal to the whole of the Western, and an inland country with a moderate climate, where a hundred millions of people could well be accommodated.

The population has now reached three millions, probably, and though it is small, yet as the germ of a nation it is important, and the rapidity of its increase will soon swell it beyond many of the old nations of Europe. There are thirty-five of these states now that have a less population. Denmark has but little over two millions; Greece has but one million; and Switzerland only a few more; while many of the German principalities have no more than some of the Canadian cities. At the date of our revolution the population of the thirteen provinces was less than that of the five we have named above.

Now, not to go north into the cold region, we find five other divisions, west of these, with little population, but a milder climate than the eastern provinces, and about the same area, but much richer in agricultural and mineral resources.

These divisions are 22,000 square miles larger than the first five; and are twice as large as Austria, that has a population of thirty-six millions; two-and-a-half times as big as France, that has thirty-five millions of people; more than four times as extensive as Great Britain and Ireland, that have thirty millions; five times as big as Prussia, and more than twice as large as Spain.—They would make together twelve such States as Ohio. The Red River is a lime-stone formation—a fine country for wheat, and has about the same climate as Central Russia. Wheat does well as high up as the 63th parallel of north latitude. The Athabasca and Peace rivers occupy from 55° to 59° on the east of the Rocky mountains; but from the winds of the Pacific that come through the gorges of the mountains, it shares the climate of the west coast. It is a fine rich, well watered country, where Mackenzie says he has seen trees in bloom as early as the 10th of May. The district at the sources of the Columbia river is a delightful territory, without the extremes of heat or cold, the snow disappearing as it falls. It abounds in prairies and wood lands, has mines of coal, and lead mixed with silver, and will probably show plenty of gold. There are not 20,000 square miles of land in England or France any better for the habitation of civilized men. The Fraser river country is the new gold region, and is as capable of producing good crops as Virginia, though it lies between latitude 49 and 55. Vancouver's Island has a warmer climate than England, with stormy, rainy winters, but few frosts to interrupt vegetation. Its sea coast affords deep and safe harbors, its mountains abound in coal that is much needed on the Pacific, its waters a supply of salmon and other fishes, and its lands will yield the fullest crops. These districts, with the fine prairies, is the belt of country extending across the American continent, that Great Britain is now peopling, and its position and progress, will be the matter for another article.

The Mussulman Outrages at Candia.

The following is an account of the brutal outrages of the Mussulmans at Candia from eye-witness:—

An event of revolting barbarity, and one calculated to proroke universal reprobation has just occurred in Candia. In the evening of July 2, a Mussulman was murdered in his shop by a Greek servant, aided, it is said by two accomplices. The assassin was arrested, and as the crime, in consequence of passing events, was more than commonly serious, the council was immediately called upon to investigate the affair. After a confession on the part of the guilty man, he was sentenced to death. But no capital sentence can legally be carried into effect without the ilum of the head of religion.—The mollah gave his ilum but in the regular and legal form—that is to say, declaring the sentence not to be executory until it had received the high approbation of Government at Constantinople. Such is the law which for many years past has been in force in the Ottoman empire.—While the council was sitting, the Turkish population of the town greatly excited by the crime which had been committed, crowded around the house of the victim and uttered threats of death against the Christians Armed bands paraded the streets calling for vengeance; a colonel, Mehmed Bey, was wounded in the thigh; a general, Ali Pacha, was threatened in the streets while attempting to restore order; members of terrified people rushed to the consulates to seek a place of safety; the tumult did not subside till a very late hour of the night.—The murdered man was to be buried on the morning of the 3rd; his body was taken as far as the gates of the town, but there the funeral procession was stopped by about 2000 Turks, who declared that they could not allow the corps to be interred until the assassin had been delivered up to them to be hanged. In order to make what follows intelligible, it is necessary here to explain how, and by whom, authority is represented in the town. On the occasion of the events which happened in Crete about six weeks ago, Admiral Ahmet Pacha was sent from Constantinople to Crete, to take the command of the land and sea forces there; an imperial commissary, Reuzi Effendi, was associated with him, to attend to the internal administration conjointly with Vely Pacha. Subsequently (for reasons which will very soon be made public), Vely Pacha was dismissed, and, without waiting for the arrival of his successor, Sami Pacha, the Admiral Ahmet Pacha, contrary to established rules in Turkey, deprived Vely Pacha of all authority; he concentrated the civil and military power in his own hands, and officially informed foreign consuls that until the arrival of Sami Pacha, the new Governor-General, they must transact business with him, Ahmet Pacha, alone. From that time Ahmet Pacha assumed the direction of affairs and presided at the council, to which he only summoned Vely Pacha when he felt the want of his assistance. The admiral asked Vely Pacha to parley with the rioters, and attempt to make them hear reason. Vely accepted this perilous mission. Accompanied by Reuzi Effendi, he went in the midst of the armed groups, and read the Mussulmans the law ordaining that all capital sentences must be submitted to the Sublime Porte for approval. He then exhorted them to attend the corpse of the murdered man to be peaceably interred, and to wait with patience till orders could be received from Constantinople. At one moment he hoped that the mob would listen to his advice; but tumultuous cries were soon uttered; a drunken Arab levelled his musket at him, and his life was only saved by the presence of mind of an old officer of his father's, named Rechid Effendi, who escorted him safely back to the council. There an indescribable scene took place. Ahmet Pacha and the members of the council, Greeks as well as Turks, were for delivering up the accused to the people; a deputation from the principal Greek merchants shared this opinion, and urged that it should be immediately acted upon; Vely Pacha refused to sign the necessary order; Bedeau Pasha, formerly a Kurdish chief, said he would sooner see his three sons die before him than consent to such a piece of cowardice; and Reuzy Effendi also refused to sign. All at once reports of musketry were heard in front of the house; the people were firing, not on the troops, who were drawn up in the rear, but in the air. Ahmet Pacha jumped up angrily, and cried to Vely Pacha, "Pacha, see the result of your disobedience to my orders—sign, then, I tell you!" "You may do what you will," answered Vely Pacha, "but I will not sign!" "Well, then, I care not for your signature," cried Ahmet, in a great rage; "let the Greek be given up, let him be strangled, and let him be dragged to the marketplace!" No sooner were these words uttered than Ahmet's servants, together with a number of the populace, rushed to the prison—they had no cord, and an officer of the Imperial navy, specially attached to Ahmet, cut off a cord which was round a trunk, and gave it them. The prison doors were then broken open, and in a few moments the unfortunate Greek was strangled. The dead body, with the chains in which the man had been bound still attached to it, was then for the long space of two hours dragged about the streets of the town, by a furious and horrible crowd, shouting and yelling. This crowd in its progress stopped before the European consulates, and shouted, "Hurrah! Let us show to these dogs that we also can obtain what we demand!" The stay before the French consulate having been rather long, Cheik Effendi, one of the members of the council, cried, "Go on! Drag along the dog!" and the horrible cortege continued its course. The consuls all exhibited a coolness which it would be difficult to call stoical; let us at once add that the French consul was absent on leave. The patrols allowed the horrible procession to pass, because such was the order of Ahmet Pacha. He had said to General Ali Pacha, "Let the populace drag the dead body;" and when Ali Pacha expressed his astonishment at such an order, the admiral replied, "Oh, I am brave, and I have proved that more than once, but I also know how to be patient when necessary." An old servant of Mustapha Pacha, Emin-Agha, having been adjured by Vely Pacha to see the body buried, at whatever risk to himself, went alone and took it in his arms, all bloody and disfigured, to the hospital; it was at last decently interred, a priest and about ten courageous Christians following it to the grave. Vely Pacha afterwards made a formal application to the consuls resident in Candia—that is to say, the English, Austrian, American, Greek, and Sardinian consuls, and the provisional manager of the French consulate—to transmit his account of the affair to their respective Governments. He declared that not only had he nothing to do with it, but that he had positively refused to sign any of the papers relating to it; that he consequently washed his hands of all responsibility in the matter, and he deeply deplored what had occurred. He concluded by saying that, as he saw no security for the Christian population, he had, as a last piece of advice to the admiral, recommended him to allow the Christians to take refuge on board his ships. Such is a faithful account of the unheard-of scenes which have occurred under our very eyes. Before any court of justice as before the tribunal of public opinion, we are ready to swear that we have told the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

July 5.—As the mail is leaving, we add a few words more. Yesterday evening, several Greek families embarked for Syra, Corfu, &c., in sailing boats. To-day the Austrian steamer has carried off several more. The terror is at its height. M. Chatry de Lafosse, the French Consul, has this moment arrived in the Austrian steamer returning from France.

EXECUTION OF ARABS.—It may be remembered that some time ago an account was given of the condemnation to death, by the Court of Assizes of Constantine, of seven Arabs for the barbarous murder of a French colonist named Gilson and his wife, of the neighbourhood of Setif, and the attempted murder of their aunt and daughter. Two of the seven had their sentence commuted, and eight days back an order reached the jailer of Constantine to send the other five, whose names were Aly, Saad, Mehenni, Embareck, and Koreichi, to Setif to be executed. Aly was first executed, and on seeing his head fall, an Arab chief, who was on horseback, fainted and fell to the ground, while the great mass of natives, as if seized with panic, ran away in all directions. This was owing to the horror the natives have of the French system of

The French Marine Department has contracted for a supply of six-barrel revolvers for the naval service.

The Norsemen—Norwegians, Swedes, and Danes—have been conferring together at Helsingborg, and meditating a Scandinavian Fedarway, as a counterpoise to the greater Powers.

When the brave Corporal Caithness was asked, after the battle of Waterloo, if he was not afraid, he replied,—"Afraid! why I was in all the battles of the Peninsula!" But having it explained to him that the question merely related to a fear of losing the day, he said, "Na, na! I didna fear that; I was only afraid we should be all kilt before we had time to win it!"

Colonel John Gordon of Cluny has just died at Edinburgh. It is computed that he dies possessed of land and funds worth between £2,000,000 and £3,000,000.

DECREASE IN MARRIAGES.—The report of the Registrar-General states that in the eight principal towns of Scotland, 964 marriages were registered during the month of June, being the fewest number registered during the same month since the Registration Act came into operation, "a tolerably clear indication," says the Registrar, "that the country has not recovered from the disastrous failures of November last." The number of marriages registered in the same month during the preceeding years were—1,016 in 1855; 1,008 in 1856; and 1,067 in 1857.

LAST MOMENTS OF THE LATE CAPTAIN SIR W. PEEL.—We have seen a letter, says the Bristol Times, from a midshipman of the Shannon, who was with naval brigade, and which is written to his friends in Hampshire, which gives, in boy's language, a simple and touching account of the last moments of the gallant officer: "Of course you have heard of poor Captain Peel's death; he died at Cawnpore, at the house of Mr. Moore, the clergyman there. Several times when Mr. Moore went into his room he found him on his knees, and when prayers were offered up in church for his recovery, the day before his death, he was very much pleased. Throughout his illness he constantly spoke of his mother, and Landy, the village joining his estate in England, saying how glad they would be to see him again, and he begged that it might not be generally known how ill he was, for fear his mother should hear it."

Miscellaneous.

PROPERTY IN OMEMEE FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, in the Scotch-ing Village of Omemee, on the Port Hope and Lindsay Railroad, village Lot No. 10, north side of King street, containing ½ acre of land.—The buildings consist of a frame dwelling house and store, now occupied by Mr. John Henderson, a dwelling house adjoining, also a large workshop, and stabling, with every other convenience attached. The buildings are all new, and well put up.

If the above is not disposed of before 20th of OCTOBER, NEXT, it will then be sold to the highest bidder, by PUBLIC AUCTION.

TERMS Three per cent. £200 cash, or a bankable note; the remainder in installments as may be agreed upon.

For further particulars apply to John Henderson, on the premises, or to the undersigned proprietor, in Otonabee, or at the Examiner office, in Peterboro'.

There will be no difficulty as to title.

JOSHUA DAWSON.

19th Lot, 12th Concession, }
Otonabee, Aug. 12, 1858. } 31

SCOTLAND'S AUTHORS.

Arnott's, Rev. Wm.—Laws from Heaven for Life on Earth, or Illustrations of the Book of Proverbs	$1,50
Bonar's Desert of Sinai, 3 plates	1,00
Do. Land of Promise, 5 plates	1,25
Do. Night of Weeping	0,20
Do. Morning of Joy	0,40
Do. Story of Grace	0,20
Do. Truth and Error	0,40
Do. Man, his Religion and his World	0,40
Do. Eternal Day	0,50
Boston's Four-Fold Estate	0,50
Do. Crook in the Lot	0,20
Brewster's—More World's than One	0,60
Brown's Concordance, gilt 30 cts., plain	0,20
Chalmer's Dr., Miscellanies	1,50
Do. Moral Philosophy	0,50
Do. Astronomical Discourses	0,60
Dick, Dr.,—Christian Philosopher	1,00
Duncan's—Tales of the Scottish Peasantry, illustrated	0,50
Do. Cottage Fireside, illustrated	0,40
Family Worship—A series of Prayers adapted to Domestic Worship, by one hundred and eighty Clergymen of Scotland, 630 pages	3,00
Gillilan's Martyrs, Heroes and Bards of the Scottish Covenant	0,60
Guthrie's, Dr., Gospel in Ezekiel	1,00
Do. The City, its Sins and Sorrows	0,50
Hetherington's History of the Church of Scotland up to the Disruption	1,50
Howe's Scots Worthies, or Historical account of those who suffered for the Reformation	1,50
Martyrs and Covenanters of Scotland	0,40
Macduff's Memories of Gennesaret	1,00
Do. Bow in the Cloud, and the First Bereavement	0,60
Do. Morning and Night Watches	0,60
Do. Footsteps of St. Paul, with plates	1,00
Do. Words of Jesus	0,40
Do. Mind of Jesus	0,40
Do. Family Prayers	0,75
Do. Great Journey or Pilgrimage to Mount Zion	0,20
Do. Parabolic Promises and Altar Stones	0,25
Do. Memories of Bethany	0,20
Mabel Grant,—A Highland Story	0,20
McCheyne's Life, Letters, Lectures and Songs of Zion	1,50
McCosh's Method of Divine Government	1,50
Menteath's, Mrs.,—Lays of the Kirk and Covenant	0,20
Paterson's Dictionary, The Angels, Saints, and Agracies	1,00
Pollok's Tales of the Covenanters	0,50
Scotia's Bards—The Choicest productions of the Scottish Poets with Biographies	2,00
Turnbull's Genius of Scotland	1,00
Wardlaw on Miracles	0,75
Wilson's Lights and Shadows of Scottish Life, illustrated	0,75

For Sale at the New Book Store of
SAWERS & MURRAY.
George st., Peterboro'.
August 5, 1858. 30

P. H. L. & B. RAILWAY, AND Peterborough Section.

ON and after MONDAY, AUGUST 2nd 1858. Trains will run as follows:—

Leave Lindsay, 6 00 A. M., arrive at Port Hope, 10 10 A. M.

Leave Port Hope, 3 10 P. M., arrive at Lindsay, 7 40 P. M.

Leave Port Hope, 6 A. M., arrive at Peterborough, 9 10 A. M.

Leave Port Hope, 12 A. M., arrive at Peterborough, 3 10 P. M.

Leave Peterborough, 8 A M., arrive at Port Hope 11 10 A. M.

Leave Peterborough 3 50 P. M., arrive at Port Hope, 5 P. M.

Trains run by Port Hope time.

Port Hope, August 2, 1858. 30

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

THE attention of Clergymen, Teachers, and others interested in Sunday Schools is respectfully invited to our large and varied assortment of

Reward Books, Tickets, Admission Cards, &c., &c., &c.,

Especially adapted for Sunday Schools, and which we will sell on the most favorable terms.

CALL AND EXAMINE.

SAWERS & MURRAY,
NEW BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE,
Burnham's Block, George Street, Peterboro'.

Miscellaneous.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK,

THE best of the monthlies for the Ladies, and now so well known, as to render description unnecessary, is always on hand, for sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'

☞ August Number received, price 25 cts.

PETERBOROUGH LIVERY STABLE

THE SUBSCRIBER begs to inform the public that he is always ready to furnish them with horses, sleighs, carriages, and every thing required at a Livery, on the shortest notice, and on reasonable terms. His horses are in fine condition, and everything about his establishment is in good order.

He very reluctantly has to withdraw from the long credit system, and begs all who may favor him with their patronage, to remember that he can only continue to accommodate the public, by them, in turn, enabling him to keep up his business, that is, by ready pay.

THOS. EASTLAND.

Peterboro Livery Stables, }
Hunter Street, Jan. 1st, 1858. } 1

UNION HOTEL. Peterborough.

GEORGE ALLEN

RESPECTFULLY intimates to his friends and the public generally, that his establishment is still open for the reception of guests in his usual good style.

The house is new and beautifully situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, where travellers will find a quiet and desirable retreat.

☞ A limited number of respectable BOARDERS can be accommodated.

Good Stables and Sheds

On the premises. An Ostler in attendance, who will give the best attention to horses entrusted to his care.

Peterborough, Oct. 20th 1857. 42.

NORTH AMERICAN HOTEL,

DIVISION STREET, COBOURG.

THE above Hotel having been recently repaired, painted, and newly fitted up, and being now entirely complete in all its appointments, is now opened for the reception of the travelling public.

The House is commodious, and neither pains nor expense will be spared to make it one of the best in the Province.

The Liquors are of the best brands, and the Larder will be constantly supplied with all the delicacies of the Season.

The Stables are commodious, and an attentive Ostler is always in attendance.

The proprietor pledges himself that every attention will be paid to the wants of his guests.

☞ Omnibusses will attend at the Cars and Boats to carry passengers to the Hotel free of charge.

RALPH FRANCIS,
Proprietor,
Cobourg, August, 1857. 35

MUSIC! MUSIC!!

The Musical Bequest, (English,
AT 4d PER SINGLE NUMBER.

THE subscribers have now in stock, the following pieces, to which they respectfully invite the attention of the Ladies of Peterborough.

QUADRILLES.

The Scotch Quadrilles.
Piccolomini Quadrilles.
Les Chiens, (dogs) do.
The Lancers do.
The Don Cæsar De Bazan Quadrilles.
Belphegor do.
The British Navy do.
Les Chats, (cats) do.
Bonnie Dundee do.
Les Singes, (monkeys) do.
Lucrezia Borgia do.
Les Souris, (mice) do.
The Musqueteers do.
The Irish do.
Puss in Boots do.
The Royal Lancers' do. do.
The Comic or Haicatcher's do.

POLKAS.

Guy Fawkes' Polka.
The Laughing Eyes Polka.
Tomtit's do.
The Bobbin' Around do.
The Original do.
Ash Madonna do.
The Mignie do.
The Silvarbair do.

FANTASIAS.

Gazelle Impromptu.
The Bush aboon Traquair.
La Violette.
Les Cloches Du Monastere.
We're a' Noddin'.
The Last Rose of Summer.
Fantasia on Bohemian Airs.
Fantasi Pour La Syrie.
Miscellaneous, Brilliant Fantasia.
Scots wha hae wi' Wallace bled.
Premier Nocturne.
L'Italienne Fantasia.
Grand Galop Brilante.
Premiere Etude De Concert'.
Two Musical Sketches, Mendelssohn.

POPULAR SONGS,

WITH ACCOMPANIMENTS.

Why did my Sarah sell me.
Hey Johnny Cope and the Campbells 'are coming.
Hearts and Eyes.
Ellen Bayne.
Wha wadna fecht for Charlie.
For Ever Dear.
Stowe Polka.
Bobbing Around.
Sound Britons Sound.
Dinah is the Girl for me.
Lilly Willy Woken.
The Lass that loves a Sailor,
The Lords of the Forest.
Lets be gay Boys.
The Village Ma den.
Come again dear dream.
The Sardinian National Hymn.
Thou art my Joy.
The North Carolina Rose.
Up We the Right.
Oh let me in the dark tomb Be.
The Fisherwoman.
[illegible] Dancetown, Reece.
[illegible] Claire.
My Mary Anne.
So Early in the Morning.
The Spinning Wheel.
My Nannie O.
I Must Depart.
The Greenwood Ball.
My Gentle Dove.
There's Fortune on before us Boys.

SACRED MELODIES,

WITH VARIATIONS FOR THE PIANOFORTE.

Pleyel's German Hymn.
Vital Spark of Heavenly Flame.
Prayer from Rossini's "Mose in Egypto."
The Heavens are Telling.
Adeste Fidelis.
Cujus Animam, from Rossini.
I Know that my Redeemer Liveth.
Before Jehovah's Awful Throne.
Eve's Lamentation.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Brossi Investment, Popular Cavatina.
Rondo in B flat.
Marchna Florentinea.
Ah La Morte, from Bellini.
Les Perles Deaux Valses.
L'Anse ab L'Ame.
Hermin Grand Gallop.
Seven admired Airs from Il Travatore.
The Druids March.
Souvenir De Varsovie Mazurka.
Robert Toi Que J'Aime, &c.
Una Voce Poco Fa.
A te o Cara.
Still fondly dwelling.
Rose Softly Blooming.
Vega Waltz, from Ballfol.

Any piece not in stock, procured on the shortest notice,

—ALSO—

100	Popular Songs, Music and Words	Sheets.
100	Merry Dance Songs, &c.	25 "
100	Songs of Ireland	25 "
100	Songs of Scotland	25 "
100	Popular Comic Songs, &c.	25 "
100	Negro & Ameican Ed. &c.	25 "

at the

NEW BOOK, STATIONERY & MUSIC STORE,
Burnham's Block, George St. Peterborough.
SAWERS & MURRAY.
June 22, 1858. 24

Insurances.

TIMES AND BEACON ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....£250,000 STG.

£140,000 PAID UP.

HEAD OFFICE IN CANADA, KINGSTON, C.W.

CANADA BOARD OF DIRECTORS ON TRUSTEES:
The HON. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES MORTON, Esq., Kingston.

DIRECTORS

Chairman—M. U. STRANGE, Esq.
Vice Chairmen—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.
JAMES MORTON, Esq., | A. J. McDONELL, Esq.
JOHN MOWAT, Esq., | JAMES HARRY, Esq.

AUDITORS

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Esq., Kingston,
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.
Standing Counsel—A. J. MACDONELL, Esq.
Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.

LOCAL MANAGER:
W. CLUXTON, Peterboro'.
Peterboro', March 21, 1857. 12.

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON
Fire & Life Insurance Co.

CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.

Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.

RESPONSIBILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS UNLIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTREAL.

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on almost every description of property, at as reasonable rates as any other responsible office.

Losses paid without reference to the Old Country.

W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.
Peterboro.' March 24th, 1857. 12

WESTERN
Insurance Company.

CAPITAL £500,000.

Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF
FIRE & MARINE ASSURANCE
BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',
W. CLUXTON.
Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

UNITY FIRE AND UNITY GENERAL
INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS OF ENGLAND.

FOR every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.

CAPITAL £2,500,00 Sterling.

CHIEF OFFICE,—Unity Buildings, Canon St., London. Agent for Peterboro',

W. EASTLAND.

Peterboro', July, 1856.

Provincial Insurance Company.

OF TORONTO, C. W.

Subscribed Capital, $1,267,200. Paid up Capital, $630,264.

PRESIDENT, J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
VICE-PRESIDENT, HON. J. H. CAMERON.

Directors.

HON. W. B. ROBINSON, | E. F. WHITEMORE, Esq.
GEO. CRAWFORD, JR., Esq. | GEO. CRAWFORD, Esq.
J. S. HOWARD, Esq. | JOHN CAMERON, Esq., M.P.P.
WM. L. PERRIN, Esq. | A. M. CLARKE, Esq., M.D.
HON. J. H. CAMERON. | DUNCAN MCDONNELL, Esq.
CAPT. P. WALLACE.

MANAGER AND SECRETARY:
HON. J. LEANDER STARR.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY:
J. JOSEPA WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK.—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS:—Messrs. DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE:
TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurance business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as in any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Brokers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.

Toronto, April 20, 1858. 42

THE COLONIAL
Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

HEAD OFFICE—Edinburgh, Scotland, and MONTREAL, CANADA.

Proposals for assurance disposed of in Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Adviser for Peterboro,—Dr. Hoolub.

AGENT,
W. R. READ.
Peterboro', July 30th, 1857. 36

ALL ABOARD!

THE SUBSCRIBER respectfully begs leave to announce to the Public, that his House at Bridgenorth, (Mud Lake) is always supplied with the best accommodation and entertainment for travellers.

GOOD STABLING, DRIVING HOUSE, YARD ROOM AND STORAGE.

He also runs a STAGE to and from Peterboro' in connection with the Boats, leaving McGregor's Hotel, Peterboro', at half-past seven, A. M., to meet the boats at Bridgenorth, returning to Peterboro' on the arrival of the Boats, about 4 o'clock, P. M.

For freight or passage, enquire at McGregor's Hotel, Peterboro', or at the Subscribers Hotel, Bridgenorth. Fare each way 1s. 10½d.

JOHN POPE.

Bridgenorth June 12, 1856.

AMERICAN HOTEL, PETERBORO'.

THE undersigned, Proprietor, begs to return his sincere thanks to the travelling community and the country as well as the townspeople, for the very handsome support its Hotel has received from them. He hopes by continued attention to their wants, and careful management of the House to retain the successful business which has attended his previous efforts.

The Bar

Will always be stocked with the best Liquors and Cigars.

Great care taken the in selection of oysters and careful Ostlers always in attendance at the stables.

Passengers by or to the cars carried free, and omnibuses together.

LOUIS MCGREGOR.
Peterboro', 1856. 8-tf.

Business Notices.

SPLENDID INVESTMENT. FOR SALE,

LOT No. 9, West of George Street, and South of Charlotte Street, adjoining the Port Hope and Peterboro' Railroad Depot, having three good buildings on it the situation is adapted to any public business. Those who desire to profit by such a rare chance, will please address the undersigned, by letter (post-paid) to Lindsay.

N. B.—It will be sold altogether or in building lots, to suit purchasers.

CHARLES MCCARTHY.
Peterboro' July 29, 1858. 29-tf

FARMS IN MONAGHAN TO RENT.

THE Subscriber offers to rent Lot No. 3 in the 11th concession of Monaghan, of which 160 acres are cleared and in good cultivation, with a brick cottage, good barns, stables and sheds. The farm is well-watered and well-fenced, and every way suited for a good farmer.—It is situated between the gravel road and the old road leading to Port Hope, and is five miles from Peterborough.

ALSO, the south half of west half of Lot No 1, in the 11th concession of Monaghan, adjoining the village of Springville, containing fifty acres well cleared and well fenced and well cultivated. There is a good Frame Barn upon it, and plenty of water.

ALSO, the SAW MILL, with eight acres of ground, on Lot No. 2, in the 13th concession of Monaghan, five miles from Peterborough.

For terms, length of lease and other particulars, apply at this office, or to the proprietor on Lot No. 3, in the 11th concession of Monaghan.

ROBERT THOMSON.
Monaghan, August 5, 1858. 30

NOTICE.

THE Subscriber begs leave to intimate that he has sold out his Boot and Shoe Shop to A. ROSS. All debts standing out up to date, May, 27th, must be paid to him, at his Tannery, Peterboro' East.

JNO. CLARK,
Tanner.
Peterboro' East, June 8, 1858. 23

☞EVERY SCOTCHMAN

SHOULD read the "Scottish American Journal," published weekly. It contains the best summary of old country news of any paper published in this country, and has besides a series of articles on the "Highland Bonnets," or Achievement of the Scottish Regiments in India and elsewhere. For sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'. Price $2,50 per year in advance, or 3d per single number.

NOTICE.

THE PARTNERSHIP existing between us, and known as the firm of Hurst & Denne is this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts due to, and by, the said firm, will be settled by Henry Denne, who will grant receipts for the same.

WALTER HURST,
HENRY DENNE.

The business will hereafter be carried on by W. Hurst, who respectfully solicits a share of the Public patronage.

Blythe Mills, Peterboro', }
July 20, 1858. } 28

BOOTS & SHOES

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform the late customers of Mr. Thomas Russell, and the public in general, that they have entered into partnership, and have made arrangements with him to succeed him in his business. They desire to assure all who favor them with their custom, that their wants will be punctually attended to, and their work done in a manner that will ensure satisfaction. They will always be found ready to receive orders, and they hope by such assiduity in their business to receive a share of the public patronage.

All kinds of ready made work kept constantly on hand, and sold on the most reasonable terms for Cash or short approved credit.

Remember the old stand opposite the Eastern entrance to the Town Hall.

O'BRIEN & MAGRATH.
Peterboro', January 12th, 1858. 2

NOTICE.

I HEREBY forbid all persons purchasing a note of hand for Thirty Dollars in Carpenters work, payable on demand, dated Dummer, 28th June, 1858, and payable to Peter McNaughton; as I have not received value for the same.

DUNCAN MCKELLAR.
Warsaw, July 21, 1858.

FOR SALE.

ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND IN THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH.

THAT excellent farm of land, situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, being composed of the south parts of lots Nos. 27 and 28, in the 6th Concession of Smith, 6 miles from Peterborough, is offered for sale. The farm is thoroughly improved; has a first rate house, barn, &c., and a capital water frontage. The soil is equal to any in that section of country.

For particulars of price and terms apply to the proprietor in Peterborough.

A. SAWERS.

Smith, July 29, 1858.

Livingstone & Creighton's PALE ALE.

THE Subscriber having made arrangements with Messrs. Livingstone & Creighton, for the sale of their ALE in this place and neighborhood, begs to inform the friends and customers in Port Hope, Rice Lake, and Peterboro, that he will be constantly supplied with the above article in Kegs and Barrels at Kingston Prices.

R. G. BLACKHAM.
Port Hope, July 20, 1858. 29—1m

LOOK OUT!

SAVE YOUR MONEY
AND REMEMBER THIS—
"ONE DOLLAR SAVED IS TWO EARNED."

IT is a certain fact which we offer to prove to any purchaser who would wish to visit our immense Stock of

Summer Ready-made Clothing,

That we will offer for sale, (to begin the 16th instant,) at 25 per cent. under the ordinary prices.

SMALL COATS, PANTS & VESTS, FOR BOYS, Of all descriptions, may be had also.

The undersigned, in calling the public attention, will not fail to give

CHEAP BARGAINS,

To any who patronize them.

☞TERMS—STRICTLY CASH.☜

F. & L. LEMAY.
Peterborough, July 13, 1858. 27

ROOM PAPER, PAINTING, &c.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, at his shop on Brock Street, a large and varied assortment of Room Paper, among which will be found some of English, French and American manufacture, which he has just received, and which he will sell at the lowest possible price, for ready pay, or short approved credit.

He keeps constantly a number of hands, who offer the public in

PAPER HANGING!

And he can guarantee his Work and Workmanship to the public.

The Paper ranges in price from 5d per Roll, up to 50s 0d per roll, and from their great variety, he is sure the most fastidious will find their choice.

Painting, Glazing and Plastering business carried on as usual.

GEORGE HERRIDGE.
Brock Street, Peterboro, April 6, 1858. 15

Farms, &c., For Sale.

VALUABLE FARM FOR SALE. 195 ACRES OF LAND.

THE Subscriber offers for sale 75 acres, being the west half of 23; and 50 acres, being the south east quarter of Lot No 22, on the 7th concession of the Township of Smith. There are 90 acres cleared, a good log house and log barn, two wells of good spring water on the premises The farm is on a good state of cultivation, the road runs along the front of the land; within 7 miles of Peterboro', and 2 miles of the thriving village of Lakefield.

For further particulars apply to the Subscriber, on the premises,

CHARLES FITZGERALD.
Smith, June 23, 1858. 24-tf

FARM FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale East half 6 in 7th con. and East half of 7 in 7th con. Dummer, containing 100 acres, of which

80 ARE CLEARED

In good cultivation and well fenced; a good

CEDAR LOG HOUSE,

And two large barns, with other good out houses, and a superior well close at hand.

The property is three miles from

NORWOOD,

On an excellent road, and will be sold for £3 10s an acre. From one third to one half to be paid down, the payment of the balance as agreed upon.

HENRY GARDNER.
Dummer, July 10th 1857. 28.

VALUABLE FARM, SAW-MILL, FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber is desirous of selling his property, consisting of 250 acres, 50 of which are under cultivation, comprising a

FINE YOUNG GRAFTED ORCHARD.

There is an excellent DWELLING HOUSE, with Barns, Sheds, and all other necessary Out-Houses, a good water

SAW MILL,

in good running order. The premises consist of Lot No. 9, and south-east quarter of Lot No. 8, in the 11th Concession of the Township of Monaghan. The Farm is one of the finest in the County, and most favorably situated on the Gravel Road, two miles from Peterboro. The wood land consists of hardwood and cedar, and the whole lot is furnished with a good supply of running water.

For further particulars as to terms, &c., apply on the Premises to

W. W. BOSWELL,
Peterboro, Sept. 8, 1857. 36

FOR SALE.

THE SUBSCRIBER offers for sale north half of east half of Lot No. 5, in the 5th Concession of Douro, adjoining the Church, 50 acres, 40 acres cleared, the balance in good clean wood land. There is a good House, Barns, Out-Houses, Stables, Spring, and every convenience for a good Farmer. The land is well fenced, and has been well cultivated.

The terms and price will be made known on application to the proprietor on the premises.

MICHAEL WELSH, Jr,
Lot No. 5, 5th Con. Douro, March 9th 1858.

TO LET.

TWO NEW BRICK STORES fronting on George Street, one for Dry Goods, the other for Groceries. Both finished in the newest and finest style of workmanship, and elegantly painted and varnished, equal to any in Town; the basement stories are well lighted and perfectly dry, and warranted against frost. Application to be made to the proprietor on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', Feb. 1st, 1858. 5

TO LET.

That Splendid Three Story Brick Store, lately occupied by Mr. E. Peplow on Hunter Street.

Also 10 Town Lots for sale. Terms easy.

Apply to the Subscriber on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', June 2, 1858. 22

NOTCE

IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Partnership lately subsisting between HENRY MORROW & ALEX. MORROW, both of the town of Peterboro', under the firm of Morrow & Brother, was this day dissolved by mutual consent

All debts owing to the said partners' will be received by the said Henry Morrow and all debts due by the said firm will be paid by him.

HENRY MORROW,
ALEX. MORROW.
Peterboro', July 1st, 1858.

IN REFERENCE TO THE ABOVE, I would take the opportunity to inform my friends and the public that I will continue the business carried on by the firm in the same premises, and I hope by strict attention to business, and a thorough knowledge of the wants of my customers, to merit and receive a continuance of the patronage so liberally extended to the late firm.

HENRY MORROW.
Peterboro', July 1st, 1858. 26

Hardware.

New Stove Warehouse !!!

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform their friends and the Public that they have entered into Partnership as Stove-Dealers, Tinsmiths, &c., and respectfully invite public inspection to their new style of Stoves, consisting in part of

The Improved Burr,
The Star of the West,
The Wide Wield,
The Commodore,
The Improved Canadian Farmer,
The Buffalo,
The Black Rover,
The King Stove,
The Premises.

Besides a variety of Parlor and Plate Stoves.

They also receive orders for all kinds of

COPPER, SHEET-IRON AND TIN WORK.

Which their Patrons may depend upon getting done in a manner which will give the greatest satisfaction.

A large stock of TIN-WARE, STOVE-PIPES, and other such articles belonging to their business, kept constantly on hand.

Their premises are on George Street, lately occupied by Messrs. Harvey & Thomson, and next door to Messrs. Glover & Robinson

BIGELOW & ROBINSON.
Peterboro', October 27, 1857. 42

AXES BY STEAM

THE subscriber invites public attention to his increased facility of making the

SUPERIOR AXES

he has so long supplied to the community, and begs to assure his patrons that he will be unremitting in his efforts to retain for his work the good reputation it has hitherto enjoyed. His offices

Narrow and Broad Axes,
AND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF
EDGE TOOLS,

WHOLESALE and RETAIL, at shops as they are to be purchased here or in any other shop, and of a quality that cannot be surpassed.

All Axes not inspected on the premises, are opposite GOLD BEATING Office, will be at liberty to supply his customers with the same at the same prices. In addition to the above, he is prepared to execute promptly all orders in the Blacksmithing line, Jobbing and Plastering business carried on as usual.

Peterboro', Sept. 22, 1857.

Miscellaneous.

HATS! HATS!

THE New York and Canadian Style of Hats is now ready for inspection. Also, a large assortment of Fur Mats and Cloth Caps, &c., &c.

The Trade Supplied on Usual.

A. SECOR,
Hatter, &c.
Cobourg, March 19, 1858. 13

CABINET ROOMS RE OPENED!

THE subscriber informs his old customers and the public generally, that he has recovered from the effects of the late fire, and has erected a new building on the old site which he has fitted up as a show room. He is daily receiving and making up a choice assortment of

FURNITURE & CABINET WARE,

Of every description, which, as usual, he offers at moderate prices.

He has removed his workshop to the building just erected by Mr. Monock, where by the use of Steam and the most recent improvements in

LABOUR SAVING MACHINERY,

He will be prepared to manufacture for sale or to order every description of Furniture, at prices unprecedent, in this Town.

W. Y. SWAYNE.
Peterboro', July 8th, 1857. 18.

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE LOT OF LAND, on the Gravel Road, about 3 miles from Peterborough, containing 36 acres, being part of the eastern portion of the North-East quarter of Lot No. 7, 11th Concession North Monaghan, on the West of John Green's Tavern, and adjoining it. Apply to the Subscriber,

WILLIAM BELL.
Monaghan, Jan. 11, 1857. 2

HORSE SHOEING.

BARNARD McGARRITY and WILLIAM MILLER, beg to inform the public, that their horse shoeing prices are as follows:—

A full set, new 6s,

Each remove 6d.

their terms are, if not Cash, well-approved credit.

Peterborough, Jan. 1st, 1858. 1

PERIODICALS, MAGAZINES, &C.

THE subscribers receive every Saturday the Weekly Periodicals in the following list, and on the third Saturday of each month the Monthlies for the next ensuing month, all of which they are prepared to supply on the annexed terms.

Orders respectfully solicited.

PER YEAR.		PER NO.
$2,25 ..	New York Ledger	0s 5d.
2,60 ..	Harper's Weekly	0 5½
3,00 ..	Ballou's Pictorial	0 6
3,25 ..	Waverly Magazine	0 6
1,50 ..	Yankee Notions	0 7½
2,50 ..	New York Clipper	0 5½
2,50 ..	Flag of Our Union	0 5½
1,50 ..	Scottish Amer. Journal	0 3
3,25 ..	Leslie's Illustrated	0 6
2,00 ..	Illustrated London News	1 0
5,50 ..	" " Times	0 7½
5,50 ..	Punch	0 7½
3,00 ..	Harper's Magazine	1 3
3,00 ..	Household Words	1 3
2,00 ..	Chamber's Journal	1 0
2,20 ..	Mrs. Stephen's Journal	1 0
2,20 ..	Peterson's Journal	1 0
3,00 ..	Godey's Lady's Book	1 3
3,00 ..	Atlantic Monthly	1 3
2,50 ..	New York Mercury	0 3
2,50 ..	" " Weekly	0 3
2,50 ..	Rural New Yorker	0 3

YEARLY SUBSCRIPTIONS
MUST BE STRICTLY
In Advance.

Back Nos. must be paid for when ordered.

SAWERS & MURRAY.
Peterboro', June 23, 1858. 2

LOOK HERE.

ONLY ONE QUARTER DOLLAR!
FOR THE
VICTORIA PAPETERIE,
OR
CHEAP PACKET OF WRITING MATERIALS
WHICH CONTAINS

12	Sheets fine ruled Letter paper usually sold for	7½d
12	Sheets fine ruled Note paper "	4
12	Large sized Envelopes adhesive "	3
12	Note " " " "	2
2	Steel Pens	1
1	Holder	1
1	Pencil	1
1	Sheet Blotting paper	1
	Making a total of	1s 8d.

NOW SOLD FOR
ONE QUARTER DOLLAR,
BY
SAWERS & MURRAY,
AT THE
NEW BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE,
Burnham's Block George-st, Peterborough.
June 22nd, 1858. 24

FRESH TEAS.

JUST RECEIVED from the Ship "Cambaln," direct from China, an assortment of

Hyson, Young Hyson.
Gunpowder, Twankay,

S. E. CURRY, & Co.
Peterboro', 29th June, 1858. 25

A GOOD PEN
IS A REAL BLESSING.
BUY ONE DOZEN GILT PENS, IN BOX,
FOR
ONE QUARTER OF A DOLLAR,
At Sawers & Murray's Stationery Store.

LETTER AND NOTE PAPERS.

CREAM and Mine Colors, ruled and plain.—Envelopes, all sizes and qualities to match. A very complete stock on hand. Merchants supplied on liberal terms.

SAWERS & MURRAY,
Stationers, &c., Peterboro'.

DR. J. B. ALFORD'S ECLECTIC, MEDICAL & SURGICAL OFFICE!

CORNER OF HUNTER AND ALYMER STREETS,
Near the Residence of James Hall, Esq.,
PETERBOROUGH.

DR. A. would announce to the citizens of Peterborough and vicinity, that he has located in this place for the purpose of attending to the duties of his profession. His system of treatment is purely Eclectic, using only those agents which are safe and reliable. INVALIDS however despairing, are invited to call, as no expense will be spared in the restoration of a corresponding prospect of recovery.

Residence—American Hotel.
Peterboro', Oct, 10, 1857. 41

FARM FOR SALE.

EAST Half Lot No. 14, in the 11th Concession of Asphodel, about miles from the Village of Norwood. There are 50 acres cleared, and [illegible] and a never-failing spring of pure water on the premises. The Land is of a good quality.

For further particulars apply to James Mellon, Esq., on the premises, or to

W. R. SCOTT.
[illegible], 30th June, 1858. 24tf

Miscellaneous.

BY-LAW, No.—

A By-Law to authorize the Warden of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria to issue Debentures for, and to raise by way of Loan the sum of Six Thousand Pounds for the purposes therein mentioned.

WHEREAS it is desirable to raise by loan on the credit of the Municipality the sum of Six Thousand Pounds for constructing and repairing the Roads and Bridges in the said United Counties.

And Whereas—It will require the sum of Seven Thousand Nine Hundred and Eighty Pounds to be raised by a special rate for the payment of such loan and interest for the space of ten years, to be computed from the fifth day of October now next ensuing, until the fifth day of October A. D. One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Eight exclusive of the first and last days by annual amounts as follows—that is to say,

For the first year—Nine Hundred and Sixty Pounds.

For the second year—Nine Hundred and Twenty-four Pounds.

For the third year—Eight Hundred and Eighty-eight Pounds.

For the fourth year—Eight Hundred and Fifty-two Pounds.

For the fifth year—Eight Hundred and Sixteen Pounds.

For the sixth year—Seven Hundred and Eighty Pounds.

For the seventh year—Seven Hundred and Forty-four Pounds.

For the eighth year—Seven Hundred and Eight Pounds.

For the ninth year—Six Hundred and Seventy-two Pounds.

And for the tenth year the sum of Six Hundred and Thirty-two Pounds.

According to the one hundred and seventy-seventh clause of the Upper Canada Municipal Corporations Act of One Thousand Eight Hundred and Forty-nine.

And Whereas—The value of the whole rateable property of the said United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria according to the Assessment returns of the last financial year amounts to the sum of One Million Five Hundred and Seventy-eight Thousand Six Hundred and Ten Pounds.

And Whereas—It is necessary for the payment of the interest aforesaid and for the creation of a sinking fund for the payment of the principal of such loan to raise ten annual special rates in the pound upon the total value of the whole of the rateable property as hereafter described—that is to say,

For the year 1859—96/579 of a penny in the pound
" [illegible]—75/677 " "
" 1861—89/857 " "
" 1862—85/677 " "
" 1863—92/677 " "
" 1864—78/577 " "
" 1865—677/74 " "
"

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND
Ornamental.----Bronzing,
&c., &., &c',
Neatly executed, on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the
EXAMINER AND TIMES
BURNHAM'S BLOCK,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, AUGUST 26, 1858.

Volume 3.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 38.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

Are Two Shillings in Advance, for One Year; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING

Ten Lines, and under, first insertion	0	7	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	1	3
Ten to one Hundred, first insertion	0	5	0
Each subsequent insertion	0	1	3
Over one Hundred, first insertion, per Line	0	0	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	1

☞ Advertisements without written directions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognized.

Business Directory.

MR. DENNISTOUN,
BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

E. BURNHAM,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. H. J. Visard, Esq.

W. B. RUBIDGE,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, &c. &c., &c.
Peterboro', March 10th, 1856.

DR. HOLTWELL,
HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Rubidge's.
Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,
SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' East.

M. S. MACDOWELL,
SURGICAL AND MECHANICAL DENTIST.
OFFICE over A. W. Kemp's Drug Store, George Street, Peterboro.
May, 1856. 19

ALDRO & VINDIN,
Commission, Shipping, Forwarding
AND GENERAL AGENTS,
Lumber Merchants, &c.,
Port Hope, C. W.
Office—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets

MESSRS. STEWART,
ARCHITECTS, Engineers, Land Surveyors, and Land Agents. Office, Mill Street, Port Hope.
GEO. A. STEWART.
CHAS. E. STEWART.
Port Hope, May 22, 1857. 21.

JOHN HAYDEN,
Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.
King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 35—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.
INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.
Peterboro', May 20th, 1857. 33

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD,
PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC,
COMMUNICATION THROUGH THE POST OFFICE,
Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S
FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.
Port Hope, Sept. 25, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,
NORTH STREET, PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST.
MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.
Peterboro', Sept. 2, 1856. 2

BOOKSELLERS AND STATIONERS.
SAWERS & MURRAY,
HAVE always on hand a complete assortment of Books in every department of Literature, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, &c., &c.
New Book and Stationery Store,
20 Burnham's Block, George-st.

A. MERCER & SONS,
TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.
Peterboro', June 9, 1858. 23—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.
A. MUNRO, Agent.
May, 1858. 19

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,
ARCHITECT, Civil Engineer, &c., Scott's Chambers, George Street.
Peterboro', July 29, 1858. 29

QUARRY TO LET,
Near Peterborough.
THE Subscriber offers for a term of years, the Quarry on the river side, above the residence of Charles Dunlop, Esq. The bridge in contemplation to cross the river will bring the Quarry within half a mile of the centre of the Town. The stone is of a superior quality, and is easily worked.
For Terms and other particulars, apply to CHARLES DUNLOP, Dover, or
GEORGE A. STEWART,
Port Hope.
Peterborough, July 15, 1858. 27

Notice to the Asthmatical.
Asthma Cured for 50 !

Napoleon Casting his Horoscope.

The commotion of light and darkness is not more abhorent to natural laws than are despotism and free institutions to the laws of social and political government. This is the real anomaly that presents France and England in frequent antagonism, so that we are perpetually being reminded that to some lucky accident or powerful interposition we owe it that we are not actually at war. The risk is commonly attributed to the fickle character and vaulting ambition of Louis Napoleon, with the warlike disposition of the French people, whose mind is best kept from home grievances by firing it with foreign conquest, and who live under a burning desire, scarcely concealed by outward courtesy, to avenge Waterloo. All this is a mistake—a misconception—a myth. The danger comes from neither one nor all of these put together. The antagonism and want of sympathy arise from France being a military despotism, Britain a constitutionally free monarchy.

We believe that, apart from fighting colonels and free lances, neither the Emperor nor the people of France wish to go to loggerheads with this country. If this be so, it will be inquired why his enormous army and formidable naval force? There is no new Russian or European or African or distant war, in the prospect of which he must needs be prepared. It seems absurd, now that the coup d'etat is being forgotten and the institutions of France are being consolidated, to suppose that camps should be formed all over the country and away from Paris, and men-of-war multiplied at Cherbourg and elsewhere, to overawe his own capital. Are we not then hemmed in to the conclusion that, in pursuance of some policy, patent or private, all this enormous force has a reference to England? Probably the conclusion is accurate enough; but we do not suppose that England is regarded so much as an object to be attacked as a State to be dreaded.

The French are a civilized people. Their progress in art and science and mental culture is remarkable; and notwithstanding the miserable condition of the public press, the censorship exercised over foreign and especially English journals, and the activity of the secret police,—their acquaintance with and admiration of our institutions make way with geometrical rapidity each year. The intercourse between the nations for business or pleasure, is enormous;—and although the alleged ground, upon which new restrictions have been placed upon passports, was the fear of royal assassins, we believe this is a blind for the traders, hotel-keepers, lodging-house keepers, and others, who had their gains from English "milords" and visitors of all sorts, and that Louis Napoleon's real dread arose from those legions of missionaries with which he found his capital swarming, who without positive aim but with the true instincts of their country, laboured with commendable zeal to let the world know how incomparable a nation that was which claimed John Bull for citizens. This intercourse was also reciprocal, and not only in London but in our chief cities and all over the country frenchmen abound, who see our freedom and who are not only coming to the conviction that social order and liberty are compatible, but that they stand in the order of cause and effect. How, then, is this dangerous intercourse to be stopped and these sentiments suppressed? Is not the Emperor Napoleon our trusty ally, and Queen Victoria his fast friend!

Here, then, is an enemy against which Louis Napoleon would protect himself, if he only knew how to do it. Bayonet to bayonet and gun to gun he understands; but a nation, placed under the heel of military power, greasing from the oppression, and scarcely restraining from rising in its strength and breaking its fetters, and brought into perpetual contact with free institutions can only be encountered in two ways,—either he must comply with their wishes, or he must crush them under his heel; and so he shut his eyes to an issue which has no assignable result. The alliance with Britain in precipitating the crisis. If he could turn his people's eyes in any other direction he would be safe; but they insist on turning their backs on the despotic power of Europe and casting furtive, wistful glances on that Albion, which an exploded Gallic tradition dubbed perfidious.

We believe the nation of which Louis Napoleon is most afraid is France, became informed, intelligent, liberty loving France will not always submit to be placed under the iron heel of irresponsible power. His army,—which he endeavours to fill with ambitions and expectations apart from the people—he would willingly employ on foreign service, if this will occupy the national mind,—he would even turn it against Britain if it came to be a scramble for existence—and he would turn France into an Academa if the question were France or Napoleon—the massacre of the people or the stability of the throne:—The Age, (Edinburgh Paper.)

Prorogation of the Imperial Parliament.

On Monday, August 9, the House of Lords met at a quarter before 2 o'clock to conclude the business of the session. At that hour not more than a dozen peers were present. The Lord Chancellor occupied his usual seat on the woolsack, and on the Ministerial benches were the Earl of Derby, Lord Colchester, the Earl of Carnarvon, the Earl of Donoughmore, Lord Lyndhurst and Lord St. Leonards. The Opposition was represented by three peers, of whom Earl Granville was one; but the benches on that side of the house were graced with the presence of a considerable number of noble ladies. The commissioners for signing the royal assent to various bills and proroguing the two branches of Parliament were the Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Beaufort, the Marquis of Salisbury, the Earl of Hardwicke and Earl De La Warr. They took their seats at the foot of the throne at the "woolsack," and immediately afterwards the Associate arrived, clothed in his black silk gown, and proceeded to the robing room and claimed the attendance of the Deputy Usher of the Black Rod, who proceeded to the lower House and claimed the attendance of Her Majesty's "faithful Commons," in the House of Lords. This summons was at once obeyed, and the Speaker presented himself at the bar, attended by the Sergeant-at-Arms and accompanied by many members of the lower House, among whom were Mr. Disraeli, Sir E. B. Lytton, Lord Naas, the Solicitor General, and Lord Palmerston. The commission having been read by the clerk, the royal assent was given in the usual form to bills.

The Lord Chancellor then proceeded to read

HER MAJESTY'S SPEECH.

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN,—We are commanded by her Majesty to express her satisfaction at being enabled to release you from the duties of a session which, though interrupted, has by your unremitting assiduity, been productive of many important measures.

Her Majesty is happy to believe that her relations with foreign Powers are such as to enable her Majesty to look with confidence to the preservation of general peace.

Her Majesty trusts that the labours of the plenipotentiaries now sitting in Conference in Paris may lead to a satisfactory solution of the various questions which have been referred to them.

The efforts, the gallantry, the devoted zeal displayed in India, by her Majesty's forces and those of the East India Company have been above all praise; and her Majesty hopes that these efforts have already been so far crowned with success that the formidable revolt which has raged throughout a large portion of her Indian possessions may now, under the blessing of Almighty God, be speedily suppressed, and peace be restored to those important provinces.

In this hope her Majesty has given her willing assent to the act which you have passed for transferring to her direct authority the government of her Indian dominions; and her Majesty hopes to be enabled so to discharge the high functions which she has assumed as by a just and impartial administration of the law, to secure its advantages alike to her subjects of every race and creed; and by promoting their welfare, to establish and strengthen her empire in India.

GENTLEMEN OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS,—Her Majesty commands us to thank you for the judicious liberality with which you have made provision for the exigencies of the public service.

The present state of the revenue authorizes her Majesty to entertain a confident hope that the supplies which you have granted will be found fully adequate to the demands upon them.

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN,—The sanitary condition of the metropolis must always be a subject of deep interest to her Majesty, and her Majesty has readily sanctioned the act which you have passed for the purification of that noble river, the present state of which is little creditable to a great country, and seriously prejudicial to the health and comfort of the inhabitants of the metropolis.

Her Majesty has also willingly assented to an Act whereby greater facilities are given for the acquisition by towns and districts of such powers as may be requisite for promoting works of local improvement, and thus extending more widely the advantages of municipal self-government.

Her Majesty trusts that the Act which you have passed for the future government of the Scotch Universities, will be found highly advantageous to those venerable institutions, and will greatly promote and extend a system of sound moral and religious education in Scotland.

The transfer of Land Bill, which extends the powers hitherto exercised by the Encumbered Estates Commissioners, and facilitates the acquisition of an indefeasible title by purchasers of land in Ireland, cannot fail to be highly beneficial to the landed proprietors, and to advance the prosperity of that part of her Majesty's dominions.

The Act to which her Majesty has assented for the establishment of the colony of British Columbia was urgently required in consequence of the recent discoveries of gold in that district; but her Majesty hopes that this new colony on the Pacific may be but one step in the career of steady progress by which her Majesty's dominions in North America may ultimately be peopled, in an unbroken chain, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, by a loyal and industrious population of subjects of the British Crown.

Her Majesty thankfully acknowledges the diligence and perseverance which have enabled you, in a comparatively short time, to pass these and other measures of inferior but not insignificant importance.

Many of you in returning to your respective counties, have extensive influences to exercise, and duties to perform of hardly less value to the community than those from the labours of which you are about to be released; and her Majesty entertains a confident assurance that, under the guidance of Providence, that influence will be so employed, and those duties so performed, as to redound to your own honour, and to promote the general welfare and the happiness of a loyal and contented people.

The clerk at the table having read the Commission of Prorogation,

The Lord Chancellor, in her Majesty's name, formally declared Parliament to stand prorogued to Tuesday, the 19th of October next.

The Commons then retired to their own chamber, and the Lords Commissioners and the other Peers present immediately afterwards dispersed.

HORRIBLE MURDER.—We regret to have to record the committal of a horrible murder in our midst, and one so has shocking that of a wife by her husband.—The name of the murderer is Patterson; a Scotchman, and labourer, residing in Craig Street, a little to the east of St. Lawrence Main-street. His wife was a young and rather good-looking person—probably about two-and-twenty years of age. She was far advanced in pregnancy, and would have been confined in about a fortnight. Both parties were given to drink and were in the habit occasionally of quarrelling. They occupied a furnished apartment in the third story; containing nothing but a bedstead and bed, washing-stand, and a few articles of furniture. From the appearance of the room a tremendous struggle must have taken place; and the murderer must have been perfectly frantic. The bed was broken down, and the feathers scattered all over the floor; the crockery was overturned; and the candlesticks lying on the floor as if they had been shyed at one another. The poor woman's face presents a fearful appearance. It is one mass of bruises. She was discovered dead between two and three o'clock in the afternoon. The Coroner and Dr. Nelson were at once summoned. The husband is in custody. The inquest will be held this morning. Drink, poverty and passion are said to have been the causes of the crime. —Montreal Transcript.

THE REGISTRAR-GENERAL ON ILLEGITIMACY IN SCOTLAND.—The returns of the Registrar-General of Scotland show that the counties in his list in which the proportion of illegitimate births is greatest are not those which are rapidly advancing in population, or which contain our largest cities, with their ever crowded inhabitants, but are rather those which are more purely agricultural. Thus, in Scotland, the counties of Renfrew and Lanark, with their teeming populations, show only 61 and 67 per cent. respectively of illegitimate births; Linlithgow 6.7 per cent., and Edinburgh 8.7 per cent.; while the proportion of illegitimate births rises to 11.1 per cent in Peebles, to 11.6 per cent in Roxburgh, to 12.5 per cent in Selkirk, to 13.1 per cent in Kincardine, to 14 per cent in Kircudbright, to 15.7 per cent in Dumfries, to 16.2 per cent in Aberdeen, to 17.1 per cent in Banff, and to the enormous proportion of 17.5 per cent of the births in Nairn. The general comparison of the social condition of Scotland in this respect, with other nations around us, does not afford as favourable a result to the land of John Knox as might have been expected, especially when the facilities afforded by Gretna Green are remembered. It appears that in Sweden only about 6.5 per cent of the births are illegitimate; in Norway, 6.6 per cent; in England, 6.7 per cent; in Belgium, 6.7 per cent; in France, 7.1 per cent; in Prussia, 7.1 per cent; in Denmark, 9.3 per cent; in Hanover, 9.8 per cent; while in Austria, 11.3 per cent of the births are illegitimate.

Arrival of the Arabia.

New York, Aug 20.

The Royal Mail steamship Arabia, from Liverpool, on the 7th, arrived at an early hour this morning.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The successful laying of the Atlantic Cable had raised the shares nearly to par.

A despatch from Valentia, 5th inst, says the "Agamemnon" arrived to-day. The Niagara is in Trinity Bay. There are good signals between the ships. A breach of continuity occurred in the cable on the evening of the day the Agamemnon and Niagara parted company in mid-ocean, which lasted one hour and a half. The Agamemnon was stopped, and the injury repaired, though not until hopes of holding on to the cable had been abandoned. On the 30th encountered a hard gale, against which the ship under full steam could hardly make headway. On the three succeeding days the gale continued with violent squalls. Sea running tremendously high and no one expected the cable to hold on from one minute to another. On Wednesday the weather moderated; shallow water was gained, and all went well until the Agamemnon anchored in Bonlas Bay.

Alexis Soyer, the great cook, had died in London.

Consols were quoted on Friday evening at 96¾ to 96¾.

GERMANY.

The German papers state that the Queen of England's visit to Berlin is to arrange the question of the Regency, with a view to protect the interests of her daughter.

The abdication of the King of Holland is believed to be probable. The Prince of Orange will be qualified by age to ascend the throne on the fourth of September.

FRANCE.

On Tuesday, the Emperor and Empress left Paris for Cherbourg, and at every station on the route were received with lively enthusiasm.

On Wednesday noon, the Queen left Osborne for Cherbourg, and on Thursday the meeting of the sovereigns took place on board the "Bretagne."

The illuminations on Wednesday evening were magnificent. On the same evening a te Deum was performed, and his Majesty addressed the Mayor, and said,

"I am happy to have finished the work of Louis 14th, and to inaugurate in a time of peace a port which was so actively commenced in a time of war."

The Queen landed at Cherbourg on Thursday.

A despatch from Paris dated Friday says that the weather continues splendid at Cherbourg. Fetes are progressing according to the programme.

The rains have injured the French harvest, which will not be so good as has been expected.

The men arrested at St. Etienne, on suspicion of being engaged in the manufacture of shells for the assassination of the Emperor, are to be transported forthwith without trial.

NAPLES.

The renewal of diplomatic relations between France and Naples is rendered probable from the fact that Aste-lan, the representative of Naples, the French Emperor withdrew his ambassador from that country, has returned to Paris.

BELGIUM.

The Belgian government had rejected the project for the fortification of Antwerp.

TURKEY.

It was announced that the Sultan was about to engage Abdel Kader to aid the Turkish government of his Moslem subjects.

PERSIA.

Relations between Persia and England have been resumed.

AUSTRALIA.

Australian advices are by telegraph from Malta, from Sydney July 11th, Melbourne to the 16th.

Parliament had been Prorogued.

A nugget of gold, weighing 2,200 ounces had been found at Balarat.

Three vessels had sailed for England with over 200,000 ounces.

Commercial credit continued good, and trade was better, though stocks were still heavy.

Colony of New Caledonia.

OBJECTIONS TO ITS NAME AND FORMATION.

The establishment of a new Colony is something like the birth of a child. Everybody makes it the subject of congratulation, though nobody can tell whether it ought not to be treated as a matter of condolence. Cast the horoscope of the new-born infant, set the probabilities of disease against those of health, the chances of disgrace and misfortune against those of honour and prosperity, and who shall say that it is a good thing that that child was born into the world; and still more who shall say it is an auspicious event for its parents? The anxiety and expense are certain and immediate, the reward and gratification remote and problematical. This domestic illustration seems to us most especially applicable to the nascent Colony of New Caledonia.—With what flourish of trumpets it has been ushered into existence; what tropes and figures have been expended on the auspicious event! One would really suppose that the nation had received some great increase of power and glory, and that another gem of the brightest lustre was added to the diadem of the Queen. Yet nothing, we believe, can be further from the fact. Strife waits upon the birth of this unsought accession to our dominion, and we begin to quarrel about its very name. Why make a confusion between one side of the Pacific and the other—between a French island and an English gold field! Why perplex geographers and multiply the miseries of future candidates for Civil Service by creating this most superfluous ambiguity, as repugnant to good taste as it is to common sense? Of all the plans of nomenclature which modern times have hit upon, there is none, perhaps, more objectionable than that which affixes to portions of the earth's surface, at least as ancient as our own, some well-known name qualified by the inappropriate epithet of "new."

Passing however from names to things, we confess that we regard the formation of this colony with very little satisfaction. We are not quite satisfied of its necessity, and if that necessity be made out, it is not on that account more agreeable. Let us see how the case now stands. In a remote and thickly wooded valley on the western side of the Rocky Mountains, near the point where they attain their highest elevation, wandering miners have found indications of the existence of gold in considerable quantities. The land is utterly destitute of civilized inhabitants, except a few factors of the Hudson's Bay Company, who traffic for furs with the native Indians.—These Indians are described as peculiarly fierce and intractable, much more difficult to manage than the tribes that dwell on the eastern side of the Rocky Mountains. They have, however, imbibed so much of civilization as to be perfectly aware of the value of gold, and evince a most civilized anxiety to keep the shining mischief to themselves; while at the same time want of skill and that aversion to settled industry which is so marked a peculiarity of the savage character, to work the natural treasure of the wild region in which they and it are placed. Equally covetous, and far more able to obtain their prize, a horde of diggers from California, a mixed multitude of all nations, armed, of course, after the fashion of such men, have set forward to the banks of Fraser River. They are described as the very dregs of society, and the present Californian Press, not over fastidious in such matters, congratulates the State on their departure. The invasion is accomplished by two routes—the one on the Fraser River, a stream overhung by lofty crags and abrupt precipices full of rocks, eddies, rapids, and all other impediments to navigation; the other by a high and difficult mountain pass from the Valley of the Columbia. Many have perished by the upsetting of canoes and other casualties, but the remainder press on, as on other occasions, with inextinguishable ardor, careless of the fate of those who fall, and reckless of the fearful risks that lie before themselves even when they shall have reached the goal of their desire. The land is desolate and can afford them nothing, and they must rely for support on the provisions they carry with them into the inhospitable wilderness. There is yet no authority, no police, except what these rude contests of society may institute among themselves, influenced by the instinct of self-preservation; and when they have reached the new Eldorado, there waits for them the cruelty, bloodthirsty and implacable savage, who never throws away any chance, never exposes himself to the weapon of an enemy, nor misses an opportunity of slaughter and revenge. The case is very different from that of Australia and California, both of them settled countries, and in the former of which, at any rate, the natives had long ceased to be formidable. We can anticipate nothing from this meeting between the least civilized of civilized men and the most savage of savages but a war of mutual extermination, in which the cunning, the ferocity, and the local knowledge of the Indian may turn out at least a match for the higher knowledge of the white man. It was hitherto held the boast of the Hudson's Bay Company that, in exchange for the monopoly of the fur trade, Thibet has at least been kept free from the blasts and blots of Anglo conquest; were with the Indian tribes, which from Florida to Oregon, have fallen, despite the efforts of the Indian Bureau. But the matter has already passed out of the control of the Company, and the state of things which we owe to their moderation exists, we fear, no longer.—London Times.

The Atlantic Telegraph—Mr. Everett.

The following beautiful extract from Mr. Everett's oration at the inauguration of the Dudley Observatory is remarkable, even among the examples of his wonderful eloquence:

"I hold in my hand a portion of the identical electric cable, given me by my friend Mr. Peabody, which is now (April 22, 1857) in progress of manufacture, to connect America with Europe. I read upon it the following words: 'A part of the submarine electric telegraph cable, manufactured by Messrs. Glass & Co., of London, for the Atlantic Telegraph Company, to connect St. John's, Newfoundland, with Valentia, Ireland, a distance of 1,540 nautical, or 1,900 statute miles. Does it not seem all but incredible that intelligence should travel for two thousand miles along these splendid copper wires, far down in the all-but fathomless Atlantic, never before penetrated by aught pertaining to humanity, save when some foundering vessel has plunged with her hapless company into the eternal silence and darkness of the abyss? Does it not seem, I say, all but a miracle of art, that the thoughts of living men—the thoughts that we think up here on the earth's surface in the cheerful light of day—about the markets, and the exchanges and the seasons and the elections, and the treaties and the wars, and all the good nothings of daily life, should clothe themselves with elemental sparks, and shoot with fiery speed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, from hemisphere to hemisphere, far down among the uncouth monsters that wallow in the nether seas, along the wreck paved floor, through the oozy dungeons of the rayless deep—that the last intelligence of the crops whose dancing tassels will in a few months be coquetting with the west wind on these boundless prairies, should go flashing along the slimy decks of old sunken galleons, which have been rotting for ages; that messages of friendship and love, from warm living bosoms, should burn over the cold, green bones of women and men, whose hearts once as warm as ours, burst as the eternal gulfs closed and roared over them, centuries ago? Behold another phenomenon of a surety not less surprising—an intellectual electric telegraph—if I may so call it—not less marvellous! The little volume which I hold in my hand contains the two important poems of Homer, those world-renowned strains which one of the imperial minds of our race, not far from thirty centuries ago, poured forth in the delighted ears of heroic Greece, while the softest down of youth was upon the cheek of its own nationality—those glowing golden legions—that sovereign wrath of Achilles, which '——shall burn unquenchably,

Until the eternal doom shall be—, the parting of Hector and Andromache—a scene to which the sad experience of three thousand years could not add one image of tenderness and sorrow; the threats of Jupiter to the awe-struck gods while every peak of Olympus was ablaze with his leaping thunders; the piteous publications of aged Priam, kissed the hand and bathing with his tears the feet of the cruel chieftain, who had dragged the torn body of his noble son three times around the Ilian walls the weary and sorrowful wanderings of Ulysses, which every subsequent of mankind has retraced with delight—these all, like cunningly imprisoned airs of a musical box, breathe to us in one personal strain of melody from within the covers of this small volume. By the simple agency of twenty-four little marks, stamped on the written or on the printed page, the immortal legion has flashed down to us through the unnumbered ages—across the vast expanse of enlightened and benighted periods of history;—from region to region, from his own rocky islet in the Ægean to shores unknown, undreamed of, by him;—beneath the overwhelming billows of three thousand years, where whole peoples have sunk; and it now binds together, by the golden wires of intellect and taste, the mind of Europe and America, at this meridian of their refinement, with the mind of every intervening age of literary culture, back to the cradle of ancient Greece. And while at our places of education, we diligently investigate the wonderful properties of matter developed in the phenomena of the physical world, shall we not, my friends, deem a portion of our time and attention well bestowed upon the miracles of the word, written and spoken—the phenomena of language, which lie at the foundation of all our intellectual improvement, of all our literature and science, in a word, of all our literature and science, in a word, of all rational communication between man and man?"

The London Times makes the following comment on Her Majesty's message:—

"The Queen's English is proverbially illiberal; never more so than yesterday.—Our first impression on reading 'Her Majesty's message' was unaffected thankfulness that her own lips had not been insulted with its utterance, and a conviction that she could have written one a hundred times better. Who does these things? To what rank of office do they belong? Is anybody at all answerable for them, or is there nothing determinately avoided? The only account we can give of the matter of this document is, that ministers, feeling they had really something to say, and had got the reputation of being rather too concise, resolved to leave as much as possible to the imagination of the public."

The Detroit Tribune states that intelligence has reached there, that M. F. Stewart, Esq., of Detroit, who purchased the steamers Canada and Anadaus of the Grand Western Railway Co., and took them over the rapids of the St. Lawrence during at great risk, has sold them en-bastion to Myer Yonk esq., for the sum of fifteen thousand dollars. The young Indian has purchased the steamers to run between Toronto and Montreal, and are to run between Hamilton and Vankleek's Hill.

Constitutional Government in Canada.

(From the British American Journal.)

A series of transactions have recently occurred in Canada which throw a curious light on the working of constitutional government in that colony, and illustrate the difficulties that have to be encountered by those who would introduce reform into the administration of its affairs. The Macdonald-Cartier ministry having been defeated on the question of the Seat of Government, tendered their resignation to the Governor General, by whom they were accepted.—His Excellency at once sent for Mr. George Brown, as leader of the Opposition, and entrusted him with the task of forming an administration. This Mr. Brown undertook to do, in conjunction with Mr. Dorion, the member for Montreal; and after three days occupied in making arrangements, a list of ministers was announced, comprising many of the ablest men in both sections of the Province. By accepting office, all the new ministers necessarily vacated their seats in the House, and, under these circumstances, it was of course the duty of the House either to adjourn at once, or to confine itself merely to routine business, until the returns were made for the vacant seats. This, at least, in the course that has been pursued on every similar occasion in that House whose example the Parliament at Toronto professes to follow. It was the course, too, which a common sense of justice and decency would have dictated, and the only one which men with the slightest pretension to the name of gentlemen would have considered open to them. But, as our readers were made aware when first we broached the subject of Canadian politics, we did not expect much that was either honourable, or just, or decent from the men who composed the Macdonald ministry and its party; and the spirit which led them to hound on Powell in his scandalous outrage on Mr. Brown, prompted them on this occasion to disregard all precedents, and to overleap all considerations of character in their determination to eject a Ministry which they unexpectedly discovered was strong enough in its materials, if not in its present following, to fill their places, to conduct the administration, and to bring to light their corruption, their malversations, and their misgovernment. To attain this object, a vote of want of confidence in the new Government was at once brought forward, in the absence of all its members, and on the ridiculous plea that they, the absent men, had not submitted a policy, cut and dry, on which they proposed to govern the country. The vote was, of course, carried in both Houses, for although the late ministers had been defeated on several occasions, it was very well known that in the existing Parliament their successors would not command a working majority.

Of this state of affairs there could be no doubt in the mind of any one, and least of all in the mind of the Governor General.—Yet, in the face of this well-known position of parties, his Excellency accepted the resignation of the Macdonald-Cartier ministry, and called Messrs. Brown and Dorion to his councils. Had this course been adopted in good faith, a dissolution of the House ought to have been granted to the new Government. But it now appears beyond all doubt that neither the retiring ministers nor the Governor General had any idea that Mr. Brown would succeed in forming a Cabinet with which he could for a moment pretend to undertake the administration. It seems to have been supposed that he had no chance of securing the co-operation of any of the leading representatives of Lower Canada, without whose assistance he certainly could not have sought the confidence of the head of the Executive. Great was the surprise, therefore, when it was learned that Mr. Brown had secured as colleagues, from the Lower Province, such men as Mr. Dorion, Mr. Drummond, Mr. Holton, Mr. Thibaudeau, and Mr. Lemieux. The formation of a ministry so likely to succeed if it had fair play, at once called forth the unprecedented vote of no confidence against ministers who had not yet taken their seats, or had time to arrange, far less to declare their policy. The partnership of the Governor-General was manifested in a way no less unusual, and even more in violation of the spirit of constitutional government. Feeling that the gentleman whom he called on to form a ministry, and to whom he had promised his confidence, had succeeded, unexpectedly, in the undertaking, he hastened to give him to understand that the extent of his confidence was limited, and qualified by certain conditions. He communicated to Mr. Brown a memorandum in which he informed him that, if he undertook the Government, he must carry it on with the present House, besides dictating other restrictions of an altogether arbitrary and unusual character. Mr. Brown, however, did not take the hint thus broadly conveyed. His arrangements being already completed, he and his colleagues proceeded the following day to his seven into office, incurring all the risks which they knew were before them in an adverse vote of the House, and the refusal of the Governor to grant a dissolution. In this they acted wisely and courageously, and though defeated, as they anticipated, there can be no doubt whatever that in the end they have gained an advantage over their opponents, which will tell greatly in their favour on a future occasion.

On the vote of no confidence being passed in both Houses, Mr. Brown applied to the Governor for a dissolution. This was declined, and the new Ministry in consequence gave in their resignations. Mr. Galt was next sent for, that gentleman's qualification being his connection with the Grand Trunk Railway, and the Barings and Glyns of London, and his having one solitary follower in Parliament, with whom the bond of connection is a participation in railway jobbery, the only sort of business for which Mr. Galt has any capacity in the Province, and that people in his position of a fraudulent character. That he should even attempt to form a ministry was out of the question, and he was not engaged in long negotiations with the Governor to find that out. He was next called upon to endeavour to administration. This, of course, he succeeded in doing, and the Macdonald-Cartier ministry resumed office as the Cartier-Macdonald ministry. And now mark the subversive character of the last of this series of despicable manœuvres. A law was passed some years ago in Canada, providing that if a minister of the Cabinet should change from one office to another without an interval of more than one month from the time of resigning his old office to his acceptance of the new one, he should not require to be elected by his constituents. There can be no doubt whatever of the full extent of this statute. It applies only to the case of a change of office in an existing Cabinet. Obviously it had not the most distant reference to an entire change of Ministry. Even Mr. Cartier and his colleagues could not pretend that it did; but observe the course they adopted to bring their case, as they conceived within the statute. On Friday last they accepted their seats in the Cabinet, and their appointments to their respective offices were duly announced, but on Saturday morning another Gazette was issued, announcing a change in every one of the offices, the same men, of course, continuing to form the Cabinet—Mr. Cartier, Mr. Macdonald, and the rest, just returning to their old places. Thus they claimed to be entitled to the benefit of the act! Men of honor will hold up their hands in utter astonishment at this unparalleled impudence and want of principle, and will pity the country which is governed by a set of pettifoggers who have so disgraced the British name. The legality of this proceeding was of course discussed in the House, but the leaders of the Opposition were absent, they having been tricked out of their seats by their acceptance of office, and so the ministry were able to have their own way. But we confess we are surprised that when the majority declared that in their opinion the ministerial course was a legal one, the Opposition did not adopt some more decided course than an unsuccessful division, to mark in a way that could not have been overlooked, their sense of the insult that was put upon the honor of the House by ministers promising to take their seats in such a shamelessly illegal manner. For the honor of the country we trust that this matter will not be allowed to rest here, but that it will be made the subject of reference to the legal authorities—although, we suppose, but little hope of justice can be entertained in that quarter. The form, at least, should be gone through, as the discussion in the law courts would at all events help to show in its true light, and in a way that would appeal to the honour of British statesmen, the character of the men whom her Majesty's representative in the Province delights to honor.

We cannot afford space to indulge in almost any of those reflections which this narrative naturally suggests. But in the first place with reference to the Governor, it proves either imbecility or incapacity, or both. He knew perfectly well that Mr. Brown could not carry on the administration without a dissolution, and therefore he should not have entrusted him with the Government unless he intended to dissolve the House. How fully he was aware of this is proved by the intimation he sent to Mr. Brown after he learned that he had succeeded in bringing a Ministry together. Why did he not give Mr. Brown this warning when he called him in? The reason is obvious; he wished him to make the attempt, because he believed he would fail in it. In that he was disappointed.—With indecent haste the Macdonald party came to the rescue, and, in the unprecedented manner we have stated, announced by a majority of the House their want of confidence in the new ministry. On this ground Sir Edmund Head refused to dissolve, although it had been already proved that the Macdonald ministry could not command a working majority, and a dissolution was, therefore, the proper course to take under the circumstances.

Altogether the Governor-General cuts a very sorry figure in this transaction, and in small-minded craft he seems to be well matched with the pettyfogging country lawyers, who now exclusively form his administration, with the exception of a railway jobber who has just been added as a doubtful improvement to its composition.—Under this management, has the Government of the country been such as to entitle it to the confidence of the Governor? We suppose so. When four years the expenditure has doubled, the public debt has doubled, the working expenses of all the departments have increased, in some doubled, and in some trebled. The increase of expenditure has taken place in steady pursuance of the system inaugurated by Mr. Hincks for carrying on the Government by means of corruption in the form of jobs and offices. Lower Canada is bought up in a wholesale manner by a system of undervaluing favoritism—as a small sample that occurred the other day, a bonus is given to fish fisheries in Lower Canada, and fisheries in Upper Canada are subjected to a tax. So it was with everything else; the Upper Province is made to pay for the corruption of the Lower. The support of a ministry in Upper Canada is secured by giving them a share of the plunder, and they vote for the ministry after having been elected as reformers. This is the state of things against which Mr. Brown has set his face with an ability and energy not inferior to the zeal he has shown in the cause. Starting as editor of the Globe, and with a seat in the House he has gradually gathered a party which, increasing at each successive election during the last six years, has at length enabled him to defeat the corruptionists.—Another appeal to the country would undoubtedly have given him a working majority, and the policy he intended to have pursued, as announced in an address to his constituents, would have satisfied both parts of the Province, while it would have given that indulgence to the British section to which it is fairly entitled, and which reasonable men in Lower Canada are willing to concede. Instead of this, Brown has been driven, as Cromwell was driven, into a position of apparent hostility and parade of power, which will not be relished by the people, and which will be used by his enemies to his disadvantage. We have come to a very differ-

...ed gentlemen, though has disposed some most people to entertain a favorable opinion of popular leaders. We respect Mr. Brown for his uncompromising opposition to the whole clique of men who have lately enjoyed the Government of Canada, and we admire the energy of character and hatred with which he has relentlessly attacked all their measures, fearlessly incurring all the odium and slander which falls to the lot of all true reformers at the outset of their career. It is much to the discredit of Sir Richard Read's judgment that he has not formed an opinion of Mr. Brown in accordance with that of the people of Upper Canada generally. We have no hope of any good at the hands of a ruler who does not appreciate the services of one who is at once a man of vigor, of practical resources, and of unswerving honesty. If it has ever been insinuated that Mr. Brown is not all this, it is only because belief in the honesty of politicians has been destroyed by the evil specimens afforded by the class generally in Canada. Mr. Brown, it is said, is not likely to turn out any better than the rest. That is the sort of estimate that knaves form of honest men. Perhaps the Governor-General holds this opinion; and so, with financial ruin staring the country in the face, with rebellion openly spoken of throughout the Upper Province, he has the hardihood to recall to his councils a set of men who, so far from being able or disposed to allay the public dissatisfaction, actually live, as a matter of necessity, by the policy that engenders it. The existence of the present ministry, we say, depends on the dissension of the two sections of the people. Mr. Brown's ministry, on the contrary, could have lived only by a policy of conciliation, but the Governor-General desired them the chance. Let the Home Government look to this. We have confidence in the sagacity and enlightened comprehension of the Colonial Secretary to rescue Canada from the danger impending over it from the short-sighted fatuity of a man of narrow intellect, in league with men without principle, and utterly reckless of public consequence.

Murmurs against Sir Colin Campbell.

There is an under-tone of dissatisfaction in some quarters, we observe, with reference to Sir Colin Campbell. This is but another instance of that childish and unreasoning discontent which always breaks out when there is any delay in the accomplishment of a cherished object. In this case the quarters from which they emanate are not such as to entitle these complaints to much respect. It is not from persons in the scene of action that they come, nor do they meet with countenance or currency among those whose judgment is of any value. Although originating in India, their authors are practically as far removed from the actual field of operations as we are, inasmuch as opportunities are concerned for forming a judgment of the military movements under Sir Colin Campbell. For this purpose London and New York are just as favorably situated as Calcutta and Bombay, and indeed more so, for we have here much more detailed and authentic data from the immediate scenes of action than they can positively have in any one part of India, until the mail from London carries out copies of the dispatches and correspondence in the daily papers.

To give currency, then, to the idle remarks of the Indian newspapers, as some of our contemporaries are doing, without applying any corrective, is exceedingly foolish. On any subject, the opinions of the Indian press are worth very little, and especially on those subjects in which they are themselves interested, for a set of more petty and unscrupulous newspapers are nowhere to be found. We find the following summary of these complaints in the New York Daily Times:

"Public opinion in the army, if the India journals are to be relied upon, has set strongly against Sir Colin Campbell since the fall of Lucknow, because of the repeated escapes of the enemy, his failure to capture any of the noted rebel leaders, and his forcing his troops into a hot weather campaign and into a guerilla war. Those who are in immediate contact with the Commander-in-Chief consider his tactics worthy of the peerage; but the great majority of active officers, it is reported, deny his claim to excellence altogether. Lucknow, they say, might have been relieved by a Sergeant-Major, the only merit of the affair being the exactness of the discipline enforced. In their opinion, Sir Colin is but an East Indian Soult, who can collect an hundred thousand men, but when collected knows not how to use them; as is shown by the anarchy of the provinces said to be subdued, by the invariable escape of the rebels, and by the success with which the Sepoys outmarch and outwit the English troops. While competent to conduct a siege or a pitched battle, Sir Colin appears to be ignorant of the requirements of a guerilla war, such as is now, and will for years probably be carried on between the Bengal rebels and the English troops. On this account it is, that, while he has won every battle which he has fought in India, he has never annihilated his enemy nor ever succeeded in clearing a province. At this moment, according to the India journals, his tactics are injuring the prestige of the British name, and seriously impeding the pacification of Oude."

Now, in the first place, the Indian journals are not to be relied on, as every one knows, and in the second place, the comments here given in a summary form are contradictory to the extent of proving themselves mere nonsense. Sir Colin Campbell is blamed for not "annihilating" bodies of insurgents three times as numerous as his own army, as if the smaller force could, by any possibility, beat in the larger, or drive them into a corner like a flock of sheep. Then we are told about the Sepoys being allowed to outmarch and outwit the "English troops." For that Sir Colin is scarcely to blame, if we may trust the accounts of the Times' correspondent, who tells us that the camp is roused and the march begun every morning, a little after midnight. If a General is wanted to march faster, we suspect it will be some time before a better be found than Sir Colin Campbell, and if the "English" troops were all as hardy and active as their Scottish general, there would probably be little occasion for any of these senseless murmurings. As to his forcing the troops into a hot-weather campaign and into a guerilla war, was ever such nonsense uttered with reference to a man who has established such extraordinary claims to the gratitude of his countrymen? That the British General cannot possibly be to blame for the desperation of the Sepoys, and for their scattering themselves over the country with the determination to fight to the last, is sufficiently apparent.—Under these circumstances, what was he to do? To withdraw his men from the pursuit of the enemy and go into summer quarters, is the course that would have been approved of by the Indian papers, we presume. This would certainly have been the one that would have been most agreeable to those luxurious individuals who form what is designated in the above extract "public opinion on the Army," gentlemen to whom the [illegible] ...

...the district of Oude, and lead about half the best weather in a consideration paramount to all others. The Indian press may be conscientiously described as representing the bitter vile interest in the army and civil service. But, thank Providence, Sir Colin Campbell is not a man of that stamp, and he is surrounded by men who, by their devotion to duty, under the most trying circumstances, have also proved their superiority to all petty considerations. A campaign during the hot season was a necessity which the Commander-in-Chief could not avoid without leaving the country open to the inroads of the enemy; and a guerilla warfare was a result which by no possible energy or skill, at any stage of the insurrection, could have been averted. And for such a warfare no man could possibly be found better qualified than Sir Colin Campbell, unless some man of more unwearied vigor and activity can be brought forward, for these are the qualities, which, above all others, are necessary for warfare of that nature. But Sir Colin, it is notorious, is the most hardy and active man in the army; and the example he sets of personal risk, labor and endurance is almost unparalleled in history. These authorities, therefore, are to be relied on who, "in immediate contact with the Commander-in-Chief, consider his tactics worthy of the peerage," and the lucubrations of the small journals, in the bitter beer interest, may be thrown aside as of no account.

The "Arabia's" Mails.

LONDON, Aug. 5, 1858.

THE CHERBOURG FETES.

Improving or not, we are certainly making progress. A hundred years ago yesterday, some English men-of-war under the command of Admiral Howe, took Cherbourg from the French, and on the very day that the century closed, Queen Victoria went on a friendly visit to the French Monarch with the grandson of Howe second in command of her squadron, to celebrate the inauguration of great works long in progress, to make that place absolutely impregnable against either the British or any other fleet. And who shall say that Her Majesty has not done wisely by accepting the invitation? Hate the French Emperor and his despotic rule as we may with all our hearts; but if the French people are content to endure him and his government for the time as the less of two evils, does it not become the people and Crown of England to be tolerant also of that which they cannot avert, and have no cause to fear? Had the Queen taken the advice of some of our journals, and refused, for political reasons, to grace with her presence the celebration of the finish of the Cherbourg docks and defences, would not such a refusal have helped to realize the predictions of the prophets of evil, who see in the creation of these defences the working out of a settled scheme of perfidity for the invasion of England?—At all events, the Queen has gone, whatever may be the designs of the Emperor or the undesigned events of the future, and has been received in right good style by Napoleon III. The scene in the Cherbourg roadstead on the arrival of the English ships, is described as remarkably imposing. Scarcely less than four hundred vessels were there assembled, and all of them gaily decorated with the brightest of flags and streamers, and a multitude of big guns made the air tremble and resound with their terrific roar in honour of the meeting of the Sovereigns who held in their hands the peace of Europe, and the consequent happiness or misery of many millions of people. Thousands of people went from England to share in what the Daily News terms "the Cherbourg pic-nic"—"a mere excuse on both sides of the channel, for a junketing country excursion." Looked at in this light, the members of the House of Commons on board the Pera entered into the true spirit of the festival, for they had in an ample store of the best wines, and commenced operations with a jolly dinner, at which we are told songs were sung; whether by Mr. Bright and Mr. Roebuck among others we are not told, but it is reported that these two famous radicals were the leading spirits of the party. The latest news that the telegraph brings at this present writing, is, that yesterday at noon Her Majesty and the Prince Consort partook of a dejeuner with the Emperor and Empress at the official residence of the Maritime Prefect; and in the evening their Royal and Imperial Majesties dined together on board the line-of-battle ship La Bretagne.

THE ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH.

The announcement that telegraph communication is really at work between Valentia and Newfoundland, has greatly diminished the general interest felt in the Cherbourg show, by giving the people a far more important and remarkable subject to talk about. The excitement produced by the first publication of the fact, yesterday at two o'clock in a second edition of the Times, was intense. Some doubted its truths, but confirmations so speedily followed as to make disbelief impossible, and today it is the universal theme wherever you go, and high satisfaction is the expression of every tongue; and doubtless the sentiment and feelings that prevail on your side of the mighty waters are even more pleasurable still, or more universally experienced. The shares of the company went up suddenly from £350 to £750 and £850.—It is devoutly to be hoped that nothing will now occur to mar the immediate completion of the mighty undertaking, which will occupy a place in history as the greatest discovery of the age. So much, says one of our newspaper writers, for science and pluck; but there are coincidences in the chronology of this achievement which are at least remarkable. On the 6th of August, 1857, the Agamemnon and Niagara began the first attempt to lay the cable; on the 6th of August, 1858, Mr. Charles Bright announces to the directors the completion of the enterprise. The successful completion of the Atlantic Telegraph, moreover, took place on the same day that the Queen of England visited the Emperor Napoleon at Cherbourg. Possibly the news of this event would reach her when, from the deck of the Bretagne, the Emperor was engaged in pointing out to his royal guest, those boasted works which are spoken of by some as the eighth wonder of the world. But surely all will admit that the glory of Cherbourg wanes pale by the side of an achievement which, so far as time is concerned, has virtually annihilated the distance between the opposite Atlantic shores; and this will be but one of a multitude of similar works, till the whole world will be brought into intimate brotherhood.

THE PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT—QUEEN'S SPEECH AND HOLIDAYS.

A Royal speech is at any time barren enough of interest, and at the close of a session it is unusually so, and its power is still further lessened by proceeding from the lips of the Lord Chancellor, instead of those of the Queen herself. There was, however, a pretty good muster in the Lords' Chamber on Monday to witness the ceremony of prorogation, but it was said every one was thinking of the holidays, and longing to be off. The speech was delivered in the usual manner, and was heard by the audience with [illegible] ...

...now offered for trips to the continent, Ireland, Scotland, Wales and the Lakes, but who nevertheless can make a few days holiday, divert themselves by day excursions to Agricultural Shows, county districts where harvest operations are in progress, or to flower and musical fetes at the Crystal Palace. Those who went there on Wednesday had a rich treat. Five thousand children belonging to the Charity Schools of the Metropolis were assembled in the Great Orchestra erected last year for the Handel festival, and sang some of the grand old psalms in unison to more than twenty thousand people, many of whom were alternately melted to tears, or excited to hearty applause by the plaintive or exultant tones of the children. No place in the world can compete with the Crystal Palace at Sydenham for displays of this sort, which are becoming more popular, as they will be more numerous than ever. Wherever you go the country is looking extremely beautiful just now, and only a rush through it by the train does the eyes and hearts of pent up people of the city a world of good; and a sojourner for a month, or even less in the neighbourhood of well-stocked gardens, fruitful orchards, fields of heavy headed corn and the "bearded barley," is better far better still; and surpasses all the possible enjoyments of what are called "watering places," a hundred fold and more; and yet it is to those mainly that the Londoners flock.

THE GOLD DISCOVERIES.

The accounts from the Fraser River are beginning to occupy a good deal of space in our newspapers, and to be read with some interest, which has been much increased by two long and very graphic communications from the California correspondent of the Times, which you will probably transfer to your columns. There is, however, no sort of excitement here upon the subject, at present.

THE CONTINENT.

The Brussels Chamber of Legislature have refused to sanction the project of the Government for the military fortification of Antwerp by 53 votes to 39. Just about the same hour a fire broke out in Antwerp and entirely destroyed the Exchange with its magnificent bronze cupola, arcades, and its tribunals of commerce. The Chambers of the Syndic, with the city archives are completely destroyed. The event is spoken of as a great disaster.

A railway excursion from Milan to Venice has been made the occasion of a political demonstration. The Austrians were treated with great incivility; cries of "down with them" were heard, and the tri-colored flag was hoisted. Austria has much to do to keep the peace. It is hinted that this will be "positively the last" excursion this season. It seems to be quite certain that an Austrian corps of observation is to be established in the south of Hungary. Thirty thousand men are to be appointed to this service. Of course the excuse is to protect the frontier; but it may be asked against whom?

A glimpse of what is going on at the Paris Conferences reaches us from Constantinople. The arrangement for the future government of the Principalities is a kind of compromise between the opposite schemes which have been proposed. Thus the Principalities are to be kept politically distinct, but they are to be designated "The United Provinces of Wallachia and Moldavia." They are to have different flags, but on certain occasions they may use one in common. They are to have each its own Divan, but a committee of sixteen members is to be appointed, to represent both. The mode of election is one which will make them mere nominees of Turkey, and of those powers who may continue to rule her.

COMMERCIAL MATTERS.

With the exception of a few heavy showers the weather this week has been all that could be wished for securing the crops in good condition. At the same time the corn trade has remained without animation, but with considerable firmness on the part of holders; and while the value of wheat and flour has been fully upheld, that of spring corn has had an upward tendency.

The Colonial produce markets continue but moderately active. If anything, however, the supplies brought forward are even more limited than the demand, and current values are consequently sustained with increased firmness. The small public sales of sugar have gone off at extreme rates.

There is no likelihood of any decline taking place in wool and yarn for some time.

The lace and hosiery trade is brisk. The German houses, especially, are very busy in some of the leading articles of Nottingham manufacture. In the hosiery branch the demand is for common kind of goods.

The fancy silk trade is in a very precarious state, work is slack, and wages are lower.

Railway shares have experienced a general advance, averaging about ¼ per cent.—Grand Trunks are quoted to-day at 39 41; do bonds 74 76, Great Western 18¼ 18⅝; do new div. 2¼ 2. Consols 96⅛. Almost every description of security experienced an advance yesterday at the stock exchange, when the success of the Atlantic cable was announced.

The Weevil or Wheat Midge.

From a small pamphlet just published in Montreal on the above subject we quote the following remarks:—

It has been stated, but with what truth we cannot determine, that there exists no ill for which nature has not provided a remedy. When we look at Canada, in connection with the subject on which we now write, we must confess that this conviction is strengthened.

Providence, in every instance, adapts means to ends. Canada is no doubt destined to be one of the greatest agricultural countries in the world; yet the fertility of her soil, and the adaptation of her climate to the growth of wheat, (more particularly Western Canada,) would at first sight seem means without an end, while what is only seen to be preyed upon by an insect, over which we apparently have no control. We have with a degree of confidence, resulting from careful enquiry, prescribed quick lime as an effectual agent for subduing the wheat destroyer, when applied to our fields immediately before the insect has assumed its chrysalis state, and, moreover, we are confident in its efficacy; and if quick lime be really the remedy destined to counteract the influence of the wheat fly, then nature has not left us unprovided for. The immense strata of Limestone which abound in this section of the world, and which is so easily available, may certainly be destined by nature for various other purposes, but if in it we have the material wherewith a deep rooted plague can be removed, and our agriculture freed from the loss which it now annually sustains, we can only acknowledge the wisdom of nature's plans, and the facilities for comfort which her abundant and varied resources place within the reach of her creatures. Nor is there a substance produced on the soil—on the contrary, which can apply it for the destruction of an insect, we at the same time apply a valuable manure. [illegible] ...

But the grain which will feed the grub on the wheat field do not include the whole; countless numbers adhere to the grain and straw, and are thus conveyed to the barns. To dispose of these is a less difficult task, although great care must be taken in destroying them, gathered within to small a compass.

After the wheat is threshed out, few will be found adhering to the straw, which is generally well tossed in being taken from the threshing machine, and which is highly necessary to be preserved for provender, but the dust of the threshing machine, and of the fanning mill, should be gathered up with the most scrupulous care, and either deposited in a convenient place, and well mixed with lime, or burned when that can be effected without danger.

With regard to seed wheat (to which some of the insect may still adhere), the heaviest should in every instance be chosen, and even this should be exposed to water, (although only for a few minutes,) previously to its being sown. While subjected to this process, and the wheat well stirred and allowed to settle a few minutes, the insect will be found floating in large numbers on the surface, like small atoms of dust, and can easily be removed and destroyed, after which the wheat being allowed some time to dry, may be sown.

It cannot be argued, even by the most fastidious, that the pleas we have here submitted for the destruction of the wheat midge, are either complicated or expensive; on the contrary, they are such as come within the reach of the poorest of our farming community. We, therefore, trust that every farmer in whose hands this pamphlet may be placed, will first carefully peruse it, and immediately act according to its simple directions—we assign him neither a difficult nor laborious work, nor have we submitted our ideas in language unintelligible to even the most superficial, or ill informed reader. Let the farmers of Canada rest assured that the results now given them in this little treatise, are due to a patient and indefatigable research extending over many years, and if even the smallest amount of good can arise from those labours the writer will not only feel well rewarded, but encouraged further to devote to the agricultural interest in its varied departments his close and unremitting attention, and from time to time, give to the world, as the only legacy he can bestow, the results of his experience as a practical farmer.

In conclusion, we may be pardoned for departing from our subject so far as to express a hope, that in Canada a new era is beginning to dawn on the agricultural interests of the country, and as the benign influences of education continue to operate upon society, we can with certainty look forward to the happiest results.

Hitherto the farmer has considered himself too much a machine, adapted only to physical labour, and although the writer of these pages is well aware how difficult it is for the sons of toil, under the burden and influence of constant exertion, to devote to the mind that care which is so much its due yet the thinking principle only requires exercise, in order gradually to develope itself, and whether at the plough or in the bush, in the wheat field or in the barn yard, under every circumstance, we say,—think. Let common sense assert its sway—it is a trustworthy guide, when well exercised, and a monitor whose instructions are free to every human being.

To the farmers of Canada the whole country must look for support. Agriculture is our staple trade; and a trade, moreover, than which no country can furnish a more honourable one. We glory in belonging to the class, and of all the titles in the power of our beloved sovereign to confer, we are conscious that none would sit so easily on our brow, nor afford us so large an amount of honest pride, as that of a

PRACTICAL FARMER.

The Frazer River Gold Mines.

EMIGRATION FROM CALIFORNIA.

(From the London Times, Aug. 4.)

How strange is the contrast which might be instituted between the rush to Frazer River, described by our San Francisco correspondent, and the Crusades, which carried so large a portion of the population of Europe to die on the burning sands of Palestine. Let us present our readers with two scenes—a mediæval and a modern one. At Clermont Ferrand, Peter the Hermit had concluded his discourse; cries are heard in every quarter, "It is the will of God!—it is the will of God!" Every one assumes the cross, and the crowd disperse to prepare for conquering under the walls of the earthly a sure passage to the heavenly Jerusalem. What elevation of motive what faith, what enthusiasm! Compare with this the picture drawn by our correspondent. "A steamer calculated to carry 600 persons is laden with 1,600. There is hardly standing room on the deck. It is almost impossible to fight your way from one part of the vessel to the other. The passengers are not knights and barons, but tradesmen who have "evacuated" without paying the "jobbers," who supply them with goods—"jobbers" who are in debt to the wholesale houses that employ them—tenants who have "absquatulated" without deigning to remember the existence of their unfortunate landlords, and loafers of all the known varieties. They seek in their overloaded vessel, a land where innumerable labours, trials and dangers await them—where they have to confront the alternative of starvation, drowning, or death by the hands of the Indians, besides such minor inconveniences as persons of the class we have described may be supposed capable of causing to each other in the shape of robbery, or the lesser evils of cowhiding, and any amount of "difficulties," likely to obtain the speediest and most fatal solution. Nor does the end elevate the means. Their object is of the earth earthy—wealth in its rawest and rudest form—gold, the one thing for which they bear to live or dare to die. Surely, in the comparison the Crusaders have the superiority in every point. And yet, so little have ideal, romantic and sentimental considerations to do with the current of human affairs, that while the Crusades remain a monument of abortive and objectless folly, fatal to those who embarked in them, and leaving as their chief result a tinge of Asiatic ferocity on European barbarism, the exodus of San Francisco, notwithstanding the questionable elements of which it is composed, and the grovelling and material end it has in view, is sure, through whatever phases of suffering, of hardship and of crime, to work out the progress of happiness and civilization, and add another to the many conquests over nature which the present age has witnessed.

The present emigration from San Francisco to Frazer River differs in this respect from the previous exodus to California and Australia—that it is composed of men who are perfectly familiar with the land of life on which they are entering, thoroughly aware of what they need, and excellent judges of the capabilities of the region for the production of gold. The element of speculation is very much diminished. If the diggings of Frazer River are pronounced rich, it is on the authority of the very first practical judges in the world. On this point there seems no room for doubt; any it is very probable—though our experienced correspondent declines to vouch for the truth of the report—that far away from the river, at the sides of the great chain of mountains, are to be found hill diggings surpassing in richness anything that has yet been worked. This would only be in accordance with the experience of California, and indeed, with the reasonable presumption that gold found in the beds of rivers has been carried down from large deposits at their sources, and that such deposits may well exist where there are no rivers to betray their hidden treasures. It is therefore very probable that as the diggings on the Frazer have drained California, so the hill diggings may drain the Frazer, and thus an enormous field be opened to the enterprise of the Eastern States of the Union and of Europe.

The injudicious attempt of Governor Douglas to enforce the exclusive rights of trade granted to the Hudson's Bay Company, not as our correspondent supposes, under their charter, which does not extend to the east of the Rocky Mountains but under a license granted in pursuance of an Act of Parliament passed twenty years ago, and the vast importance which the new colony is evidently destined to assume, clearly show the wisdom of the course pursued by Government in at once putting an end to the dominion of the company, and placing the district of New Columbia under the direct government of the Crown. It is gratifying to see with how much readiness the moderate requisition of a license fee of £1 per month has been complied with, and in how fair and reasonable a spirit, even the assertion of the company's monopoly of trade have been met by the mining population. Notwithstanding his claim of monopoly, the Governor is, it appears, personally popular. The truth is, the human mind has no room for two absorbing passions at the same time, and the feverish anxiety for gold has for a time driven out the inveterate propensity to "take a rise" out of the Britishers. That this, however, cannot last long, we are reminded by the spirited exploit of Captain Dodge, properly so called. This enlightened man, having satisfied himself by some occult geographical process that the great head of Frazer River is south of the 49th parallel of latitude, of which we used to hear so much in the days of the Oregon treaty, and therefore in American territory, claimed to go there, and challenged the captain of her Majesty's ship Satellite to fire into and sink the schooner and all hands, (she had 100 miners on board) if he disapproved the proceeding This, to use the captain's figurative expression, "knocked the English officer cold," and the dodge of Dodge succeeded. We are also happy to observe that only one fatal collision had taken place between the Indians and the diggers, and that the officers of the Hudson's Bay Company had influence enough to stay the feud before any more fatal consequences occurred. We apprehend, however, that this absence of violence is mainly due to the fact that higher up the river the superiority of the physical force is decidedly on the side of the Indians, and that the white men are too few and too weak to venture on that summary manner of dealing with the rights of the aborigines which has kindled such bloody and desolating wars on every frontier of the United States, and which has just led to a severe and sanguinary defeat of the regular troops of the Union in the Territory of Oregon. All these things show us very clearly that no time is to be lost if we would protect our flag from insult at the hands of adventurers who speculate with good reason on our moderation and unwillingness to shed blood, and prevent what would be equally dangerous and disgraceful to us—a war of extermination between the miners and the Indians. We hope, therefore, that orders have already been sent out to give up at once the futile and exasperating claim to a monopoly of trade—futile, because even without a monopoly the Hudson's Bay Company, from its position, its capital, its local knowledge, and its control over the Indians, can always secure the lion's share of the profits even of a free trade, and exasperating to men who will naturally resent any attempt to add artificial to inevitable privations. Further we would express a hope that in this case the analogy of India will not be lost sight of, and that as, while placing the dominions of the Company under the direct government of the Crown, Parliament has been anxious to avail itself of the experience and knowledge of which the Company is the depository, Government will avail itself in a like spirit of the immense advantages which the long experience, the intelligence and the local knowledge of the servants of the Hudson's Bay Company place at their disposal. When they have done this, and armed the Government with a force sufficient to maintain order between the diggers and the Indians, and among the miners themselves, they have done all that the present state of things suggests. Happily remote as the situation of Frazer's River is, it can be reached in five weeks from this country, so that there will be no excuse for delay in taking such measures as may give an orderly and regular character to the proceedings of the new colony, and by at once arming the Government with sufficient physical force to make itself feared and obeyed, may anticipate and eradicate all causes of internal commotion, and prevent those complaints and reclamations on the part of the United States which a less vigorous rule over so miscellaneous and disorderly a population is almost certain to produce.

Arrival of the "Anglo Saxon."

QUEBEC, August 22.

The Anglo Saxon from Liverpool on the 11th passed River du Loup at 12 o'clock last night, and reached Point Levi at half past nine o'clock this morning. The Canada arrived at Liverpool on the evening of the seventh, the North American about nine, and the Kangaroo about eleven on the morning of the 11th.

The Cherbourg fetes concluded on the 8th with the inauguration of the Statute of Napoleon. The Emperor made another pacific speech.

The Calcutta mails of July 4th had been telegraphed. The Indian news was unimportant.

In England the greatest anxiety was felt with regard to the Atlantic cable.—The first regular message from Newfoundland was received at Valentia on the night of the 9th. The speed was said to be greater than was attained at Plymouth, and currents apparently as strong. Shares continue to be quoted about nine hundred pounds. None but Government messages were to be sent through the cable during the electrical experiments, which were expected to occupy several weeks.

The Queen and Prince Albert embarked at Gravesend on the 10th to visit their daughter, Princess Frederick William.

At a meeting of the Great Eastern Steamship Company, it was resolved to receive offers for purchase or charter of the ship, and to advertise her for sale by auction and in the meantime to raise money on mortgage.

Thomas Pemberton Leigh is gazetted to the Peerage.

The London Times reviews the lamentable condition of Mexico, and concludes as follows:—"It appears there is nothing left for the United States but to denounce the work they have begun, and direct the land of Montezuma and Cortez, which even under the lash of the slave-driver will not regret the illusory liberty of the Mexican Republic."

The telegraphic communication between England and the Channel Islands had been successfully completed by submarine cable. A prospectus was issued by the Malta and Alexandria Telegraph Company, to complete the Mediterranean portion of the line to India. The project is to submerge a cable from Malta to Candia, whence lines will diverge to Constantinople and Alexandria.

As the Arabia was leaving Liverpool on the 7th, a man named James Fitter, an American absconder, who was doubling on his pursuers by returning to New York, was arrested by the police and lodged in gaol; nearly $30,000 in American securities were found in his possession.

The Times reiterates its objections to the Cherbourg demonstrations, and argues that defensive measures on the part of England are absolutely necessary.

THE LATEST.

LONDON, August 11.

The Daily News reports funds flat yesterday at one-sixteenth decline. The supply of money continued large. Paris letters describe the Bourse as exhibiting decidedly more confidence.

The Times says Sir Jno. Lawrence, who is on his way home, has accepted a proffered seat in the new Indian Council.

The principal papers publish to-day long narratives of the voyage of the Agamemnon. The Times asks whether it would not be worthy of the nation to confer some reward on her officers and crew.

INDIA.

Calcutta mails, July 4th, and Madras 10th, arrived at Alexandria. News of little importance. The rebels had returned in force to the jungles of Judpore. Gen. Lugard resigned on account of ill-health.—The Gwailor rebels are believed to be making for Bhurtpore. Maun Singh was besieged at Shagurh by the begum' army.—Gen Whitlock's force had captured Trerosan in Banda.

CHINA.

Pieho, June 9.—A gun boat advanced to Tien Sin without opposition, and demanded both river and great canal.

English and French Ambassadors were located ashore near Tien Sin, and Americans and Russians had followed the Allies up the river.

A mandarin of high rank, the second officer in the empire, had arrived from Pekin, as special Commissioner to negotiate.

Reinforcements continued to be despatched from Hong Kong.

Canton was much disturbed, and several Europeans and Sepoys were reported murdered.

FRANCE.

The French papers teem with accounts of the Cherbourg fetes which had concluded.

At a banquet on board the Bretagne, Napoleon, on proposing Queen Victoria's health, made a very amicable speech, and said,

That facts proved that hostile passions, aided by a few unfortunate incidents, did not succeed in altering either the friendship existing between the two crowns, or the desire of the two nations to remain at peace. He entertained the sincere hope that if attempts were made to stir up old resentments, and the passions of another epoch, they would break to pieces upon common sense.

Prince Albert responded; he expressed the most friendly sentiment on behalf of the Queen and said,

She was most happy at having an opportunity, by her presence at Cherbourg, of endeavouring to strengthen as much as possible the bonds of friendship between the two nations—a friendship based on mutual prosperity. He trusted the blessing of Heaven would not be denied it. He concluded by proposing as a toast, the Emperor and Empress.

Queen Victoria left on the 6th, under a triple salute.

The fetes were continued on the 7th, by the inauguration of the Napoleon Dock, and the launch of the man-of-war Ville de Nantes. The consumption of gunpowder during the fetes was enormous.

It was rumoured that Napoleon would return the Queen's visit in a private, friendly way at Osborne, during the autumn.

The Empress had ordered a pyramid of granite to be erected at the new dock, to perpetuate the Queen's visit.

The fetes terminated with the inauguration of the statute of Napoleon the 1st.—The Emperor delivered a pacific speech on the occasion, saying,

It appeared to be part of his destiny to accomplish by peace great designs conceived during the war, and said his Government would not wage war except in defence of the national honour and the great interests of the people.

The Imperial party embarked for Brest on the 8th.

Changes in the diplomatic corps were again much talked of.

The Emperor had definitely decided on the construction of a commercial port at Brest; also, on the improvement of the port of L'Orient.

ITALY.

Naples and Salerno prisoners had been conveyed to places of punishment publicly in irons, and the proceedings caused considerable indignation among the people. Government prosecutions were being directed against the advocates of the prisoners.

TURKEY.

The English and French Governments have decided that the prosecution of the Jeddah assassins shall be conducted by Commissioners to be sent out by the respective Governments.

AFRICA.

Late advices from the western coast report that the British steamer "Trident" had brought into port the American ship "Eliza Gibbs," fitted with slave decks and stores.

LIVERPOOL MARKETS.

August 11.

The weather is still favourable for harvest operations, and another week will secure the bulk of grain south. Of this trade the most inactive is flour; Western Canal at 20s 6d to 22s; Philadelphia and Baltimore 21s 6d to 22s 3d. Wheat—White 6s to 7s 3d per 70 lbs; red 5s 6d to 6s 3d. Corn—white 33s to 34s 6d per 480 lbs; yellow 33s 6d to 34s; mixed 33s 6d to 34s. Provisions—Beef in fair demand at 85s to 92s per tierce for prime mess. Pork—fine only is enquired for, and for this quality of prime mess 90s could be got. Lard held firmly, and has advanced to 61s per cwt. Ashes—pots and pearls, steady and quiet, and prices declining. Sugar market firm, at 6d to 1s decline.

Consols 96¼; account 96⅝; fours very steady.

THE OUTBREAK in Southern India.—The "Europa" and "Arabia."

A gentleman who was passenger on the Arabia has furnished an interesting account of the occurrence. He states that at 11 o'clock when the collision occurred many of the passengers had retired to rest. All the ladies had retired some time before.—A few gentlemen were on the hurricane deck, and a half dozen were seated in the saloon, engaged in conversation. Strangely enough the theme of their remarks was courage exhibited by persons of different temperaments and mental peculiarities in times of great danger. Individual instances of courage and fear were cited in illustration of opinions expressed.

In the midst of this conversation a loud crash was heard forward, not unlike a clap of thunder, and this was followed by a grinding sound, as of something rubbing against the side of the vessel. The crash startled every body, and the discussion on physical courage was, by tacit agreement postponed indefinitely. Passengers rushed out of their state-rooms in the wildest excitement; several fainted, and hardly any on board failed to betray signs of deep emotion.—Our informant had a lady in his care, and his first object was to secure information as to the nature and extent of the damage.—His impression was that they had struck an iceberg, several of which they had seen the day previous. Going forward he ascertained that the starboard bow of the Arabia had come in collision with the port bow of the Europa, and learning that there was no immediate danger he went below and stated the fact.

According to the usual custom of steamers in meeting one another, the helm of the Europa, on observing the Arabia's light, was put hard aport; the officer of the Arabia discovered the Europa's lights, when he saw that if he ported the helm the Arabia would inevitably strike the Europa midships. He therefore gave the order to port the helm hard a-starboard, which threw her bows around, and thus prevented a collision which otherwise would probably have been fatal to one if not both vessels. Capt. Stone at once dispatched a boat to ascertain the extent of the damage sustained by the Europa. The Captain of the Europa requested that the Arabia stay by and keep her company into St. John's Newfoundland.

Capt. Stone came into the saloon, stated the facts to the passengers and informed them of his intention to comply with the request of the Captain of the Europa. But the Arabia had hardly got under way when the engineer discovered that the machinery had been damaged, and was compelled to stop the engines. An examination proved that the plummer-block of the starboard wheel had been broken when the two steamers swung broadside to, and that before they could proceed further the engine must be disconnected with the starboard wheel. This caused a delay of twelve hours, and in the meantime the Europa had proceeded on her way to St. John's, and as she had probably reached there, Capt. Stone concluded to continue his course to New York with the port wheel."

CONDITION OF THE "ARABIA."

From the appearance of the Arabia we should judge that she must have been run into by the Europa. Her cutwater is smashed, stem started, and starboard trailboard gone. This, with the exception of a little damage to the rail, and a slight chafing of the copper, is all the injury that is visible forward. The stern of the Europa appears to have glanced along the Arabia's bow, causing her to wheel over to port somewhat; and then, before she righted, the Europa swung round so as to bring her port paddle-box guards against the Arabia's starboard paddle-box, smashing up her heavy oaken guards, and knocking the pillow-block out of place. The repairs to the Arabia will be completed in time to allow her to sail on the regular day. We are assured that the admirable discipline which prevails on board the Cunard steamships prevented all panic and excitement among the passengers.

Dr. Duff on the Indian Mutiny.

We make the following important extracts from a letter from Dr. Duff, in the Witness of Wednesday. The letter is dated Calcutta June 1:—

MISREPRESENTATIONS OF THE "TIMES."

A powerful journal like the Times—a journal which so materially influences public opinion all over the world—has much to answer for in having, first, so long and so peremptorily insisted upon it that we had to deal with nothing but a mere military mutiny; and it having, secondly, when such dictorial averments become purely ridiculous from being outrageously contradicted by facts, striven to suppress, or make light of, or minimise, everything tilted to throw light on the real nature, true character, civil causes, and actual strength and extent, of the rebellion. By so acting, it has helped to delude and misdirect British statesmen and the British public—thereby depriving us of that full measure of assistance in quelling the insurrection which a generous nation, thoroughly awakened to an adequate sense of the terribleness of the emergency, would not have withheld; and, what is even worse, misleading all in authority at home and abroad with reference to what is really necessary for the grand work of recovery, reorganization and ultimate pacification. The sore lies in this—that a discovery and faithful promulgation of facts would be apt to reflect somewhat unpleasantly on their watchfulness and wisdom of the authors and advocates of the old system of policy and administration. Hence it is that they labour so assiduously to suppress or misrepresent all that would tell against their favourite system, and, by implication against themselves—concealing or minimising whatever may be thought antagonistic—blazoning in glaring colours, or maximising whatever may be considered favorable to their own cause.

Something of this sort is very noticeable in the mighty effusions of their organ the Times. When at last, after months of vain repetition about "military mutiny and nothing else," the fact could no longer be concealed, and any farther attempt at concealing them would cover the author with derision, it was allowed that as soon as the military outbreak was fully declared, and it "became evident that the authority of Government could in many places be defied or overpowered for a time," the mutineers "were joined by that large and dangerous class of every dense population which finds a natural element in anarchy and riot."—From this statement, who could expect that any seeds of dissatisfaction existed among the respectable and ordinarily pacific classes of India? Oh no; we are in pointed and emphatic terms assured that only these two classes—malicious sepoys and rabid desperadoes—constituted the foes opposed to us in the beginning of the insurrection. How, then, came such numbers of other classes, who cannot be accounted "rabid desperadoes," to defy our authority, and cast in their lot with the mutineers? Here is the "colour de rose" theory of the phenomenon. "As weeks rolled on, and the overmatched forces of our countrymen were all absorbed in the various contests around the walls of Delhi, the ordinary machinery of Government became partly and in many of the districts of Hindostan, and this suspension of authority suggested to certain disappointed landholders and malcontent tribes the hopes of recovering what they thought their own." To the "rabid desperadoes" will have now to add "ejected tenants and forest marauders," who found on "unexpected opportunity of recovering their estates and renewing their pastimes the disorganization proceeded, and of working their will without hindrance, while one portion of the controlling army was engaged in deadly battle with the other." But according to the express assurance of the great journalist, "beyond these limits there has been no spirit of insurrection exhibited. And, as if this assurance were not sufficient, it is solemnly declared, as "the greatest fact of all, that the immense population of India has displayed a steady and unalterable attachment to our rule." "Credat Judæus!" may one at all acquainted with the constitution of native society, and its unconcealed feeling towards us, well exclaim. These ejected landlords are spoken of as if rebellion was with them an utter thought, instead of being an outward manifestation of what had been long cherished, on account of the wrongs endured by them through the grievous operation of our ill-adapted judicial and fiscal systems. But so far as the great journalist is concerned, he keeps his readers in profound ignorance of such w

...pose of assisting the present danger to be forthwith, and to bush up or cover over all the signs and symptoms of anything like disaffection among any classes of the general civic population—a policy that would nothing can be more fatuous, and in the end more disastrous.

REVELATIONS AT THE TRIAL OF THE RAJAH OF PACHETE.

At the recent trial of the Rajah of Pachete, whose territories lie on the western frontier of Bengal, abundant evidence of his disloyalty and disaffection was elicited.—His fort had been recently repaired and strengthened with new trenches, &c., and supplied with military stores of all kinds.—Cannon and newly made gun-carriages had been found concealed in various places, and small arms of all sorts in large numbers, while his people were busily engaged in the manufacture of gunpowder. Among his papers were found letters from some noted rebels with letters from himself prepared for despatch to them. A bond also was discovered, which had been signed by all his people at night, with many solemn formalities, pledging each other on oath to obedience and allegiance to the Rajah, and binding themselves never to reveal what might come to their knowledge within the fort—Parwannahs, or official circulars, in hundreds, were issued by him to various zemindars, had others within his influence, ordering them to collect as many armed men as possible, and repair to his fort; while he positively declined to render any assistance to Government at the time when the neighbouring districts were in a state of disorder and tumult. And though all this did not sustain the charge of actually waging war against the Government, which had been somewhat heedlessly preferred against him, it all went so fully to prove disaffection, disloyalty, and treasonable intentions, that, on being acquitted of the specific charge, he was immediately rearrested, to be at once tried again for treason. And those who are best acquainted with the state of native feeling know full well that there are many others who, though they have not so openly committed themselves as the Rajah of Pachete, are, as regards desire and secret intention, if the opportunity offered not a whit better than he. Since, however they have had the prudence hitherto to refrain from all overt acts, they have been dealt with and even boasted of, by the partizans of high-officialism, as "staunch, loyal, and attached to British rule." It was surely far better—far wiser and nobler—for men in the authority tacitly, at least to admit the naked truth, and then resolve on all future plans and arrangements, so to act as to dry up the very roots of disaffection, and implant in their stead the healthier seeds of intelligent loyalty and devoted-ness to the British Crown; though I candidly confess, that I despair of ever seeing such loyalty and devotedness in an Asiatic, however generously treated, unless he first be brought under the ennobling influences of the Christian faith.

The Atlantic Telegraph.

REPLY OF THE LORD MAYOR OF LONDON TO THE MAYOR OF NEW YORK.

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 24.

To Hon. D. F. Tiemen, Mayor of New York:

The Lord Mayor of London most cordially reciprocates the congratulations of the Mayor of New York upon the success of so important an undertaking as the completion of the Atlantic Telegraph Cable.—It is indeed one of the most glorious triumphs of the age, and reflects the highest credit upon the energy, skill and perseverance of the parties entrusted with so difficult a duty; and the Lord Mayor sincerely hopes that, by the blessing of Almighty God, it may be the means of cementing the kind feelings which now exist between the two countries.

(Signed) B. W. CARDEN,
Lord Mayor of London.

House of Lords.

MONDAY, July 19.

MASSACRE AT JEDDAH.

Lord STRATFORD DE REDCLIFFE asked the Government if they had received any official accounts of the massacre at Jeddah; whether acting in conjunction with France they had taken the requisite steps to obtain reparation; and whether they were prepared to take measures to enforce their demands?

The Earl of MALMESBURY said he had telegraphed to Sir Henry Bulwer at Constantinople as soon as he received the despatch announcing the massacre, directing him to permit no trifling on the part of the Porte, but to demand immediate redress and retribution. In the course of last week he received from Mr. Green her Majesty's Consul at Alexandria, a full account of what had taken place, from which it appeared that there had been a dispute between the Turkish authorities and Captain Pullen of the Cyclops, in reference to an Indian ship, belonging to Indian subjects who wished to change their nationality and assume the Ottoman protection. As it was contrary to law for a British ship to forswear its allegiance to Great Britain.—Captain Pullen interfered, and the matter came before a tribunal, which decided that the ship was English. Notwithstanding this decision the English flag was lowered and the Ottoman flag hoisted, and a general massacre of the Christains followed, the French and English Consuls being among those assassinated. Captain Pullen considered that he had not sufficient strength to take any violent measures, and after taking on board twenty-three Christians and giving the British Consul Christian burial, he left for Suez. Her Majesty's Government had since heard from Sir H. Bulwer, that the Porte were fully alive to the enormity of the outrages and had despatched a Pasha and troops to Jeddah, armed with powers of life and death, to make inquiry and inflict ample retribution. Under these circumstances he believed there was no necessity for the active interference of her Majesty's Government.

THE PRAYER BOOK.

The Duke of MARLBOROUGH moved an address praying her Majesty, if it should be her pleasure that the services of the 5th November, 30th January, and 29th May, should no longer be annexed to the Book of Common Prayer, in accordance with the address of the House of Lords, to direct that there be hereafter inserted in the form of prayer and thanksgiving appointed for the 20th June, such form of thanksgiving as her Majesty may see fit for the great deliverance which, by the mercy of God, hath been vouchsafed to this nation, namely the rescue of the estates of Parliament from the conspiracy of the 5th November 1605, the restoration of the Church and monarchy in 1660, the deliverance from Papal subjection and arbitrary power through the landing of King William III. in 1688, of which commemorate the nation is still enjoying the blessing in the security of her Majesty's throne.

The Earl of DERBY opposed the motion and after a short discussion it was withdrawn.

The Police (Scotland) Act Amendment Bill, and Lunacies (Scotland) Act Amendment Bill were read a second time.

Lord. STANLEY of ALDERLEY moved the second reading of the School Trustees Bill. He stated that the object of the measure was to enable Dissenters to act as trustees to the Church schools where they were not prohibited by terms of their charter.

The LORD CHANCELLOR moved as an amendment, that the bill be read a second time that day three months.

After some discussion the amendment was agreed to, and the bill was therefore lost.

An exchange says that the Indian chief, Billy Bowlegs, is called by fashionable ladies, William Cruikshanks.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Port Hope & Peterboro' Railway.
For Sale Cheap—S. E. Curry & Co.
Notice—C. Smith.
Boy Wanted
Read! Read!!

The Examiner.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 26, 1858

The Toronto Election.

The nomination of a member of parliament for Toronto, the representation of which was rendered vacant by Mr. Brown's acceptance of office, took place on Friday last and terminated by the Sheriff declaring the show of hands to be in favour of the Hon. George Brown. Mr. Cameron, the opposing candidate, demanded a poll, and the election will take place on Friday and Saturday next, the 27th and 28th inst. No man deserves so well from the electors of Toronto, as the Hon. George Brown, and we look forward confidently to his triumphant return on Saturday. Were it not that there is a deep feeling of indignation abroad in the country at the shameless transactions which have deprived Mr. Brown of his seat, it would be amusing to see the futile attempts of the Ministerial organs to cast discredit on the popularity of the late member for Toronto. As it is, it is a pitiable exhibition to witness the froth and nonsense in which these so-called leaders of the people daily indulge, and the exaggerations and falsehoods with which their columns teem. We doubt not both parties are open to the charge of exaggeration, but it is high time we were rid of such gross misrepresentations as we are now daily favored with, for it is fast bringing disgrace upon our national press. We commend to our readers the pithy and pointed remarks of the last Grumbler anent this subject, they will find them worthy of perusal.

Opening of the Good Templars' Hall.

On the evening of Thursday last, the fine new Hall, in Lundy's Block, George street, recently leased by the Good Templars' Society, was formally opened and dedicated to the cause of temperance by a social entertainment under the Society's auspices. About one hundred and eighty persons assembled to do honour to the occasion, a large proportion being of the fair sex, whose sympathies with the cause we were glad to see so strongly marked.—Speeches, songs and recitations were the order of the evening; a most agreeable "half-way house" (to quote a phrase from an opposite institution) being the destribution of the refreshments, handsomely provided by the Sisters of the Society. The speakers were earnest and practical, enforcing the claims of the Society in a manner which could not fail of the happiest results. And while the Society was declared to be in a highly prosperous condition, the necessity of renewed and increased exertion was strongly urged, as every day life showed there was still a vast field for energetic enterprise in the Temperance cause. The performances of the Glee Club were highly appropriate and executed with much taste, and came in as a pleasing relief between the speeches, some of which were rather lengthy, a fault which should be carefully avoided in such social entertainments. The night being well advanced when the programme was closed, the volunteer speakers who followed wisely confined their remarks to interchanges of good feeling and heartfelt sympathy with the cause of the Templars. The party separated about half-past eleven o'clock, highly pleased with the entertainment, and happy that occasion had offered for such a pleasant evening.

"The Charivari"

Has had ten days survey of the political world (so much of it at least as can be seen from the Review office—for, poor thing, it has not travelled much farther,) and it is really astonishing how quietly it has conducted itself considering the pompous announcement in Red with which its birth was honoured, and the awful "mystery" which ushered it into existence. We find few who have seen it, fewer who have read it, and fewer still who will offer to say one word in its praise. It is a puny, miserable affair, with not one article in it with pretension enough to lay claim to wit. We hope, as our Lindsay contemporary has it, it will have "all the success it deserves"!

Wolves.

These ravenous animals are at present prowling about the back townships to an alarming extent. We are informed that in one night last week Mr. John Ross, farmer, in Dummer, lost no fewer than fourteen sheep, and it is altogether unsafe to leave loose for the night live stock of any description. Farmers and others in charge of stock would do well to have to the safety of their property for them bridge are robbers from which there is no return.

&c.—Our Theatricals stayed a visit to Port Hope on Monday last, and there performed to a very poor audience, their talk cheaper instead of being reprimanded was heavily drained to meet expenses. Surely this will help to cure them of their ambition to "strut their hour upon the stage"!

The Delay of the Message.

(From the Boston Advertiser.)

We have received from a private source undoubted intelligence from Trinity Bay which gives the precise explanation of the present delay of the first message in words across the Atlantic. It is not of a character to create any fear of permanent difficulty in the use of the cable—though it may require material alterations of the instruments now in use. It appears that in the passage of one electric signal across the ocean,—not only is an appreciable time consumed,—but the signals itself changes, in a degree, its original character. It is, so to speak, stretched out. A signal, which on a short line would seem perfectly sharp and prompt, takes the form of a long wave and requires from six to ten seconds to declare itself between the beginning of its effects and its end. Between what such a signal would be at an end of a short wire, and what is it at the end of the Atlantic wires there is somewhat the same difference as between the shortest (staccato) blast of a whistle, and a note drawn out with the swell of an organ, to the length of six or even ten seconds. A distinct feature to be observed is the swell of the prolonged signal. It has most force in the middle of its period, and gains and loses that force gradually. Of the length of time which this modified signal requires for passing the ocean, we are not informed; nor do we know that it has been ascertained. It is evident, however, that it must be at least six seconds, the shortest period in which one signal completes its lif.

Now it is well known by Farady's and Wheatstone's observations on long wires that for at least half the period required for the transmission of any signal, the current must be continued unbroken; no new signal must be begun. Otherwise the signal returns to the operator, that being its shortest opportunity to discharge itself. At the shortest, therefore, one signal on the cable will require more than three seconds at the point of starting, and six seconds to record itself. Readers who have the slightest knowledge of telegraph machinery will understand how materially such a modification of the promptness of the signal must affect any form of the apparatus in use. The quickest tap of Morse's telegraph for instance is exchanged with such a signal for a long crescendo and diminuendo wave. In Morse's alphabet, spaces, short taps or dots, or long one or dashes, are variously modified to make the several letters. A word of ten letters may consist of thirty or forty such signs. It will readily be seen how impossible would be for an operator to transmit such a word, until experiment enables him precisely to adapt his spaces to his dots and dashes, to tell when a dot ends, and when a space begins. So great is the immediate change when an instant dot is changed into a signal six seconds long. We give this illustration merely because it is so simple.—Similar changes in computation and combination will be required for the needle telegraphs or the printing telegraphs. There is no reason why Hughe's telegraph, which is highly and deservedly praised, should escape them more than any other. We must be content to wait till these experiments and new computations have been made. The essential victory has been gained in the transmission of rapid, well pronounced signals from side to side. From those signals an alphabet can be formed, or recording machinery can be driven by them, beyond a doubt. It was not to be expected that the varied apparatus of the short lines should answer the same purpose, without modification, upon one so long. We presume this lengthening of the signal is completely accounted for by the amount of what is called induction in so long a line.

Wayside Jottings.

AN ENGLISH TUNNEL ADVENTURE.

If there be one thing in creation more, so to speak inconveniently convenient than another, or an infliction more antagonistic to comfort than another, the present mode of English railway travelling must be that same—setting aside the bore of meeting with people who for miles will only condescend to grunt their occasional replies in disagreeable monosyllables, and upon whom the most ingenious stratagems to cast off the icy cloak of English reserve are fruitless—their "dejected haviour of the visage," strongly betokening a fixed determination, by an assumption of gravity and importance, to resist all attacks of comfort and ease. Setting aside, also, the meeting with persons whose appearance would justly warrant one in coming to the conclusion that their names were either Smith, Brown, Jones or Robinson, and the disgust consequent upon the self-confident hems and haha which flank their sentences, who can quietly pass over their first impressions of the jolting and bumping oscillatory motion experienced in each railway jaunt? But I will not dwell upon, suffice it to say, that to all chances I one morning doomed myself, and submitted to a voluntary incarceration in the unshapely compartment of a railway carriage, with a determination of purpose worthy a better object; and having adjusted my wrapper, and folded my arms a la Napoleon, I sedulously devoted myself to a philosophic consideration of the probable positions in society of those whom an adverse fate had ordained should be my companions in travail. Opposite to me was a short-necked ruddy-faced individual of Lambertonian dimensions, who was so intent upon the consumption of an endless sandwich that he never raised his eyes above the level of the huge knot of his comforter, save when, with a mighty effort he raised his weighty arm to assist the act of deglutition with draughts as copious as they were frequent from his capacious brandy flask. Next, and forming a striking contrast to the aforesaid individual, sat a figure which, within the jovial garmound at its side so comfortably enveloped in flush, appeared as if it had been built by subscription and run up by contract. It was thin, gaunt and wiry, painfully reminding one of that pungent acrimonious liquor concentrated essence of aromatic vinegar and making us wonderingly endeavor to solve the problematic question, whether he had not like the ghost of Hamlet, covertly stolen out from some region of parchment mum to "sweet the morning air." After having gazed earnestly with mingled feelings of curiosity and disgust for some moments, I experienced the sudden spasmodic jerk which we feel on being aroused from a state of lethargy, and fixed my optical visionaries on a third passenger, a youth, which the genial Albert Smith would have girbe the dignified appellation of "gent." He would alternately survey his person, smooth down his green-colored hair, take a whiff at his cheroot, stare vacantly, arrange his hair, and then, with great apparent inward gratification, audibly strike the ivory handle of his walking cane against his regular row of ...ghty incisors (the species of the genus...fin is not supposed to be blessed with wisdom teeth). There was yet another passenger, but sundry nasal sounds issuing from his distended olfactory nerve gave unmistakable auricular proof of his having—

"Tearless of wrong, reposed his weary strength,"

"in the arms of Morpheus" and sensibly rendered himself happily ignorant of the "stern realities" of life in a railway carriage on a dizzy morning. I had scarcely plunged into the middle of agreeable cogitation, when myself and thoughts were disturbed by a loud shrill whistle, followed by a jolt which gave an unceremonious notification of the starting of the train. This course of proceedure had thrown my head backwards, I therefore, with an uncharacteristic nonchalance allowed it to remain, but not without being tormented with numerous misgivings as to the condition of the wheels bolts, &c., which held together the body. Altogether that dashed through the air with the 'celerity of an Atalanta shorn of her graces—little did I contemplate the concatenation of evils to which I was destined to be the miserable victim. I had not sat long before my recumbent position induced a bodily languor, and I was in that interesting condition which precedes the enjoyment of—

"Tired nature's sweet restorer—balmy sleep, when "a change came over the spirit of my dream." A mental obliviousness or semi-consciousness and indefinable darkness spread around me like a shadow; vapours arose, from which arose countless sprites that playfully mocked, and hideous goblin figures (such as a Cruikshank alone could pencil), that hissed me with impunity, waving their elf-locks in contumelous violence before me. My eyes glared like fire-bolts, and my spirit yearned to bestow upon their gibling faces a fitting tribute of my indignation; had they as many lives as claws, like Othello. "I'd stomach for them all."—My irate blood impelled me on to "glut my vengeance" on the tiny monster; but alas! I was physically incapacitated—

"Duller than the fat weed
That rots itself with ease on Lethe's wharf"

I sat appalled, "gazing on vacancy," until I could realise the "darkness visible" which Milton speaks of. My terrors increased; a cold diaphoretic stream coursed down in copious torrents from my head; and anon a fierce incipient heat suffused my frame. I felt my weakness and despair conquered anger. Was I, who had hoped to be the Georgium Sidus in the galaxy of literary constellations, to sink thus unresistingly into oblivion; without one meteor flash, into a dark and dread infinity of space? Was I to—What's that?—a jerk—a whistle—a wreath of smoke—a storm of light! Hurrah! the "baseless fabric" of my horrid vision evaporates to thin air, consciousness returns, and we emerge from the tunnel in the full blaze of the noon-day sun, at the glorious rate of forty miles an hour.

Rain.

Thank God for rain! How I love to see it! Not such as comes with the dreary, raging tempest, breaking the flowers from their stems, and making the green grass lie close to the ground in a tangled mass, but the gentle, dripping shower, when no sound is heard save the musical pit-pat of the crystal drops on green leaf or flower.

To me, no music is sweeter than the music of falling water; when a little child I loved to sit for hours by the tiny brook which wound like a silver thread among the grand old trees around my childhood's home and watch the water as it poured over the ragged rocks, forming a pretty little cascade and listen to its rippling melody. The falling of the rain to-day, brings vividly to mind that gurgling waterfall, and again I sit, a little child, on that mossy seat amid the misty spray and cloud-like vapour of that miniature Niagara.

I love to hear the rain fall on the roof of our little cottage; it awakens in my breast many dear memories of the Long Ago, when my life-path was without a shadow, and the earth seemed a bleet elysium of purity and love.

How vegitation revives at the touch of the sparkling drops, and every plant and flower drinks in life inspiring draughts!—And when the sun, bright and glorious, comes out again, how the trees will be musical with bird-songs, and how, in the old forest, a million leaves, laden with pearly glittering beads, will clap their fairy hands with very joy! How God's glorious flowers will smile upon us through their tears, more bright and beautiful than costly, jewel-flashing robes of kings and queens! Then perhaps the radiant bow of promise—a type of Heaven's love and mercy—will span the orient skies and fill our hearts with thankfulness and joy that our world is so very beautiful, and, He who sends the warming sunshine and the gentle shower so good and kind.

Thank God for rain!

ANDREW DOWNING.

EXTRAORDINARY INCREASE OF TELESCOPIC POWER.—In Edinburgh, the telescope which I was using had never exhibited satisfactorily the companion of a Lyræ, a star of the eleventh magnitude; but now this little speck of light was shown so brilliantly that I could hardly but suspect some little alteration in the star, until I had looked at the companion of D Equulei, also of the eleventh magnitude, and found it as bright and distant. Then trying further, B of d Aquilæ C of 185 Antinoi, and D of 13 Lyræ, stars of the twelfth magnitude, were seen; also B of 128 Anseris. B of 307 Aquilæ, both of the thirteenth magnitude; lastly even C of 5 Aquilæ and C of B Equulei, which are of no more than the fourteenth magnitude. Here was indeed, an extraordinary increase of the space penetrating power of this telescope—namely from the tenth to the fourteenth magnitude. The stars were not only so much brighter, but also so much better defined than I had been accustomed to at the sea level, that they appeared to provoke one to apply micrometer measurement to them. Had this been the highest point of Teneriffe, there here would I immediately have tried to bring up the Pattinson telescope. But as long as there were more elevated points still, every success on Gujara was only an additional reason for trying such higher levels.—Tower's Astronomer's Experiment. By C. Piazzi Smyth.

A fellow who got drunk on election day, said it was owing to his effort to put down "party spirit."

INDIA.

The Bombay Overland Mail has arrived, bringing dates from Bombay to July 3rd. The following is the summary of the Bombay Times of that date:—

RECAPTURE OF GWALIOR.

The occupancy of this important city by Sir Hugh Rose's force was announced to us by the telegraph on the 20th ult., dated Palace of Gwalior, and forms a brilliant termination to the campaign opened on this side of India, and carried with unvarying success through Rajpootana and Central India to the south of Sir Colin Campbell's victories in the provinces of the Ganges.

The march from Calpee to Gwalior seems to have been almost without interest, and was accomplished without a halt until within a day's march of that city. On the morning of the 15th the troops were closing upon the place, unknowing upon it in the direction of the Morar cantonments, which were found to be occupied by the enemy in considerable force, although the previous inconsequence had reported them in no strength. His position was soon discovered, and our troops being thrown into attacking order, with the cavalry and the guns on each flank, H. M. 86th and 25th Native Infantry on the right, and H. M. 71st and the 24th on the left advanced rapidly upon it, pouring in a tremendous fire, and driving the enemy before them. The main body retreated across a bridge, on the other side of the cantonments, with all their guns, upon the town itself, distant about four miles. Had Sir Hugh Rose known the locality, the seizure of this bridge would have here terminated the game. Lightfoot's troops of horse artillery contrived, however, to cut off the retreat of a considerable body, driving them along the left of the cantonments, where they encountered the gallant 71st with whom a severe fight commenced. But though our men were enfeebled by sickness and the privations of the campaign, and the enemy were composed of the very chivalry of Indian troops, it was soon seen that the Pandy was no match for the British soldier. The fight was soon over, the 71st losing seven men killed, and having a considerable number of wounded. It was here that the brave and promising young Neave fell while in the act of calling on his men to charge a body of the enemy, which had taken refuge in a nullah. The troops now took up a position about a mile from the cantonments, preparatory to an assault, the enemy occupying all the heights to the south and east of the town and fort. They were computed at 30,000 strong, and was commanded by Tantia Topee and the Rao Sahib, nephew of the infamous Nana. The fort of Gwalior was probably impregnable to any native force, being built after Indian fashion, upon a rock 2000 yards in length and 300 or 400 wide, and had in ancient times the reputation of being the strongest in India. The rock rises abruptly from the plain to a height of 300 feet, rendering the fort almost impracticable to a storming party, though it is easily commanded by mortar batteries, placed where the guns of the fort cannot be sufficiently depressed to reach them. The men fighting with a halter round their necks, the fort possessed the singular disadvantage that there was no way of escape from it when once the entrance was occupied by the besiegers, and the events showed that Pandy had no stomach for holding it under such conditions. During the night of the 16th, Brigadier Smith, with the column detached on a small plain to the south of the heights occupied by the enemy, who moved ont to attack him on the morning of the 17th, headed, it is said, by the Ranee of Jhansi in person. We are as yet without particulars of this engagement other than are contained in a brief official despatch, to the effect that the Ranee was killed, and that Brigadier Smith had captured four guns. The Maharajah Scindia arrived the same morning in Sir Hugh Rose's camp, which was kept under orders to turn out at a moment's notice, in consequence of the heavy firing heard all day in the direction of Smith's brigade. On the 18th the same orders were issued, and the firing increasing, the whole force, with the exception of a guard for the camp, composed of a wing of the 3rd Europeans and some irregulars, moved by a detour to its left, of about twelve miles, to effect a junction with Brigadier Smith, who had in the meantime been reinforced by the arrival of Orr's brigade, arrested on its march towards the Deccan. The morning of the 10th was spent by Sir Hugh Rose in reconnoitring the enemy's position, from which a fire of round shot, shell, and shrappell, was directed upon our troops from break of day. The men were now ordered to encamp, the day being too far advanced for the attack, but the attitude of the enemy becoming threatening the force was ordered under arms, and a general assault made upon his position with the usual result. The only official intelligence of the affair is supplied in a short despatch from Sir Hugh Rose to Lord Elphinstone, dated Palace of Gwalior, 19th of June, announcing the capture of the city after an engagement of five hours and a half; the evacuation of the fort and the pursuit of the rebels by our cavalry and artillery. From private accounts of the engagements we gather that the enemy occupied a range of heights along our front, in the plain beyond which lay the town of Gwalior, skirting the eastern base of the rock which constitutes its fortress. The 71st and 86th Regiments advanced in skirmishing order; the 86th on the left carrying the heights in that direction, and capturing the guns that had been annoying us all the morning, and the 71st advancing with equal gallantry and success on the right. H. M. 95th Regiment, and the 10th and 25th Regiments Native Infantry, supported both attacking columns, by marching on the right of the 86th. A plain about a mile broad, on the left of the heights, was held by the enemy's cavalry, drawn up in line covering their guns. The rifles of the 86th soon forced these gentlemen to retire from the neighbourhood of the heights, but having far outstretched their supports, they were unable to advance into the maidan. The 1st Bombay Lancers now reached the plain, and the 86th and 71st advancing with this support, the enemy retreated in all directions, their cavalry not even drawing a sabre. By three o'clock the plain was entirely our own, and our soldiers were swarming into the town. General Napier, with the Horse Artillery and Irregular Cavalry, and a wing of the 14th Dragoons, was dispatched in pursuit of the enemy; and, to anticipate a little, news reached Gwalior on the 21st that, hemmed in on all sides by pursuing and arresting columns, they were cut to pieces at a place about 30 miles from that city, and scattered to the winds, 25 guns falling into Napier's possession. The town was held on the night of the 10th by the 25th and part of the 10th Regiment, and the next morning the fort was gallantly captured by a score or two of men of the 25th Native Infantry, from the handful of defenders who had chosen to die there. The Maharajah Scindia re-entered his capital the same day, and the Gwalior campaign terminated. Two thousand men are employed by the Prince in erecting temporary barracks for our troops, and a prospect of some suppose new rewards these gallant fellows for their toil. Sir Hugh Rose returns, we fear, to this pestilence, overlooking the command of the Poonah division of the army, a poor reward for services such as his. Let government recall the wretched imbecile who commands the Bombay army without securing its respect, and confer the appointment on Sir Hugh Rose.

REBELLION.

The leaders of this revolt are one by one perishing, and we have learned the death of our old enemy the Moolvie of Lucknow, Ahmoodoolah Shah, during the last fortnight. It seems that he arrived, with a considerable body of cavalry and foot [illegible] on the north side of the Rohilcund territory, about six miles from the city of Bareilly, and encamped on the banks of a small stream. Here he was attacked by a force under the command of Brigadier Jones, and after a short resistance his followers fled in all directions, leaving the Moolvie dead on the field. His head was cut off and carried in triumph to the city of Shahjehanpore, and there exposed on a pole for the inspection of the people. The Rajah of Powyan, who had given the Moolvie shelter in his fort, was killed in the action, and his brother, who succeeded him, has since been hanged. The Moolvie was admitted from our soldiers to perish at the hands of his countrymen. He fell in the engagement, and being deceased, by order of Baldeo Sing, the rajah's brother, his trunk and head were sent to Mr. Money, the Commissioner of Shahjehanpore, as the trophies sparing of his chief. Thus has perished another of the most determined of the rebel leaders of Oude and Rohilcund. The province is now happily offering every indication of a permanent return to quietness. A general breaking up of the rebel bands seems impending, the Mynpooree Rajah having surrendered to Mr. Hume, and Narain Rao and Mudho Rao, two influential men at Bundee. The revenue collections are proceeding so regularly in Bijnour, that its treasury is supplying the wants of Meerut, Deyra, and Mynee Tal, while matters everywhere are tending to a return of order and peace. Khan Bahadoor, Khan of Bareilly, and Ismael Khan, are supposed to have been in the engagement in which the Moolvie fell, and Nazim Ali, the Shahi rebel, is wandering about in the Kilpooree and Roodepore pergunnahs. An important action has been fought at Nawabgunge, on the 13th of June, around which place various scattered bodies of the rebels had been slowly concentrating for the last two months, threatening an attack upon Lucknow, and declaring their determination to recapture it or die in the attempt. Sir Hope Grant marched from Chinhut towards Nawabgunge, on the Fyzabad road, and there leaving his baggage, advanced against the enemy. The rebels were under the command of the Moulvie of Fyzabad, and numbered 20,000 strong. They attacked our troops in the front, rear and both flanks, with much determination, but our guns opening on them at 200 yards, told with fearful effect upon their ranks. The cavalry consisting of two squadrons of the Bays and Hodson's Horse, then charged with the infantry, and killed about 500 of the enemy, capturing also six guns. The total loss of the enemy was about 2,000, and among the slain were four rebel chiefs of note. This victory has cleared the neighbourhood of Lucknow, and the routed rebels have retreated towards Bhowlee.

OUDE.

LORD CANNING'S PROCLAMATION.

The Bombay Gazette states that Lord Canning has issued the following ultimate Proclamation to the insurgents of Oude:—

"The right honourable the Governor General hereby notifies, for the information of all those concerned in the present rebellion, his ultimate views and intentions regarding principals, seconds and followers engaged in the same, during the past twelve months. To all parties concerned in the murder of Christian British subjects no hope of pardon, on arrest, can be held out. They must pay the forfeit the laws of this and every civilized country have decreed to mere brutal and gratuitous slaughter of the unprepared, the defenceless, and the innocent; they are out of the pale of humanity, and the magnitude of their offence while they live will ever call aloud for retribution. With these the British Government can make no terms. To all those who have offered asylum to refugees, or others, being the murderers of Christian British subjects, and knowing them to have been such, or who have been leading movers against the authority of the British Government, and have persistently acted throughout this rebellion against the constituted paramount power of the land, the right honourable the Governor General can offer only terms of life; their punishment will be proportioned to the offences they have committed against the State. All those who shall surrender on or before the 30th day of December next shall have their lives guaranteed to them, after which date, should they continue in arms, or in opposition to the Government, their several cases shall be summarily dealt with by the authority in whose hands they may chance to fall, whether civil or military. To all others, seconds to principals, zemindars, sepoys, disbanded fugitives throughout the country, or any persons whatsoever in arms against the Government not acting on his own free will and authority, but aiding and abetting some principal, the right honourable the Governor General offers at once a general amnesty. Let them return to their homes and pursue their ordinary avocation, using their best endeavours to maintain peace and quiet. Their estates shall be guaranteed, and an act of oblivion thrown over the past. Should they, however still continue to bear arms against the British power, they must bear the consequences of their own acts. The time for clemency will have passed away.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Sir Colin Campbell has issued a complimentary order to the troops upon going into cantonments, and active operations of any magnitude are now suspended until the end of the rainy season. The Governor General, it is said, is about to leave Allahabad for Calcutta, with a view of returning to Europe. Among the officers killed at Gwalior, are Lieuts. Neave, 71st Highlanders; Ridley, 14th Light Dragoons;—and Rose, 25th Bombay Native Infantry. We (Bombay Times) regret to hear that Mr. H. Russell, the Times' special correspondent in India, who has arrived at Simla, is still a great sufferer, and not able to walk, from the severe injury sustained from the kick of his horse.

Brigham Young as an Orator.

A Utah correspondent of the Colonist writes:

On Sabbath morning, June 27, Brigham Young delivered a sermon to the Saints in the Bowery, at Provo. As he arose every eye was turned upon him at once, and the stillness of the grave pervaded the place.—The power which Brigham holds over his people is almost incomprehensible. They hang upon his lips with reverence and awe, catching and treasuring his lightest word as though it were a pearl of inestimable value. Having repeatedly witnessed evidences of this worship of the Prophet, I was dreadfully disappointed with his personal appearance. I had imagined a fine-looking man, tyler whose capabilities were dignity and power not enthroned; a man whose presence would inspire respect for his person, even in the stroller or unbeliever.—Nothing of the sort. He is a man a little above the medium height, somewhat inclined to corpulency, with a dull, bullet-looking sort of a head, sandy complexion, and an exceedingly unusual looking mouth. When walking in the wind he slightly wears a great pair of green goggles. With these upon his nose, we would naturally take him for a country schoolmaster. Who had watched the blank years enough to acquire a chronic book-sale. Without them he looks like a superannuated and [illegible] man of the world, who had seen [illegible] of worth and light. His [illegible]

...general disturbance is under consideration by the Government, and that the gates being kept against him he commenced an attack upon the place. The Rajah Jaggernath Sing, glad to avail himself of an occasion for showing his prowess thereby, fell out his force, and completed him in a fight, that is stated to have lasted three hours. The Moolvie was shielded from our bullets to perish at the hands of his countrymen. He fell in the engagement, and being deceased, by order of Baldeo Sing, the rajah's brother, his trunk and head were sent to Mr. Money, the Commissioner of Shahjehanpore, as the trophies sparing of his chief. Thus has perished another of the most determined of the rebel leaders of Oude and Rohilcund. The province is now happily offering every indication of a permanent return to quietness. A general breaking up of the rebel bands seems impending, the Mynpooree Rajah having surrendered to Mr. Hume, and Narain Rao and Mudho Rao, two influential men at Bundee. The revenue collections are proceeding so regularly in Bijnour, that its treasury is supplying the wants of Meerut, Deyra, and Mynee Tal, while matters everywhere are tending to a return of order and peace. Khan Bahadoor, Khan of Bareilly, and Ismael Khan, are supposed to have been in the engagement in which the Moolvie fell, and Nazim Ali, the Shahi rebel, is wandering about in the Kilpooree and Roodepore pergunnahs. An important action has been fought at Nawabgunge, on the 13th of June, around which place various scattered bodies of the rebels had been slowly concentrating for the last two months, threatening an attack upon Lucknow, and declaring their determination to recapture it or die in the attempt. Sir Hope Grant marched from Chinhut towards Nawabgunge, on the Fyzabad road, and there leaving his baggage, advanced against the enemy. The rebels were under the command of the Moulvie of Fyzabad, and numbered 20,000 strong. They attacked our troops in the front, rear and both flanks, with much determination, but our guns opening on them at 200 yards, told with fearful effect upon their ranks. The cavalry consisting of two squadrons of the Bays and Hodson's Horse, then charged with the infantry, and killed about 500 of the enemy, capturing also six guns. The total loss of the enemy was about 2,000, and among the slain were four rebel chiefs of note. This victory has cleared the neighbourhood of Lucknow, and the routed rebels have retreated towards Bhowlee.

OUDE.

LORD CANNING'S PROCLAMATION.

The Bombay Gazette states that Lord Canning has issued the following ultimate Proclamation to the insurgents of Oude:—

"The right honourable the Governor General hereby notifies, for the information of all those concerned in the present rebellion, his ultimate views and intentions regarding principals, seconds and followers engaged in the same, during the past twelve months. To all parties concerned in the murder of Christian British subjects no hope of pardon, on arrest, can be held out. They must pay the forfeit the laws of this and every civilized country have decreed to mere brutal and gratuitous slaughter of the unprepared, the defenceless, and the innocent; they are out of the pale of humanity, and the magnitude of their offence while they live will ever call aloud for retribution. With these the British Government can make no terms. To all those who have offered asylum to refugees, or others, being the murderers of Christian British subjects, and knowing them to have been such, or who have been leading movers against the authority of the British Government, and have persistently acted throughout this rebellion against the constituted paramount power of the land, the right honourable the Governor General can offer only terms of life; their punishment will be proportioned to the offences they have committed against the State. All those who shall surrender on or before the 30th day of December next shall have their lives guaranteed to them, after which date, should they continue in arms, or in opposition to the Government, their several cases shall be summarily dealt with by the authority in whose hands they may chance to fall, whether civil or military. To all others, seconds to principals, zemindars, sepoys, disbanded fugitives throughout the country, or any persons whatsoever in arms against the Government not acting on his own free will and authority, but aiding and abetting some principal, the right honourable the Governor General offers at once a general amnesty. Let them return to their homes and pursue their ordinary avocation, using their best endeavours to maintain peace and quiet. Their estates shall be guaranteed, and an act of oblivion thrown over the past. Should they, however still continue to bear arms against the British power, they must bear the consequences of their own acts. The time for clemency will have passed away.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Sir Colin Campbell has issued a complimentary order to the troops upon going into cantonments, and active operations of any magnitude are now suspended until the end of the rainy season. The Governor General, it is said, is about to leave Allahabad for Calcutta, with a view of returning to Europe. Among the officers killed at Gwalior, are Lieuts. Neave, 71st Highlanders; Ridley, 14th Light Dragoons;—and Rose, 25th Bombay Native Infantry. We (Bombay Times) regret to hear that Mr. H. Russell, the Times' special correspondent in India, who has arrived at Simla, is still a great sufferer, and not able to walk, from the severe injury sustained from the kick of his horse.

Brigham Young as an Orator.

A Utah correspondent of the Colonist writes:

On Sabbath morning, June 27, Brigham Young delivered a sermon to the Saints in the Bowery, at Provo. As he arose every eye was turned upon him at once, and the stillness of the grave pervaded the place.—The power which Brigham holds over his people is almost incomprehensible. They hang upon his lips with reverence and awe, catching and treasuring his lightest word as though it were a pearl of inestimable value. Having repeatedly witnessed evidences of this worship of the Prophet, I was dreadfully disappointed with his personal appearance. I had imagined a fine-looking man, tyler whose capabilities were dignity and power not enthroned; a man whose presence would inspire respect for his person, even in the stroller or unbeliever.—Nothing of the sort. He is a man a little above the medium height, somewhat inclined to corpulency, with a dull, bullet-looking sort of a head, sandy complexion, and an exceedingly unusual looking mouth. When walking in the wind he slightly wears a great pair of green goggles. With these upon his nose, we would naturally take him for a country schoolmaster. Who had watched the blank years enough to acquire a chronic book-sale. Without them he looks like a superannuated and [illegible] man of the world, who had seen [illegible] of worth and light. His [illegible]

Commercial.

Toronto Markets.

THURSDAY, Aug. 19.

WHEAT.—Prices have ruled very steadily throughout the week, at the advance noted in our last, and many have been very prepping to take advantage of them. In this vicinity, all the available threshing machines are in great requisition, and during the coming ten days the deliveries will largely increase. Prices range from $1 to $1 20 (5s to 6s) for good merchantable winter wheat. The samples of the new crop continue to be excellent, and but little of this year's growth has been sold below $1 10 (5s

Miscellaneous.

LETTER AND NOTE PAPERS.

CREAM and Blue Colors, ruled and plain.—Envelopes, all sizes and qualities to match. A very complete stock on hand. Merchants supplied on liberal terms.

SAWERS & MURRAY,
Stationers, &c., Peterboro'.

PETERBOROUGH LIVERY STABLE.

THE SUBSCRIBER begs to inform the public that he is always ready to furnish them with horses, sleighs, carriages, and every thing required at a Livery, on the shortest notice, and on reasonable terms. His horses are in fine condition, and everything about his establishment is in good order.

He very reluctantly has to withdraw from the long credit system, and begs all who may favor him with their patronage, to remember that he can only continue to accommodate the public by them, in turn, enabling him to keep up his business, that is, by ready pay.

THOS. EASTLAND.

Peterboro', Jan. 1st, 1858. } 1

UNION HOTEL.

PORT HOPE, ONT.

GEORGE ALLEN

RESPECTFULLY intimates to his friends and the public generally, that his establishment is still open for the reception of guests in his usual good style.

The house is new and beautifully situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, where travellers will find a quiet and desirable retreat.

☞A limited number of respectable BOARDERS can be accommodated.

Good Stables and Sheds

On the premises. An Ostler in attendance, who will give the best attention to horses entrusted to his care.

Peterborough, Oct. 20th 1857. 42.

NORTH AMERICAN HOTEL.

SHERBROOKE STREET, PETERBORO.

THE above Hotel having been recently repaired, painted, and newly fitted up, and being now entirely complete in all its appointments, is now opened for the reception of the travelling public.

The House is commodious, and neither pains nor expense will be spared to make it one of the best in the Province.

The Liquors are of the best brands, and the Larder will be constantly supplied with all the delicacies of the Season.

The Stables are commodious, and an attentive Ostler is always in attendance.

The proprietor pledges himself that every attention will be paid to the wants of his guests.

Post-Omnibusses will attend at the Cars and Boats to carry passengers to the Hotel free of charge.

RALPH FRANCIS,
Proprietor.

Cobourg, August, 1857. 35

MUSIC! MUSIC!!

The Musical Bequest, (English,
AT 4d PER SINGLE NUMBER.

THE subscribers have now in store the following pieces, to which they respectfully invite the attention of the Ladies of Peterborough.

QUADRILLES.

The Scotch Quadrilles.
Pirozolanni Quadrilles.
Les Chinois, (dogs) do.
The Lancers do.
The Don Cæsar De Bazan Quadrilles.
Belphegor do.
" British Navy do.
Les Chats, (cats) do.
Bonnie Dundee do.
Les Singes, (monkeys) do.
Lucrezia Borgia do.
Les Souris, (mice) do.
The Mesmerisers do.
The Irish do.
Peas in Boots do.
The Royal Lancers' do.
The Comic or Bartenbier's do.

Guy Fawkes' Polka.
The Laughing Eyes Polka.
Tonsil's do.
The Bobbin' Around do.
The Original do.
Ash Mamma do.
The Minnie do.
The Silverbelle do.

FANTASIAS.

Gazelle Impromptu.
The Bush shoon Troquair.
La Violette.
Les Cloches De Monastere.
Wave of Neddie'.
The Last Rose of Summer.
Fantasia on Bohemian Airs.
Pariant Pour La Syrie.
Musellader, Brilliant Fantasia.
Seats who has or Wallace bled.
Premier Nocturne.
L'Intellence Fantasia.
Grand Galop Brilanta.
Premiere Etude De Concert'.
Two Musical Sketches, Mendelssohn.

POPULAR SONGS,

WITH ACCOMPANIMENTS.

Why did my Sarah sell me.
Hey Johnny Cope and the Campbells 'are coming.
Roses and Eyes.
Blue Bayne.
Who wouldn fight for Charlie.
Tar River Deer.
Jessie Fella.
Rowing Ascend.
Bonnie Dundee.
Wandy is the Girl for me.
Lily White Wolves.
The Lass That's been a Sailor.
The Lords of the Forest.
Lots to say Boys.
The Village Bell Gen.
Gilded spade their dream.
The Caledonian National Hymn.
There was my Joy.
The Rose Gardens Rose.
Oh let me be Single, said he.
The Fluttering Heart.
Bonny Dundee.
My Mary Anne.
Ah Bonnie Dundee, unsheathe.
My Sweet Jo.
My Colleen Bawn.
Where's the Cabin Door agoing.

SECOND HAND PIANOS.

Two Square Piano, Rosewood Cases, Full Compass, Seven Octaves, Iron Frames, Overstrung Bass, Metallic Plates, Grand Action, Double Repeaters, Agraffe Treble, Ivory Keys, Ebony Sharps, Carved Legs and Lyre, Patent Pedals, Fine Tone, Elegant Finish, Warranted for Five Years, Price $300 each.

One Square Piano, Rosewood Case, Full Compass, Seven Octaves, Iron Frame, Overstrung Bass, Metallic Plates, Grand Action, Double Repeaters, Agraffe Treble, Ivory Keys, Ebony Sharps, Carved Legs and Lyre, Patent Pedals, Fine Tone, Elegant Finish, Warranted for Five Years, Price $300

1858

DOUGLAS PATENT

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND
Ornamental.----Bronzing,
&c., &c., &c.,
Neatly executed, on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the
EXAMINER
Burnham's Block,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1858.

Volume 8.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 34.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

Are Ten Shillings in Advance, for One Year; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING

Six Lines, and under, first insertion	£0	3	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	7½
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0	5	0
Each subsequent insertion	0	1	3
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0	0	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	1

☞ Advertisements without written instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognized.

Business Directory.

MR. DENNISTOUN,
BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

E. BURNHAM,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough, Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. H. J. Vinard, Esq.

W. B. RUBIDGE,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, &c. &c., &c.
Peterboro', March 10th, 1856.

DR. HOLYWELL,
HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Babidge's.
Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,
SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' West.

M. S. MACDOWELL,
SURGICAL AND MECHANICAL DENTIST.
OFFICE over A. W. Kempt's Drug Store, George Street, Peterboro.
May, 1856. 18

ALBRO & VINDIN,
Commission, Shipping, Forwarding
AND GENERAL AGENTS,
Lumber Merchants, &c.,
Port Hope, C. W.
Office—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets.

MESSRS. STEWART,
ARCHITECTS, Engineers, Land Surveyors, and Land Agents. Office, Mill Street, Port Hope.
GEO. A. STEWART.
CHAS. E. STEWART.
Port Hope, May 22, 1857. 21.

JOHN HAYDEN,
Importer of Nantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, Window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.
King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 35—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.
INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.
Peterboro', May 25th, 1857. 32

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD.
PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.
COMMUNICATION THROUGH THE POST OFFICE, Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S
FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.
Port Hope, Sept. 29, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,
Hunter Street, Peterborough, Canada West.
MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.
Peterboro', Sept. 2, 1856. 3

BOOKSELLERS AND STATIONERS.
SAWERS & MURRAY,
HAVE always on hand a complete assortment of Books in every department of Literature, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, &c.,
New Book and Stationery Store,
33 Burnham's Block, George-st.

A. MERCER & SONS,
TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.
Peterboro', June 9, 1856. 26—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.
A. MUNRO, Agent.
May, 1856. 19

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,
ARCHITECT, Civil Engineer, &c., Scott's Chambers, George Street.
Peterboro', July 23, 1853. 29

QUARRY TO LET,
Near Peterborough.
THE Subscriber offers for a term of years, the Quarry on the river side, above the residence of Charles Dunlop, Esq. The bridge in contemplation to cross the river will bring the Quarry within half a mile of the centre of the Town. The stone is of a superior quality, and is easily worked.
For Terms and other particulars, apply to Charles Dunlop, Dover, or
GEORGE A. STEWART,
Post Hope.
Peterborough, July 15, 1858. 27

Notice to the Asthmatical.
Asthmas Cured for $10!
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]

there is not incestuous, in, of course, only another way of stating the broad proposition that there can be no incest where there is no consanguinity. But this is merely a question of words. If one party uses the word "incest" only to signify connection with a blood relation, and the other uses it in a legal sense, as in the new Divorce Bill to signify connection between those who may not lawfully marry, it is evident that they will not agree on its meaning. But it requires but little reflection to perceive that the key of matrimonial prohibitions is to be found in the idea of the family or household. Those who are, by the necessities of universal society or the customs of any particular community, thrown into constant domestic intercourse with each other are, for the prevention of scandalous immorality and family dismord, forbidden from thinking of each other as a man and wife. Furthermore, the man's inevitable influence over his own or his wife's relatives is limited by laws which have had the sanction of society in every age. That the man may not marry some of his wife's kindred there seems no doubt. Either the partisans of the bill just rejected must declare that a man may marry his wife's mother and his wife's daughter or they must allow that he has not an absolute and indefeasible right to marry his wife's sister or neice. The more reasonable advocates of the measure have therefore given up the argument of right and other permission for these marriages on the ground of expediency. To expediency, then, we come at last, and on this narrow ground the contest must be waged. That Lord Bury's bill would not give permission to a woman to marry her deceased husband's brother shows how completely we are entitled to treat the matter as one of national convenience and English feeling.

It is fair, then, we believe, to say that the great bulk of the English people are satisfied with the settlement of this subject which was made 23 years since. Without inquiring into the practice of society under widely different conditions, we may urge that in this crowded country, with its great number of single women, and the universal habit of introducing unmarried sisters into the households of their brother-in-law, the permission to form such alliances would lead to evils far out-balancing the benefits to particular parties. It cannot be doubted that the feeling of women in this country is strongly against the bill, and certainly the question is one on which the feeling of women ought to be allowed some influence. When a wife comes to see a probable successor to herself in the sister or niece whom she now receives into her house it is plain that the family arrangements which are so generally throughout the country must receive an unpleasant modification. In the practice of English life the wife's sister, and generally the wife's relatives, have come to be regarded by a man as his own, and thus a chain of relationships has arisen productive of some happiness to the family generally, and of especial advantage to the children. Why should these family bonds be loosened by placing the wife's sister out of the pale of affinity, and thus making her residence under her brother-in-laws roof a source of suspicion, and after the wife's death almost an impossibility?—When we consider the social happiness and security which are enjoyed under the present system, we may well ask if they are to be sacrificed to the desire of a few who think they can find no one to marry but the sister of their former wives? At present no one man in ten thousand of the educated classes, of those who are acted upon by public opinion, ever thinks of such unions; but should they be legalised, there can be little doubt that they would become less uncommon, to the great scandal of the large majority of the people, and to the disruption of many ties. When these marriages were violable, the social discredit which attached to them acted as a sufficient check in the higher and middle classes, but should the law place them on an equality with others, their frequency would soon exercise an important action on society. A change in the law is asked for to gratify two classes—a small and a somewhat larger one The first consists of people of some station whose passions urge them to those alliances the other is made up of artizans in the manufacturing districts, among whom the bad habit of replacing one sister by another has grown up. We cannot think that the claims of either class are so strong as to necessitate a revolution on our matrimonial laws, for no one can doubt that the logical sequence of Lord Bury's bill is the recognition of the marriage by a widower or widow of all the wife's or husband's relatives whatever,—in short, the discontinuance of all restrictions on marriage on the grounds of affinity. If a man may marry his wife's sister as the best person to take care of his children, why not his wife's grand up daughter for the same purpose—why not even his wife's mother? Why may not a widow left with children marry her husbands brother, as their fittest guardian—why not her husband's grown-up son, and so on?—No; these who choose to form these alliances must be content to do so without the intervention of laws which are made for the general benefit of the English people; they must be content with whatever moral sanction is given by the legality of the marriage at its German or American place of celebration, and they must supply by testamentary dispositions the absence of the legitimacy which English law cannot afford to these offspring.

Highland Air.—From the report of the Royal Commission on the sanitary state of the army, it appears, by the evidence of Mr. Ranald Martin, the great authority on the subject, that all kinds of tropical invalids, whether suffering from fevers or from bowel complaints, thrive best in the bracing localities of the United Kingdom.—They recover most rapidly in the Highlands of Scotland during a summer and autumn residence, apparently from an union of the ozone and mountain air—an union which appears to be especially advantageous to sick persons from the tropics.

Daring Surgical Operation.—On Saturday, Professor Syme, at Edinburgh, effected a most wonderful cure for cancer, by cutting out the tongue of a man suffering from that dreadful and hitherto fatal malady. The patient was a native of Northumberland, of from 40 to 50 years of age, and of a hale and robust frame. He walked deliberately into the medical theatre, which was crowded with students. Having been seated in attendance, in pursuance with the arrangements was given out and all and two or three little preliminary work made in the course of the three-quarters of an hour during which the men were seated on the master's knee. The honourable gentleman, but-one by one (20 in number were filled, and we could but a tale [illegible] Professor Syme [illegible] the whole was [illegible] the [illegible] the [illegible] the

A Book every Bible Student ought to read.

The writer of which have lately appeared from time to time in the Free Press in regard to old Bibles, have had the effect to bring to our notice one of the rarest and most valuable specimens of Biblical literature in the world. This is a volume of six hundred pages containing the whole Bible in the Latin language. It belongs to the Rev. Dr. Duffield of this city. The book is quite entirely of vellum, and the printing is all done by hand with a pen and ink. Every letter is perfect in its shape, and cannot be distinguished by any imperfections in form from the printed letter of the present day. The shape of the letter is of course different from those now in use, but in no other respect can they be distinguished from printed matter. The immense amount of labour may be conceived from the fact that there are two columns on each page, each of which holds only about six letters of being so wide as the columns of this paper. They will average sixty lines to the column. The columns numbering 1,200 we have about 72,000 lines in the whole book. Nothing short of a life time could accomplish such a work.

The date of this book is A. D. 900. It was consequently made 560 years before printing was invented, and is 925 years old. There is probably nothing on this continent, in the shape of a book, equal to it in age. The vellum upon which it is printed is of the finest kind, and is made of the skin of young lambs and kids, dressed and rubbed with pumice stone until it is very thin. It is somewhat thicker than common paper, being a medium between that and the drawing paper now in use. The fine veins in the skin are distinctly visible in many places. A pencil mark was drawn by the operator to guide the construction of each line.—Many pages have those lines visible on the whole surface, no effort having been made to rub them off. Two lines running up and down divide the columns with mathematical accuracy. At the beginning of each chapter, highly colored ornamented letters are placed. Tehse are only marks of the division of chapters. There are no subdivisions into verses, the chapters running through in one paragraph to the end, and no descriptive headings.

This invaluable relic was presented to Dr. Duffield by Lewis Cass, Jun., our Minister Resident at Rome. He procured it of a Greek monk, who brought it from the Greek convent of St. Catherine, at the foot of Mount Sinai. Mr. Cass befriended this monk, who was in trouble; and he, in return, presented him with the volume which we have described. According to the story, it is the work of one of the ancient monk scribes in the convent above named. When it became known that Mr. Cass was parting with it, and that it was going out of the country, the round sum of $3,000 was offered him for it by the monks of the city of Rome. This was of course refused, for the pleasure of placing so inestimable a relic in the hands of one who can appreciate its value so well as our learned divine, Dr. Duffield. At the time of the late fire in the Doctor's house, this book was thrown into the street among others, and came very near being lost. It was picked up on the sidewalk by one who recognized it as one of Dr. Duffield's most valuable relics and preserved it.—Detroit Free Press.

In Sweden, a man who is seen four times drunk is deprived of a vote at election.

Charlestown as it at present stands, consists of 20 forts and 6 batteries.

Miscellaneous.

BOY WANTED.

A STEADY INTELLIGENT LAD about 14 or 15 years of age is wanted for the Printing business. Apply at the Examiner office.
Peterboro', Aug. 20, 1856.

READ! READ!!

SAM Slick's Nature and Human Nature.....50 cents.
Sam Slick's Sayings and Doings.....50 "
Sam Slick in England, or the Attaches.50 "
Mrs. Partington's Carpet Bag of Fun..50 "
Tom Cringles' Log.....75 "
The Cruise of the Midge.....75 "
Yankee Notions for September.....12½ "

And a host of other capital things at
SAWERS & MURRAY'S BOOK STORE.
Peterboro', August 26, 1856.

FOR SALE CHEAP

BOILED and Raw Linseed Oil, Spirits Turpentine, and Varnishes, together with an assortment of
PAINTS GROUND IN OIL,
Also Winter Mounted Sperm or Machinery Oil.
S. B. CURRY & Co.
Peterboro', Aug. 24, 1856. 33-6in

SCOTLAND'S AUTHORS.

Arnott's, Rev. Wm.—Lowe from Heaven for Life on Earth, or Illustrations of the Book of Proverbs.....$1,50
Burns's Desert of Sinai, 2 plates.....1,50
Do. Land of Promise, 2 plates.....1,25
Do. Night of Weeping.....0,38
Do. Morning of Joy.....0,38
Do. Story of Grace.....0,38
Do. Truth and Peace.....0,38
Do. Man, his Religion and his World..0,38
Do. Second Day.....0,38
Buxton's Four-Fold Bible.....0,38
Do. Creek in the Rock.....0,38
Brewster's—Here World's then One.....0,50
Bruce's Consolations, gilt 25 cts., plain..0,38
Chalmer's Dr., Illustrations.....1,25
Do. Moral Philosophy.....0,50
Do. Astronomical Discourses.....0,50
Dick, Dr.—Christian Philosopher.....1,00
Dunnett's—Tales of the Scottish Peasantry, Illustrated.....0,50
Do. Cottage Fireside, Illustrated.....0,50
Family Worship—A series of Prayers adapted to Domestic Worship, by one hundred and eighty Clergymen of Scotland, 450 pages.....5,00
Gilfillan's Martyrs, Heroes and Bards of the Scottish Covenanters.....0,38
Gaskell's, Dr., Gospel in Ezekiel.....1,00
Do. The City, its Sins and Sorrows.0,50
Hetherington's History of the Church of Scotland up to the disruption.....1,00
Hewit's Sketch Worship, or Historical account of those who suffered for the cause of them.....1,50
Hodge and Cunningham on Confession.....0,50
Hogg's Memories of Gentlemen.....1,00
Do. Boy in the Cloud, and the Flesh Renounced.....0,38
Do. Morning and Night Watches.....0,38
Do. Providence of St. Paul, with plates.1,00
Do. Works of Jesus.....0,38
Do. Book of Heaven.....0,38
Do. Book of Prayers.....0,38
Do. Family Worship, or Prayers for Domestic Worship.....0,38
Do. Pastoral Premises and Altar Stones.....0,38
Do. Memorials of Early Christian Life.....0,38
Hall Caine's Apostolical Succession.....0,38
Hall's Contrast between Calvinism and Wesleyanism.....1,25
Hamilton, Rev.—Lamb of the Fold and Covenant.....0,38
Do. Church in the Wilderness.....0,38
Do. Family Lectures, St. Joseph, Simon, and Gideon.....0,38
Do. Faith's Views of the Atonement.....0,38
Do. Memoir—The Spiritual Progress.....1,00
Do. Treasury of Scripture Knowledge.....2,50
Hewitson's Memoir of Thomas Peacock.....0,38
Whitty's Lives and Sayings of Eminent Men.....0,38

For Sale at the New Book Store of
SAWERS & MURRAY,
George St., Peterboro'.
August 5, 1856. 32

Miscellaneous.

LETTER AND NOTE PAPERS.

CREAM and Blue Colors, ruled and plain.—Envelopes, all sizes and qualities to match. A very complete stock on hand. Merchants supplied on liberal terms.
SAWERS & BURDON,
Stationers, &c., Peterboro'.

PETERBOROUGH LIVERY STABLE

THE SUBSCRIBER begs to inform the public that he is always ready to furnish them with horses, sleighs, carriages, and every thing required at a Livery, on the shortest notice, and on reasonable terms. His horses are in fine condition, and everything about his establishment is in good order.

He very cheerfully has to withdraw from the long credit system, and begs all who may favor him with their patronage, to remember that he can only continue to accommodate the public, by them, in turn, enabling him to keep up his business, that is, by ready pay.
THOS. EASTLAND.
Peterboro Livery Stables,
Hunter Street, Jan. 1st, 1856. } 1

UNION HOTEL.
Peterborough.

GEORGE ALLEN

RESPECTFULLY intimates to his friends and the public generally, that his establishment is still open for the reception of guests in his usual good style.

The house is new and beautifully situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, where travellers will find a quiet and desirable retreat.

☞A limited number of respectable BOARDERS can be accommodated.

Good Stabling and Sheds

On the premises. An Ostler in attendance, who will give the best attention to horses entrusted to his care.
Peterborough, Oct. 20th 1847. 42.

NORTH AMERICAN HOTEL,

HUNTER STREET, CORNER.

THE above Hotel having been recently repaired, painted, and newly fitted up, and being now entirely complete in all its appointments, is now opened for the reception of the travelling public.

The House is commodious, and neither pains nor expense will be spared to make it one of the best in the Province.

The Liquors are of the best brands, and the Larder will be constantly supplied with all the delicacies of the Season.

The Stables are commodious, and an attentive Ostler is always in attendance.

The proprietor pledges himself that every attention will be paid to the wants of his guests.

☞Omnibuses will attend at the Cars and Boats to carry passengers to the Hotel free of charge.

RALPH FRANCIS,
Proprietor.
Cobourg, August, 1857. 35

MUSIC! MUSIC!!

The Musical Bouquet, (English,
AT 44 PER SINGLE NUMBER.

THE subscribers have now in stock, the following pieces, to which they respectfully invite the attention of the Ladies of Peterborough.

QUADRILLES.

The Scotch Quadrilles.
Pianoforte Quadrilles.
Les Odeons, (dogs) do.
The Lancers do.
The Don Cossac De Beaux Quadrilles.
Belphegor do.
The British Navy do.
Les Chats, (cats) do.
Beauis Dundee do.
Les Singes, (monkeys) do.
Lecornah Burgis. do.
Les Souris, (mice) do.
The Masqueteers do.
The Irish do.
Pans in Boots do.
The Royal Lancers' do. do.
The Comic or Entertainer's do.

POLKAS.

Guy Fawkes' Polka.
The Laughing Eyes Polka.
Tomtit's do.
The Bobbin' Around do.
The Original do.
Ash Blossom do.
The Minnie do.
The Silverhair do.

FANTASIAS.

Gazelle Impromptu.
The Bush abuse Trequair.
La Violette.
Les Cloches Du Monastere.
We're a' Noddin'.
The Last Rose of Summer.
Fantasia on Bohemian Airs.
Fariant Pour La Syrie.
Misanthrope, Brilliant Fantasia.
Scenes who has ee' Wallace bled.
Premier Nocturne.
L'Italienne Fantasia.
Grand Galop Brilante.
Premiere Etude De Concert'.
Two Musical Sketches, Mendelssohn.

POPULAR SONGS,

WITH ACCOMPANIMENTS.

Why did my Sarah roll me.
Why Johnny Cope and the Campbells 'are coming.
Hearts and Eyes.
Ellen Bayne.
Wha wadna fecht for Charlie.
Ye Ever Dear.
Jessie Fields.
Bobbing Around.
Sound Robbers Sound.
Dinah is the Girl for me.
Lilly Willy Wolsen.
The Lass that loves a Sailor.
The Lords of the Forest.
Lots be gay Boys.
The Village Bell dan.
Come again dear dream.
The Sardinian National Hymn.
Then art my Joy.
The North Carolina Rose.
Up for the Night.
Oh tat me in the dark tomb lie.
The Fishermans.
The Cheerful Rose.
Strike Rope Strike.
My Mary Anne.
Be Early in the Morning.
The Sporting Wheel.
My Nannie O.
I Must Depart.
The Greenwood Bell.
My Gentle Dove.
There's Portions on before us Boys.

SACRED MELODIES.

WITH VARIATIONS FOR THE PIANOFORTE.

Floyd's German Hymn.
Vital Spark of Heavenly Flame.
Prayer from Rossini's "Moss in Egypt."
The Heavens are Telling.
Adams Prisbon.
Oxford Anthems, from Haydn.
I Know that my Redeemer Liveth.
Before Jehovahs Awful Throne.
Brock Lammastide.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Normal Inculcant, Popular Canadian.
Rondo in F flat.
Sanctissi Pianoforte.
Ah Le Morte, from Bellini.
Les Petits Bleu Velent.
L'Anne ah L'Anne.
Hercule Grand Galop.
Serva padrona Alra from Il Trovatore.
Le Bal masque.
Souvenir De Verserie Hompton.
Belong Tel Gen—L'Anne, &c.
Oh Were Poor Ye.
A la o Cano.
Bell Shelly Overture.
Bell Shelly Secondo.
Vega Vega, from Bellini.

Any piece not in stock, procured on shortest notice.

[illegible]

Insurances.

THE ÆTNA AND ÆTNA LIFE
ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....£200,000 STG.

£140,000 PAID UP.

HEAD OFFICE IN CANADA, KINGSTON, C.W.

CANADA BOARD OF DIRECTORS IN TORONTO:
The HON. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES MORTON, Esq., Kingston.
HOME DIRECTORS:
Chairman—H. U. STRANGE, Esq.
Vice Chairman—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.
James Maurice, Esq., | A. J. McDonell, Esq.
John Mowat, Esq., | James Hamet, Esq.
AUDITORS
WILLIAM BOWMAN, Esq., Kingston.
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.
Standing Counsel—A. J. MACDONELL, Esq.
Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.
LOCAL MANAGER:
W. CLUXTON, Peterboro'.
Peterboro', March 21, 1857. 12.

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON
Fire & Life Insurance Co.

CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.

Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.

RESPONSIBILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS UNLIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTREAL.

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on almost every description of property, at as reasonable rates as any other responsible office.

Losses paid without reference to the Old Country.

W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.
Peterboro.' March 24th, 1857. 12

WESTERN
Insurance Company.

CAPITAL £500,000.

Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF
FIRE & MARINE ASSURANCE
BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',
W. CLUXTON.
Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

UNITY FIRE AND UNITY GENERAL
INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS OF ENGLAND.

FOR every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.

CAPITAL £2,500,00 Sterling.

CHIEF OFFICE,—Unity Buildings, Canon St., London. Agent for Peterboro',
W. EASTLAND.
Peterboro', July, 1856.

Provincial Insurance Company.

OF TORONTO, C. W.

Subscribed Capital, $1,297,600, Paid up Capital, $400,000.

PRESIDENT, J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
VICE-PRESIDENT, Hon. J. H. CAMERON.

Directors.

Hon. W. B. ROBINSON, | F. F. WHITEHORNE, Esq.
GEO. DUGGAN, Jr., Esq. | GEO. CRAWFORD, Esq.
J. S. HOWARD, Esq. | JOHN CAMERON, Esq., M.P.
WM. I. PERRIN, Esq. | A. M. CLARKE, Esq., M.D.
Hon. J. H. CAMERON. | DUNCAN MCDONNELL, Esq.
CAPT. P. WALLACE.

MANAGER AND SECRETARY:
HON. J. LEANDER STARR.
ASSISTANT SECRETARY:
J. JOSEPH WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK.—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS:—Messrs. DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE:
TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurance business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as in any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Brokers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.
Toronto, April 30, 1856. 42

THE COLONIAL
Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

HEAD OFFICE—Edinburgh, Scotland, and MONTREAL, CANADA.

Proposals for assurance disposed of in Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Adviser for Peterboro,—Dr. Hadlib.

AGENT,
W. B. READ.
Peterboro', July 29th, 1857. 30

ALL ABOARD!

THE SUBSCRIBER respectfully begs leave to announce to the Public, that his House at Bridgenorth, (Mud Lake) is always supplied with the best accommodation and entertainment for travellers.

GOOD STABLING, DRIVING HOUSE, YARD ROOM AND STORAGE.

He also runs a STAGE to and from Peterboro' in connection with the House, leaving Mr. Cooper's Hotel, Peterboro', at half-past seven, A.M., to meet the boats at Bridgenorth, returning to Peterboro' on the arrival of the Boats, about 4 o'clock, P.M.

For freight or passage, enquire at McCooper's Hotel, Peterboro', or at the Edmondston House, Bridgenorth. Fare each way 1s. 10½d.

JOHN POPE.
Bridgenorth, June 19, 1856.

AMERICAN HOTEL.
PETERBORO',

THE undersigned, Proprietor, begs to intimate to his friends and the travelling public generally, that he has leased the above well known House, and has entirely refitted and refurnished the same throughout. He hopes by strict attention to business, and a thorough knowledge of the wants of customers, to merit and receive a continuance of the patronage so liberally extended to the late firm.

HENRY MORROW.
Peterboro', July 1st, 1856. 26

LOOK OUT!

SAVE YOUR MONEY

AND REMEMBER THIS,—

"ONE DOLLAR SAVED IS TWO EARNED."

IT is a certain fact which we offer to prove to any purchaser who would wish to visit our immense Stock of

Summer Ready-made Clothing,

That we will offer for sale, (to begin the 16th instant,) at 25 per cent. under the ordinary prices.

SMALL COATS, PANTS & VESTS, FOR BOYS,
Of all descriptions, may be had also.

The undersigned, in calling the public attention, will not fail to give

CHEAP BARGAINS,
To any who patronize them.

☞TERMS—STRICTLY CASH.☜
F. & L. LEMAY.
Peterborough, July 19, 1856. 27

ROOM PAPER, PAINTING, &c.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, at his shop on Brock Street, a large and varied assortment of Room Paper, among which will be found patterns of English, French and American manufacture, which he has just received, and which he will sell at the lowest possible price, for ready pay, or short approved credit.

He keeps constantly a number of hands, who can be employed in

PAPER HANGING!

And he recommends his Stock and Workmanship to the public.

The Papers range in price from 6d per Roll, up to 1/3 6d per roll, and from their great variety, he is sure the most fastidious will find their choice.

The Painting, Glazing and Plastering business carried on as usual.

ROBERT STEVENSON.
Brock Street, Peterboro, April 8, 1856. 41

The only Reliable Route to Peterborough
BY RAILWAY.

P. H. L. & B. RAILWAY,
AND
Peterborough Section.

NEW ARRANGEMENTS.

ON and after WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 13th 1856, Trains will run as follows:—

Leave Lindsay, 6 40 A. M., arrive at Port Hope, 10 10 A. M.
Leave Port Hope, 3 10 P. M., arrive at Lindsay, 6 40 P. M.
Leave Port Hope, 12 A. M., arrive at Peterborough, 2 P. M.
Leave Port Hope, 7 30 P. M., arrive at Peterborough, 9 30 P. M.
Leave Peterborough, 7 A. M., arrive at Port Hope, 9 10 A. M.
Leave Peterborough 2 30 P. M., arrive at Port Hope, 5 P. M.
Trains run by Port Hope time.

All the above Trains run in connection with Grand Trunk Railway, East and West. The splendid Steamer Rival Lind, also runs in connection with P. H. L. & B. Railway, leaving Port Hope on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, AT 7 A. M., arriving at Bluevale at 6 P. M. the same day; leaving Bluevale at 6 P. M. the same day evening, Tuesday and Saturday, arriving at Port Hope on Wednesday and Friday, at 11 A. M., connecting at Port Hope at 5 P. M. To ships for passengers to which Steamer leaves every day.

Port Hope, August 8th, 1856. 32

BOOTS & SHOES

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform the late customers of Mr. Thomas Russell, and the public in general, that they have entered into partnership, and have made arrangements with him to succeed him in his business. They desire to assure all who favor them with their custom, that their wants will be punctually attended to, and their work done in a manner that will ensure satisfaction. They will always be found ready to receive orders, and they hope by such assiduity in their business to receive a share of the public patronage.

All kinds of ready made work kept constantly on hand, and sold on the most reasonable terms for Cash or short approved credit.

Remember the old stand opposite the Eastern entrance to the Town Hall.

O'BRIEN & MAGRATH.
Peterboro', January 13th, 1856. 2

NOTICE

IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Partnership, lately subsisting between HENRY MORROW & ALEX. MORROW, both of the town of Peterboro', under the firm of Morrow & Brother, was this day dissolved by mutual consent

All debts owing to the said partners will be received by the said Henry Morrow and all debts due by the said firm will be paid by him.

HENRY MORROW,
ALEX. MORROW.
Peterboro', July 1st, 1856.

IN REFERENCE TO THE ABOVE, I would take the opportunity to inform my friends and the public that I will continue the business carried on by the firm in the same premises, and I hope by strict attention to business, and a thorough knowledge of the wants of my customers, to merit and receive a continuance of the patronage so liberally extended to the late firm.

HENRY MORROW.
Peterboro', July 1st, 1856. 26

NOTICE.

THE PARTNERSHIP existing between us, and known as the firm of Hurst & Deane is this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts due to, and by, the said firm, will be settled by Henry Deane, who will grant receipts for the same.

WALTER HURST,
HENRY DENNE.

The business will hereafter be carried on by W. Hurst, who respectfully solicits a share of the Public patronage.

Blythe Mills, Peterboro', } 28
July 26, 1856.

Farms, &c., For Sale.

PROPERTY IN OMEMEE FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, in the flourishing Village of Omemee, on the Port Hope & Lindsay Railroad, village Lot No. 10, north de of King street, containing 1 acre of land.—The buildings consist of a frame dwelling house and store, now occupied by Mr. John Henderson, a dwelling house adjoining, also a large workshop, and stabling, with every other convenience attached. The buildings are all new, and well put up.

If the above is not disposed of before 20th of OCTOBER, NEXT, it will then be sold to the highest bidder, by PUBLIC AUCTION.

The Terms are, £300 cash, or a bankable note; the remainder in instalments as may be agreed upon.

For further particulars apply to John Henderson, on the premises, or to the undersigned proprietor, in Omemee, or at the Examiner office, in Peterboro'.

There will be no difficulty as to title.
JOSHUA DAWSON.
19th Lot, 12th Concession, }
Otonabee, Aug. 12, 1856. } 31

FOR SALE.

ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND IN THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH.

THAT excellent farm of land, situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, being composed of the south parts of lots Nos. 27 and 28, in the 6th Concession of Smith, 6 miles from Peterborough, is offered for sale. The farm is thoroughly improved; has a first rate house, barn, &c., and a capital water frontage. The soil is equal to any in that section of country.

For particulars of price and terms apply to the proprietor in Peterborough.

A. SAWERS.
Smith, July 29, 1856.

FARM FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale East half 6 in 7th con. and East half of 7 in 7th con. Dummer, containing 100 acres, of which

80 ARE CLEARED

In good cultivation and well fenced; a good

CEDAR LOG HOUSE,

And two large barns, with other good out houses, and a superior well close at hand.

The property is three miles from

NORWOOD,

On an excellent road, and will be sold for £2 10s an acre. From one third to one half to be paid down, the payment of the balance as agreed upon.

HENRY GARDNER.
Dummer, July 16th 1857. 28.

VALUABLE FARM, SAW-MILL, FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber is desirous of selling his property, consisting of 250 acres, 50 of which are under cultivation, comprising a

FINE YOUNG GRAFTED ORCHARD.

There is an excellent DWELLING HOUSE, with Barns, Sheds, and all other necessary Out-Houses, a good water

SAW MILL,

in good running order. The premises consist of Lot No. 8, and south-east quarter of Lot No. 9, in the 11th Concession of the Township of Monaghan. The Farm is one of the finest in the County, and most favorably situated on the Gravel Road, two miles from Peterboro. The wood land consists of hardwood and cedar, and the whole lot is furnished with a good supply of running water.

For further particulars as to terms, &c., apply on the Premises to

W. W. BOSWELL,
Peterboro, Sept. 8, 1857. 36

TO LET.

TWO NEW BRICK STORES fronting on George Street, one for Dry Goods, the other for Groceries. Both finished in the newest and finest style of workmanship, and elegantly painted and varnished, equal to any in Town; the basement stories are well lighted and perfectly dry, and warranted against frost. Application to be made to the proprietor on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', Feb. 1st, 1856. 5

TO RENT.

That Splendid Three Story Brick Store, lately occupied by Mr. E. Peplow on Hunter Street.

Also 18 Town Lots for sale. Terms easy.

Apply to the Subscriber on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', June 2, 1856. 22

Hardware.

New Stove Warehouse !!!

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform their friends and the Public that they have entered into Partnership as Stove-Dealers, Tinsmiths, &c., and respectfully invite public inspection to their new styles of Stoves, consisting in part of

The Improved Bury,
The Star of the West,
The Wide World,
The Commodore,
The Improved Canadian Farmer,
The Buffalo,
The Black Rover,
The King Stove,
The Premium.

Besides a variety of Parlor and Plate Stoves.

They also receive orders for all kinds of

COPPER, SHEET-IRON AND TIN WORK.

Which their Patrons may depend upon getting done in a manner which will give the greatest satisfaction.

A large stock of TIN-WARE, STOVE-PIPES, and other such articles belonging to their business, kept constantly on hand.

Their premises are on George Street, lately occupied by Messrs. Harvey & Thomson, and next door to Messrs. Glover & Robinson

BIGELOW & ROBINSON.
Peterboro', October 27, 1857. 43

AXES BY STEAM

THE subscriber invites public attention to his Renowned facility of making the

SUPERIOR AXES

he has so long supplied to the community, and begs to assure his patrons that he will be unremitting in his efforts to retain for his work the good reputation it has hitherto enjoyed. He offers

Harrow and Broad Axes,
AND AN ASSORTMENT OF
EDGE TOOLS,

WHOLESALE and RETAIL, as cheap as they can be purchased here or in any other market, and of a quality that cannot be surpassed.

His premises are located on GEORGE ST., opposite the OLD BURYING GROUND, and to enable him to supply his manufactures in sufficient quantity, and on shorter notice, he has enlarged in steam power to his machinery.

☞Axes Jumped and Ground in quick order.
W. HOGGOCK.
Peterboro', Sept. 22, 1857.

NOTICE.

I Hereby Caution all persons trusting or harbouring my Wife Margaret Smith, who left my house on the 15th July, 1856, M Harvard, as I will not pay any debt or debts she may contract after this notice.

CHRISTOPHER SMITH.
Harvard, August 20, 1856. 32-3in

Miscellaneous.

HATS! HATS!

THE New York and Canadian Style of Hats is now ready for inspection. Also, a large assortment of Fur Hats and Cloth Caps, &c., &c.

The Trade Supplied on Usual.

A. SECOR,
Hatter, &c.
Cobourg, March 19, 1856. 13

CABINET ROOMS RE OPENED!

THE subscriber informs his old customers and the public generally, that he has recovered from the effects of the late fire, and has erected a new building on the old site which he has fitted up as a show room. He is daily receiving and making up a choice assortment of

FURNITURE & CABINET WARE,

Of every description, which, as usual, he offers at moderate prices.

He has removed his workshop to the building just erected by Mr. Monnck, where by the use of Steam and the most recent improvements in

LABOUR SAVING MACHINERY,

he is now prepared to manufacture for sale or to order every description of Furniture, at prices unprecedent in this Town.

W. Y. SWAYNE.
Peterboro', July 9th, 1857. 19.

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE LOT OF LAND, on the Gravel Road, about 2 miles from Peterborough, containing 26 acres, being part of the eastern portion of the North-East quarter of Lot No. 7, 11th Concession North Monaghan, on the West of John Greer's Tavern, and adjoining it. Apply to the Subscriber,

WILLIAM BELL.
Monaghan, Jan. 11, 1857. 2

HORSE SHOEING.

BARNARD McGARRITY and WILLIAM MILLER, beg to inform the public, that their horse shoeing prices are as follows:—

A full set, new 6s,
Each remove 6d.

their terms are, if not Cash, well-approved credit.
Peterborough, Jan. 1st, 1856. 1

PERIODICALS, MAGAZINES, &C.

THE subscribers receive every Saturday the Weekly Periodicals in the following list, and on the third Saturday of each month the Monthlies for the next ensuing month, all of which they are prepared to supply on the annexed terms.

Orders respectfully solicited.

PER YEAR.		PER No.
$3,25 ..	New York Ledger.....	0s. 3d.
2,50 ..	Harper's Weekly.....	0 2½
2,00 ..	Ballou's Pictorial.....	0 4
3,25 ..	Waverly Magazine.....	0 4
1,50 ..	Yankee Notions.....	0 1½
2,50 ..	New York Clipper.....	0 2½
2,50 ..	Flag of Our Union.....	0 2½
2,50 ..	Scottish Amer. Journal..	0 3
3,25 ..	Leslie's Illustrated.....	0 4
2,00 ..	Illustrated London News	1 0
5,50 ..	" " Times	0 7½
5,50 ..	Punch.....	0 7½
3,00 ..	Harper's Magazine.....	1 3
2,00 ..	Household Words.....	1 3
2,00 ..	Chamber's Journal.....	1 0
3,75 ..	Mrs. Stephen's Journal..	1 0
1,50 ..	Peterson's Journal.....	1 0
3,00 ..	Godey's Lady's Book....	1 3
2,00 ..	Atlantic Monthly.....	1 3
2,50 ..	New York Mercury.....	0 3
2,50 ..	" " Weekly.....	0 3
2,50 ..	Rural New Yorker.....	0 3

YEARLY SUBSCRIPTIONS
MUST BE STRICTLY
In Advance.
Back Nos. paid for when ordered.
SAWERS & MURRAY.
Peterboro', June 23, 1856. 2

LOOK HERE.

ONLY ONE QUARTER DOLLAR!
FOR THE
VICTORIA PAPETERIE,
OR
CHEAP PACKET OF WRITING MATERIALS
WHICH CONTAINS

12 Sheets fine ruled Letter paper usually sold for.....		7½d
12 Sheets fine ruled Note paper	"	4
12 Large sized Envelopes adhesive	"	3
12 Note " " "	"	2
3 Steel Pens.....		1
1 Holder.....		1
1 Pencil.....		1
1 Sheet Blotting paper.....		½
Making a total of.....		1s 9d.

NOW SOLD FOR
ONE QUARTER DOLLAR,
BY
SAWERS & MURRAY,
AT THE
NEW BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE,
Burnham's Block George-st., Peterborough.
June 22nd, 1856. 24

FRESH TEAS.

JUST RECEIVED from the Ship "Cumbala," direct from China, an assortment of

Hyson, Young Hyson.
Gunpowder, Twankay,

S. B. CURRY, & Co.
Peterboro', 29th June, 1856. 25

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

THE attention of Clergymen, Teachers, and others interested in Sunday Schools is respectfully invited to our large and varied assortment of

Reward Books, Tickets, Admission Cards, &c., &c., &c.,

Especially adapted for Sunday Schools, and which we will sell on the best possible terms.

A CALL SOLICITED,
SAWERS & MURRAY,
NEW BOOK AND STATIONARY STORE,
Burnham's Block, George Street Peterboro'.

DR. J. B. ALFORD'S
ECLECTIC, MEDICAL & SURGICAL
OFFICE,
Corner of Hunter and Aylmer Streets,
Near the Residence of James Hall, Esq.,
PETERBOROUGH.

DR. A. would announce to the citizens of Peterborough and vicinity, that he has located in the above place for the purpose of attending to the duties of his profession. His years of experience in the practice of Medicine, during many years in which, are such as to enable him to treat all diseases over competing, are invited to call, as his services will be rendered without a corresponding increase of recovery.

Residence—American Hotel.
Peterboro', Oct. 14, 1857. 41

FARM FOR SALE.

EAST Half Lot No. 14, in the 11th Concession of Asphodel, about three miles from the Village of Norwood. There has fifty acres cleared, and good fencing, and a never-failing spring of pure water upon the premises. The Land is of a superior quality.

For terms, &c., apply to James Hanley, Otonabee, or upon the premises, to

W. B. SCOTT.
Asphodel, 19th June, 1856. 3m

Miscellaneous.

BY-LAW, No.——

A By-Law to authorize the Warden of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria to issue Debentures for, and to raise by way of Loan the sum of Six Thousand Pounds for the purposes therein mentioned.

WHEREAS it is desirable to raise by loan on the credit of this Municipality the sum of Six Thousand Pounds for constructing and repairing the Roads and Bridges in the said United Counties.

And Whereas—It will require the sum of Seven Thousand Nine Hundred and Eighty Pounds to be raised by a special rate for the payment of such loan and interest for the space of ten years, to be computed from the first day of October next next ensuing until the 30th day of October A. D. One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Eight exclusive of the first and last days by annual amounts as follows—that is to say,

For the first year—Nine Hundred and Sixty Pounds.
For the second year—Nine Hundred and Twenty-four Pounds.
For the third year—Eight Hundred and Eighty-eight Pounds.
For the fourth year—Eight Hundred and Fifty-two Pounds.
For the fifth year—Eight Hundred and Sixteen Pounds.
For the sixth year—Seven Hundred and Eighty Pounds.
For the seventh year—Seven Hundred and Forty-four Pounds.
For the eighth year—Seven Hundred and Eight Pounds.
For the ninth year—Six Hundred and Seventy-two Pounds.
And for the tenth year the sum of Six Hundred and Thirty-two Pounds.

According to the one hundred and seventy-seventh clause of the Upper Canada Municipal Corporations Act of One Thousand Eight Hundred and Forty-nine.

And Whereas—The value of the whole rateable property of the said United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria according to the Assessment returns of the last financial year amounts to the sum of One Million Five Hundred and Seventy-eight Thousand Six Hundred and Ten Pounds.

And Whereas—It is necessary for the payment of the interest aforesaid and for the creation of a sinking fund for the payment of the principal of such loan to raise ten annual special rates in the pound upon the total value of the whole of the rateable property as hereafter described—that is to say,

For the year 1858—20 cts of a penny in the pound
" 1859—20 cts " "
" 1860—20 cts " "
" 1861—20 cts " "
" 1862—20 cts " "
" 1863—20 cts " "
" 1864—20 cts " "
" 1865—20 cts " "
" 1866—20 cts " "
" 1867—20 cts " "
" 1868—20 cts " "

Be it therefore enacted by the Municipal Council of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, that it shall and may be lawful for the Warden of the said United Counties to raise by way of loan and at a rate of interest not exceeding six per cent per annum from any person or persons, body corporate or politic, who may be willing to advance the same upon the credit of the Debentures hereafter mentioned, a sum of money not exceeding in the whole the sum of six thousand pounds, and cause the same to be paid into the hands of the Treasurer of the said United Counties.

And be it enacted that it shall and may be lawful for the Warden aforesaid to issue any number of Debentures for such sum or sums of money not exceeding in the whole the sum of six thousand pounds, to as many person or persons body corporate or politic as shall agree to advance on the credit of the said United Counties, such Debentures to be under the common seal of the said United Counties signed by the Warden and countersigned by the Treasurer thereof and made in such manner and form, and payable at such periods not exceeding ten years from and after the day when this By-law shall come into operation as said Warden shall see fit.

And be it enacted that the interest on such Debentures shall be payable half-yearly at the office of the Treasurer aforesaid and the sum of six hundred pounds being the tenth part of the said sum of six thousand pounds shall also be made payable yearly at the office of the said Treasurer.

And be it enacted that the special rate mentioned and above defined shall be raised, levied and collected over and above all other rates for the years above-mentioned upon all the rateable property, according to law as above specified and defined in the said United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria for the purpose of paying the said sum of six thousand pounds with interest thereon, and the proceeds of each special rate so to be raised, levied and collected, shall be applied solely to the payment and satisfaction of such Debentures and the interest thereof until the same are fully paid and satisfied.

And be it enacted that the said sum of six thousand pounds when so loaned by the issuing of said Debentures and paid by the said Warden into the hands of the said Treasurer shall be appropriate and as above mentioned.

And be it enacted that this By-law shall take effect and come into operation on the fifth day of October in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Fifty-eight.

NOTICE.

THE above is a true copy of a proposed By-Law to be taken into consideration by the Municipal Council of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria at the County Council Chamber in the Town of Peterborough on the 6th day of October, 1858, at the hour of 12 o'clock noon, at which time and place the members of the said Municipal Council are hereby required to attend for the purpose aforesaid.

WALTER SHERIDAN,
Counties Clerk.
County Clerk's Office,
Peterborough, July 3rd, 1858. } 36

RITCHIE'S HOTEL, ROBCAYGEON.

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND
Ornamental.----Bronzing,
&c., &c., &c.,
Neatly executed, on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the
EXAMINER STEAM POWER PRESS,
Burnham's Block,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1858.

Volume 8.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 35.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

Are Two Shillings in Advance, for One Year; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING

Six lines, and under, first insertion	0	3	0
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	7½
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0	5	0
Each subsequent insertion	0	1	0
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0	0	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	1

☞ Advertisements without written instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognized.

Business Directory.

HIGGINS, FITZGERALD & DENNAN,
PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, CIVIL ENGINEERS AND LAND AGENTS. Office in Hiott's Chambers, corner of George and Simcoe Streets, Toronto. F. & D. having lately surveyed the outlines of eight new Townships now included in this County will be happy to give any information to intending settlers. 24

MR. BENNETOUN,
BARRISTER-at-Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

H. BURNHAM,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery; &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. H. J. Vinnel, Esq.

W. B. BURIDGE,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, &c. &c., &c.
Peterboro', March 19th, 1856.

DR. HOLYWELL,
HAS removed his residence to Simcoe-street, two doors east of Captain Rubidge's. Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,
SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' West.

ALBRO & VINDIN,
Commission, Shipping, Forwarding
AND GENERAL AGENTS,
Lumber Merchants, &c.,
Port Hope, C. W.
Canada—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets.

MESSRS. STEWART,
ARCHITECTS, Engineers, Land Surveyors, and Land Agents. Office, Ellis Street, Port Hope.
GEO. A. STEWART.
CHAS. B. STEWART.
Port Hope, May 12, 1857. 21.

JOHN HAYDEN,
Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, Window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.
King-Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 26—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.
INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.
Peterboro', May 20th, 1857. 20

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD,
PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.
COMMUNICATIONS THROUGH THE POST OFFICE, Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S
FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, East of the bridge.
Port Hope, Sept. 29, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,
Hunter Street, Peterborough, Canada West.
MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.
Peterboro', Sept. 2, 1858. 3

BOOKSELLERS AND STATIONERS.
SAWERS & MURRAY,
HAVE always on hand a complete assortment of Books in every department of Literature; Sunday Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, &c., &c.
New Book and Stationery Store,
24 Burnham's Block, George-st.

A. MERCER & SONS,
TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.
Peterboro', June 6, 1858. 23—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.
A. MURRO, Agent.
May, 1858. 19

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,
ACTUARY, Civil Engineer, &c., Scotia Chambers, George Street.
Peterboro', July 1st, 1858. 30

QUARRY TO LET,
Near Peterborough.
THE Subscriber offers by a term of one year, a Quarry on the river Otonabee. The latter is close to Charles Douglas' grist mill being the [illegible] of the water at the [illegible] and is [illegible] to a superior colony, and [illegible] For terms and other particulars, apply to [illegible] STEWART, [illegible] Port Hope.
Peterboro', July [illegible], 1858. 27

Arrival of the "African."

New York, Sept. 2.

The Royal Mail Steamship Africa, from Liverpool 21st ult, arrived at 6 p. m.

GREAT BRITAIN.

THE FIRST PUBLISHED MESSAGE FROM AMERICA.

The announcement of the collision between the "Arabia and "Europa" reached England, per Atlantic Telegraph, on the 20th, and was the first published message sent east through the cable.

The fact that an enquiry could be sent from London, and a reply of some length be received from Newfoundland in 2½ hours, had been demonstrated in the matter of the collision between the "Arabia" and "Europa," and was received with great satisfaction.

A great county demonstration in honour of the successful laying of the cable, was being organized at Killarney, in the shape of a banquet to the Directors of the Company.

A project was on foot for running a railway to Valentia.

The ship "Essex", with 75,000 ounces of gold, had arrived from Melbourne.

Mr. Ten Broeck's American horse "Babylon" won the Chesterfield Handy Cup at York against a field of seven horses.

At a meeting of the Liverpool Workhouse Committee, it was reported that 35 destitute emigrants, whose passage had been paid from the United States, had been brought to the Liverpool Workhouse; one-fifth of the number were lunatics.

FRANCE.

Some Italians have been arrested at Cherbourg and Paris, and the police were exercising a marked surveillance at the station of the Great Western Railroad.

The government had been informed that Mazzini had left London.

From other parts of Europe there is nothing to add to the accounts, per "Propeller" at St. Johns, Newfoundland.

Commercial news has been mainly anticipated.

LATEST.

London, Saturday, Noon.

The bombardment of Jeddah has caused great consetins every where, but still remains uncommented on by the press.

CHINA.

The "Times" publishes the following despatch:—

Paris, Saturday, 9-30, p. m.

The "Moniteur" announces that a treaty has been concluded with China. Ports are thrown open. Christian religion is allowed to be freely practised. Foreign consuls and diplomatic agents are to be admitted to Pekin. An indemnity is paid to England and France.

LONDON MARKETS.

Saturday.—Sugar quiet. Coffee no sales. Tea not affected at present by China news.

Look Out for the Comet.

We learn by despatches received by the last steamer, that the great comet of Chaulan V, for which astronomers have been anxiously sweeping the heavens during several years past, has at length appeared again, after its protracted journey through the distant regions of space and will be very visible to the naked eye. It has been seen from the Paris observatory through its telescopes, and is pronounced by Arago to be none other than the long expected visitor. The first recorded observation of this comet was in the year 1264, and its disappearance took place on the 2nd of October of that year, which happened to be the day on which Pope Urban IV died. After an absence of 392 years, it again made its appearance 1656, and probably Paul Fabricius, astronomer to Charles V, who executed a map of its path, which was published in November in that year. The Emperor considered it as a special omen of his approaching death; but he lived for some years afterwards. It was then described as a great and brilliant star. Its coame was "through Virgo and Proton, past the pole of the heavens into Cephens Cassiopeia." The celebrated Dr. Halley calculated its elements more than a century afterwards, and several others after him. It was expected to return in 1848 or thereabouts, the orbits of comets being somewhat irregular, and their motions being much affected by the ponderous orbs of Jupiter and Saturn. It is probably owing to these retardations that it has been ten years longer on its way than was anticipated.

Mr. Lindsay.

Mr. Lindsay, in a speech to his constituents, at Tynemouth, compared the British and the French vessels which he saw at Cherbourg:—

"But when I looked over the ships and compared them with our own ships, I said to myself, 'You may bring your soldiers down to your dockyards, but before you can get them in England you must command the Channel.' (Hear.) And you must have a different class of ships to what you now have.' I thought it my duty to examine the ships. I never thought went on board the 'Napoleon,' but of a similar class. My feeling after the inspection of both vessels was that the French ships and the other ships that were destined by Frenchmen for the purpose of invading this country were 2,000 or 4,000 of the finest sailors in England—the magnificent ships belonging to that company who were good enough to give us a free passage to Cherbourg—when I thought these were not more than one-half of the ships owned by the same company—when I looked to the maritime habits of our people—when I looked at the fine class of fellows who commanded them, the stalwart forms of the noblemen and gentlemen of England at the helm, and recollected that these gentlemen could fight in the hour of need as well as their sailors—when I looked at the skill and knowledge of the people to which my esteemed friend referred this morning, I said to myself, 'Well, well, we have nothing to fear from France, even though she have her mighty dockyards and stupendous arsenals opposed to us.'"

Mr. Roebuck, in an address delivered on the same occasion, described what he saw at Cherbourg:

"Her Majesty entered that harbor in the beautiful yacht 'Victoria,' followed by that magnificent vessel, the 'Royal Albert,' that splendid three-decker the 'Ranown,' and four of the handsomest frigates I ever set my eyes upon, and when the forts on every side began to fire their salvos and thunder forth their salutes, the sight was a very imposing one. I saw there countless guns upon innumerable forts; but I saw no industry. (Hear, hear.) It was a sham from beginning to end. There was no life in it. They may be powerful for defence; they are nothing for aggression. (Hear, hear.) So far as defence went for us they were nothing, for we do not intend to attack them. (Laughter and applause.) But let them attack us, and they will find the difference. (Hear, hear.) The sea-sick landsman (Mr. Roebuck) saw that, (laughter and applause;) and the sailor (Mr. Lindsay) verifies the statement. (Applause.) He (Mr. Lindsay) went there, moving about the deck as if the deck were in motion; I, with my head upon my pillow, thinking when I should arrive at Cherbourg. (Laughter.) We did arrive at last, but when we got there I found my friend standing on deck, crossing his arms, with furrowed brow, and looking at those mighty forts. He went away and came back, and I thought his heart was in his mouth. (Laughter.) I said, 'Why, Lindsay, what have you seen?' He says, 'I have seen something that has terribly astounded me.' I saw him next morning, after he had gone to the 'Royal Albert,' and then he was himself again—the man's heart was in its right place—(laughter)—he was no longer afraid. I, as a poor landsman, thought, 'what are these people to do?—There is a mighty force of forts; there are a sight of poor ships. Even for a landsman I discovered that. I think my learned friend will signify the same; they were poor ships. And then I saw, scattered over that mighty basin, the flag of England upon every mast—(applause)—and I saw yachts—three, five, or six, or seven thousand men. I went on shore, and what did I see there? I saw men in peg-top trousers—(laughter)—they put me very much in mind of Cochin China fowls. (Loud laughter.) I saw priests and women, and very ugly women too. (Laughter.) Well, then, I said to myself, is there a man amongst them who dare say his soul is his own? A man next door to me said, 'Take care and mind what you are about; the French colonels will be after you. You are not in England now.' 'No,' I said, 'I know that perfectly well, but still I will speak out what I think.' He said, 'You will do it at your own risk,' and I did it at my own risk. (Laughter.) But I was not in England, and recollect there is a great difference between being able to say that your soul is your own and not daring to speak above your breath—(Hear, hear)—and I will never believe till I see it—and I don't think I shall see it in this world—that a set of intelligent, free-spoken, free-hearted, strong-armed, and hard-fisted men will succumb to any terror from abroad. (Applause.) My honourable friend evidently went with the foregone conclusion in his mind, and I had a foregone conclusion in my mind. I know my hon. friend objects to politics, and I went upon a word—'Alliance.' And when I say that, understand me, I am not talking politics immediately. (Loud laughter.) But this I will say, that England has been insulted; England' Parliament vindicated her; and we—we had Cherbourg fetes in consequence. (Laughter.) I am perfectly willing to acknowledge all that, but with my honourable friend I cannot help feeling and thinking that there is something behind. What is all this for? If I go down to Liverpool, I see dock after dock full of merchantmen; I see them coming in from all parts floating into that basin in every breath of heaven, loaded to the very brim with the world's produce. That is England. But at Cherbourg I saw nothing of the sort. I saw a solitary 90-gun ship ready to be launched upon Sunday—(laughter)—and that was France. (Laughter.) That is the difference between England and France. Depend upon it we that are here need not be alarmed by anything that my friend has seen—[Mr. Lindsay: 'hear, hear.']—while we have institutions like the present. And now, I come to the moral of my tale. Depend upon it, that while you have clever fighting heads—you will need to fear no danger that the world affords—(loud cheers)—let him come from France or Austria, or Naples. The free soil of England, washed by the free waves that surround her, guarded by her sailors, is free against the world as ever. (Cheers.) I am but a poor creature, yet I could turn out to-morrow.—(Laughter and cheers.) Depend upon it, every man, woman, and child amongst us [illegible] your name. (Cheers.) You are in England, you stand at the head of civilization, and you need not be alarmed at any Cherbourg. You are England against the world in arms." (Loud cheers.)

Ten Thousand Dollars in the Suds.

AN AMUSING INCIDENT.

An ex-banker of this city, who "went under" during the late financial crisis, and was compelled by "outside pressure" to "shut up shop," and endeavour to realize assets simply sufficient to cover all his liabilities, was thrown into a wild state of excitement on Tuesday last. He was in fact in a condition of mind bordering upon phrenzy. It seems that he has a queer fashion of having his breeches washed. He sends them out to a laundress. Last Thursday the ex-bankers unwhisperables went out as usual—one pair at least—but the washerwoman, from some unexplained cause was dilatory and did not put the bifurcates into the suds as promptly as she was wont. Saturday came and she concluded to lay the job over till the first of the week. Monday she was interrupted, and the unmentionables were again put aside until Tuesday. That morning she resolved to dispose of the contract, and accordingly she prepared the instruments. She got the water hot, the suds made, and held the "breeks" by the waistband, and was about to subject them to the hydropathic treatment, when her hand was suddenly arrested and her heart sent struggling into her throat by a furious rapping at the door.

She hesitated, stood aghast between terror and her washtub, but before she had time to collect her faculties her patron stood before her, his features distorted, his eyes blazing with frantic excitement. Surveying her an instant, he screamed rather than interrogated "have you—have you—washed my breeches? You're ruined me, ruined me; have you washed my"—but suddenly catching a glimpse of the garment still clutched by the suspended hand of the terrified laundress, he leaped forward with nervous energy, and snatched them from her, he ran his own hand hastily along the waistband until he met with something that seemed to satisfy his desires, and sinking into a chair he fairly went into hysterics.

By this time the poor woman found voice and asked him "Why, Mr. ——, what is the matter?" "Oh woman, woman," he sobbed, "what an escape! There are ten thousand dollars in these breeches.—Where's your scissors." The seam of the waistband was ripped open in an instant, and before her astonished gaze she beheld layers of bank bills—of what value she knew not, save that he repeated, "ten thousand dollars, ten thousand dollars! What an escape! What an escape!"

This we are solemnly assured is a veritable incident. The laundress who so narrowly escaped "biling" up $10,000 is an honest German woman, who resides in Mill Street, near Third. We had not time last night to satisfy ourselves respecting all the facts by obtaining an interview with the washerwoman, and per-adventure, should there be something unexplained, we forbear publishing the name of the excited but now happy hero of the story.—Cin. Com.

Canadian Affairs in England.

(From the London Globe.)

Although we now hear little of Canadian politics, the time is not far distant when we heard more than was good for digestion.—There are some signs of a revival of unpleasant news in consequence of the want of cordial feeling between the two United Provinces, and the discussions in the selection of Government. The long smouldering jealously between French Canada and English Canada has recently broken out in the House of Assembly, when Mr. Lyon Mackenzie, a rebellious memory, appeared as the champion of dissision. He asked the House to affirm the simple proposition—"ring it probably as a feeler, that the political union occasioned great discontent among her Majesty's subjects. No doubt can be entertained that great discontent exists. If the majority on occasions of moment is composed of preponderance of members from one Province the other cries out. Some wiseacres have gone the length of proposing that there shall be a "double majority," in other words, that the majority shall be composed of a preponderance of members from the Upper and Lower constituencies; under which system, we might confidently predict that legislation, except on trivial matters, would be simply impossible. Happily there was sufficient common sense in the Assembly to scout so absurd a solution of the difficulty. Nor would anything have been gained by the affirmation of Mr. Mackenzie's motion.—No vote had been taken on it, because amendments were put in its way. But a vote was taken on one of these amendments which shows an inclination to drift towards dissolution. Mr. Gowan moved that it would be unwise to weaken the Union, but that it would be wise to cement the ties by mutual forbearance and good-will. This sensible attempt at peace-making was defeated by a majority of thirty-three. We regret that it was so. The trite maxim that union is power is as true in Canada as in Great Britain. To use the words of Mr. Harwood, a gentleman connected with both Provinces, "they have made immense progress in material wealth since the Union, and their best interests would be injured by a severance." Nothing would be gained by a disruption beyond the gratification of, what we are sorry to call sectional prids. The Roman Catholics in justice of the Protestant, and the latter relieve the feeling with interest. The English colonist is jealous of the French colonist. These feelings are natural; but he will be a real [illegible] who endeavours to [illegible] them. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] bushels per acre of white wheat, and 14½ bushels of spring wheat,—showing a deficiency of about 40 per cent in winter wheat, and 10 per cent in spring wheat. A fact worth noting is, that the spring wheat called Fife or Glasgow wheat, has entirely escaped injury from rust; and also that all spring wheat sown after the 20th of May, has escaped injury from the midge (or wheat fly,) being too late for the fly, which deposits its ova from the 20th June to the middle of July.—Wheat thus late sown is not forward enough to receive the deposit. A species of wheat, called the Mediterranean wheat, is also said to be free from the ravages of the midge, but does not appear to be highly approved in other respects. The spring wheat called club-wheat is universally condemned, as being subject to rust.

Never before in the history of Canada, has so much injury been done by rust as this year. Many of these reports show that it arises generally, if not always, from want of proper drainage, and of early sowing of early kinds of wheat on well shaped ridges, well water-furrowed, which are a great aid in the way of drainage. It may be, that the influences of hot, damp, close, muggy weather after a drought, are less sudden on well-drained, deeply ploughed, well-cultivated land; and these sudden influences are what cause rust, by the greatly increased sap bursting the straw and flowing downwards, instead of rising to nourish the ear. This is more probably the cause of rust than fungi, or insects, to which many attribute this most destructive disease; the straw of rusted wheat will, on examination, be found to be cracked longitudinally.—With regard to the midge, all reports seem to concur that early sowage of early seed on early land, made early by good drainage and well shaped ridges, is the best preventative; but, under present circumstances, I think a cautious farmer would do well to sow one half of his land in winter wheat, and the other half in spring wheat, using the above precaution of good draining, &c.

A Mr. Alexander Mackenzie, a practical farmer has written a valuable little pamphlet, showing from repeated experiments that a dressing of lime spread on the land soon after the grub of the midge has fallen from the wheat ear, and whilst in a soft state is a complete remedy, destroying the grub entirely. This little pamphlet is well deserving the attention of farmers, as lime can be easily procured throughout almost all of Upper Canada, and can be burned without any very great expense, and in addition to killing the grub, will add much to the fertility of the soil. A Mr. Swan, the owner of the farm to which was awarded the 1st prize in Cayuga County, New York, as being the best managed farm, states that he lessened the destructiveness of the midge very materially by sowing a barrel of salt to the acre after the wheat had harrowed.

With regard to other green crops, the reports show an average yield about the same as in other years: rye, 19½ bushels per acre; barley, 19; oats, 31½; Indian Corn, 36½; peas, 21½; potatoes, 124½.—Of these last there are fifteen returns which state that they were free from rot up to the 30th August last, and eight which state that the rot had commenced; the other twelve give no report as to rot, which no doubt they would have done had it been prevalent. There is certainly a great decrease in the extent and destructiveness of this disease, and it is hoped the root will hereafter be more generally cultivated.—The prevalence of the rot has hitherto deterred many from planting.

I may add that there are other counties which have not yet reported, but which are said to be very seriously affected by midge, rust and blight,—viz., Hastings, Prince Edward, Middlesex, Lennox, Addington, &c. The new lands, however, north of Hastings, on the Free Grant Road, are entirely free from midge, and nearly so from rust.

Yours truly,
WILLIAM HUTTON,
Secretary.

The Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada.

The following official circular has been issued dated the 18th of August:—

"London directors of the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada, in submitting the following statement to the shareholders, will not disguise their disappointment at the falling off of the traffic during the last few months, and they have taken great pains to ascertain the reason of it. Their information leads them to think that it may be traced to two causes; the one, they trust, only temporary in its operation and effects—viz, the unparalleled stagnation of trade all over the American continent, diminishing the traffic of many railways fully 50 per cent. The other cause, they cannot hope to see entirely removed until the completion of the Victoria Bridge, and the carrying out the grand scheme of a continuous line of railway, available at all seasons of the year, for above 1,000 miles. To secure this important object at the earliest possible period, the directors have entered into an arrangement with Messrs. Peto, Brassey and Betts, under which the works on the bridge will be so accelerated as to give every hope of its being opened for traffic in December, 1859, being eighteen months earlier than the period named in the original contract. The extension from St. Mary's to London will be finished this autumn, and the contractors are proceeding with energy in the construction of the line between Stratford and Sarnia, so that it may be open for traffic in September of the next year. The directors have been also strongly impressed with the great importance of advancing the terminus in Detroit, a distance of about 95 miles from Port Huron, by which the Grand Trunk Railway will be placed in direct and close connexion with the Michigan Central, the Michigan Southern, the Detroit and Milwaukee, and the other important railways, which convey the immense traffic of the western regions between Chicago and the Atlantic seaboard. The premium of local traffic on this short extension is, however, so great, and the singular advantages of its position so manifest, as to ensure its completion at an early period on its own merits and as a separate undertaking. It will not therefore be included in the present financial arrangements. To effect this object on which the final success of this great enterprise depends, and to secure the prosecution of the works with the necessary vigour, the directors have prepared the enclosed plan, which they trust will meet with the support of the shareholders. It is proposed that the existing debt to be paid off by the new issue of shares, and the remaining portion of the capital be subscribed for by the present shareholders. To effect this object it is proposed that the present capital of £2,000,000 sterling be increased by the creation of 40,000 new shares of £25 each, making the capital £3,000,000 sterling, to be subscribed for and paid up as follows, viz: £20 on Monday, the 20th September, 1858; £20 on Saturday, the 20th of November, 1858; £20 on Thursday, the 20th of January, 1859; £20 on Thursday the 31st of March, 1859; and so in like proportion for the debenture certificates. Upon the bankers' receipt for the first instalment being sent to the London office of the Grand Trunk Company, together with the certificates for amount of consolidated stock to be cancelled, the proportion of 7 per cent debenture capital to which the shareholder is entitled will be remitted to him, together with a certificate, upon which the further instalments are to be paid. A rebate of five per cent will be paid upon all instalments paid in advance.—By order of the London directors.

(Signed) C. P. RONEY,
Secretary.

The Telegraph Cable and its Probable Results.

From the Illustrated London News, August 14.

The main benefits will fall to the lot of Great Britain and America. These nations are almost the sole depositaries of human freedom. They represent the liberty, the intelligence, and the enterprise of our time. Closely united by blood, language, and education, they will become still more closely by interest and friendship, now that they can communicate their thoughts, wants and wishes by means of electricity. Between them will be formed an alliance the most beneficial possible in the present confused and imperfect relations of humanity; and the probability of war will be as far removed into the future as the probability of hostile collision between our globe and any wandering comet of which astronomers may have cognisance.

But if such are likely to be the international results, whilst not one or two wires, but twenty, are throbbing under the waves of the ocean with the messages of trade, diplomacy, and affection, what are to be the results to the British Empire itself?—Distance is practically annihilated between the component parts of that huge dominion; and it will be for our statesmen and leading minds to consider whether that dominion "on which the sun never sets" shall not become actually, as well as theoretically, one. In the early days of our Parliamentary and Constitutional system, and even within the memory of living men, it took as long a time for the member for Caithness or Rossshire to travel from his county town to Westminster, as it would now take him to travel from Quebec or Montreal to Liverpool and London. Great Britain is but small compared with the United States; but the magnitude of the British Empire dwarfs even the gigantic realm of our transatlantic brother. And will not the outlaying portions of that dominion, as soon as they are enabled to hold instantaneous communication with Downing-street, ask to be included in the empire as true component parts, and not as remote colonies, possessions and dependencies? And, while the Parliament of Great Britain shall still continue to legislate for the present isles, will it not at some future time become desirable and necessary that another and a larger Parliament or Congress of the whole Monarchy, inclusive of Canada on the one side, and of India on the other—shall assemble at London or elsewhere to debate Imperial questions in the presence of delegates and members duly chosen and appointed by the people of those regions? Already the Provinces of British America are taking counsel on the means of forming themselves into a federal union under the British Crown, and linking themselves together by railways and lines of telegraph, as the first step towards that consolidation and "solidarity" which they feel to be essential to their prosperity and good government. The more the uses of the transatlantic telegraph are familiarized to Englishmen in distant lands, the more intimate will become the union of the empire, until Canada, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, or even British Columbia—the last-born child of a fruitful mother—shall become to the England of the nineteenth century what Cumberland, Sutherlandshire and Donegal were in the sixteenth and the seventeenth. Distance is no longer any obstacle to the fulfilment of such projects; and the legislative unity of the British Empire, accomplished by the agencies of a General Federal Congress, would be more valuable as a means of defence against foreign aggression than an army larger than any possessed by the most powerful despots of Europe, or any three of them. There have been coalitions against England before now. There may be such coalitions again; but even the invasion of the sacred soil of the motherland and its occupation by a successful enemy—were such a catastrophe possible—would not be a fatal blow to British power so united, and binding England and its colonies together by such strong ties as those of common interest and common responsibility. The electric telegraph is of much to them that it will naturally suggest other great ideas. The demand for Parliamentary reform with which any Ministry will have to deal, the question of Imperial Federation, perhaps even plans hereafter to a greater degree for the unity of the British Empire. Of course Red-tape and the obstructive pride will play its opposing part in these great questions; but the time is coming when the Queen's Majesty will be empowered to summon to her Council for the United Empire representatives from every part of her dominions, as she now summons to her Council for the United Kingdom the Lords and Commons of England, Scotland and Ireland. Such a change would be the natural development of the principle of representation, and would be hailed by the colonies as a boon. Whether it will be so hailed by the people of England is another question. Such a change would be a great constitutional change, and would require the most careful consideration. But it is certain that the electric telegraph will bring the question before the people, and that it will be discussed in every village throughout the land. Whether it will be carried into effect is another question same way. They not only swam with ease, but, in this particular as in others, they seemed to outdo the horses and mules. They appear to be the only remaining test needed to establish the character of the camel as a beast of burden, specially suited for these regions. Lieutenant Beale had started with the determination that the experiment should be no partial one, and he made it a point to subject his camels to trials which no other animal could stand. As to the results, he thus expresses himself:

'In our lateral explorations they have carried, water sometimes for more than a week, for the mules used by the men—themselves never receiving a mouthful to eat of them; they have traversed patiently with heavy packs, on these explorations, countries covered with the sharpest volcanic rock, and got their feet to this hour have evinced no symptom of tenderness or injury; with heavy packs they have crossed mountains, ascended and descended precipitous places where no unladen mule found it difficult to pass, even with the assistance of the rider dismounted, and carefully picking its way. I think it would be within bounds to say that in these various lateral explorations, they have traversed nearly double the distance passed over by our mules and waggons.

'I am going home with all the prejudice attached to doubtful experiments, and with many to our camp opposed to their use, and looking forward confidently to their failure I believe, at this time, I may speak for every man in our party, when I say there is not one of them who would prefer the most indifferent of our camels to four of our best mules, and I look forward hopefully to the time when they will be in general use in all parts of our country.'

The country for eighty miles west of the Colorado, continues a sandy desert, with but little water or grass. At that distance, the expedition struck the Mojave, which were begun to have some water in its bed. Crossing the San Bernardino mountain by the Cajo Pass, they reached Los Angles on the 20th of November. This route is far preferable in every respect to that by the Gila, hitherto followed. It is especially adapted for the sheep-trade—sheep being the chief staple of New Mexico—and is likely to lead to increase trade and intercourse between New Mexico and California.

What particularly adapts the camel for use in those regions is not merely its capacity to endure fatigue and long want of water, but the very coarse and scanty food with which it is content. These animals eat as they go along anything of a vegetable nature they find in their path, bending their long necks and throwing their heads into every narrow crevice of the rocks where grows a cactus or a clump of grass, or cropping the leaves from the branches of trees without in the least slackening their progress. In this respect, as in many others, they have a great advantage over mules or horses, which require food as regularly as man himself. According to still later accounts, the camels were realising the best expectations which have been formed respecting them; and we can fancy that their now thoroughly proved adaptability to exploratory purposes would suggest their being employed in expeditions to the interior of the Australian continent.

Lamartine.

We are happy to find that the "Lamartine Tribute" increases apace in England. At least £1600 sterling has been subscribed in London alone. A Paris correspondent of the Newcastle Northern Times then writes regarding the really great man himself:—

"Most of readers must have heard or read of the poet Alphonse de Lamartine, and of his poverty, and how he will be obliged to sell his paternal acres to satisfy his creditors, unless the subscription now set on foot to redeem them is successful. They may also remember an article in the Times appealing on his behalf to British sympathy, an article which stirred the bleak bile of the ultramontane Univers, and they may have seen a keen attack on the poet in the columns of the Saturday Review, saying that a national subscription is not honourable, that he is not worthy of it, because he brought about the revolution of 1848, and that he has dissipated a large fortune inherited from his ancestors, or gained by his literary labours. To these accusations Lamartine has made a long answer. He considers that a public subscription is no disgrace, and that it honours alike the givers and the receiver, 'otherwise the patriot Dupont de l'Eure, Lafitte, General Foy, Lafayette, and the Count de Chambord would never have accepted of such offerings.' If citizens and even princes have accepted of such free will offerings, can it be ignominious in his case? He demands 'Do you know what is ignominious in all this? It is to have the matter discussed. I accept that ignominy, I drink it like water, because what is bitter-sweet to me will be sweet to others. When sorrow is a sacrifice it brings its own reward.' He defends himself next against the accusation of having brought about the revolution of '48. 'History and the Moniteur will say that I did not cause the revolution, but, once the revolution was accomplished, I made the Republic, which restrained, softened, and moderated the revolution.' Then as to his extravagance and his debts, he observes—'Leave me my debts (by paralysing the efforts of his friends), but leave me also my character; I have served without hire! As to the pretended dilapidation of my fortune, and my unlimited extravagance, come to my house and judge; I inhabit a small house at the bottom of a court, in an obscure quarter (with a merchant of the Champs Elysées,) and very lately to the charitable Fastberg St. Honore.' Good poet, we made a visit to your small house, and saw you vending books there like an honest man, not feeling disgrace in turning cheapen in your own right. I live on rent of a mountain of the poet's property in the evening a few friends still faithful to me in my advance days. I steal from these some hours of work. I have sold my books—to which I was passionately attached, as the companions of my youth and my travels—keeping only two or three dogs, whose tender fidelity seems a protest against the faithlessness of man. Such has been my life in Paris during two years. In the country I lead a similar existence under wire roofs. A student at night—a peasant, or publicist if you will, during the day—encouraged by a handful of honest and faithful labourers, pushing by my pen-pile in good years, close to my pen-pile in bad years, close to my pen-pile in four hundred francs, bum and gossip old in my house, certain, without regret when necessary, an effort against fortune to be required by me will be made. Only I beg you to believe that I am not ignominious in my own eyes, and that I do not blush for my poverty when I look at those who have dishonoured their fortune."

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Stolen—Thos. Elliot.
The Colonist.
Valuable Books—Sawers & Murray.
Farm for Sale—Patrick Wood.

The Examiner.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 9, 1858.

At the Bottom.

When a public journalist descends to the cool and deliberate penning and publishing of falsehoods in order to pander to the fanaticism of a party, he is truly at the bottom of the scale of respectability, and he and his organ are alike contemptible in the eyes of an intelligent community. Self-respect must surely be gone from the individual who parades as his motto "Measures, not Men," and yet under this sign-board publishes such a tissue of falsehoods and ridiculous mimicry of satire as appeared in last week's Review as a review of the previous Saturday evening's rejoicings over the Toronto Victory. Ineffably silly and servile to his gracious patrons, as is always the flunkeyism of the Review, we hardly expected to find such a devotion to his party as is manifested by the account which the editor chose to lay before his readers of the proceedings referred to. Some of his readers were no doubt highly delighted with the absurdities which he spread before them, and relished the dish remarkably well; others—and these are the greater proportion,—are properly disgusted with the puppyism of this impertinent cur, who will snarl and bite at everybody and everything, that will not servilely lick the dust from off the feet of his masters as he himself is ever ready and willing to do. If the editor of the Review cannot serve his condescending patrons otherwise than by malignant falsehoods indulged in at the expense of the community he claims to be a member of, he will quickly find out the true position he occupies and be ignominiously scouted from the society he disgraces by his presence. Let him know this, there is a difference between satire and falsehood, and the people of Peterboro' can distinguish it, and they know also, in what light to view the individual who will wilfully misrepresent them; he is at the bottom, let him take care he is not pitched out altogether.

Ashburnham.

Our worthy neighbors of Peterboro' East have at last accomplished their cherished desire of being incorporated under the above cognomen. On receipt of the intelligence on Monday evening the villagers assembled in force for the purpose of rejoicing over this era in their history. A huge bonfire was lit and other demonstrations of joy usual on such occasions were entered into with a spirit worthy of the Ashburnhamites, the excellent brass band of the village enlivening the evening with their spirited airs executed in a highly creditable manner.—A congratulatory address was delivered by Captain Sutherland, who on retiring, proposed three cheers for the Hon. S. Smith, 1st post-master General, through whose instrumentality the Village had been incorporated, which was responded to right heartily. We present to them the right hand of fellowship, and although we do think not a little of ourselves on this side the river, we shall be glad to see in Ashburnham an honest rival on the other side, as the spirit and enterprise of some of the villagers give fair promise of.

Fair Day.

Our quarterly Fair took place on Tuesday last, when the Town presented quite an animated appearance. From early morn crowds kept pouring in from the surrounding country till about noon, when our streets were crowded with a very respectable assemblage. Business generally over Town was dull for a Fair-day, and even in the Market stead there was barely done the usual trade. The show of cattle was pretty numerous, but the produce market was deficient, and from all quarters came the universal cry of a blighted wheat crop, and the horrid ravages of the grasshoppers.—Until evening there was no great display of the usual festivities, but about dusk the evidences became pretty numerous of the tavern keepers having had their share, and a full one, of what business was going. We hear of several robberies from gardens of clothes left out over night, but it is supposed that the thieves are no casual visitors to the Fair, but a gang in Town whose depredations have of late been pretty frequent. We hope our Constabulary will take in proper steps to ferret these pests thoroughly, justice.

[illegible] Agency! Honest [illegible] Wood [illegible] Wood [illegible] Wood

BY-LAW No. CXL.

A By-Law to authorize the Mayor of the Town of Peterborough to raise by way of Loan the sum of Two Thousand Five Hundred Pounds for the purposes therein mentioned, and to issue Debentures therefor and to provide for the payment thereof.

WHEREAS,—The United Board of School Trustees for the Town of Peterborough have made a demand upon the Town Council of the said Town for the sum of Two Thousand Five Hundred Pounds for the purpose of aiding in the erection and furnishing of a School House for the use of the Grammar and Common Schools in said Town.

And Whereas,—It is desirable and would conduce to the advantage of the inhabitants of the Town of Peterborough that such School House should be built and furnished.

And Whereas,—It will require the sum of Two Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Seven Pounds to be raised by a special rate for the payment of such loan and interest for the space of ten years to be computed from the day of now next ensuing until the day of A. D., One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Eight, exclusive of the first and last days by annual amounts as follows—that is to say:

For the first year	£310
" second "	364
" third "	395
" fourth "	423
" fifth "	443
" sixth "	460
" seventh "	476
" eighth "	560
" ninth "	610
" tenth "	562

And Whereas,—It is proposed that Debentures to the amount of Three Thousand Five Hundred Pounds shall be issued payable with interest as hereinafter mentioned for the purpose of aiding in the erection and furnishing such School House as aforesaid.

And Whereas,—The amount of the whole rateable property of the said Town of Peterborough amounts to the sum of Sixteen Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-four Pounds one Shilling, according to the Assessment Roll thereof for the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Fifty-seven, being the financial year next preceding the year of the passing of this By-law.

And Whereas,—It is necessary for the payment of the interest aforesaid, and for the creation of a sinking fund for the payment of the principal of each loan to raise an annual special rate in the Pound upon the total value of the whole of the rateable property as hereafter described—viz:

For the year

1858—Four pence half-penny in the pound.
1859—Five pence	"
1861—Five pence three farthings	"
1863—Six pence one farthing	"
1863—Six pence half-penny	"
1864—Eight pence	"
1865—Eight pence one farthing	"
1866—Eight pence half-penny	"
1867—Nine pence	"
1868—Eight pence	"

over and above and in addition to all other rates and assessments therein imposed for the payment of the said interest and for the creation of a sinking fund for the payment of the principal money of the said Debentures according to the requirements of the statutes in such case made and provided.

And Whereas,—This By-law has been and was approved of by a majority of the duly qualified Municipal Electors of the said Town of Peterborough at a Meeting assized and held in the Town Hall, in the said Town of Peterborough, on Saturday the 25th day of September, A. D., 1858, in conformity with a resolution passed by the Municipal Council of the said Town of Peterborough for that purpose and also in conformity with the requirements of section two and the sub-sections thereof of the Act of the Parliament of this Province 16 Vic. cap. 22, in so far as by the act of the said Parliament of the said Province 18 Vic. cap. 123, the same is made applicable to all By-laws for the purpose of raising money by any Municipality.

Be it therefore enacted,—By the Town Council of the Town of Peterborough, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same,—That for the purpose of raising the said sum of £2,500 now, the same as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for, and the Mayor of the said Town of Peterborough for the time being is hereby authorized and required to make and execute Debentures upon the credit of the said Town of Peterborough to the amount of Three Thousand Five Hundred Pounds, in sums not less than fifty pounds, such debentures to be under the common seal of the said Town of Peterborough, signed by the Mayor and countersigned by the Clerk thereof, made out in such manner and form, and payable at such periods not exceeding ten years from and after the day when this By-law shall come in operation as said Mayor shall see fit, and all sums of money so raised by the issue of the said Debentures shall be paid into the hands of the Treasurer of the said Town of Peterborough to be applied by him for the purpose hereinbefore set forth and mentioned and no other.

And be it enacted,—That the interest on such Debentures shall be payable half-yearly at the office of the said Treasurer in the said Town of Peterborough on the days of and respectively.

And be it enacted,—That this By-law shall come into force and take effect on the day of in the year of our Lord, 1858.

NOTICE.

THE above is a true copy of a By-law which it will be taken into consideration by the Town Council of the Town of Peterborough upon the expiration of one month from the 2nd day of September, 1858 being the date of the first publication thereof in the Examiner newspaper.

And notice is hereby given that a general meeting of the qualified Municipal Electors of the said Town of Peterborough will be held for the purpose of considering such by-law and for the approving or disapproving of the same on the 25th day of September, 1858, at the hour of 10 o'clock in the forenoon at the Town Hall in the said Town of Peterborough.

J. EDWARDS,
Town Clerk.

Peterborough, August 30, 1858.

SCOTLAND'S AUTHORS.

Arnott's Rev. Wm.—Leaves from Heaven for Life on Earth, or Illustrations of the Book of Proverbs	$1,00
Blair's Digest of Bleed, 2 plates	1,00
Do. Land of Promise, 5 plates	1,25
Do. Night of Weeping	0,50
Do. Morning of Joy	0,40
Do. Story of Grace	0,50
Do. Truth and Error	0,40
Do. Man, his Religion and the World	0,40
Do. Eternal Day	0,50
Boston's Four-Fold Estate	0,50
Do. Crook in the Lot	0,50
Brewster's—More World's than One	0,60
Brown's Concordance, gilt 20 ets., plain	0,30
Chalmer's Dr., Miscellanies	1,50
Do. Moral Philosophy	0,60
Do. Astronomical Discourses	0,60
Dick, Dr.—Christian Philosopher	1,00
Duncan's—Tales of the Scottish Peasantry, Illustrated	0,30
Do. Cottage Fireside, Illustrated	0,40
Family Worship—A series of Prayers adapted to Domestic Worship, by one hundred and eighty Clergymen of Scotland, 336 pages	2,50
Gardiner's Martyrs, Heroes and Saints of the Scottish Covenant	0,60
Gaston's, Dr., Gospel in Ezekiel	1,00
Do. The City, its Sins and Sorrows	0,30
Hetherington's History of the Church of Scotland to the Disruption	1,50
Howe's Seven Worthies, or Historical account of Canes who believed for the Redemption	1,00
Martyrs and Covenanters of Scotland	0,40
Maxwell's Memories of Gennesaret	1,00
Do. Bow in the Cloud, and the First Resurrection	0,40
Do. Second and Night Watches	0,30
Do. Footsteps of St. Paul, with plates	1,00
Do. Words of Jesus	0,40
Do. Mind of Jesus	0,40
Do. Family Prayers	0,75
Do. Great Journey or Pilgrimage to Jerusalem Now	0,30
Do. Scottish Premiers and Alter Times	0,35
Do. Memorials of Scotland	0,50
Robert Grant's Poetical Works	0,50
McCheyne's Life, Letters, Lectures and Sermons	1,50
Rutherford's Letters of Divine Consolation	1,00
Shoemaker, Mary—Lays of the Highland Glens	0,60
Do. Legends of the Rhine and Other Poems	0,60

Any Book not in stock procured on the shortest notice.

—ALSO—

Blank Books, Music and Works
Stationery, Envelopes, &c.
Writing Desks, Portfolios, &c.
Pocket Books, Purses, &c.
Fancy Goods, Boxes, &c.
Pens, Pencils, Inks, &c.

SAWERS & MURRAY,
Bookseller, Stationer, &c., Peterboro'.

August 5, 1858. 32

Miscellaneous.

LETTER AND NOTE PAPERS.

CREAM and Blue Colors, ruled and plain.—Envelopes, all sizes and qualities to match. A very complete stock on hand. Merchants supplied on liberal terms.

SAWERS & MURRAY,
Stationers, &c., Peterboro'.

PETERBOROUGH LIVERY STABLE

THE SUBSCRIBER begs to inform the public that he is always ready to furnish them with horses, sleighs, carriages, and every thing required at a Livery, on the shortest notice, and on reasonable terms. His horses are in fine condition, and everything about his establishment is in good order.

He very reluctantly has to withdraw from the long credit system, and begs all who may favor him with their patronage, to remember that he can only continue to accommodate the public, by them, in turn, enabling him to keep up his business, that is, by ready pay.

THOS. EASTLAND.

Peterboro Livery Stables,
Hunter Street, Jan. 1st, 1858. } 1

UNION HOTEL.
Peterborough.

GEORGE ALLEN

RESPECTFULLY intimates to his friends and the public generally, that his establishment is still open for the reception of guests in his usual good style.

The house is new and beautifully situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, where travellers will find a quiet and desirable retreat.

A limited number of respectable BOARDERS can be accommodated.

Good Stabling and Sheds

On the premises. An Ostler in attendance, who will give the best attention to horses entrusted to his care.

Peterborough, Oct. 20th 1857. 52

NORTH AMERICAN HOTEL,
DUNDAS STREET, CORNER.

THE above Hotel having been recently repaired, painted, and newly fitted up, and being now entirely complete in all its appointments, is now opened for the reception of the travelling public.

The House is commodious, and neither pains nor expense will be spared to make it one of the best in the Province.

The Liquors are of the best brands, and the Larder will be constantly supplied with all the delicacies of the Season.

The Stables are commodious, and an attentive Ostler is always in attendance.

The proprietor pledges himself that every attention will be paid to the wants of his guests.

☞ Omnibuses will attend at the Cars and Boats to carry passengers to the Hotel free of charge.

RALPH FRANCIS,
Proprietor.

Cobourg, August, 1857. 35

MUSIC! MUSIC!!

The Musical Bequet, (English,
AT 4d PER SINGLE NUMBER.

THE subscribers have now in stock, the following pieces, to which they respectfully invite the attention of the Ladies of Peterborough.

QUADRILLES.

The Scotch Quadrilles.
Fiocolomini Quadrilles.
Les Chiens, (dogs) &c. do.
The Lancers do.
The Don Cæsar De Bazan Quadrilles.
Belphegor do.
The British Navy do.
Les Chats, (cats) do.
Bonnie Dundee do.
Les Singes, (monkeys) do.
Lucrezia Borgia do.
Les Souris, (mice) do.
The Muguenots do.
The Irish do.
Pose in Boots do.
The Royal Lancers' do. do.
The Comic or Ratzestcher's do.

POLKAS.

Guy Fawkes' Polka.
The Laughing Eyes Polka.
Tomtit's do.
The Bobbin' Around do.
The Original do.
Ash Mamma do.
The Minnie do.
The Silverbair do.

FANTASIAS.

Gazelle Impromptu.
The Bank shoots Treasure.
La Violette.
Les Cloches Du Monastere.
We're o' Noddle'.
The Last Rose of Summer.
Fantasia on Bohemian Airs.
Partant Pour La Syrie.
Miserere, Brilliant Fantasia.
Scots wha hae wi' Wallace bled.
Premier Nocturne.
L'Italienne Fantasia.
Grand Galop Brilliante.
Premiere Etude De Concert'.
Two Musical Sketches, Mendelssohn.

POPULAR SONGS,

WITH ACCOMPANIMENTS.

Why did my Sarah sell me.
Hey Johnny Cope and the Campbells 'are coming.
Hearts and Eyes.
Ellen Bayne.
Who wishes fleet for Charlie.
For Ever Dear.
Some Folks.
Bobbing Around.
Sound Bottoms Sound.
Dinah is the Girl for me.
Lilly Willy Waken.
The Lass that loves a Sailor.
The Lords of the Forest.
Lets be gay Boys.
The Village Maiden.
Come again dear dream.
The Sardinian National Hymn.
Thou art my Joy.
The North Carolina Rose.
Up for the Right.
Oh let me in the dark tomb lie.
The Fishermaiden.
The Camptown Races.
Strike Men Strike.
My Mary Anne.
So Early in the Morning.
The Spinning Wheel.
My Nannie O.
I Must Depart.
The Greenwood Bell.
My Gentle Dove.
There's Fortune on before us Boys.

SACRED MELODIES,

WITH VARIATIONS FOR THE PIANOFORTE.

Pleyel's German Hymn.
Vital Spark of Heavenly Flame.
Prayer from Rossini's "Moss in Egypt."
The Heavens are Telling.
Adeste Fidelis.
Quies Animæ, from Rachel.
I Know that my Redeemer Liveth.
Rebecca Jehovah's Awful Throne.
Eve's Lamentation.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Brunel Invokeni, Popular Cavatina.
Rondo in B flat.
Morceau Florentine.
Ah Le Mestr, from Rachel.
Les Perles Doux Valses.
L'Amo di L'Amo.
Rosella Grand Galop.
Seven Admired Airs from Il Trovatore.
The Druid's March.
Serenade in Villanelle Mauresque.
Robert Tel Que J'Aime, &c.
Una Voce Poco Fa.
A la o Cara.
Still Sadly Swelling.
Yoga Yoga, from Rachel.

Any piece not in stock, procured on the shortest notice.

—ALSO—

Music Books, Music and Works
Stationery, Envelopes, &c.
Writing Desks, Portfolios, &c.
Pocket Books, Purses, &c.
Fancy Goods, Boxes, &c.
Pens, Pencils, Inks, &c.

SAWERS & MURRAY,
Bookseller, Stationer, &c., Peterborough.

Sawers & Murray's New Book Store, Peterboro'

June 21, 1858 24

Insurances.

TIMES AND BEACON ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....£200,000 STG.

$160,000 PAID UP.

HEAD OFFICE in CANADA, KINGSTON, C.W.

CANADA BOARD OF DIRECTORS ON TRUSTEES:
The HON. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES MORTON, Esq., Kingston.

DIRECTORS.

Chairman—M. U. STRANGE, Esq.
Vice Chairman—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.
JAMES MORTON, Esq., | A. J. McDONELL, Esq.
JOHN MOWAT, Esq., | JAMES HARDY, Esq.

AUDITORS.

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Esq., Kingston,
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.,

Standing Counsel—A. J. MACDONELL, Esq.
Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.

LOCAL MANAGER:
W. CLUXTON, Peterboro'.

Peterboro', March 21, 1857. 12

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON
Fire & Life Insurance Co.

CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.

Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.

RESPONSIBILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS UNLIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTREAL.

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on almost every description of property, at as reasonable rates as any other responsible office. Losses paid without reference to the Old Country.

W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.

Peterboro.' March 24th, 1857. 12

WESTERN Insurance Company.

CAPITAL £500,000.

Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF
FIRE & MARINE ASSURANCE
BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',
W. CLUXTON.

Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

UNITY FIRE AND UNITY GENERAL
INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS OF ENGLAND.

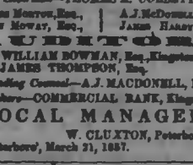
FOR every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.

CAPITAL £3,500,00 Sterling.

CHIEF OFFICES,—Unity Buildings, Canon St., London. Agent for Peterboro',
W. EASTLAND.

Peterboro', July, 1856.

Provincial Insurance Company,



OF TORONTO, C. W.

Subscribed Capital, $1,937,600, Paid up Capital, $480,000.

PRESIDENT, J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
VICE-PRESIDENT, Hon. J. H. CAMERON.

Directors.

Hon. W. B. ROBINSON, | E. F. WHITTEMORE, Esq.
Geo. Duggan, Jr., Esq. | Geo. CRAWFORD, Esq.
J. B. EDWARD, Esq. | JOHN CAMERON, Esq., M.P.,
Wm. L. PERRIN, Esq. | J. McD. CAMERON, Esq., M.D.
Hon. J. H. CAMERON. | DUNCAN McDONNELL, Esq.
CAPT. F. WALLACE,

MANAGER AND SECRETARY:
HON. J. LEANDER STARR.
ASSISTANT SECRETARY:
J. JOSEPH WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK.—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS:—Messrs. DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE:
TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurance business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as in any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Brokers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.

Toronto, April 20, 1858. 43

THE COLONIAL
Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

HEAD OFFICE—Edinburgh, Scotland, and MONTREAL, CANADA.

Proposals for assurance disposed of in Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Advisor for Peterboro,—Dr. McNab.

AGENT,
W. B. READ.

Peterboro', July 20th, 1857. 30

ALL ABOARD!

THE SUBSCRIBER respectfully begs leave to announce to the Public, that his House at Bridgenorth, (Med Lake) is always supplied with the best accommodation and entertainment for travellers.

GOOD STABLING, DRIVING HOUSE, YARD ROOM AND STORAGE.

He also runs a STAGE to and from Peterboro' in connection with the Boats, leaving McGregor's Hotel, Peterboro', on the mornings of A. M., to meet the boats at Bridgenorth, return and to Peterboro' on the arrival of the Boats, at 4 o'clock, P. M.

For freight or passage, enquire at McGregor's Hotel, Peterboro', or at the Subscribers Hotel, Bridgenorth. Fare each way 1s. 10½d.

JOHN POPE.

Bridgenorth, June 13, 1858.

AMERICAN HOTEL. PETERBORO'.

THE undersigned, Proprietor, begs to return his sincere thanks to the travelling community and the country as well as the town people, for the very liberal support his Hotel has received from them. He begs to continued attention to their wants, and encouragement of the House to retain the favorable position which has attended his previous efforts.

Fine Beer

will always be stocked with the best Liquors and Cigars.

Good sure shops for the selection of carpets and Oil Cloths always in advantage at the Hotel.

☞ Omnibuses to and from the cars and Boats on the arrival of each train free of charge.

LOUIS McGREGOR.

Peterboro', 1858. 3-tf

Business Notices.

SPLENDID INVESTMENT.
FOR SALE,

LOT No. 9, West of George Street, and South of Charlotte Street, adjoining the Port Hope and Peterboro' Railroad Depot, having three good buildings on it the situation is adapted to any public business. Those who desire to profit by such a rare chance, will please address the undersigned, by letter (post-paid) to Lindsay.

N. B.—It will be sold altogether or in building lots, to suit purchasers.

CHARLES McCARTHY.

Peterboro' July 20, 1856. 29-tf

NOTICE.

THE Subscriber begs leave to intimate that he has sold out his Boot and Shoe Shop to A. ROSS. All debts standing out up to date, May, 27th, must be paid to him, at his Tannery, Peterboro' East.

JNO. CLARK,
Tanner.

Peterboro' East, June 6, 1856. 23

EVERY SCOTCHMAN

SHOULD read the "Scottish American Journal," published weekly. It contains the best summary of old country news of any paper published in this country, and has besides a series of articles on the "Highland Bonnets," or Achievement of the Scottish Regiments in India and elsewhere. For sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'. Price $2,50 per year in advance, or 3d per single number.

NOTICE.

THE PARTNERSHIP existing between us, and known as the firm of Hurst & Denne is this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts due to, and by, the said firm, will be settled by Henry Denne, who will grant receipts for the same.

WALTER HURST,
HENRY DENNE.

The business will hereafter be carried on by W. Hurst, who respectfully solicits a share of the Public patronage.

Blythe Mills, Peterboro',
July 20, 1856. 29

BOOTS & SHOES

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform the late customers of Mr. Thomas Russell, and the public in general, that they have entered into partnership, and have made arrangements with him to succeed him in his business. They desire to assure all who favor them with their custom, that their wants will be punctually attended to, and their work done in a manner that will ensure satisfaction. They will always be found ready to receive orders, and they hope by such assiduity in their business to receive a share of the public patronage.

All kinds of ready made work kept constantly on hand, and sold on the most reasonable terms for Cash or short approved credit.

Remember the old stand opposite the Eastern entrance to the Town Hall.

O'BRIEN & MAGRATH.

Peterboro', January 12th, 1858. 2

NOTICE

IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Partnership lately subsisting between HENRY MORROW & ALEX. MORROW, both of the town of Peterboro', under the firm of Morrow & Brother, was this day dissolved by mutual consent

All debts owing to the said partners will be received by the said Henry Morrow and all debts due by the said firm will be paid by him.

HENRY MORROW,
ALEX. MORROW.

Peterboro', July 1st, 1858.

IN REFERENCE TO THE ABOVE, I would take the opportunity to inform my friends and the public that I will continue the business carried on by the firm in the same premises, and I hope by strict attention to business, and a thorough knowledge of the wants of my customers, to merit and receive a continuance of the patronage so liberally extended to the late firm.

HENRY MORROW.

Peterboro', July 1st, 1858. 26

LOOK OUT!
SAVE YOUR MONEY
AND REMEMBER THIS,—
"ONE DOLLAR SAVED IS TWO EARNED."

IT is a certain fact which we offer to prove to any purchaser who would wish to visit our immense Stock of

Summer Ready-made Clothing,

That we will offer for sale, (to begin the 16th instant,) at 25 per cent. under the ordinary prices.

SMALL COATS, PANTS & VESTS, FOR BOYS,
Of all descriptions, may be had also.

The undersigned, in calling the public attention, will not fail to give

CHEAP BARGAINS,
To say who patronize them.

☞ TERMS—STRICTLY CASH. ☜

F. & L. LEMAY.

Peterborough, July 13, 1858. 27

ROOM PAPER, PAINTING, &C.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, at his shop on Brock Street, a large and varied assortment of Room Paper, among which will be found patterns of English, French and American manufacture, which he has just received, and which he will sell at the lowest possible price, for ready pay, or short approved credit.

He keeps constantly a number of hands, who can be employed in

PAPER HANGING!

And he recommends his Stock and Workmanship to the public.

The Papers range in price from 4d per Roll, up to 17s 6d per roll, and from their great variety, he is sure the most fastidious will find their choice.

The Painting, Glazing and Plaistering business carried on as usual.

ROBERT STEVENSON.

Brock Street, Peterboro, April 6, 1858. 41

The only Reliable Route to Peterborough
BY RAILWAY.

P. H. L. & B. RAILWAY,
AND
Peterborough Section.

NEW ARRANGEMENTS.

ON and after WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 18th 1858, Trains will run as follows:—

Leave Lindsay, 6 40 A. M., arrive at Port Hope, 10 10 A. M.

Leave Port Hope, 2 10 P. M., arrive at Lindsay, 5 40 P. M.

Leave Port Hope, 12 A. M., arrive at Peterborough, 3 P. M.

Leave Port Hope, 7 30 P. M., arrive at Peterborough, 9 40 P. M.

Leave Peterborough, 7 A M., arrive at Port Hope 9 10 A. M.

Leave Peterborough 2 50 P. M., arrive at Port Hope, 5 P. M.

Trains run by Port Hope time.

All the above Trains run in connection with Grand Trunk Railway, East and West The splendid new Steamer Maid of the Mist, also runs in connection with P. H. L. & B. Railway, leaving Port Hope on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, at 11 a. m., arriving at Rochester at 6 p. m., in time for evening Trains to New York, Boston and Philadelphia, and leaves Rochester on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, at 11 a. m., arriving at Port Hope at 6 p. m., in time for passengers to reach Peterboro' same day.

Port Hope, August 14, 1858. 32

SUNDAY SCHOOL BOOKS.

THE best of the publications for the Sabbath, and a copy or two of each, to be sold cheap for cash, at Sawers & Murray's New Book Store, Peterboro'

☞ September Number received, price 25 cts.

Farms, &c., For Sale.

PROPERTY IN OMEMEE
FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, in the flourishing Village of Omemee, on the Port Hope & Lindsay Railroad, Village Lot No. 16, north side of King street, containing 1 acre of land.—The buildings consist of a frame dwelling house and store, now occupied by Mr. John Hutchison, a dwelling house adjoining, also a large workshop, and stabling, with every other convenience attached. The buildings are all new, and well put up.

If the above is not disposed of before 20th of OCTOBER, NEXT, it will then be sold to the highest bidder, by PUBLIC AUCTION.

One Third cash, £200 each, or a bankable note; the remainder in installments as may be agreed upon.

For further particulars apply to John Henderson, on the premises, or to the undersigned proprietor, in Otonabee, or at the Examiner office, in Peterboro'.

There will be no difficulty as to title.

JOSHUA DAWSON.

19th Lot, 12th Concession,
Otonabee, Aug. 12, 1858. } 31

FOR SALE.

ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND IN THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH.

THAT excellent farm of land, situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, being composed of the south parts of lots Nos. 27 and 28, in the 6th Concession of Smith, 6 miles from Peterborough, is offered for sale. The farm is thoroughly improved; has a first rate house, barn, &c., and a capital water frontage. The soil is equal to any in that section of country.

For particulars of price and terms apply to the proprietor in Peterborough.

A. SAWERS.

Smith, July 29, 1858.

FARM FOR SALE.

The subscriber offers for sale East half 6 in 7th con. and West half of in 7th con. Dummer, containing 100 acres, of which

80 ARE CLEARED

In good cultivation and well fenced; a good

CEDAR LOG HOUSE,

And two large barns, with other good out houses, and a superior well close at hand.

The property is three miles from

NORWOOD.

On an excellent road, and will be sold for £3 10s an acre. From one third to one half to be paid down, the payment of the balance as agreed upon.

HENRY GARDNER.

Dummer, July 10th 1857. 28

VALUABLE FARM, SAW-MILL, FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber is desirous of selling his property, consisting of 250 acres, 50 of which are under cultivation, comprising a

FINE YOUNG GRAFTED ORCHARD.

There is an excellent DWELLING HOUSE, with Barns, Sheds, and all other necessary Out-Houses, a good water

SAW MILL,

in good running order. The premises consist of Lot No. 9, and south-east quarter of Lot No. 8, in the 11th Concession of the Township of Monaghan. The Farm is one of the finest in the County, and most favorably situated on the Gravel Road, two miles from Peterboro. The wood land consists of hardwood and cedar, and the whole lot is furnished with a good supply of running water.

For further particulars as to terms, &c., apply on the Premises to

W. W. BOSWELL,

Peterboro, Sept. 8, 1857. 36

TO LET.

TWO NEW BRICK STORES fronting on George Street, one for Dry Goods, the other for Groceries. Both finished in the newest and finest style of workmanship, and elegantly painted and varnished, equal to any in Town; the basement stories are well lighted and perfectly dry, and warranted against frost. Application to be made to the proprietor on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.

Peterboro', Feb. 1st, 1858. 5

TO LET.

That Splendid Three Story Brick Store, lately occupied by Mr. E. Peplow on Hunter Street.

Also 16 Town Lots for sale. Terms easy.

Apply to the Subscriber on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.

Peterboro', June 2, 1858. 22

Hardware.

New Stove Warehouse !!!

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform their friends and the Public that they have entered into Partnership as Stove-Dealers, Tinsmiths, &c., and respectfully invite public inspection to their new styles of Stoves, consisting in part of

The Improved Beer,
The Star of the West,
The Wide World,
The Commodore,
The Improved Canadian Farmer,
The Buffalo,
The Black Rover,
The King Stove,
The Premium.

Besides a variety of Parlor and Plate Stoves.

They also receive orders for all kinds of

COPPER, SHEET-IRON AND TIN WORK.

Which their Patrons may depend upon getting done in a manner which will give the greatest satisfaction.

A large stock of TIN-WARE, STOVE-PIPES, and other such articles belonging to their business, kept constantly on hand.

Their premises are on George Street, lately occupied by Messrs. Harvey & Thomson, and next door to Messrs Glover & Robinson.

BIGELOW & ROBINSON.

Peterboro', October 27, 1857. 43

AXES BY STEAM

THE subscriber invites public attention to his increased facility of making the

SUPERIOR AXES

he has so long supplied to the community, and begs to assure his patrons that he will be unremitting in his efforts to retain for his work the good reputation it has hitherto enjoyed. He offers

Narrow and Broad Axes,
AND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF
EDGE TOOLS,

WHOLESALE and RETAIL, so cheap as they can be purchased here or in any other market, and of a quality that cannot be surpassed.

His premises are located on GEORGE ST., opposite the OLD SUETERS GROUND, and to enable him to supply his manufactures in sufficient quantity, and at modern prices, he has added steam power to his buildings.

☞ Hardwood and Grass in quiet order.

W. ROGGOW.

Peterboro', Sept. 22, 1857.

NOTICE.

I Hereby caution all persons trading or harboring my wife [illegible] will not pay any debts she may contract after this date.

CHRISTOPHER SMITH.

Norwood, August 26, 1858. 32-3tf

Miscellaneous.

HATS! HATS!

THE New York and Canadian Style of Hats is now ready for inspection. Also, a large assortment of Fur Hoods and Cloth Caps, &c., &c.

The Trade Supplied at Wood.

A. SHOUP,
Hatter, &c.

Cobourg, March 19, 1858. 13

CABINET ROOMS
RE OPENED!

THE subscriber informs his old customers and the public generally, that he has recovered from the effects of the late fire, and has erected a new building on the old site which he has fitted up as a show room. He is daily receiving and making up a choice assortment of

FURNITURE & CABINET WARE,

Of every description, which, as usual, he offers at moderate prices.

He has removed his workshop to the building just erected by Mr. Monnet, where by the use of Steam and the most recent improvements in

LABOUR SAVING MACHINERY,

He will be prepared to manufacture for sale or to order every description of Furniture, at prices unprecedent, in this Town.

W. Y. SWAYNE.

Peterboro', July 9th, 1857. 16

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE LOT OF LAND, on the Gravel Road, about 3 miles from Peterborough, containing 26 acres, being part of the eastern portion of the North-East quarter of Lot No. 1, 11th Concession North Monaghan, on the West of John Gross's Tavern, and adjoining it. Apply to the Subscriber,

WILLIAM BELL.

Monaghan, Jan. 11, 1857. 2

HORSE SHOEING.

BARNARD McGARRITY and WILLIAM MILLER, beg to inform the public, that their horse shoeing prices are as follows:—

A full set, new 6s,
Each remove 6d.

their terms are, if not Cash, well-approved credit.

Peterborough, Jan. 1st, 1858. 1

PERIODICALS, MAGAZINES, &C.

THE subscribers receive every Saturday the Weekly Periodicals in the following list, and on the third Saturday of each month the Monthlies for the next ensuing month, all of which they are prepared to supply on the annexed terms.

Orders respectfully solicited.

PER YEAR.		PER NO.
$2,25 ..	New York Ledger	0s 3d.
2,50 ..	Harper's Weekly	0 3½
3,00 ..	Balbou's Pictorial	0 4
3,25 ..	Waverly Magazine	0 4
1,50 ..	Yankee Notions	0 2½
2,50 ..	New York Clipper	0 3½
2,50 ..	Flag of Our Union	0 3½
1,00 ..	Scottish Amer. Journal	0 2
3,25 ..	Leslie's Illustrated	0 6
2,00 ..	Illustrated London News	1 0
3,50 ..	" " Times	0 7½
5,50 ..	Punch	0 11
3,00 ..	Harper's Magazine	1 7
3,00 ..	Household Words	1 3
2,00 ..	Chamber's Journal	1 0
2,20 ..	Mrs. Stephen's Journal	1 0
2,20 ..	Peterson's Journal	1 0
3,00 ..	Godey's Lady's Book	1 3
3,00 ..	Atlantic Monthly	1 3
2,50 ..	New York Mercury	0 5
2,50 ..	" " Weekly	0 5
2,50 ..	Rural New Yorker	0 5

YEARLY SUBSCRIPTIONS
MUST BE STRICTLY
In Advance.

Back Nos. must be paid for when ordered.

SAWERS & MURRAY.

Peterboro', June 23, 1858. 1

LOOK HERE.

ONLY ONE QUARTER DOLLAR!
FOR THE
VICTORIA PAPETERIE,
OR
CHEAP PACKET OF WRITING MATERIALS
WHICH CONTAINS

12 Sheets fine ruled Letter paper usually sold for	7½d
12 Sheets fine ruled Note paper	4
12 Large sized Envelopes adhesive	3
12 Note " " "	3
2 Steel Pens	1
1 Holder	1
1 Pencil	1
1 Sheet Blotting paper	1
Making a total of	1s 9d.

NOW SOLD FOR
ONE QUARTER DOLLAR,
BY
SAWERS & MURRAY,
AT THE
NEW BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE,
Sawers & Murray's New Book Store, Peterboro'.

June 22nd, 1858. 24

FRESH TEAS.

JUST RECEIVED from the Ship "Cambria," direct from China, an assortment of

Hyson, Young Hyson.
Gunpowder, Twankay.

S. H. CUERY, & Co.

Peterboro', 29th June, 1858. 25

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

THE attention of Clergymen, Teachers, and others interested in Sunday Schools is respectfully invited to our large and varied assortment of

Reward Books, Tickets, Admission Cards, &c., &c., &c.;

Especially adapted for Sunday Schools, and which we will sell on the best possible terms.

A CALL SOLICITED,

SAWERS & MURRAY,
NEW BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE,
Sawers's Block, George Street Peterboro'.

DR. J. B. ALFORD'S
ECLECTIC, MEDICAL & SURGICAL
OFFICE,

CORNER OF HUNTER AND ATHENS STREETS,
Near the Residence of James Hall, Esq.,
PETERBOROUGH.

DR. A. would announce to the citizens of Peterborough and vicinity, that he has located in this place for the purpose of attending to the duties of his profession. His system of treatment is purely Eclectic, using only those agents which are safe and reliable. INVALIDS however despairing, are invited to call, as no expense will be incurred without a corresponding prospect of recovery.

Residence—American Hotel.

Peterboro', Oct. 16, 1854. 41

FARM FOR SALE.

EAST HALF Lot No. 15 in the 11th Concession of Ennismore, three miles from the Village of Norwood. There are 100 acres cleared and under cultivation, with a good frame house, barn, and other buildings thereon. Also a good orchard of grafted fruit trees. The property is situated on the Gravel Road, and is in a good state of cultivation. Terms easy.

For further particulars apply to the subscriber, Otonabee, or upon the premises.

W. B. SCOTT.

Ashfield, 19th June, 1858. 24tf

Miscellaneous.

BY-LAW, No.—

A By-Law to authorize the Warden of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria to issue Debentures for, and to raise by way of Loan the sum of Six Thousand Pounds for the purposes therein mentioned.

WHEREAS it is desirable to raise by loan on the credit of this Municipality the sum of Six Thousand Pounds for constructing and repairing Gaol Roads and Bridges in the said United Counties.

And Whereas,—It will require the sum of Seven Thousand Nine Hundred and Eighty Pounds to be raised by a special rate for the payment of such loan and interest for the space of ten years, to be computed from the 16th day of October now next ensuing, until the 16th day of October A. D. One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Eight exclusive of the first and last days by annual amounts as follows:—that is to say:

For the first year—Nine Hundred and Sixty Pounds.

For the second year—Nine Hundred and Twenty-four Pounds.

For the third year—Eight Hundred and Eighty-eight Pounds.

For the fourth year—Eight Hundred and Fifty-two Pounds.

For the fifth year—Eight Hundred and Sixteen Pounds.

For the sixth year—Seven Hundred and Eighty Pounds.

For the seventh year—Seven Hundred and Forty-four Pounds.

For the eighth year—Seven Hundred and Eight Pounds.

For the ninth year—Six Hundred and Seventy-two Pounds.

And for the tenth year the sum of Six Hundred and Thirty-two Pounds.

According to the one hundred and seventy-seventh clause of the Upper Canada Municipal Corporations Act of One Thousand Eight Hundred and Forty-nine.

And Whereas,—The value of the whole rateable

PRINTING

OF

EVERY DESCRIPTION,

Plain, Colored, Fancy

AND

Ornamental.----Bronzing,

&c., &., &c.,

Neatly executed, on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the [redacted]

BURNHAM'S BLOCK,

OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1858.

Volume 3.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 36.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

Are Ten Shillings in Advance, for One Year; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING

Six Lines, and under, first insertion	2	3	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	7½
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0	7	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	1	3
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0	0	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	1

☞ Advertisements without written instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognized.

Business Directory.

MESSRS. FITZGERALD & DRENNAN,

PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, CIVIL ENGINEERS AND LAND AGENTS. Office in Scott's Chambers, corner of George and Hunter Streets.

Messrs. F. & D. having lately surveyed the southern of eight new Townships now included in this County will be happy to give any information to intending settlers. 34

MR. DENNISTOUN,

BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

E. BURNHAM,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. H. J. Vinard, Esq.

W. B. RUBIDGE,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, &c. &c., &c. Peterboro', March 10th, 1856.

DR. HOLYWELL,

HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Babidge's. Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,

SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' West.

ALBRO & VINDIN,

Commission, Shipping, Forwarding

AND GENERAL AGENTS,

Lumber Merchants, &c.,

Port Hope, C. W.

Offices—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets

MESSRS. STEWART,

ARCHITECTS, Engineers, Land Surveyors, and Land Agents. Office, Mill Street, Port Hope.

GEO. A. STEWART.
CHAS. E. STEWART.

Port Hope, May 22, 1857. 21.

JOHN HAYDEN,

Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.

King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 35—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.

INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.

Peterboro', May 25th, 1857. 22

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD.

PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.

COMMUNICATION THROUGH THE POST OFFICE, Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S

FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.

Port Hope, Sept. 29, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,

HUNTER STREET, PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST.

MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.

Peterboro', Sept. 2, 1856. 3

BOOKSELLERS AND STATIONERS.

SAWERS & MURRAY,

HAVE always on hand a complete assortment of Books in every department of LITERATURE, SCHOOL BOOKS, PLAIN AND FANCY STATIONERY, &c., &c.

New Book and Stationery Store,

39 Burnham's Block, George-st.

A. MERCER & SONS,

TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,

HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.

Peterboro', June 9, 1858. 23—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.

HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.

A. MUNRO, Agent.

May, 1858. 19

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,

ARCHITECT, Civil Engineer, &c., Smith's Chambers, George Street.

Peterboro', July 23, 1858. 29

QUARRY TO LET,

Near Peterborough.

THE Subscriber offers for a term of years, the Quarry on the river side, above the residence of Charles Dunlop, Esq. The bridge in contemplation to cross the river will bring the Quarry within half a mile of the centre of the Town. The stone is of a superior quality, and easily worked.

For Terms and other particulars, apply to Thomas Bonner, Deseronto, or

GEORGE A. STEWART,
Port Hope.

Peterborough, July 15, 1858. 27

Notice to the Asthmatical.

Asthma Cured for $50!

[redacted]

Chester Meeting of the Royal Agricultural Society of England.

From the Canadian Agriculturalist.

The following statements and calculations relative to the testing of the implements and machines at the Chester meeting, abridged from the Farmer's Journal and Mark Lane Express, will repay a careful perusal. It appears that the society subjects the implements &c., brought forward for competition to the most careful and rigid testing every third year. On this recent occasion the trial was continued for an entire week, and seems to have commanded the confidence of both exhibitors and the public.

STEAM CULTIVATION.

Cultivation by steam has made little progress since last year at the Salisbury Show. Messrs. Smith and Fowler occupy the same relative positions as heretofore, and the other inventors, with one exception, appear to have merged their inventions in others, or kept them for a time in abeyance.

The general opinion amongst all practical farmers, many of whom had come from great distances to look at the steam ploughing, was, that something more compact was wanted than anything exhibited in the field. Ropes, tacle, windlassas, snatchblocks, anchors, &c., appeared to many of them to be too complicated, and threatening to be too costly, for effecting cultivation by steam, to really economical results. Eight horses, for instance, have to be employed for the removal of all Mr. Fowler's apparatus, and it takes several hours before the whole can be got into working order. Again, it requires four men and a boy to attend the apparatus properly, and even that number is scarcely enough, for to underman machinery of any kind is anything but economical; and these men ought to be intelligent men, much more so indeed than can be expected, as a general rule, to be found in our agricultural districts. It may, however, be said that the man must be educated up to the machine; and if the latter prove itself an efficient and good working agent, there can be little difficulty in accomplishing this object. Many of the spectators also remarked that the friction of the ropes in wet weather must be enormous; and that, after all, the work done is comparatively inferior, that it is only ploughing indifferently, and that it does not accomplish spade husbandry, which we ought to look for when such a powerful element as steam is applied to the culture of the soil. These views were widely entertained, and, in many instances, openly expressed; nor were they the opinions of men who are the victims of prejudice, and who cling to their habits of ignorance and backwardness with a tenacity of purpose that nothing can relax; for the majority are employing machinery of the best description on their farms, and are desirous of adopting steam in ploughing, when they see their way pretty clearly upon the subject. We need scarcely remark that we have little sympathy with many of these opinions, and simply record them to show the precise phase of the question of cultivating by steam. We have great hopes that in a very short period a machine will be brought out which will have the effect of obviating the few difficulties that still impede the application of steam to the successful culture of the soil.

Messrs. Boydell, Fowler, Smith, and Rickett, were the several exhibitors of steam machinery as applied to cultivation. Mr. Boydell has the same monster engine he had at Salisbury—wheels, pattens, pintions, &c., precisely the same; doing about the same work, dragging every possible implement before it, and turning angles occasionally that would puzzle an ordinary waggon drawn by horses. The following alterations, however, in Burrell's Boydell engine ought to be noticed, as they show that the first crude idea is being licked into shape by degrees, and possible may become a standard practical machine. The gearwork for driving both carriage wheels, instead of only one, the new pinion and toothed quadrant steerage, instead of the old rudder-chain and pole, and pieces to be attached to the shoes, to guide and give them a better cold on the ground. There is also an additional force pump, and an extra lifting pump with 30 feet of India-rubber suction-hose, for supplying the tender with water from roadside streams, or field ditches. The price of the Traction-Titan is £800 or $700 without these extra pumps. The power of Mr. Boydell is manifest; the application of that power is another question. Practical common sense must settle that question. Let us however, do justice to the singular invention, and bear testimony to its great traction power. On going out of the yard to the trial ground, the chain connecting the engine with the tender broke, which caused the latter to back with so great an impetus that it upset a van and horse just behind it, but without doing any great amount of injury to either. The engine, with all the apparatus, afterwards ascended a pitched road, with a gradient of one in six, and turned a sharp angle with as much ease as a donkey-cart would, though itself and its tender with water weighed upwards of 22 tons. It then tramped along the high road to a field about five miles distance from the yard, to the astonishment of those who had never seen it before, and the amazement also of several who had seen it upon many preceding occasions. Upon entering the field which was a rich alluvial soil and easily cut, a frame-work of six ploughs, each being independent by leverage action, were attached to the engine, and it turned over the six furrows with the greatest ease, but not with the regularity and working order that good ploughmen like to see. There was, consequently, the usual amount of criticism by the bystanders-on, many of whom had never seen a machine of the kind before, and were comprehensive that their occupation was gone if Orlando could be gone more cheaply from between their practically-applied hands to the culture of the soil.

On another field, where the trials took place, Mr. Boydell's iron baby exhibited more than its usual energy, and certainly did some work that has never been equalled in a single operation. With a couple of Cotgrove's subsoilers and two ordinary ploughs it turned up the soil to the depth of 12 to 13 inches, completely disintegrating it, and leaving the land as though it had been dug by spade-work. The soil was exceedingly hard, and the strength required to break it up and turn it over must have been fully equal to 20 horses at least. Yet the monster engine did it with comparative ease, and created a feeling of astonishment amongst the spectators that is seldom seen, and which was promptly and openly expressed by most of them. With Coleman's eleven-prong cultivator, also, very good work was done, and the implement of whatever kind has only to penetrate the soil, and it is sure to be dragged through, however deep it may be, or however stiff and tenacious the soil. Upon the whole, while the spectators were astonished at the power of the engine, few could bring themselves to the idea of individually applying it in the culture of their farms. It seemed as though it had ran away from a railway station, and was desirous of taking a turn in the fields for the benefit of its health; and were a huge elephant put into a dog-cart, or any other light trap, it would have about the same non-apropos appearance as Boydell's engine has when attached to a plough, or to any other implement employed in the field.

Mr. Fowler's apparatus has undergone considerable change since last year, and is much simplified in its general action. In construction it appears about as sightly a thing as could be desired, and as effective in its working powers as plough machinery, not worked by horse and hand, can be expected to be. A ten horse double cylinder portable engine, with a windlass to attach and detach, and another; and four furrow ploughs, with scarsafier tines to take the place of the plough mould board, are the general features of the apparatus. The great length of rope which formerly added so much to the wear and tear, and to the loss of power in friction over so many pullies, has been considerably modified; nor was this the only drawback to the working power of the machine, for the rope was coiled layer over layer, requiring excessive labour to coil it well, which is now completely dispensed with. The rope now used is endless; and the labour of coiling and the risk of its overrunning itself in uncoiling is therefore at an end, and the quantity of rope used is reduced from one-third to one-half of that required by the old plan, either with a travelling or a fixed windlass. The same rope will also bear a much greater strain, as the pull on it is more equal and steady. The wear and tear is much diminished, and where the cartage is bad, two small engines, according to Mr. Fowler, can be used in combination to produce a large horse power, one being at each end of the field. The adjustment also to the length of any field is easily made, as the rope is in lengths and can be joined together, so that a field from 150 to 400 yards long can be worked with comparative facility. The ends of the rope are coiled on two small barrels on the plough, so that any variation required by the crookedness of a fence can be adjusted by the ploughman. The adaptation also of the plough-frame, heretofore used only as a ploughfor a scarifier and broadshare, is a great improvement; and the making the discanchor self-moving in a more perfect manner than formerly is certainly another. The tackle consists of windlass, anchor, and plough, rope porters, and about 800 yards of rope, capable of working a 400-yard furrow. The windlasses are attached to the fire-box end of the engine, and can be detached at pleasure. The whole is simple and light in appearance, and is constructed almost entirely of wrought iron.

Mr. Smith's (of Woolston) apparatus was about the same as we have seen it on the former occasions. It consisted of an eight-horse portable engine, made by Clayton and Shuttleworth; a windlass upon a carriage exceedingly simple in its construction, made by Humphries, of Pershore; and anchors, pulleys, and snatch blocks, and implements made by Messrs. Howard. The cultivator and scarifier of Mr. Smith, are well known to our readers, both three tined and five tined; and the method of working them by ropes may be thus briefly described. The anchors are iron frames, having strong curved tines, which are drawn into the ground by the strain of the pulleys hooked to them; and the windlass has two drums, with horizontal axles, hung side by side on separate bearings, in a timber frame, strongly constructed, and mounted on four travelling wheels. To keep it in a fixed position, the windlass is linked to the engine by a chain; and the whole is worked by a strap from the engine fly-wheel. In working, when the implement arrives at the headland, the steam is shut off; the pinion in the transverse shaft, being shifted sideways, is out of gear with the drum winding up the rope; and the other drum, which has been paying out rope, is then slipped into gear with it. The whole apparatus is exceedingly simple, and is easily worked. On the first occasion of trying it at Chester, a ridging body of Messrs. Howard was attached to the cultivator, which turned up some excellent work.

Mr. Rickett's rotatory steam cultivator is a new machine. It consists of a ten-horse locomotive engine, with a horizontal shaft behind, driven by pitch chains, and revolving in radial links in the direction contrary to that of the wheels. On the shaft there are tines or cutters which enter the soil at the bottom of the furrow, cut upwards, and either break up or invert the soil. In one or two mechanical details we consider this machine defective; pitched chains do not work well, having too much friction. The rotatory digger is liable to clog, which brings the engine "up," or stops it; and the digger revolves in an opposite direction to the machine's forward course. The result is that all the cutting action of the digger on the soil has to be overcome by the propelling power of the engine; whereas, if the digger revolved in an opposite direction, like a paddle wheel, it would materially help the work to be done. There are also too many shafts, which upset the action of the machine; the steering apparatus is likewise defective, which, however, working easily, so as to begin a new stitch immediately along the one already done. The power used to obtain motion was from 16 to 18 horse; the cylinder 5½ inches in diameter, with a ten-inch stroke. There was about 90lb pressure of steam, and the engine goes nearly 200 revolutions per minute. The cutters in revolving struck against the boiler, which ought not have been the case, had a proper trial been made of the engine before it was sent to the show. We need scarcely remark that the engine stuck fast in the field, to the regret of many, but not to the astonishment of those who know anything of machinery, and who might have safely predicted the results which it produced. Mr. Crawley's set of ploughs, each containing two plough bodies fixed heel to heel, for working up and down the field without turning at the ends, was tried by Fowler's tackle, but failed to do their work in a proper manner.

THE TRIALS.

The trials took place in a field at Blacon, where the soil was very hard on the surface and stiffish below, and fully strong enough for testing the working powers of the implements and engines. It was a clover ley, and could not have been broken up for some time preceding. Messrs. Fowler, Mr. Boydell, and Messrs. Howard (working Smith), tined the several competitors; and as Mr. Rickett was stuck fast in the field below, the interest of the ploughing from day to day was principally concentrated upon the three named. The work done by Smith's implements was as good as it well could be; and every practical farmer who saw it declared that they should desire nothing better for breaking up the soil, and thoroughly pulverising it and cleaning it of its filth; but there were a great number who preferred to have the soil turned over, and could not realize the idea of perfect cultivation without a thorough inversion of soil. The interest, therefore, gradually settled down, with the exception of one or two marvellous feats of Boydell, upon Fowler's operations.

There is one thing, we believe, clearly established by the trial of steam ploughs fixed in a frame—unless the land is pretty even several portions of it are left untouched, for the implements are too rigidly in a line, and have no independent action to touch the sunken portions of the inequalities of the soil. These, therefore, in many instances go uncultivated; and as we examined a great deal of the work done by Fowler, we can fully verify this fact. The fields, indeed, must be laid out specially at right angles and even in surface before ploughing by steam, according to the plan of Mr. Fowler, can be effectually done. We must say, however, that the furrow slice was cut much better than we saw it upon previous occasions, and the soil was fairly inverted; but when compared to good horse ploughing it is much inferior at present, and unless it can be done more economically than the latter, all things being considered, the invention is not yet in operation that it is at all likely to supercede the plough, assuming that the practice of inverting the soil is to be adhered to. The following may be considered as a fair summary of the details involved in Mr. Smith's plan, and in that also of Mr. Fowler:—

SMITH'S APPARATUS.

An eight-horse ordinary farm engine, sufficient to work all the implements. Windlass and tackle easily shifted from place to place. Anchor sufficiently firm for all useful purposes. This is a kind of safety-valve when the implement chances to strike against a root, or a large stone, as the anchor gives way, and thus prevents the breaking of tackle. The ropes being coiled on a windlass, triangular and crooked fields are as easily cultivated as square ones. The turning bow is arranged so to turn ploughs, cultivators, harrows, rollers, or other implements. The trenching plough exposes a greater surface to the action of the atmosphere than the common plough, and cultivators can break any strong land, even in the driest weather; a common plough can also be added to the same apparatus. Smith's anchor, and windlass, and plough, exclusive of the engine, is £187, and is, therefore, within the reach of the ordinary farmer. Any repairs necessary can be done by a blacksmith.

FOWLER'S APPARATUS

Requires an engine nearly double the power of that of Smith's. Windlass must be separated from the engine for removal. Anchor stands great resistance, but should the implement strike against a root or heavy stone, a break down may likely take place. The rope being endless, necessitates anchor being parallel with engine; therefore crooked and irregularly shaped fields cannot readily be ploughed. Must work all double or two-way implements; even a drill must be so; the weight is thus greatly increased. Plough may be worked upon light land, but cannot work to advantage on clay land, nor can it break up hard dry land of any kind. The price of Fowler's apparatus varies according to the power of the engine employed. If for a seven-horse engine the price is £240; for an eight-horse £290; for a ten-horse £468.

Extraordinary Petrifaction of a Body.

A letter in the Alta Californian, written by a German physician named Frederick Litchenberger, at Fort Langley on Frazer River, and one of the party, a Prussian named Ernst Flectersiegel, broke open a quartz geode, and drank the contained water of crystalization, a solution of silicia. On returning to the camp he complained of pain and weight in the epigastric region, and his pulse became feeble, the heart beat with violent but very irregular action, and in about fifteen minutes he expired.

Dr. Liebenberger made an examination of the body, and describes its condition as follows:—

On making an incision from a point opposite the xyphoid cartilage to the publis, through the skin, superficial fascia, and abdominal muscles, the peritoneum, a glistening membrane, and 2 lbs of clotted blood, observed that the smaller blood vessels were solid and apparently ossified. The stomach and duodenum were then removed from the abdomen, and on slitting them open with the osterotome I found several hard masses of the size of a hazel nut, looked like gall stones, and evidently composed of biliary matter, but as hard as the hardest quartz. Evidences of food also existed, and a large mass containing fibres of muscle and lumps of undigested potatoes, moulded in the form of the antrium pylori were taken out of the like solidity. The solidification of the contents of the stomach, of the food and the bile—their conversion in fact, into stone, struck me with astonishment, the more so as the coats of the stomach appeared very nearly normal.

I next made an opening into the cavity of the thorax with the costatome, and pushing back the detached sternum over the face, discovered the heart in situ and of a natural color, but it was as hard as and strongly resembled a piece of red jasper, exhibiting here and there those varied colors which give such a beauty to that mineral. By means of a small hatchet, I separated the heart from its connections with the aorta, pulmonary artery and vena cava, and with some difficulty was able to break it in pieces. The right ventricle and auricle was composed centrally of a solid of a dark purple color, which was evidently the venous blood petrified, while the left chamber vied in the colour of their central portions with the richest carbuncle. The larger blood-vessels were all as rigid as pipe-stems, and in some places the petrified blood could be cracked out from the veins, exhibiting a beautiful moulding upon the valves of the latter. The lungs were noticed, on opening the cavity of the pleura, not to be collapsed at all, the usual contractability, due to the elastic fibrous tissue, in their composition, being overcome by the rigidity of the capillaries which kept them firm and expanded.

The pathological specimens exhibited evidences of the presence of silicia. Of this there was no doubt. It, however, was not probable that silicia would not collect in a body, in such quantity, as that it could be obtained for exhibition and consequently some external source must have furnished the excess. I therefore concluded that the water of the goede which my companion had drank, contained an immense quantity of silicic acid in a nascent and soluble condition, that on being swallowed it had entered into an unusual combination with the conjugated acids of the bile, and with the albuminone of the ingesta; that it had also been absorbed by the blood, and formed perhaps a silicate of albumen with that fluid, and that the result had been a silification or petrifaction of those substances for which it had most affinity.

Public Affairs.

(From the Canadian Presbyter.)

It is not exactly our province to discuss matters of political concern. We do not wish to mingle in the strife of political parties. The field we have chosen for ourselves invites us to consider matters of higher import than those relating to the kingdoms of this world. Notwithstanding, therefore, the title of this paper, it is not now our intention to become an inquisitor into the public policy of our Government. Nevertheless, circumstances may arise in the progress of public and national transactions, which demand the serious attention of the professedly religious press of the country. The cry of "politics, politics," ought not certainly to daunt the guardians of morals and piety from either lifting up their voices or wielding their pens against actions and proceedings which violate the plainest commands of God, or which disregard the principles of His Word. There are issues in national affairs which religious men cannot contemplate without alarm. Wickedness and wrong are bad enough when perpetrated in the private circles of society, but when they proceed from the seat of power itself, and are publicly glorified in by the Governors of the country, they have a tenfold more fatal effect upon the community; and unless they be protested against, rebuked, and punished by the public voice, they involve the nation itself in the guilt of dishonouring God.

If, therefore, we find anything like public impiety in high places, silence in regard to it, by those who are solicitous for the maintenance of true religion, is unfaithfulness to their profession, and a pusillanimous betrayal of the cause of truth and righteousness. Now we think we do find impiety in the proceeding of our governors in the political movements of the past month. We find, for instance, our Government, in the execution of a political manœuvre, playing fast and loose with the holy name of God—taking solemn oaths in His presence to discharge duties they do not intend to undertake.—In these circumstances we feel constrained to mark and to protest against such impiety. The plain English of the matter is that, to escape a political inconvenience, our rulers have taken the name of the Lord in vain. Besides twisting an act of Parliament in a way that every straightforward man must say is a perversion of judgment, and which if applied to criminal or civil jurisprudence would render law a mockery; besides this, the majority of the present Cabinet have insulted the Majesty of Heaven by taking a deceptive oath. The law provides that the Cabinet minister may vacate one office, and within thirty days assume another in the same Government, without the necessity of resigning his seat in the Assembly or appearing before his constituents for re-election. But how this has any bearing upon the resignation of an entire ministry, or the formation of a new Government, we fail to see. Yet with an ingenuity more than human, we find this statute twisted in such a way as to screen the new Government from the inconvenient ordeal of appearing before their constituents. The device has the merit of perfect novelty. To comply with the novelty of their own interpretation of the law, the Ministry, except three, resigned for the nonce other offices than those they intended to fill, and solemnly took oath before God (profanely to desecrate their offices); yet the very next morning these offices are resigned, new ones accepted and new oaths taken. In sober judgment, was not this, we ask, a mockery of the name of God?—Was it not a violation of the Third Commandment, which says:—"Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain"? We cannot conceive of any man, whose moral sense is not vitiated, acting such a part as this, or stamping such proceedings with his approval. From some of the actors we had expected better things. Their position and antecedents led us to believe that they would not thus have wantonly profaned the sacred name of Jehovah. But the old word seems in this instance to be true, which says that "evil communications corrupt good manners."

What blessing can such a Government expect from God? How can its members pray for His approving smile, when, in the act of taking office, they have dishonoured His name? Political necessity may be pleaded in defence, but we have yet to learn that it is a principle of our constitution that "the end justifies the means," or that any political necessity can justify disobedience to a plain command of God.

We besides hold that the magistrate is under law to Christ—that he ought to be guided in all his official transactions by a regard to His revealed Word. No man, and no set of men, could, we are persuaded, so profane God's holy name as our Cabinet have done had they first considered, "What doth God require of us?" If first they have asked, not "does the letter of the law cover our transaction?" but "does the Word of God approve or condemn it?" they would, we are persuaded, have hesitated ere they trifled with the solemnity of an oath. We fear the "kingdoms of the world and the glory of them" have been too strong a temptation to withstand. Let us hope that the nation will not be corrupted by their example, and that amongst the people the time may be far distant when the solemnity of oaths will be tampered with. Reverence for the thrice-hallowed name of God is the bulwark of justice; let this once be broken down, and our national glory as a God-fearing people will be destroyed. The example which has been set before us in our high places may, if it be not rebuked, have a most pernicious influence on the country; we cannot therefore but wish that God would, in some signal way in his providence, stamp this act of impiety with his displeasure.

The Rescued Africans.

A writer in the Charleston Mercury gives a very interesting description of the negroes on board the captured slaver, together with a most harrowing account of their sufferings during the middle passage, as evinced by their terribly emaciated and diseased condition. There is a tone of genuine humanity and feeling in the description, which we seldom see in such rabid Southern journals when the "soulless" race are the subjects of remark, and this adds much to the interest of the article. We have not space for the whole but we subjoin some extracts:—

It has already been stated that they belong to various tribes. This is soon apparent from the difference of shades, from their being congregated in separate groups, and the evident inability to converse generally with each other. I observed nothing like general concert of thought or action between them, except in the chanting and clapping of hands; in these all, under the leadership of one man, the largest among them, united.

It has also been noticed that these Africans are far below the size common to the same age of negroes among us. This is understood to refer to height; for emaciated as most of them are, no one not better skilled in human anatomy than I am, could conjecture what their weight in health would be. Among the whole number, it struck me that the man above referred to may have been five feet eight inches high—a few more may reach five feet six, but besides these, there did not seem to be any of the men who were five feet two or three inches. Some few, a half dozen, perhaps, of the men, and a few more women seemed in good health and condition.

It is supposed that these exceptions of the former were of such as were not stowed away in the hold, but were employed in working about the slaver. The women, for some unexplained reason, were undoubtedly in better condition than the men.—You have already stated that the latter were wholly nude, and the former nearly so. One of the most singular of the exhibitions I saw was that of a woman whose hands were adorned by a pair of cotton gloves—almost her only covering. There was scarcely any comeliness about them; and the one whose appearance attracted attention was the so-styled princess, whose tatooing certainly gave evidence of great dexterity and skill in the art.

I have no pretensions to science, and must leave the ethnological questions to the learned, who, I trust, are engaged in their investigations. But to even the casual observer, the difference of tribes is quite evident. I was surprised that few or none exhibited the very thick lips and flat nose which we are accustomed to see in the African. The hair would, doubtless, be kinked, but, in accordance with the usage of slavers, it has been shaved, probably at the time of sailing from Africa.

I was struck with their teeth; some were even, as usual. One tribe had the two central upper forteeth cut out in a semi-circle; while in another, the front teeth were sharpened to a point.

The result of the whole visit was intense sympathy for them, and indignation towards their captors. You may read of the horrors of the "middle passage," but the half cannot be told as one view of these unfortunates will tell the tale. Dysentery, dropsy and opthalmia, all I believe, predictions of contact, want of ventilation and want of exercise, are the prevailing diseases. But even where these were not visible the spectacle was harrowing. A skeleton stole down from the end of a doctor's closet, and presented to your view, could scarcely be more descriptive of suffering than most of these living walking specimens of the human frame. The effect was very startling, when you saw them squatting on their haunches, with their knees drawn up behind their elbows, in an attitude common to apes and baboons, but which no human frame clothed in flesh can attain.—Some, when sitting and told to rise, did so with great difficulty, and moved with a step as tottering as ever I saw after illness.—The very head seemed like a skull encased in a black covering. It is common to speak of a man being reduced to skin and bone, but one who saw these can scarcely use the expression again.

But if this is to be said of those comparatively in health, what language can describe the sick? I saw one poor creature swollen to the most wonderful size with dropsy; and as he lay on his back, he moved his hands, signifying to one of our party a request for his segar, which, when given to him, he smoked with the greatest avidity. Another manifested similar wants, and replied to our beckonings to come to us, by pointing to his leg, which we construed into inability to move. Two lay near, whose troubles here had ceased in death; while another, the most affecting sight of all—a child of six or eight years, lay on its side in the sun on the stone wharf, with eyes closed, and with no other evidence of life than the slight motion of the stomach indicating breathing. The poor creature, alone and unattended, had raised its head on its little hand as naturally as our own little ones do, and in this touching attitude of suffering childhood, was fast losing the consciousness of a life whose experience had been only that of sorrow and suffering.

As I turned from this spectacle the thought was naturally suggested—for what was all this incurred? In all charity I could only answer—avarice. If ever argument was wanted in proof of human depravity, it was furnished here.

One thing impressed me forcibly—the complete docility, amounting to mere mechanical submission of all these creatures. In the sick ward the physician was applying caustic to the eyes of his patients.—When this painful remedy was applied—and poor creatures they knew not that it was a remedy, or anything but part of the system of cruelty to which they had been subjected—they covered their faces with their hands in pain, and with their heads all bowed in meek submission; and though many were young children, not a sound nor a murmur escaped. The scene was truly touching. To one of any sensibility the horrors of a battle field were less so. I left the scene chastened and humbled, but with gratitude, too, I trust, to Almighty God for a lot cast in a Christian land.

The Rajah of Sarawak.

INDIAN ARCHIPELAGO.

There appeared on Thursday in our columns a petition signed by the principal houses in the city of London connected with the Eastern trade. The petitioners prayed that the Queen's advisers would take the case of Sir James Brooke into consideration, and afford to him such support as will enable him to hold his position on the north-western coast of Borneo. There are two reasons why this should be done. In the first place, the British government have already gone so far that they cannot consistently with honor and good faith discard their obligations in the matter. From time to time during the last seventeen years, and notably in the years 1845 and 1846, they have recognized Sir James Brooke's position, and have sought to take advantage of it for the benefit of this country. They have sanctioned the hoisting of a Sarawak flag, and under their auspices the Rajah of Sarawak has maintained good order, repressed piracy, and advanced trade. At the present moment a very considerable number of British subjects are residing in his territory. A company, moreover, has been formed for the purpose of developing the commerce and of working the mineral treasures of this region; the shareholders are British subjects; they have subscribed a large amount of capital, actually paid up, and ask nothing but the protection of the British Government, that they may carry on their operations with security. We have, then, the lives of these British residents, and the fortunes of these British subjects, which must be taken into account when we are forming a decision upon the whole case. What is due to Sir James Brooke himself? What is due to the English residents in Sarawak? What is due to the company of merchants and others who are now risking so inconsiderable portion of their fortunes upon the success of this great enterprise which they have taken in hand?—That is the first portion of the case. We are, however, perfectly aware that it is not very difficult to find reasons for violating obligations of this kind when it is desired to get rid of a troublesome question. A second point then arises, which is this—Is it not to our interest as a nation to retain a hold upon the north-western coast of Borneo? Let us say, for the moment, that Sir James Brooke and the English residents in Sarawak may look to their own security, and the Bornean adventurers to the result of their own enterprise; but still we should consider whether or not it is on the whole for our advantage to secure a permanent hold upon this portion of the Eastern seas. What benefit can we hope to obtain? What is the price which we are called upon to pay for it?

A glance at the atlas should suffice to show that the position, geographically speaking, is of the highest importance to any nation largely engaged in the Eastern trade. If the Dutch should succeed in getting possession of it they would put the last finishing stroke to the great monopoly which they have established in the Indian Archipelago. If we are wise enough to take advantage of the opportunity now afforded to us, we secure to all time a powerful entrepot for our ships of commerce, to the seas of the Indian Islands and to the Chinese coast beyond. At the present time the Dutch hold the ports of the Banda Straits—the Straits of Malacca should be ours. Singapore, from its position at the apex of the Malay Peninsula, is, of course, the point most favorable for the establishment of a powerful security towards this end; but if the north-western coast of Borneo should fall into other hands than our own it might prove a fertile centre of annoyance to us at a future day. It has been said by persons imperfectly acquainted with the incidents of weather and navigation in these regions, that the north-west coast of Borneo is too distant from the southern mouth of the Malacca Straits to be of much consequence to our trade. The result really varies with the seasons of the year. The London merchants, who are, generally speaking, keenly enough alive to their own interests, sum up the advantages which they hope to derive from the acquisition by England of this territory in the following words: "The marine command of the southern shore of the Chinese Sea, the possession of an extensive coal-field, the value of which in its power of ultimate supply can scarcely be overrated, the means of establishing and maintaining electric communication with China, the development of a country rich in tropical productions, the increase of trade and spread of British influence and the advancement of civilization in the Eastern world."—London Times.

The Heart Beating after Death.

The papers are still discussing the question whether Magee, the murderer, who was hung in Boston, and whose heart was beating when the physicians dissected him, was killed by the rope or the scalpel.—The Springfield Republican thinks he died by hanging, and says:

"Supplies of nervous power are kept up in certain portions of the organism and, some of the processes of life continued after the grand nervous centre—the heart—is dead. These will be kept up for a time and then they will cease. Particularly will this be the case where the death is sudden and violent. In such case, under proper circumstances, the whole body does not die together. This, we have no doubt, was the case with Magee. We have witnessed some striking instances of this in animals. We remember a rattlesnake killed by a party mowing bushes near Mr. Holyoke, at eight o'clock in the morning. To avoid all accident with him, his head was cut off, a large stone rolled from its bed, and the head deposited there, the stone or rock being rolled back upon it. At noon four hours after, he was taken up and and his skin stripped from him, when the little company of farmers standing by witnessed an exhibition of the circulation of the blood beyond all power of human experiments. The heart was quietly telling its accustomed rythm, throwing the blood into the arteries, laid bare to the eyes, and beneching off into numberless minor vessels—the heart continued to beat until the flesh began to dry, and "went through the motions" even after there was no effect produced upon the arteries. Was the snake dead, or not? Our opinion is that he was decidedly dead, and never knew anything about his skinning; yet if a snake has a brain and his brain was in his head, it had lain crushed beneath a rock, discovered from the body for four hours.

But we can state a more striking instance than this, as can many who have made experiments, and have not cared for a little cruelty when in the pursuit of knowledge. We have seen the belly and breast of a living frog ripped open, and the heart cut out, while it was throbbing with full life.—This heart beating in the fingers, we have seen layed upon a dry pine board, where it trobbed regularly twenty minutes by the watch. It was then cut away from all the nervous centres, unless there was one attached to it, and seemed to operate by a supply in itself, and capable of being retained, until it was all expended in the discharge of its office. Yet we all of us understand that the moment the heart was gone from the frog, he was dead, without any chance for resuscitation."

A YOUNG MAN SENTENCED TO DEATH. English papers contain an account of the trial and conviction of a young man named John Baker Backwell, for the murder of his grandfather and grandmother. The deceased, John Backwell, was a farmer and a small tea-keeper, living at a little inn called the Cottage Inn, in the hamlet of Coombe, in Somersetshire. He and his wife Betsey lived together. The prisoner was their grandson, and before 1857 he had for a considerable time been living with them, and had slept in a little inner room, entered through the room in which the old people slept. He was aware, therefore, of their habits, and he knew where their money was kept. In 1857 he was away from the neighborhood for some time, and on his return, although he continued in their employ, working in a little homestead which his grandfather occupied, he ceased to sleep at the house, and he lived in the house of his father, at a hamlet called Edgborough, about half a mile off across the fields.

On the day before the murder, the deceased had been talking in the prisoners hearing, of his possessing some £40. About half-past five on the following morning, the neighbors heard a noise like the discharge of a gun in the direction of the cottage. The old man was found lying dead on some straw in the cellar, with a gunshot wound in the head. The straw was burning. In the bed room the old woman was found, her skull beaten in. The house had been ransacked. A gun was found in the kitchen, with a peculiarity about the lock which prevented a stranger from firing it, and there was found in a straw rick, close by a hay knife, which had evidently been washed, and in the pig-sty was found a handle, tied up in a handkerchief, to which blood had been written to the prisoner, a knife which had been lent to him, a £5 note which was suspected to be a note changed, before the murder, by his grandfather, and other articles. The jury, after a brief consideration, pronounced the prisoner guilty. His Lordship then passed sentence of death, holding out no hope of mercy. The prisoner, who had manifested great indifference throughout the trial, felt the truth instantly.

Oliver Cromwell

THURING A PARLIAMENT OUT OF DOORS.

Oliver Cromwell's speech to the Parliament, when he turned it neak and hook out of doors, is worth repeating, as a specimen of the various eloquence of that strong-headed and strong-armed man:—

"It is high time for me to put an end to your sitting in this place, which you have dishonoured by your contempt of virtue, and defiled by the practice of every vice. Ye are a factious crew, and enemies of all good government. Ye are a pack of mercenary wretches, and would, like Esau, sell your country for a mess of pottage, and like Judas betray your God for a few pieces of silver. Is there a single virtue now remaining among you? Is there one vice you do not possess? You have no more religion than a horse. Gold is your God. Which of you have not bartered away your conscientious for bribes!

"Is there a man among you that has the least care for the good of the Commonwealth? You sordid prostitutes! have you not defiled the sacred place, and turned the Lord's temple into a den of thieves? By your immoral and wicked practices you have grown intolerably odious to a whole nation. You who were deputed here by the people to get their grievances redressed, are yourselves the greatest grievances. Your country, therefore, calls upon me to cleanse this augean stable, for putting a final period to your iniquitous proceeding in this house, and which, by God's help, and the strength He has given me I now intend to do. I command you, therefore, upon the peril of your lives to depart immediately out of this place. Get! Get you out! Make haste! You venial slaves, begone! Take away that shining bauble there—the Speaker's mace—and lock up the doors!"

Mr. Morphy's Doings in England.

From Bell's Life in London, Aug. 24.

Since the arrival of Mr. Morphy, the young American Philidor, in England, he has played constantly with all who have wished to present themselves, and his career so far has been one of unmixed triumph. The skeptics who turned up their noses at a boy of twenty being a first rate, are now muttering in bated tones about "exceptions to the usual rule," and so forth.

We candidly own we consider Mr. Morphy a phenomenon, and are delighted to hail in him certainly the finest player since McDonnell and Le Bourdonnais. Results in chess speak for themselves; and great talent is neither to be written down nor inferior talent written up, save for a season. Mr. Morphy has favoured us with the exact score of all the games he has played since he came to the old country, not thinking it worth while to include a number of games played giving the large odds of rook or knight, all of which he has won. Beginning with Herr Lowenthal—while we write the match is not over; but Morphy has but one more party to win. They have played twelve games, of which Morphy scores eight, draws one, and, loses three. With Mr. Barnes of the St. George's Club, Mr. Morphy has played 26 games, winning nineteen and losing seven. With Mr. Boden Mr. Morphy played nine games, winning five, loosing one, and drawing three. Of twelve games contested with Mr. Bird, Morphy gained no less than ten, drawing one and losing one. With Mr. Hampton the American has played and won two games; and of six played against the veteran, Herr Lowe, the American wins six. With the Rev. Mr. Owen, Morphy played five games, winning four and losing one; and then giving pawn and move for a match of five games, won all five, drew two, and lost none! It was agreed that if Mr. Morphy beat Mr. Owen at pawn and move, he was to play a second match at pawn and two moves, which match we shall, doubtless, therefore, hear of in due course, Morphy being remarkably given to carry out all his undertakings. He has hardly yet found time to play with the leading members of the London Club, but we anticipate some good battling yet with their most promising player, Mr. Geo. Medly, destined, we believe, to go far on the chess road to fame. We are glad to say Mr. Morphy is in excellent health and spirits, certainly stouter in form than when he landed on our shores, and much pleased with the kind reception he has met with generally. A few words, now, on the prospect of a match between Morphy and Staunton, respecting which, note that we aim at fact, not comment. Mr. Morphy has thrice challenged Mr. Staunton, and the receipt of his cartel has been thrice courteously acknowledged. The first challenge was in print, in an American chess monthly, from the New Orleans Chess Club, inviting any stake up to $5,000 a side. Mr. Staunton's reply indicated a great desire to play Morphy, but a refusal to come so far; and for this he could not be blamed. Morphy crossed the sea, and repeated his challenge, for the second time, over sone, receiving for answer a polite renewal of Mr. Staunton's wish to play, but a desire to have a "few weeks" preliminary practice, study of openings, and so forth. Mr. Morphy bowed assent, as he does to almost everything, but the few weeks, and a few more, passing without the day being fixed, the initiative here being clearly thrown upon Mr. Staunton, Morphy sent his third challenge in writing, and received a written reply this week. But, unfortunately, this written reply is merely the old "delighted to play," and the rest of it; no day or even month fixed for the encounter. Morphy, perhaps, hardly feels it delicate to send a fourth cartel, but we think his straightway course would be to do so, simply saying, "Will you kindly name the day, or do you decline accepting my challenge." Mr. Morphy leaves all conditions to Mr. Staunton, and will play for any stake, from £100 to £500 on each side. A gathering of chess players takes place at Birmingham on Tuesday next, at which both Messrs. Morphy and Staunton will be present. Unless the day and hour for beginning the match, are then fixed the whole is smoke, and the chess circle must draw their own conclusions.—Mr. Morphy stands, in relation, meanwhile, to Staunton, something like our gallant Brooks did in the Shannon of Boston, when he sent his well-known cartel to the American captain of the Chesapeake:—"Your flag requires a victory such as you would gain in taking my ship, to give you the position in the eyes of nations you pretend to take up. I can remain here but eight-and-forty hours longer, wanting as I do provisions and water. So do run the heroic to come at once and fight if you mean it." It must always be remembered that Morphy is here merely as a traveller, and therefore cannot afford to wait for an adversary all the day of games 1860. If Mr. Staunton declines his challenge, Mr. Morphy will probably run over to Paris to play Harwitz, and from thence on to Germany to encounter Anderssen.

A VENERABLE PRETENCE.—A western paper concludes the following modest announcement: "Wants a situation, a provincial paper to rule in exchange, to take charge of the advertisements by a printer and publisher of forty years' standing. Would accept of a professorship in any of the academies. Has no objection to teach ornamental painting and penmanship, geometry, trigonometry, and other sciences. Is particularly adapted to act as pastor to a small evangelical church, or as a local preacher. He would have no objection to form a small but select class of interesting young ladies, to instruct in the higher branches. To a dentist or chiropodist he would be invaluable, as he can do almost anything. Would board with the family if decidedly pious. For further particulars inquire of Colonel Buffalo, at Brown's Saloon.

Crops in the States.

WISCONSIN.—A writer in Columbia county, Wisconsin, gives his opinion that wheat, oats and barley in that county, will not give over one-fourth the usual yield. grass is good; potatoes are not; corn generally dull, though not as much planted as usual, and that is late.

A letter from Green Lake, Wisconsin, Aug. 27, says:

"We have had dry cool weather for the last sixteen days, and grain is nearly all in stack. The thrashing machines have commenced their busy tune on every side.—Three varieties of spring wheat are grown here; Canada Club, Fyfe wheat, and Rio Grande. Probably more than half of all sown is of that kind, all of which is badly damaged by rust. Many fields are not cut, some are cut that will not pay for cutting and threshing; others will produce half a crop, and a few nearly a full crop. The other kind named, will yield nearly an average crop, so that on the whole I think that, two-thirds as much wheat will go to market from this vicinity, as last year. This will prove true of the west half of Fond du Lac county, and the county of Green Lake, I presume, many will not agree with me in this estimate, but place it much lower. This town (Green Lake) in 1857 produced 80,947 bushels of wheat, from 4,099 acres, an average of nearly twenty bushels to the acre."

A correspondent in Richmond county says it has been generally conceded among farmers that the wheat crop was not above half the average, and the oat crop but little better, and the thrashing machines are proving that even this estimate was full high. The number of bushels to the acre is small and light. Some farmers have told me that their oats do not weigh more than from 15 to 20 lbs per bushel. The dry weather of July prevented corn from earing well. still it was hoped that the corn and buckwheat would prove to be fair crops; but this hope has been effectually dispelled, by a killing frost which came upon us August 28, which has killed corn while in the roasting ear, and buckwheat just as the kernal was forming. I have ridden to-day through the fertile valleys of Willow and Bear Creeks, and should judge that but little sound corn would go into the crib this Fall, and that scarcely a field of buckwheat would pay for harvesting. Possibly in the northern, timbered portions of the county the injury has been less severe; but in all the southern part, and in the south-west edge of Sank county, where I have been, the frost has been a black one. Even our crop is a failure.

Another letter from Green Lake county says, that the Club wheat, which is the kind most sown, will not yield over fifteen bushels, at best, and mostly not over ten bushels, and some fields not harvested. One neighbour leaves 100 acres unharvested, another 40, and many smaller parcels are uncut; from which it may be inferred that much that is cut will be very poor. But little thrashing is done, as our harvest is not entirely completed. The Mediterranean and Fyfe varieties, of which comparatively small quantities were sowed, are better by far than the Club. Oats early sown, are fair, late ones rusted. Corn promises fair; potatoes ditto. Apples, in orchards come to bearing, are fine. Plums (the red wild, our only variety), for the first time in ten years, are a total failure.

In Illinois, the present prospect about corn is that there will be about two-thirds of a crop if the frost holds off long enough for it to ripen.

GRASSHOPPERS.—In this State a vast amount of injury will be done by the grasshoppers. In Oswego county some farmers have been obliged to feed cattle out of their winter stores, in consequence of destruction of pastures by these little pests.

The Peasantry of India.

Before taking my final leave, a few remarks upon the state of the country through which we have just travelled may not be without interest. Let me then, dear reader, put bye swords and round shot, and say a few words about our crops and villages. Perhaps the most singular feature in the rebellion of 1857 (and there are many) is, that while the whole of this side of India has been for ten or twelve months past one vast scene of anarchy and confusion, with the country overrun and plundered by bands of men a thousand times more brutal and rapacious than our Sepoys (bad enough in all conscience), with town fighting against town, tribe against tribe, property a mere matter of might, and with human life counting as next to nought:—notwithstanding all this, the poor ryot of India has gone on scratching and sowing his fields just as he had, good man, in 1855–56.—Turn off the Grand Trunk Road, where there are too many proofs of 1857, get away from the blackened walls of police-stations, houses, &c., and you will find it hard, indeed, in a country so magnificently cultivated as that we have passed through since we left Delhi, to believe yourself still in the midst of revolted India.

Large villages everywhere meet the eye buried in crops of every species of grain; and although very many of the villages seemed deserted, lowing cows and playing children tell that the villagers were not far distant. We owe it to our Sepoys, and those who duped them into turning against us, that the villagers begin to fear and run from the white man. Some Mehwattee women hiding among the hills told a servant of mine, when asked why the Mehwattees were in arms, "that they had heard the British Government were going to make Peringhees of them all!" Perhaps if you asked them people what induced them to toil and work, when unable to say who might reap their harvest, they would be unable to answer the question. The ryots of India (I allude to the present generation), ignorant of the history of their own land, the exactions of a Mogul dynasty, and the olden raids of the Mahratta and Pindarees, have toiled in their fields during 1857 in a way which certainly never would have continued. The peasantry may or may not have foreseen the re-establishment of British supremacy; the chances are, that the mass of people believed that our sun had set forever; and I attribute the luxuriant cultivation which we behheld to no political calculations on the part of the gentle Hindoo, but simply to the "hereditary, to-day as yesterday" character of the people of Hindostan.

In those districts in which any numbers of our Sepoys, or other rebels have been quartered, there will be dickens enough to punish the villagers. The Sepoy would be the fattest consumption has been thrown away; and until the next crops can be got in, unless immediate steps are taken to relieve these districts, we must be prepared to hear of distress and famine.—There has been no failure in the crops; the pressure has simply been too great upon this or upon that part of the country; the number of mouths to be fed is actually smaller than it was in 1856, and all that we want is a little equalization of the grain left us.

All our large cities have been sacked again and again, and in many cases by the country people round them; and millions of money, buried by the cupidity of the Hindoo, are now scattered broadcast over the land. The destruction of a village means nothing. A people who live without furniture or household goods can loose little; some grass and bamboos rectify matters in a week. Really it is not too much to say that India itself has suffered little by 1857. I speak of money, houses and the land only, and the people, as a body, are too well aware of the advantages of peace and quiet to be anxious for a renewal of the tragedy of 1857–58. The warlike races, too, must be thoroughly convinced of the futility of their late attempt, and all resistance must shortly cease.

Frightful Railway Collision.

12 LIVES LOST.

The most serious catastrophe that has ever occurred on a Railway in the Midland district, took place last night on the Oxford, Worchester and Wolverhampton line between Round Oak and Brettel-lane station, a few miles beyond Dudley. By it eleven persons were instantaneously killed, another died a few hours afterwards, several more were so severely injured that their recovery is despaired of, others are maimed for life, and a great number were more or less injured. The accident took place under the following circumstances:—On Monday there was a "very cheap Sunday-school excursion to Worchester." A special train was announced to leave Wolverhampton for Worchester at 9 15, "calling at all stations, for the express purpose of conveying the teachers and children of the various schools to Worchester and back." The fare from Wolverhampton and Stourbridge, and all intermediate stations to Worchester and back, was 1s for adults and 6d for children: from Hagley, Churchill, Kiderminster, and Worchester it was 8d for adults and 4d for children; and from Droitwich and Fernal Heath 6d for adults and 3d for children. This extraordinary low rate of charges naturally attracted a large number of passengers, and by the time the train arrived at its destination it had been augmented to 45 carriages computed to contain nearly 2,000 passengers. The return train was announced to leave Worchester at 6 15 p. m. Those having charge of the arrangements determined to divide the train and instead of having one monster train propelled by two engines, to have two trains each drawn by one engine. Accordingly about 25 minutes after 6 o'clock, the first train left Worchester station. It consisted of 29 carriages, closely packed with passengers, and was followed in a quarter of an hour by the second train, consisting of 16 carriages. Each train called at the stations, and all went on well with the first until its arrival at Round Oak, which took place about 8 5. There, either just before the train arrived at the station, which is situated on a steep incline, or when it was put in motion to leave the station, twelve or thirteen of these last carriages became detached from the former part of the train by breaking one of the couplings of two of the carriages, and rolled back down the incline towares Brettel-lane with ever increasing velocity. The guard who occupied the van at the extremity of the train applied his break with all the force of which it was capable, but its power was insufficient to check the retrograde motion of the carriages, which soon attained a very high rate of speed. On arriving at Bughole, a little more than half-way to Brettel-lane, they dashed into the second excursion train, which as before stated, was despatched from Worchester only fifteen minutes after the first, and being a lighter train naturally gained upon it during the journey. The driver of the second train, perceiving the carriages running back upon him down the incline, had nearly succeeded in bringing his train to a stand at the time of the collision, thus considerably mitigating the severity of the crash. But as it was the consequences were fearful. The guard's van and the carriage next to it were split into matchwood, and the second carriage escaped little better. The guard jumped out just before the collision occurred, and escaped without injury; but the effect upon the passengers crowded in the two shattered carriages were dreadful. The scene that ensued it is impossible to describe.—Fragments of the crushed and broken carriages, mutilated human forms, some still in death, some writhing in their last agonies other seriously but not fatally hurt, shrieking with pain and terror, were commingled in a general melee, hardly distinguishable amid the darkness, and the dust occasioned by the collision. The terrified passengers who escaped without serious injuries, ran hither and thither in bewilderment, and for a time none knew what to do. A few of the more self-possessed, however speedily bestirred themselves to render all possible assistance to the unfortunate sufferers, and remove them from the rack that bestrewed the line, and messengers were despatched for medical and other aid. It was soon apparent that the loss of life was lamentably great. Eleven lifeless forms were discovered amongst the rubbish, in addition to many frightfully mangled and disfigured. As speedily as possible the latter were conveyed on stretchers, furnished by the shivered carriages to the various hotels in the neighbourhood; and the next duty attended to was the removal of the dead in like manner. Many of those only slightly injured proceeded onwards by the train, and it it probable that a complete list of the casualties resulting from this sad affair will never be obtained.

Attempted Assassination of a Free Church Missionary.

A letter just received in Edinburgh from the Rev. Dr. Thompson (Broughton Place Church) gives the following painful details of an attempt made on Sabbath last to assassinate the Rev. Mr. Salwartz, Free Church Missionary to the Jews of Amsterdam:—"Amsterdam, August 2, 1856.—Perhaps you may be a little surprised at hearing from me so soon after my arrival in Amsterdam; but I think it only dutiful to write you a few lines with a view especially of their finding their way to the members of the Free Church in reference to what happened yesterday morning to Mr. Schwartz, the excellent missionary of the Free Church to the Jews in Amsterdam. I went yesterday morning at ten o'clock to worship with Mr. Schwartz's large congregation, and to hear him preach. [illegible] a little time on account of [illegible] my way, I was surprised to see the people collecting, all pressing [illegible] of-a-sudden, and in [illegible] Schwartz [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] which will be distributed for educational purposes, but the precise mode of such distribution has not yet been decided.—Evening Herald.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Life Association of Scotland.
For Sale—Jane Harrington.
Lumber—Shaw & Watt.
Notice—Wm. Eastland.
Boy Wanted—Sawers & Murray.
The Steamer "Fly."
Auction Sale—John Paton.

The Examiner.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 25, 1858.

To Our Subscribers.

Our third year's relationship has commenced, and we are happy to say that the circle of our acquaintances is still widening, and from all our friends comes the gratifying word of approval of our endeavours to furnish them with a family newspaper worthy of the name. Our labours shall be still unwearied in the cause of the people, and we hope still to meet the same favour that has hitherto been awarded us. Much may be done by our present subscribers in adding more names to our list, and we rely on our friends to accord us their aid in this respect. We have only to add, that while we are always willing to grant every indulgence in hard times, we trust those who have enjoyed this heretofore, will see it their duty to exert themselves towards the redeeming of these favours now.

Life Association of Scotland.—We beg to direct the attention of our readers to the 19th Annual Report of the above Association which will be found in another column. The "hard times" seemed to have affected their business very little, as this year's business is the largest but one which the Association has ever transacted, and the total is certainly surprising. We believe it to be considerably larger than any office doing business in Canada, which speaks well for the popularity of the system pursued by the Institution. It appears already to have transacted a large business in this Province, and cannot fail to do much better, when money gets more plentiful. Robert Dennistoun, Esq., is agent for the Company in Peterboro', and we should recommend intending assurers to call on him and get the necessary papers.

That By-Law.

The statute 18 Vic., chapter 2, sec. 5, gives, it appears, to the Municipalities of this Province the same amount of control over the annual funds accruing from the sales of the Clergy Reserves as from those derived from ordinary taxation; and, sure enough, our Municipality of Peterboro' have not gone beyond the exact letter of the Act, when they appropriated some £900 the other year to the Union School, that is, to educational purposes generally! But Dr. Ryerson declares that all rate-payers have an equal right to share in these Clergy Reserve Funds—the appropriation being, in each case, in exact ratio to the number of rate-payers and nothing else. Wherefore our Municipality have not been just, certainly not generous, in overlooking, upon the occasion above referred to, those rate-payers who are supporting Separate Schools—but as the law protects this exclusive dealing we shall let it pass.

Not so, however, must we treat the new By-law which contemplates the early issue of Debentures in support of the lucky Union School. I therefore begin by asking, how are those Debentures to be provided for? Is it by special rate upon all ratepayers except the supporters of Separate Schools? Or is it by the taxes which are equally levied upon all persons in proportion to their property within the corporation?—What provision is there in this By-law providing for the exemption of the property of the supporters of Separate Schools from the payment of these bonds or debentures upon maturity, in the event of their being sued? Must we appeal to the School Acts against Municipal legislation? It strikes me that the Corporation has not been just, and as I said before, certainly not generous, in the late distribution of the Clergy Reserves money—but they ought equally to conform to the letter of the School laws when these laws happen to protect those unfortunate rate-payers whose consciences tax them with the heavy support of Separate Schools. What think you, Mr. Editor?

Yours truly,
A Rate-payer.

Peterboro', Sept. 12, 1858.

The Atlantic Cable not Working

Cessation of Messages.

New York, Sept. 8.

A communication from Mr. Field says he has received from Newfoundland a despatch, informing him that although the insulation of the Cable is perfect, no message has come over it for several days. The last message he received from England was dated London, Sept. 1. He is unable to state the cause of the cessation of messages, but conjectures that it is the change of the shore end at Valentia, which he was informed was about to be done.

Second Despatch.

New York, Sept. 8.

When the Africa sailed from Liverpool on the 31st ultimo, it was known that the connection between Professor Whitehouse and the Atlantic Telegraph Co. would cease on or about the 1st of September. It would therefore appear much more probable that the working of the cable had ceased from some action on the part of that gentleman, or some of his partizans, than that it had ceased for six or eight days from the cause suggested by Mr. Field.

It should also be stated that Professor Thompson was to succeed Prof. Whitehouse in a series of experiments upon the cable, but although his system was regarded as infallible in England, Whitehouse is probably ambitious, it is quite plausible that the latter may be manufacturing intelligence to counteract the Prof. Thompson's experiments.

In connection known at the sailing of the Africa that the Directors, despairing of ultimately profits from the operation of Professors Whitehouse and Thompson, had arranged with Prof. Hughes to take charge of the electric departments of the Company's business, and it was expected that the Hughes instruments would be placed at Trinity Bay and Valentia on or about the 20th or 25th instant, and from the experiments made at Plymouth, there is no reasonable doubt but that Professor Hughes will be able to transmit intelligence through the cable reliably, and at the rate of about 300 words per hour.

Diplomatic Relations.

The visit to Cherbourg.

From the Economist.

It must be owned that never was absolute power, however obtained, used with greater care for the promotion of the interests of a nation, than it has been in the hands of Louis Napoleon. Whether as a ruler, or as an ally, he has never failed to see that his own ultimate interests and security lay in the prosperity of the French people, and the confidence of near and powerful neighbours. His conduct has been both enlightened and far sighted. He has tried to earn and to retain the good opinion of France: and he willingly lent his aid to avert European danger at a critical moment. This is all true, and there is no disposition in England to withhold from the Emperor of the French the credit that is due to the use he has made of his power; still less to discourage that friendly alliance which the true interests of the two nations render so desirable. But what thinking men dislike is, that, untrue to our own foreign policy, our relations are becoming too personal to be national; and that they are becoming so with a Sovereign and a government whose antecedents and whose principles are less in real unison with those of our Sovereign and our Government than almost any other that could be found in Europe. Every one can see how much the Emperor of the French and his principles of government have to gain by the closest personal relations with Queen Victoria and her Ministers; but what England and free institutions have to gain by making the Emperor of France an exception to the generally dignified and purely national rules which we apply to our foreign diplomatic relations, we are at a loss to conceive. Do not let us be misunderstood. We are speaking of the two Courts, not of the two nations. It is because the public believe that the real cordiality between the two nations, which must ever rest upon open, frank, and avowed sentiments, may be embarrassed, if not endangered, by intimate personal connections between Ministers and Courts, that they see a danger in such an exceptional departure from the recognized system upon which our foreign relations rest.

Nor can it be said we are without warnings that should induce us to shun this danger. There was indeed a friendly relation between Louis Philippe and Queen Victoria, such as might well exist between two powerful Sovereigns ruling two neighbouring nations. The King of the French paid a visit of state and ceremony to the Queen of England at Windsor. The Queen returned it by a visit partaking more of a private character to the Chateau d'Eu. The two sovereigns met and the two Ministries met. Compliments no doubt were exchanged; but business also, it is said, was transacted. Both the Ministers are still living, and no doubt when their biography comes to be written by those who have access to their private papers, a very different account will be given of the word-of-mouth engagements as to the Spanish marriages. In the meantime it is no secret that on the one side there has been a lasting impression that deception was successfully practised under cover of confidential assurances, which would not have been possible in ordinary diplomatic communications. Again, it was impossible not to see the embarrassment of the personal character of our relations with France produced in the beginning of the present year, on occasion of the dastardly attempt on the Emperor's life. When the debate upon Mr. Milner Gibson's motion took place in the House of Commons, there were no public documents to show the course taken by the Foreign Minister on the part of England. But, when a few days afterwards, Lord Clarendon came to defend himself and the Government, he produced enough in the shape of private letters, and of reported personal interviews and conversations, to satisfy the most fastidious that the honour of England had been perfectly defended. But what Parliament requires, and what the public have a right to expect, is, that the business of the nation shall be conducted in as open and a formal manner, in such documents as can be laid upon the table of the House. One-half of what Lord Clarendon said in private notes, if embodied in a public despatch, would have satisfied the House of Commons and the people of England. Every one in practice knows how to suspect private notes and personal understandings in matters of business, and a nation like England was the last to be satisfied that its interests shall rest upon such basis. The modern theory of foreign diplomacy, which recognises a relation between nations and not between rulers—that is, between the Ministry of two countries, only as the organs for the time being of the people—does not admit of any mode of transacting public business, except

Let us not lose sight of the fact that all the changes which have taken place in the Government of France have arisen from domestic and internal causes, and we may well judge from the tone which the French Government assumed towards England when it saw danger in February, what it would expect from us if more serious danger was threatened. At all events it is not for the public interest that this country should be so much compromised with the Government of France. What England really wants in her diplomatic relations is a firm and dignified, but respectful and conciliatory tone towards all nations, avoiding equally with all that familiarity which tends to aggravate embarrassments when they do arise, and to lower us in the respect of other nations. Of course in all these matters it is to the Executive Government that the country looks. It is well known that a proposal for a royal visit can be made only through the Queen's Ministers, and that, in the first place, a word of discouragement will prevent the matter from going further. It is, therefore, the Ministers of the Crown alone who are to be held responsible for the nature of the diplomatic relations between this country and others, or whether they acquire a mere personal and private character.

Why Farmers are Unhealthy.

Farmers ought to be universally well developed, robust, symmetrical, strong and healthy, and farmers wives and daughters rosy cheeked, full bosomed, lithe, active, graceful and beautiful. If they are not so, then there must be a cause. What is it? A writer in the Water Cure Journal says on this point:—"The American farmers breathes pure air all day in the fields, but shuts himself up in a small, close, unventilated bedroom, and breathes carbonic acid all night; he has, or may have, an abundance of the best materials for a wholesome diet—the cereal grains, fruits, vegetables, pure milk, etc., but in utter contempt of these luxuries, he often fills his much abused stomach with pork and deleterious kinds of food, washed down with strong tea and muddy coffee. He eats too much flesh-meat, (of which pork is the worst form), too much butter, too much fine flour bread, too much hot biscuits, poisoned with cream of tartar and saleratus, and too little coarse bread, garden vegetables, fruits and milk. Country cookery (we are sorry to be obliged to say it) is generally bad—even worse than that of the city. Saying nothing of tobacco, rum and whiskey, in which farmers sin in common with other classes, we have certainly found a cause for much of the ill health which pravails among our agricultural population; but there is one other circumstance unfavorable to health which should be adverted to in passing. This is the intellectual and social stagnation which is often permitted to prevail among our farming communities. Farmers read, study, and think too little, and allow their lives to be too monotonous. Perfect physical well-being, as we have seen, requires the constant and pleasurable exercise of the intellect and social affections as well as the body. The farmers need but to study and obey the laws of life and health, as their occupation gives them ample opportunity to do, to present to the world perfect specimens of healthy, vigorous and beautiful manhood. They cannot often attribute their diseases and deformities to their vocation."

Testimonial to Dr. George Lawson.

Dr. George Lawson being about to proceed to America, to occupy the Chair of Chemistry and Natural History in Queen's College, Kingston, Canada, some of his friends resolved to present him with a testimonial of their esteem, more particularly for recording their sense of the services he has rendered to the Royal, the Royal Physical, the Horticultural, the Botanical, and the Arboricultural Societies, and other public institutions in Edinburgh. Accordingly, a subscription was set on foot, and, within a few weeks, upwards of one hundred parties put their names on the list of subscribers.

A meeting of the subscribers was held on Thursday last at the Botanic Gardens, when Professor Balfour announced the amount of the subscription, and explained the steps taken in regard to the testimonials. Thereafter he gave the following history of Dr. Lawson's career:

George Lawson was born in the year 1827 at Maryton, a beautiful village on the banks of the Tay, not many miles from Flisk, where Dr. Fleming spent so many years of his life, and on whose ministrations, in former years, several of Dr. Lawson's relatives attended. The family, soon after his birth, removed to Dundee, but most of his childhood summers were spent with a relative in a secluded cottage on the Newton Hill, not far from Kilmany. There ample opportunities were afforded for the observation of the wild plants and animals of the neighbourhood, and his solitary rambles on the hill sides were no doubt instrumental in laying the foundation of that love of nature which seemed in after life to grow up with him as a deeply-rooted instinct, rather than as an acquired taste.—During these summer visits to the Newton Hill, although he was not then more than six or seven years of age, his industry speedily filled the cottage with natural products of all kinds from the neighbouring woods and fields; and tiny gardens, cut out of the turf on the hill-sides, were made the receptacles of wild orchids and other flowers from the neighbouring valleys. After a suitable education Mr. L. was apprenticed to a Solicitor in Dundee, with the view of following the legal profession; but his private readings were not confined to "Erskine's Institutes" and "Blackstone's Commentaries." The discovery in the Watt Institution Library of such works as "Loudon's Magazine of Natural History" and "Fleming's Philosophy of Zoology," opened up a more congenial line of thought, and led him to pursue Natural History as a science. The surrounding district seemed to offer many facilities for its pursuit in a practical manner. The Sands of Barry, the Sidlaw Hills, and many other noted localities in the neighbourhood of Dundee, were so frequently quoted in books as stations for rare species, that it seemed probable that he should meet with some objects of interest. And he was not disappointed. His excursions resulted in the addition of many new plants to the district. His first excursion, in 1843, was to the Sidlaw Hills, where he gathered, along with many other plants, &c., Archemilla alpina, which had not previously been discovered on the Sidlaw range. For some time his natural history studies were a pursuit alone, and were greatly prompted by the excellent selection of natural history books which lay unused in the Watt Institution Library of Dundee. He soon made the acquaintance of Mr. William Gardiner, the post-botanist of that town, and enjoyed one or two excursions with him, chiefly for the collection of mosses and lichens.—The Jacksons (father and son), were the only other persons in the town who professed regard for natural history, and their acquaintance was made with much mutual benefit. While pursuing his own researches Mr. L. adopted various means to enlist others, in the pursuit of which he found so much gratification. One of these was the establishment of a monthly manuscript periodical, called the "Dundee Natural History Magazine," which was circulated gratuitously to all who would permit their names to be added to the list of local naturalists. This humble publication continued in existence for 18 months and afforded some beneficial results—one of the most gratifying of which was the ultimate establishment of a Natural History Society, consisting of a large number of working members, and which may be familiar to many by name (who now learn its origin for the first time), as the Dundee Naturalists' Association. Mr. L. also acted as Secretary to several literary societies. It may be mentioned that many of the papers which appeared originally in the "Manuscript Magazine" were in after years published in the "Phytologist," and other scientific journals. Having removed to Edinburgh, he was in the spring of 1849 elected to the office of assistant-secretary and curator to the Botanical Society, and at the same time to a similar office in the Caledonian Horticultural Society. He was also elected a fellow, and subsequently assistant-secretary of the Royal Physical Society. His position in these societies brought him in contact with scientific men and afforded many advantages for improvement in addition to those of the University. In 1850, Mr. Lawson published a small volume on Water-lillies, containing a full description, with drawings of Victoria regia, which had flowered in England, and was therefore exciting much attention. In 1854 he took an active interest in the establishment of the Scottish Arboricultural Society, and was appointed Assistant-Secretary. In that capacity he has edited the Society's transactions up to the present time. In the autumn of 1856 he was elected by the Royal Society to the office of assistant librarian—and the catalogue of the Society's library has been completed and printed under his care. While in Edinburgh, Mr. L's great aim has been to qualify himself as a teacher of science. The classes which he has attended in the University, &c., and his private studies, must have been selected with this view. In 1852, he gave a course of lectures on Botany, in connection with Mr. Hope's abstinence movement; and during the two subsequent years conducted public classes of a similar kind in Edinburgh, which were very largely attended. In 1855, he commenced a class for practical Histology, under Prof. Balfour's superintendance, in connection with the botanical class of the University; and is worthy of remark that the three gentlemen who obtained gold medals at the graduation on Monday, have all been students under Mr. Lawson. Last winter, on the unexpected death of Professor Fleming, a committee of the Free Church College was appointed, to make arrangements for conducting the class during the winter session. They selected Mr. Lawson to conduct the Botanical part of the course, and the Zoological part was conducted by Mr. A. Murray, W. S. In 1857 the University of Glessen conferred on him the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. Mr. Lawson's writings are very voluminous but almost entirely anonymous. With the exception of a few papers published in the Botanical Society's transactions, most of his writings have appeared in literary journals and reviews, such as "Chambers's Journal," "Chambers's Information for the People," "The Eclectic Review," "Sharpe's Magazine," "Hogg's Instructor," "The Scottish Review," "The Scottish Educational Journal," "The Paladium," "The British Journal," "Titan," "The Leisure Hour," "The Illustrated London News," "Illustrated Times;" also "North British Agriculturist," "Scottish Gardener," "Scottish Florist," "Gardeners' Chronicle," "The Gardeners' Companion," "The Phytologist Annals of Natural History," "Scottish Agricultural Journal," &c. Many papers on sanitary and general subjects have appeared in the "Commonwealth" and other newspapers. In addition to all these, about 150 closely printed folios anonymously in "Bailey's Monthly Circular." Dr. Lawson has been for several years engaged on a work on the "British Mosses," to be illustrated by the nature-printing process introduced to this country by Mr. H. Bradbury. The work is to form the second of the nature printed series of Messrs. Bradbury & Evans; the first of which "The British Ferns," was published some time ago by Moore & Lindley. Dr. Lawson's work is now nearly in type, and will be published in a very short time. Dr. Lawson has recently been elected Professor of Chemistry and Natural History in Queen's College, Kingston, Canada; and he expects to leave the country in a few weeks. In all the situations which Dr. Lawson has filled, he has acquitted himself in such a manner as to secure unqualified approbation. He has gained many friends, and the presentation now made shows that he is appreciated by men of science as well as by his friends—and pupils everywhere. We all know Dr. Lawson's scientific merits. He is enthusiastically fond of natural science in all its departments, and he has devoted special attention to botany. We feel that by his departure from this city we lose one whose place in our various societies cannot be easily supplied. His kind and obliging manners, his modest Christian deportment, his indefatigable zeal, his laborious and painstaking exertions, and his thorough scientific knowledge, have deservedly placed him in an eminent position in the Scottish metropolis, and have secured for him a large circle of friends. He carries with him to the land of his adoption our best wishes and earnest prayers for his success. May he be the means of advancing science in the far West, and may he obtain that support and encouragement which he so well merits. May he be long spared to act as an instructor of youth, and to gain new honours and increased favours. Though about to be separated from us by a wide expanse of ocean, we feel that the announcement this day made of the completion of the telegraph communication between Britain and America will annihilate distance, and seem to make the two countries one. In bidding Dr. Lawson farewell for the present, we trust that our intercourse with him will not cease, and that nothing will ever interupt the kind and friendly relation in which we stand to him. May God bless him, and keep him, and make him an instrument of much good in his day and generation.

Professor Balfour then presented to Dr. Lawson a handsome silver salver, with this inscription:—"Presented to Dr. George Lawson, (along with a purse of sovereigns) on the occasion of his departure from Britain to fill the chair of Chemistry and Natural History in Queen's College, Kingston, Canada, by some of his friends, who thus desire to testify their regard and esteem for him, and their appreciation of the services he has rendered to science in Edinburgh. August 5, 1858."

Dr. Lawson replied in a speech marked by much good taste and feeling; and the meeting then separated.

The Great Eastern a War Ship.—A writer in the Times says: "As a commercial speculation the Leviathan will probably turn out a total failure. As a war steamer she may be invaluable and irresistible. The length of time required to load and unload her, and the fact that so few harbours in the world are capable of receiving her enormous hull, will deprive her of the advantages which her speed might otherwise have conferred as a carrier of cargo. But an iron vessel, duly strengthened if necessary, for aggressive purposes, propelled both by paddles and by screw, and moving at the rate of 25 to 30 miles an hour, would have a momentum which no ship of the line would be able to withstand. She would not need to carry a single gun; the weight of the guns she might have carried distributed over her surface is fortifying plates, judiciously and scientifically allocated, would render her almost invulnerable. A vessel of this size and speed cruising a few miles off Cherbourg, would make a terrible havoc among any fleet which attempted to issue thence for evil purposes. I may add that more than one officer of the French navy has expressed his surprise that our Government does not at once 'take up' the Leviathan for naval use."

How Gold Lace is Made.

In an interesting description of the method of manufacturing gold lace, an exchange pointedly says that gold is not gold lace; it does not deserve this title, for the gold is applied as a surface to silver. It is not even silver lace, for the silver is applied to a foundation of silk. The silken threads for making this material are wound around with gold wire so thickly as to conceal the silk. The making of this gold wire is one of the most singular mechanical operations imaginable. In the first place, the refiner prepares a solid rod of silver about an inch in thickness; he heats this rod, applies upon the surface a coating of gold leaf, burnishes this down, applies another coating, burnishes this down, and so on, until the gold is one-hundredth part the thickness of the silver. Then the silver is subjected to a train of processes, which brings it down to a state of fine wire, and it is passed through holes in a steel plate, lessened step by step in diameter. The gold never leaves the silver, but adheres closely to it, and shares all its mutations. It is one-hundred part the thickness of the silver at the beginning, and it maintains the same ratio to the end. As to the thickness to which the gold-coated rod of silver can be brought, the limit depends on the delicacy of human skill; but the most remarkable example ever known was brought forward by Dr. Wollaston. This was an example of solid gold wire, entirely free from silver. He procured a small rod of silver, bored a hole through it from end to end, and inserted in this hole the smallest gold wire he could procure. He subjected the silver to the usual wire-drawing process, until he had brought it the finest attainable state, being in fact a silver wire as fine as a hair, with a gold wire in its centre. To isolate this gold wire, he subjected it to warm nitrous acid, by which the silver was dissolved, leaving a gold wire one thirty thousandth of an inch in thickness—perhaps the thinest round wire that the hand of man ever produced. But this wire, though beyond all comparison finer than any employed in manufactures, does not approach in thinness the fine film of gold on the surface of silver in gold lace. It has been calculated that the gold on the finest silver wire for gold lace is not more than one-third of one-millionth of an inch in thickness; that is, not above one-tenth the thickness of ordinary gold leaf.

Ninety Negroes Arrested for Going to Sunday-School.

From the Richmond (Va.) Despatch, Aug. 24.

The arrest of ninety odd negroes in the Leigh Street Baptist African Church, last Sunday morning, where they had assembled to receive instructions as Sabbath School scholars, has created no little talk in our community, many justifying the course pursued by the Mayor, while others inclined to the opinion that he has transcended his authority. That the facts may be properly understood, we lay them before our readers, as given to us by his Honor. On Sunday, the 15th inst., Lieut. Truehart and Watchman Gilman reported to the Mayor that negroes are to be seen every Sunday morning, from daylight until 10 o'clock, entering the basement of the church, with books in their hands, the officers believing that they were there the greater portion of their time, without being under the supervision of a white person.

With this information before him, the Mayor directed the two officers to go to that church last Sunday morning, and if they found that the negroes assembled there were being taught from books, or if they found them assembled together and not under the immediate supervision of white persons, to arrest the whole party and bring them before him. The officers, on entering the basement, found the negroes alone, some with and some without books—the pastors, the Rev. T. Lindsay, and perhaps other white persons, being in the room above—took them into custody, and carried them before the Mayor, by whom they were reprimanded and discharged.

The Mayor is not at all satisfied that Sabbath schools, even where negroes are taught orally, come under the head of religious worship; and as he believes that such assemblages lead to others of a worse character, will not be apt to yield his opinion, unless overruled by the Court of Appeal. If oral instruction only is given in negro Sunday schools, why are the pupils supplied with books, or allowed to take them to the schools? Do not the laws of the State impose heavy penalties on any person convicted of teaching to read and write? And were not those laws passed to prevent negroes from doing mischief with their learning? Scarcely a week passes that instruments of writing, prepared by negroes, are not taken from servants in the streets, by the police.

Riots in Kilkenny.

The Kilkenny papers give full accounts of a series of rather alarming riots which broke out there on Sunday week, and continued throughout the following day, when it was found necessary to forward a requisition to the military authorities at the Curragh for the assistance of troops to suppress the disturbances. The cause is described by a local paper as a "rebellion of the reapers," composed of agricultural labourers of the district, aided by a continent of Connaughtmen and large bodies of peasantry from Tipperary and the King's and Queen's Counties, who, it appears, had entered into an organised combination for the destruction of reaping machines and the prevention of the practice of mowing corn with the scythe. The Kilkenny Journal contains the subjoined report of the proceedings:—"We regret to announce that the peace of the city has not only been seriously endangered for some days past, but that acts of violence have been perpetrated in several parts of the county. [illegible] of labourers from this and the surrounding counties, who have been thrown out of employment by the introduction of machinery for agricultural purposes. On that Sunday upwards of 4000 persons assembled in our streets, most of them armed with reaping-hooks, yelling in a most frightful manner, to the great dismay of the citizens, who were hourly expecting nothing less than the sack of the city. Fortunately the rioters were allowed to have their own way as long as there were no overt act of violence in the streets, and we think the mayor and the authorities acted with great prudence on the occasion, as a single arrest might have led to a most lamentable consequences.—The mob, we believe consisted principally of disbanded militiamen, from Tipperary, Queen's County, and King's County, with an auxiliary force from this neighbourhood, and it would seem as if there was a certain amount of preconcert and organisation in the movement. On Sunday the city may be said to have been absolutely in their possession, but no violence took place beyond the shouting and yelling we have already mentioned. On Monday morning at daybreak, the streets rang with the rioters, who held a sort of council of war, in which it was decided that all the machinery in the country should be forthwith destroyed, as the only chance of employment for the labourer. After parading the streets for some time, they proceeded at 6 o'clock to Oldtown, about two miles from this city, the residence of a farmer named Walsh and commenced breaking his reaping machine, which they soon smashed into fragments.—Walsh offered no resistance, as he considered it useless, but looked on quietly, and the mob proceeded on their work of destruction without offering him any personal violence. At 9 o'clock they reached Pigeon Park (near Danesfort), the residgnce of M. Howson, a Scotchman, and prepared to attack his machine also. Mr Howson and his family, on the other hand, prepared to defend it; but at the very outset his gun was knocked out of his hand by a blow of a large stone, with which he was struck on the arm. One of his sons seized the gun and ran off with it, but while in the act of doing so he was closely pursued, when he turned round and fired but without effect, upon his pursuers. He was instantly seized, and the gun taken from him and broken; but he suffered no personal violence at the hands of the rioters. We regret to say that his father was not so fortunate, for while striving to defend the machine, he was knocked down, and received several severe injuries in the head and jaw; but though severely hurt, we are happy to say his life is not in danger. While Mr Howson was lying on the ground, his daughter, with the courage of a heroine, seized a pitchfork and held it above him threatening instant death to whomsoever should touch a hair of his head; but she also, after some vain resistance, was speedily disarmed, and received some slight injuries in the struggle. The machine was then broken to pieces, and more disgraceful still, Mr Howson's gold watch was carried off by the rioters.

Autumn Circuits.

HOME CIRCUIT.

The Hon. Mr. Justice Draper, C. B., C. J., C. P.

Hamilton.....Wednesday, 22nd Sept.
Owen Sound....Thursday 23rd "
Milton.....Tuesday, 28th "
Merittsville.....Wednesday, 6th Oct.
Niagara..... " 13th "
Barrie..... " 20th "

OXFORD CIRCUIT.

The Hon. Sir John B. Robinson, Bart., C. P

Simcoe.....Tuesday, 21st Sept.
Cayuga..... " 28th "
Brantford.....Wednesday, 6th Oct.
Stratford.....Thursday, 14th "
Woodstock.....Wednesday, 20th "
Guelph.....Thursday, 24th "
Berlin.....Tuesday, 29th "

WESTERN CIRCUIT.

The Hon. Mr. Justice Burns.

Goderich.....Tuesday, 28th Sept.
Sarnia..... " 5th October Sandwich.....Monday, 11th "
Chatham..... " 18th "
St. Thomas..... " 25th "
London..... " 1st Nov.

EASTERN CIRCUIT.

The Hon. Mr. Justice Richards.

Perth.....Tuesday, 5th October.
Ottawa..... " 12th "
L'Original.....Monday, 18th "
Cornwall..... " 25th "
Brockville..... " 1st Nov.

MIDLAND CIRCUIT.

The Hon. Justice M'Lean.

Whitby.....Tuesday, 21st Sept.
Peterborough..... " 28th "
Cobourg.....Monday 4th October.
Belleville.....Wednesday, 13th "
Picton.....Monday, 25th "
Kingston.....Tuesday, 2nd Nov.

☞ The amount of powder burned during the five days' fetes at Cherbourg was prodigious. In honour of the Queen alone, a naval officer stated, 25,000 blank cartridges were fired. Each blank cartridge costing 5f., it follows that £5,000 worth of powder was consumed on account of Her Majesty alone.

Commercial.

New York Market.

New York, Sept. 14.

Flour heavy and 5c to 10c lower, except for round hoop Ohio, which is scarce. Sales 8,500 brls at $3 35 to $4 25 for unsound—$4 86 to $4 95 for Superfine State—$5 30 to $5 50 for extra State—$5 20 to $5 55 for common to good Western—$5 60 to $5 70 for shipping brands extra round hoop Ohio. Canadian dull and drooping; sales 150 brls at $5 40 to $8 40 for extra. Rye flour quiet at $3 30 to $3 30.

Grain—Wheat heavy and 1c to 2c lower; sales 12,000 bushels at 114c for red Western and 125c for white Canadian.—Corn also heavy and drooping; sales 25,000 bushels at 65c to 72c for common to good mixed Western. Rye steady; sales 3,000 bushels good at 76c. Oats dull at 45c to 50c for State and Western.

Provisions—Pork dull, but very firm; sales 200 brls at $17 35 to $17 40 for mess—$19 25 for clear—$15 20 for prime. Beef remains steady and unchanged. Bacon quiet but firm. Cut meats dull at 4½c to 6½c for hams. Lard steady and sales of 300 brls at 11½c to 11½c. Butter sells to a moderate extent at 16c to 20c for State and 12c to 17c for Ohio. Cheese rules dull at 8c to 7½c, as in quality.

Groceries—Coffee firm but quiet.—Sugar and molasses both dull and heavy.—100 hhds. Cuba sugar sold at 7c to 8¼c. Stock of coffee 47,744 bags of good to prime Rio at 11c to 12c. Teas are very firm at an advance on late auction.

Toronto Markets.

Wednesday, Sept. 15.

There was a large business done in produce yesterday. The market was crowded with farmers, and there appeared to be an unusual disposition to realize. The demand for the principle articles was an unusual active, and wagons moved off the market freely.

Wheat.—Upwards of 6,000 bushels of nothing changed hands during the day. The greater part of the deliveries were mostly on grades usual but there was some splendid samples shown. The prices for good merchantable wheat ranged from 5s 3d to 5s 9d per bushel—the being reckoned for the very best. Ordinary and inferior samples brought from 4s 6d to 5s. Distillery wheat 3s 6d to 4s. The average price for the day for all grades was not over 5s 6d per bushel.

Fall Spring Wheat there is an active demand at 4s 6d a 5s per bushel.

Barley 3s a 3s 6d. Peas 2s 3d a 2s 6d.

Oats rather more plentiful a 1s 10½ a 2s.

Rye 3s per bushel.

Buttter 10d a 1s per lb. for fresh.—

Eggs 6d a 7½d per doz.

Potatoes 2s 6d a 2s 9d.

Apples 3s 3d a 4s per bushel.

Flour continues dull. Nominal quotations—are Superfine $4 80 a $4 75, Fancy $5 25, Extra $5 50 a $6 75, Double Extra $6 per barrel.

☞ The Montreal markets are reported as follows:—Flour—Good qualities are scarce and are readily saleable at our quotations. The stock is chiefly of indifferent grades. Superfine Montreal Manufacture has been sold at $4 80 to $4 90. It is now held at $5. Fancy and Extra have both advanced. The transactions of the week have been large and at improving rates. Unbrandable flour quite unsaleable. Wheat—There is no good wheat under $1 5; $1 2½ has been refused for a shipping lot of Milwaukee Club. The receipts are in excess of last year 516,000 bushels.—Some parcels, out of condition, have been placed at 85c to 86c.

Peterboro' Markets.

Examiner Office,
Thursday, Sept. 16th, 1858.

	$	c.	$	c.
Wheat per bushel	0	1	a 1	05
Oats "	0	35	a 0	00
Potatoes "	0	28	a 0	30
Turnips "	0	23½	a 0	00
Beets "	0	20	a 0	00
Onions "	0	50	a 1	00
Apples "	0	00	a 0	00
Flour per barrel	4	00	a 5	00
Pork "	14	00	a 15	00
Mutton per lb.	0	05	a 0	07
Beef "	0	07	a 0	00
Butter per lb.	0	10	a 0	12½
Cheese "	0	09	a 0	10
Eggs per dozen	0	07	a 0	10
Hay per ton	7	00	a 8	00
Wood first quality	2	00	a 2	50
Straw per load	1	00	a 2	00
Cabbage per head	0	05	a 0	07

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.

Married.

In Rashli, Ontario County N. Y., on Sept. 2nd, by the Rev. S. R. Hughston, Joseph H. Coss, to Ruth A., youngest daughter of Joseph Blodget, Esq.

BOY WANTED.

A SMART INTELLIGENT BOY about 13 or 14 years of age is wanted for the Book and Stationery Business Apply at the Store of SAWERS & MURRAY.

Peterboro', Sept. 23, 1858.

THE STEAMER "FLY,"

HAS resumed her regular trips between LINDSAY AND MUD LAKE; leaving Kelly's Wharf, Mud Lake, on Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings at 9 A. M., and Lindsay on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday mornings at 8 A. M.

Peterboro', Sept. 16, 1858.

LUMBER.

THE Subscribers offer for Sale 200,000 Feet of SELECTED CULLS AND STRIPS, on reasonable terms, in quantities to suit purchasers.

SHAW & WATT.

Peterboro', Sept. 13, 1858. 36—4t

Life Association of Scotland

NINETEENTH REPORT.

THE NINETEENTH Annual Meeting of the Association was held within the Head Office, Edinburgh, on the 3rd August current, in terms of the Charter and Act of Parliament,—Sir James Forrest, Bart., of Comiston, in the Chair.

There were submitted to the Meeting the Annual Report by the Directors on the Progress of the Business; the Report of the Auditors, Mr. W. Wood, Accountant; and the Balance Sheet of the Accounts, certified in terms of the Act of Parliament; with other statements of the Affairs, as at 5th April last, the date of balance.

Notwithstanding the general depression of commercial affairs, the Progress of the Association during the past year has been greater than in any former year, with only one exception.

The Applications for New Life Assurances during the year were.....1347 for £666,483 stg.
Of which the Directors accepted.....1006 for £550,344 stg.
The Annual Premiums being.....£19,311 stg.

Annuities on 24 lives were purchased for.....£875 10s. stg.
per annum, at the price of.....£9467 7s. stg.

The Policies that became claims on the Association by deaths during the year amounted to 85 for £43,985 stg.

The Total Assurances since the commencement of the business amount to nearly Five Million Pounds Sterling.

The Annual Income is now One Hundred and Thirty-Eight Thousand Pounds Sterling.

The Policy Holders entitled to participate in the Profits, who completed their fifth year before the date of balance, will be entitled to a Reduction of 35 per cent. (7s per £1) from their next Annual Premiums.

From the increasing wealth and importance of British North America, as well as the example of other European Offices, the Directors have for some time entertained the idea of establishing Branches there. They have been enabled since last meeting to accomplish this. A deputation from the Directors visited the chief Towns, and secured the co-operations of influential gentlemen in each Province. Although the branches have been in operation only for a few months, the transactions have already been considerable, as well as of a most satisfactory description. Special thanks are due to the gentlemen acting as Directors, Medical Officers, and Agents there, who have already interested themselves much in the Association's affairs, and through whose exertions there is every prospect of permanent success.

The Report by the Board of Directors was unanimously approved. The Vacancies in the Board were then filled up; and after special votes of thanks to the Directors at the Head Office and Branches, and the Agents, Medical Officers, Managers, &c., the meeting separated.

DIRECTORS AT MONTREAL:
9 GREAT ST. JAMES STREET,
J. G. Mackenzie, Esq., Merchant.
David Torrance, Esq., Merchant.
Duncan Murray, Jr., Esq., of Gilmepie, Moffatt & Co., Merchants.
Alexander Morris, Esq., Advocate.

SECRETARY.....JAMES GRANT.

Branches at Toronto, Hamilton, Kingston, London and Quebec.
Agencies in every Town in Canada.
Montreal, Aug. 28, 1858.

Agents:
Peterborough—Robert Dennistoun, Banker.
Cobourg—Arthur McDonald, M. P.
Lindsay—Samuel McKibbon, Bank of Upper Canada.
Port Hope—James R. Welch, Merchant. 36—18t.

AUCTION SALE
OF Valuable Real Estate,
ON ACCOUNT OF THE TRUST & LOAN COMPANY OF UPPER CANADA.

WILL BE SOLD BY PUBLIC AUCTION
On Tuesday,
29th. September, 1858,
AT NOON,
At the Sale Rooms of FRANCIS MURPHY, Walton Street, Port Hope, the following Real Estate:—

1

Under power of Sale contained in a certain Mortgage from Adam Scott and wife to the said Company, Lot No. 4, in the 3rd Concession of Manvers, excepting two acres sold for Village Lots and one acre reserved by Thos. Mitchell. There are about forty acres cleared and in a high state of cultivation, and one hundred and forty uncleared. On the premises are a frame Grist Mill two and a half stories high, with two runs of stones in good working order, worth £200. Saw Mill, with up and down Saw; a Carding and Fulling Mill; a Lathe and Shingle Mill, all in perfect working order; two Frame Dwelling Houses, Stables, Barns, &c. Also Three Water Privileges.

2

Under power of Sale contained in a certain Mortgage from Andrew Anderson to the said Company. Easterly part of Block A, Town reservation of Township of Otonabee, County of Peterborough, containing 180

BY-LAW No. CIII.

A By-Law to Authorize the Mayor of the Town of Peterborough to issue by way of loan the sum of Two Thousand Five Hundred Pounds for the purposes therein mentioned, and to issue Debentures therefor for that amount for the purposes thereof.

WHEREAS,—The United Board of School Trustees for the Town of Peterborough have brought before the Town Council of the said Town for the sum of Two Thousand Five Hundred Pounds for the purpose of aiding in the erection and furnishing of a School House for the use of the Grammar and Common Schools in said Town.

And Whereas,—It is desirable and would conduce to the advantage of the inhabitants of the Town of Peterborough that such School House should be built and furnished.

And Whereas,—It will require the sum of Four Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Seven Pounds to be raised by a special rate for the payment of such loan and interest for the space of ten years to be computed from the ... day of ... now next ensuing until the ... day of ... A. D., One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Eight, exclusive of the first and last days by annual amounts as follows—that is to say:

For the first year	£310
" second "	354
" third "	395
" fourth "	433
" fifth "	468
" sixth "	500
" seventh "	570
" eighth "	599
" ninth "	619
" tenth "	563

And Whereas,—It is proposed that Debentures to the amount of Three Thousand Five Hundred Pounds shall be issued payable with in event as hereinafter mentioned for the purpose of aiding in the erection and furnishing such School House as aforesaid.

And Whereas,—The amount of the whole rateable property of the said Town of Peterborough amounts to the sum of Sixteen Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-four Pounds one Shilling, according to the Assessment Returns thereof for the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Fifty-seven, being the financial year next preceding the year of the passing of this By-law.

And Whereas,—It is necessary for the payment of the interest aforesaid, and for the creation of a sinking fund for the payment of the principal of such loan to raise ten annual special rates in the Pound upon the total value of the whole of the rateable property as hereafter described—viz:

For the year

1859—Four pence half-penny in the pound.
1860—Five pence	"
1861—Five pence three farthings	"
1862—Six pence one farthing	"
1863—Six pence half-penny	"
1864—Eight pence	"
1865—Eight pence one farthing	"
1866—Eight pence half-penny	"
1867—Nine pence	"
1868—Eight pence	"

over and above and in addition to all other rates and assessments therein imposed for the payment of the said interest and for the creation of a sinking fund for the payment of the principal money of the said Debentures according to the requirements of the statutes in such cases made and provided.

And Whereas,—This By-law has been and was approved by a majority of the duly qualified Municipal Electors of the said Town of Peterborough at a Meeting called and held in the Town Hall, in the said Town of Peterborough, on Saturday the 25th day of September, A. D., 1858, in conformity with a resolution passed by the Municipal Council of the said Town of Peterborough for that purpose and also in conformity with the requirements of section two and the sub-sections thereof of the Act of the Parliament of this Province 16 Vic. cap. 22, in so far as by the act of the said Parliament of the said Province 18 Vic. cap. 123, the same is made applicable to all By-laws for the purpose of raising money by any Municipality.

Be it therefore enacted,—By the Town Council of the Town of Peterborough, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same,—That for the purpose of raising the said sum of £3,500 for the purposes aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for, and the Mayor of the said Town of Peterborough for the time being is hereby authorized and required to make and execute Debentures upon the credit of the said Town of Peterborough to the amount of Three Thousand Five Hundred Pounds, in sums not less than fifty pounds, such debentures to be under the common seal of the said Town of Peterborough, signed by the Mayor and countersigned by the Clerk thereof, made out in such manner and form, and payable at such periods not exceeding ten years from and after the day when this By-law shall come into operation as said Mayor shall see fit, and all sums of money so raised by the issue of the said Debentures shall be paid into the hands of the Treasurer of the said Town of Peterborough to be applied by him for the purposes hereinbefore set forth and mentioned and no other.

And be it enacted,—That the interest on such Debentures shall be payable half-yearly at the office of the said Treasurer in the said Town of Peterborough, on the ... days of ... and ... days of ... respectively.

And be it enacted,—That this By-law shall come into force and take effect on the ... day of ... in the year of our Lord, 1858.

NOTICE.

THE above is a true copy of a By-law which will be taken into consideration by the Town Council of the Town of Peterborough upon the expiration of one month from the 2nd day of September, 1858, being the date of the first publication thereof in the Examiner newspaper.

And notice is hereby given that a general meeting of the qualified Municipal Electors of the said Town of Peterborough will be held for the purpose of considering such By-law and for the approving or disapproving of the same on the 25th day of September, 1858, at the hour of 10 o'clock in the forenoon at the Town Hall in the said Town of Peterborough.

J. EDWARDS,
Town Clerk.

Peterborough, August 26, 1858.

SCOTLAND'S AUTHORS.

Arnott's, Rev. Wm.—Laws from Heaven for Life on Earth, or Illustrations of the Book of Proverbs	$1,50
Bonar's Desert of Sinai, 9 plates	1,00
Do. Land of Promise, 5 plates	1,25
Do. Night of Weeping	0,30
Do. Morning of Joy	0,40
Do. Story of Grace	0,30
Do. Truth and Error	0,40
Do. Man, his Religion and his World	0,40
Do. Eternal Day	0,50
Boston's Four-Fold Estate	0,50
Do. Crook in the Lot	0,30
Brewster's—More World's than One	0,50
Brown's Concordance, gilt 20 cts., plain	0,70
Chalmer's Dr., Miscellanies	1,50
Do. Moral Philosophy	0,60
Do. Astronomical Discourses	0,60
Dick. Dr.—Christian Philosopher	1,00
Duncan's—Tales of the Scottish Peasantry, illustrated	0,50
Do. Cottage Stories, illustrated	0,40
Family Worship—A series of Prayers adapted to Domestic Worship, by one hundred and eighty Clergymen of Scotland, 288 pages	2,50
Gilfillan's Martyrs, Heroes and Bards of the Scottish Covenant	0,60
Guthrie's, Dr., Gospel in Ezekiel	1,00
Do. The Way, the Man and Borrowing	0,60
Hetherington's History of the Church of Scotland up to the disruption	1,50
Howe's Soote Worthies, or Historical account of those who suffered for the Reformation	1,25
Martyrs and Covenanters of Scotland	0,60
Mendell's Memories of Communion	1,00
Do. Bow in the Cloud, and the First Resurrection	0,40
Do. Morning and Night Watches	0,60
Do. Footsteps of St. Paul, with plates	1,00
Do. Words of Jesus	0,40
Do. Words of Jesus	0,40
Do. Daniel, Parts 2	0,75
Do. Great Journey or Pilgrimage to Mount Zion	0,30
Do. Faithful Promiser and Altar Stones	0,30
Do. Memorials of Bonar	0,60
Nahal Grant,—A Highland Story	0,60
McOlhoun's Life, Sermons, Lectures and Essays of Him	1,50
McCosh's Method of Divine Government	1,00
Memoirs, &c.,—Lays of the Kirk and Covenant	0,75
Pastoral Theology, by Angell, Canon, &c.	0,60
Pollok's Course of Time	0,50
Scottish Poets—Sir Gawain Douglas, Translations of Virgil, with Life and Introduction	1,50
Scottish Songs—Songs of Scotland	1,00
Wilson's Spirit of Modern Philosophy	0,75

For Sale at the Book Store of
SAWERS & MURRAY.
George St., Peterboro'.

August 5, 1858. 32

Miscellaneous.

LETTER AND NOTE PAPERS.

CREAM and Blue Cadeau, ruled and plain.—Envelopes, all sizes and qualities to match. A very complete stock on hand. Merchants supplied on liberal terms.

SAWERS & MURRAY,
Stationers, &c., Peterboro'.

PETERBOROUGH LIVERY STABLE

THE SUBSCRIBER begs to inform the public that he is always ready to furnish them with horses, sleighs, carriages, and every thing required at a Livery, on the shortest notice, and on reasonable terms. His horses are in fine condition, and everything about his establishment is in good order.

He very reluctantly has to withdraw from the long credit system, and begs all who may favor him with their patronage, to remember that he can only continue to accommodate the public, by them, in turn, enabling him to keep up his business, that is, by ready pay.

THOS. EASTLAND.

Peterboro Livery Stables,
Hunter Street, Jan. 1st, 1858. } 1

UNION HOTEL.
Peterborough.

GEORGE ALLEN

RESPECTFULLY intimates to his friends and the public generally, that his establishment is still open for the reception of guests in his usual good style.

The house is new and beautifully situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, where travellers will find a quiet and desirable retreat.

☞ A limited number of respectable BOARDERS can be accommodated.

Good Stabling and Sheds

On the premises. An Ostler in attendance, who will give the best attention to horses entrusted to his care.

Peterborough, Oct. 20th 1857. 42.

NORTH AMERICAN HOTEL,

DUNDAS STREET, COBOURG.

THE above Hotel having been recently repaired, painted, and newly fitted up, and being now entirely complete in all its appointments, is now opened for the reception of the travelling public.

The House is commodious, and neither pains nor expense will be spared to make it one of the best in the Province.

The Liquors are of the best brands, and the Larder will be constantly supplied with all the delicacies of the Season.

The Stables are commodious, and an attentive Ostler is always in attendance.

The proprietor pledges himself that every attention will be paid to the wants of his guests.

☞ Omnibusses will attend at the Cars and Boats to carry passengers to the Hotel free of charge.

RALPH FRANCIS,
Proprietor,

Cobourg, August, 1857. 35

MUSIC! MUSIC!!

The Musical Bequet, (English,
AT 4d PER SINGLE NUMBER.

THE subscribers have now in stock, the following pieces, to which they respectfully invite the attention of the Ladies of Peterborough.

QUADRILLES.

The Scotch Quadrilles.
Piccolomini Quadrilles.
Les Chiens, (dogs) do.
The Lancers do.
The Don Cæsar De Bazan Quadrilles.
Belphegor do.
The British Navy do.
Les Chats, (cats) do.
Bonnie Dundee do.
Les Singes, (monkeys) do.
Lucrezia Borgia do.
Les Souris, (mice) do.
The Mosquetaers do.
The Irish do.
Puss in Boots do.
The Royal Lancers' do. do.
The Comic or Ratcatcher's do.

POLKAS.

Guy Fawkes' Polka.
The Laughing Eyes Polka.
Tomtit's do.
The Bobbin' Around do.
The Original do.
Ask Mamma do.
The Minnie do.
The Silverhair do.

FANTASIAS.

Gazelle Impromptu.
The Bush aboos Trequair.
La Violette.
Les Cloches Du Monastere.
We're a' Noddin'.
The Last Rose of Summer.
Fantasia on Bohemian Airs.
Partant Pour La Syrie.
Minnelieder, Brilliant Fantasia.
Boots who has wi' Wallace bled.
Premier Nocturne.
L'Italienne Fantasia.
Grand Galop Brillante.
Premiere Etude De Concert'.
Two Musical Sketches, Mendelssohn.

POPULAR SONGS,

WITH ACCOMPANIMENTS.

Why did my Sarah sell me.
Hey Johnny Cope and the Campbells are coming.
Hearts and Eyes.
Ellen Bayne.
Who wadna fecht for Charlie.
For Ever Dear.
Some Folks.
Bobbing Around.
Sound Britons Sound.
Dinah is the Girl for me.
Lilly Willy Woken.
The Lass that loves a Sailor,
The Lords of the Forest.
Lets be gay Boys.
The Village Maiden.
Come again dear dream.
The Sardinian National Hymn.
Thou art my Joy.
The North Carolina Rose.
Up for the Right.
Oh let me in the dark tomb lie,
The Fishermaiden.
The Camptown Races.
Strike Men Strike.
My Mary Anne.
So Early in the Morning.
The Spinning Wheel.
My Nannie O.
I Must Depart.
The Greenwood Ball.
My Gentle Dove.
There's Fortune on before us Boys.

SACRED MELODIES,

WITH VARIATIONS FOR THE PIANOFORTE.

Pleyel's German Hymn.
Vital Spark of Heavenly Flame.
Prayer from Rossini's "Mose in Egitto."
The Heavens are Telling,
Adeste Fidales.
Cujus Animam, from Rossini.
I Know that my Redeemer Liveth.
Before Jehovah's Awful Throne.
Eve's Lamentation.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Brunni Jarolami, Popular Cavatina.
Rondo in B flat.
Marches Florentines.
Ah La Morte, from Bellini.
Les Perles Deux Valses.
L'Ame ah L'Ame.
Marcia Grand Gallop.
Seven admiral Airs from H Tauretons.
The Druid's March.
Souvenir De Varsovie Mazurka.
Robert Tel Que J'Aime, &c.
Une Veue Pese Fa.
A to z Cave.
Still Really dwelling.
Rose Softly Blooming.
Vega Vega, from Bellini.

Any piece not in stock, procured on the shortest notice.

—ALSO—

100 Popular Songs, Music and Words	25 cts
200 Heavy Repertoire Songs, &c.	25 "
200 Songs of Ireland	25 "
200 Popular Comic Songs, &c.	25 "
200 Negro & Ameliorian Songs, &c.	25 "

at the
NEW BOOK, STATIONERY & MUSIC STORE,
Burnham's Block, George St. Peterborough.
SAWERS & MURRAY.

June 22, 1858 24

Insurances.

TIMES AND BEACON
ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....£250,000 STG.

£140,000 PAID UP.

HEAD OFFICE IN CANADA, KINGSTON, C.W.

CANADA BOARD OF DIRECTORS ON TRUSTEES:
The HON. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES MORTON, Esq., Kingston.

DIRECTORS

Chairman—M. U. STRANGE, Esq.
Vice Chairman—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.
JAMES MORTON, Esq., | A. J. McDONELL, Esq.
JOHN MOWAT, Esq., | JAMES HARRY, Esq.

AUDITORS

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Esq., Kingston,
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.
Standing Counsel—A. J. MACDONELL, Esq.
Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.

LOCAL MANAGER:
W. CLUXTON, Peterboro'.
Peterboro', March 21, 1857. 13.

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON
Fire & Life Insurance Co.

CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.

Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.

RESPONSIBILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS UNLIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTREAL.

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on almost every description of property, at as reasonable rates as any other responsible office.

Losses paid without reference to the Old Country.

W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.
Peterboro.' March 24th, 1857. 13

WESTERN
Insurance Company.

CAPITAL £500,000.

Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF FIRE & M INE ASSURANCE
BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',
W. CLUXTON.
Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

UNITY FIRE AND UNITY GENERAL
INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS OF ENGLAND.

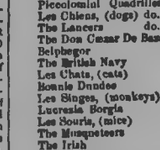
FOR every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.

CAPITAL £2,500.00 Sterling.

CHIEF OFFICE,—Unity Buildings, Canon St., London. Agent for Peterboro',
W. EASTLAND.

Peterboro', July, 1856.

Provincial Insurance Company.



OF TORONTO, C. W.

Subscribed Capital, $1,267,600, Paid up Capital, $450,000.

PRESIDENT, J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
VICE-PRESIDENT, HON. J. H. CAMERON.

Directors.

HON. W. B. ROBINSON, | E. F. WHITTEMORE, Esq.
GEO. DUNBAR, Jr., Esq. | GEO. CRAWFORD, Esq.
J. S. HOWARD, Esq. | JOHN CAMERON, Esq., M.P.P.
WM. L. PERRIN, Esq. | A. M. CLARKE, Esq., M.D.
HON. J. H. CAMERON. | DUNCAN MCDONNELL, Esq.
CAPT. F. WALLACE.

MANAGER AND SECRETARY!
HON. J. LEANDER STARR.
ASSISTANT SECRETARY:
J. JOSEPH WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK.—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS:—Messrs. DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE:
TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurance business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as in any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Brokers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.

Toronto, April 20, 1858, 43

THE COLONIAL
Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

HEAD OFFICE—Edinburgh, Scotland, and MONTREAL, CANADA.

Proposals for assurance disposed of in Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Adviser for Peterboro,—Dr. MacNab.

AGENT,
W. B. READ.
Peterboro', July 28th, 1857. 30

ALL ABOARD!

THE SUBSCRIBER respectfully begs leave to announce to the Public, that his House at Bridgenorth, (Mud Lake) is always supplied with the best accommodation and entertainment for travellers.

GOOD STABLING, DRIVING HOUSE, YARD ROOM AND STORAGE.

He also runs a STAGE to and from Peterboro' in connection with the Boats, leaving McGregor's Hotel, Peterboro', at half-past seven, A. M., to meet the boats at Bridgenorth, returning to Peterboro' on the arrival of the Boats, about 4 o'clock, P. M.

For freight or passage, enquire at McGregor's Hotel, Peterboro', or at the Subscribers Hotel, Bridgenorth. Rare cash may be. 16½d.

JOHN POPE.

Bridgenorth, June 13, 1858.

AMERICAN HOTEL.
PETERBORO'.

THE undersigned, Proprietor, begs to return his sincere thanks to the travelling community and the country as well as the townspeople, for the very handsome support his Hotel has received from them. He hopes by continued attention to their wants, and careful management of the House to retain the favourable business which has attended his previous efforts.

The Bar

WILL always be stocked with the best Liquors and Cigars.

Good sheds where the in attention of servants and careful Ostlers always in attendance on the visitors.

Passengers by or to the cars carried free, and attended to.

LOUIS ROSEBROOK.

Peterboro', 1858. 2nd

Business Notices.

SPLENDID INVESTMENT.
FOR SALE,

LOT No. 9, West of George Street, and South of Charlotte Street, adjoining the Port Hope and Peterboro' Railroad Depot, having three good buildings on it the situation is adapted to any public business. Those who desire to profit by such a rare chance, will please address the undersigned, by letter (post-paid) to Lindsay.

N. B.—It will be sold altogether or in building lots, to suit purchasers.

CHARLES McCARTHY.
Peterboro' July 29, 1858. 29-tf

NOTICE.

THE Subscriber begs leave to intimate that he has sold out his Boot and Shoe Shop to A. ROSS. All debts standing out up to date, May, 21th, must be paid to him, at his Tannery, Peterboro' East.

JNO. CLARK,
Tanner.
Peterboro' East, June 8, 1858. 23

EVERY SCOTCHMAN

SHOULD read the "Scottish American Journal," published weekly. It contains the best summary of old country news of any paper published in this country, and has besides a series of articles on the "Highland Bonnets," or Achievement of the Scottish Regiments in India and elsewhere. For sale at Sawers & Murray's New Book Store, Peterboro'. Price $2,50 per year in advance, or 3d per single number.

NOTICE.

THE PARTNERSHIP existing between us, and known as the firm of Hurst & Denne is this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts due to, and by, the said firm, will be settled by Henry Denne, who will grant receipts for the same.

WALTER HURST,
HENRY DENNE.

The business will hereafter be carried on by W. Hurst, who respectfully solicits a share of the Public patronage.

Blythe Mills, Peterboro',
July 20, 1858. } 28

BOOTS & SHOES

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform the late customers of Mr. Thomas Russell, and the public in general, that they have entered into partnership, and have made arrangements with him to succeed him in his business. They desire to assure all who favor them with their custom, that their wants will be punctually attended to, and their work done in a manner that will ensure satisfaction. They will always be found ready to receive orders, and they hope by such assiduity in their business to receive a share of the public patronage.

All kinds of ready made work kept constantly on hand, and sold on the most reasonable terms for Cash or short approved credit.

Remember the old stand opposite the Eastern entrance to the Town Hall.

O'BRIEN & MAGRATH.
Peterbo'ro', January 12th, 1858. 2

NOTICE

IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Partnership lately subsisting between HENRY MORROW & ALEX. MORROW, both of the town of Peterboro', under the firm of Morrow & Brother, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts owing to the said partners will be received by the said Henry Morrow and all debts due by the said firm will be paid by him.

HENRY MORROW,
ALEX. MORROW.
Peterboro', July 1st, 1858.

IN REFERENCE TO THE ABOVE, I would take the opportunity to inform my friends and the public that I will continue the business carried on by the firm in the same premises, and I hope by strict attention to business, and a thorough knowledge of the wants of my customers, to merit and receive a continuance of the patronage so liberally extended to the late firm.

HENRY MORROW.
Peterboro', July 1st, 1858. 26

LOOK OUT!
SAVE YOUR MONEY
AND REMEMBER THIS,—
"ONE DOLLAR SAVED IS TWO EARNED."

IT is a certain fact which we offer to prove to any purchaser who would wish to visit our immense Stock of

Summer Ready-made Clothing,

That we will offer for sale, (to begin the 16th instant,) at 25 per cent. under the ordinary prices.

SMALL COATS, PANTS & VESTS, FOR BOYS,
Of all descriptions, may be had also.

The undersigned, in calling the public attention, will not fail to give

CHEAP BARGAINS,
To any who patronize them.

☞TERMS—STRICTLY CASH.☜
F. & L. LEMAY.
Peterborough, July 13, 1858. 27

ROOM PAPER, PAINTING, &C.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, at his shop on Brock Street, a large and varied assortment of Room Paper, among which will be found patterns of English, French and American manufacture, which he has just received, and which he will sell at the lowest possible price, for ready pay, or short approved credit.

He keeps constantly a number of hands, who can be employed in

PAPER HANGING!

And he recommends his Stock and Workmanship to the public.

The Papers range in price from 5d per Roll, up to 17s 6d per roll, and from their great variety, he is sure the most fastidious will find their choice.

The Painting, Glazing and Finishing business carried on as usual.

ROBERT STEVENSON.
Brock Street, Peterboro, April 8, 1856. 41

The only Reliable Route to Peterborough
BY RAILWAY.

P. H. L. & B. RAILWAY,
AND
Peterborough Section.

NEW ARRANGEMENTS.

ON and after WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 18th 1858, Trains will run as follows:—

Leave Lindsay, 6 40 A. M., arrive at Port Hope, 10 A. M.

Leave Port Hope, 2 10 P. M., arrive at Lindsay, 5 40 P. M.

Leave Port Hope, 12 A. M., arrive at Peterborough, 2 P. M.

Leave Port Hope, 7 30 P. M., arrive at Peterborough, 9 00 P. M.

Leave Peterborough, 7 A. M., arrive at Port Hope 9 10 A. M.

Leave Peterborough 2 50 P. M., arrive at Port Hope, 5 P. M.

Trains run by Port Hope time.

All the above Trains run in connection with Grand Trunk Railway, East and West The splendid Steamer Maple Leaf, also runs in connection with P. H. L. & B. Railway, leaving Port Hope on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, at 11 a. m., arriving at Rochester at 6 p. m., in time for evening Trains to New York, Boston and Philadelphia, and leaves Rochester on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, at 11 a. m., arriving at Port Hope at 6 p. m. in time for passengers to reach Peterboro' same day.

Port Hope, August 16, 1858. 30

CASEY'S LAST'S BOOK,

THE best of the monthlies for the Ladies, and is well known, as to another description immediately, is always on hand, for sale at Sawers & Murray's New Book Store, Peterboro'

☞ September Number received, price 25 cts.

Farms, &c., For Sale.

PROPERTY IN OMEMEE
FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, in the flourishing Village of Omemee, on the Port Hope & Lindsay Railroad, village Lot No. 10, north side of King street, containing 1 acre of land.—The buildings consist of a frame dwelling house and store, now occupied by Mr. John Henderson, a dwelling house adjoining, also a large workshop, and stabling, with every other convenience attached. The buildings are all new, and well put up.

If the above is not disposed of before 20th of OCTOBER, NEXT, it will then be sold to the highest bidder, by PUBLIC AUCTION.

The Terms are, £200 cash, or a bankable note; the remainder in instalments as may be agreed upon.

For further particulars apply to John Henderson, on the premises, or to the undersigned proprietor, in Otonabee, or at the Examiner office, in Peterboro'.

There will be no difficulty as to title.

JOSHUA DAWSON.
19th Lot, 12th Concession, }
Otonabee, Aug. 12, 1858. } 31

FOR SALE.

ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND IN THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH.

THAT excellent farm of land, situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, being composed of the south parts of lots Nos. 27 and 28, in the 6th Concession of Smith, 6 miles from Peterborough, is offered for sale. The farm is thoroughly improved; has a first rate house, barn, &c., and a capital water frontage. The soil is equal to any in that section of country.

For particulars of price and terms apply to the proprietor in Peterborough.

A. SAWERS.

Smith, July 29, 1858.

FARM FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale East half 6 in 7th con. and East half of 7 in 7th con. Dummer, containing 100 acres, of which

80 ARE CLEARED

In good cultivation and well fenced; a good

CEDAR LOG HOUSE,

And two large barns, with other good out houses, and a superior well close at hand.

The property is three miles from

NIGGER WEDDED,

On an excellent road, and will be sold for £2 10s an acre. From one third to one half to be paid down, the payment of the balance as agreed upon.

HENRY GARDNER.
Dummer, July 10th 1857. 28.

VALUABLE FARM, SAW-MILL, FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber is desirous of selling his property, consisting of 250 acres, 50 of which are under cultivation, comprising a

FINE YOUNG GRAFTED ORCHARD.

There is an excellent DWELLING HOUSE, with Barns, Sheds, and all other necessary Out-Houses, a good water

SAW MILL,

in good running order. The premises consist of Lot No. 9, and south-east quarter of Lot No. 8, in the 11th Concession of the Township of Monaghan. The Farm is one of the finest in the County, and most favorably situated on the Gravel Road, two miles from Peterboro. The wood land consists of hardwood and cedar, and the whole lot is furnished with a good supply of running water.

For further particulars as to terms, &c., apply on the Premises to

W. W. BOSWELL,
Peterboro, Sept. 8, 1857. 36

TO LET.

TWO NEW BRICK STORES fronting on George Street, one for Dry Goods, the other for Groceries. Both finished in the newest and finest style of workmanship, and elegantly painted and varnished, equal to any in Town; the basement stories are well lighted and perfectly dry, and warranted against frost. Application to be made to the proprietor on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', Feb. 1st, 1858. 5

TO RENT.

That Splendid Three Story Brick Store, lately occupied by Mr. E. Peplow on Hunter Street.

Also 18 Town Lots for sale. Terms easy.

Apply to the Subscriber on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', June 2, 1858. 22

Hardware.

New Stove Warehouse!!!

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform their friends and the Public that they have entered into Partnership as Stove-Dealers, Tinsmiths, &c., and respectfully invite public inspection to their new styles of Stoves, consisting in part of

The Improved Burr,
The Star of the West,
The Wide World,
The Commodore,
The Improved Canadian Farmer,
The Buffalo,
The Black Rover,
The King Stove,
The Premium.

Besides a variety of Parlor and Plate Stoves.

They also receive orders for all kinds of

COPPER, SHEET-IRON AND TIN WORK.

Which their Patrons may depend upon getting done in a manner which will give the greatest satisfaction.

A large stock of TIN-WARE, STOVE-PIPES, and other such articles belonging to their business, kept constantly on hand.

Their premises are on George Street, lately occupied by Messrs. Harvey & Thomson, and next door to Messrs. Glover & Robinson

BIGELOW & ROBINSON.
Peterboro', October 27, 1857. 43

AXES BY STEAM

THE subscriber invites public attention to his increased facility of making the

SUPERIOR AXES

he has so long supplied to the community, and begs to assure his patrons that he will be unremitting in his efforts to retain for his work the good reputation it has hitherto enjoyed. He offers

Narrow and Broad Axes,
AND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF
EDGE TOOLS,

WHOLESALE and RETAIL, as cheap as they can be purchased here or in any other market, and of a quality that cannot be surpassed.

His premises are located on GEORGE ST., opposite the OLD BURYING GROUND, and to enable him to supply his manufactures in sufficient quantity, and at modern prices, he has added in steam power to his assistance.

☞Axes Ground and Ground in quick order,

W. MOCOCK.
Peterboro', Sept. 22, 1857.

FOR SALE CHEAP

BOILED and Raw Linseed Oil, Spirits Turpentine, and Varnishes, together with an assortment of

PAINTS GROUND IN OIL.

Also Whaler Blended Sperm or Machinery Oil.

S. B. CURRY & Co.
Peterboro', Aug. 24, 1858. 35-6in

Miscellaneous.

HATS! HATS!

THE New York and Canadian Style of Hats is now ready for inspection. Also, a large assortment of Fur Hats and Cloth Caps, &c., &c.

The Trade Supplied as Usual.

A. SIMCOX,
Hatter, &c.
Cobourg, March 19, 1858. 13

CABINET ROOMS
RE OPENED!

THE subscriber informs his old customers and the public generally, that he has recovered from the effects of the late fire, and has erected a new building on the old site which he has fitted up as a show room. He is daily receiving and making up a choice assortment of

FURNITURE & CABINET WARE,

Of every description, which, as usual, he offers at moderate prices.

He has removed his workshop to the building just erected by Mr. Monock, where by the use of Steam and the most recent improvements in

LABOUR SAVING MACHINERY,

He will be prepared to manufacture for sale or to order every description of Furniture, at prices unprecedent, in this Town.

W. Y. SWAYNE.
Peterboro', July 8th, 1857. 18.

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE LOT OF LAND, on the Gravel Road, about 2 miles from Peterborough, containing 35 acres, being part of the eastern portion of the North-East quarter of Lot No. 7, 11th Concession North Monaghan, on the West of John Green's Tavern, and adjoining it. Apply to the Subscriber,

WILLIAM BELL.
Monaghan, Jan. 11, 1837. 2

HORSE SHOEING.

BARNARD McGARRITY and WILLIAM MILLER, beg to inform the public, that their horse shoeing prices are as follows:—

A full set, new 6s,
Each remove 6d.

their terms are, if not Cash, well-approved credit.

Peterborough, Jan. 1st, 1858. 1

PERIODICALS, MAGAZINES, &C.

THE subscribers receive every Saturday the Weekly Periodicals in the following list, and on the third Saturday of each month the Monthlies for the next ensuing month, all of which they are prepared to supply on the annexed terms.

Orders respectfully solicited.

PER YEAR.	PER NO.
$2,25 .. New York Ledger	9s 3d.
2,50 .. Harper's Weekly	6 3½
2,00 .. Ballou's Pictorial	0 4
3,25 .. Waverly Magazine	0 6
1,50 .. Yankee Notions	0 7½
2,50 .. New York Clipper	0 3½
2,50 .. Flag of Our Union	0 3½
1,50 .. Scottish Amer. Journal	0 3
3,25 .. Leslie's Illustrated	0 6
9,00 .. Illustrated London News	1 0
5,50 .. " Times	0 7½
5,50 .. Punch	0 7½
3,00 .. Harper's Magazine	1 3
3,00 .. Household Words	1 3
2,00 .. Chamber's Journal	1 0
2,20 .. Mrs. Stephen's Journal	1 0
2,20 .. Peterson's Journal	1 0
3,00 .. Godey's Lady's Book	1 3
3,00 .. Atlantic Monthly	1 3
2,50 .. New York Mercury	0 3
2,50 .. " Weekly	0 3
2,50 .. Rural New Yorker	0 3

YEARLY SUBSCRIPTIONS
MUST BE STRICTLY
In Advance.
Back Nos. must be paid for when ordered.

SAWERS & MURRAY.
Peterboro', June 23, 1858. 2

LOOK HERE.

ONLY ONE QUARTER DOLLAR!
FOR THE
VICTORIA PAPETERIE,
OR
CHEAP PACKET OF WRITING MATERIALS
WHICH CONTAINS

12 Sheets fine ruled Letter paper usually sold for	7½d
12 Sheets fine ruled Note paper "	4
12 Large sized Envelopes adhesive "	3
12 Nots " " " "	2
3 Steel Pens	1
1 Holder	1
1 Pencil	1
1 Sheet Blotting paper	1
Making a total of	1s 8d.

NOW SOLD FOR
ONE QUARTER DOLLAR,
BY
SAWERS & MURRAY.
AT THE
NEW BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE,
Burnham's Block George-st, Peterborough.
June 22nd, 1858. 24.

FRESH TEAS.

JUST RECEIVED from the Ship "Cambala," direct from China, an assortment of

Hyson, Young Hyson.
Gunpowder, Twankay,

S. E. CURRY, & Co.
Peterboro', 29th June, 1858. 25

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

THE attention of Clergymen, Teachers, and others interested in Sunday Schools is respectfully invited to our large and varied assortment of

Reward Books, Tickets, Admission Cards, &c., &c., &c.,

Especially adapted for Sunday Schools, and which we will sell on the best possible terms.

A CALL SOLICITED,
SAWERS & MURRAY,
NEW BOOK AND STATIONARY STORE,
Burnham's Block, George Street Peterboro'.

Dr. J. B. ALFORD'S
ECLECTIC, MEDICAL & SURGICAL
OFFICE.

CORNER OF HUNTER AND AYLMER STREETS,
Near the Residence of James Hall, Esq.,
PETERBOROUGH.

DR. A. would announce to the citizens of Peterborough and vicinity, that he has located in this place for the purpose of attending to the duties of his profession. His system of treatment is purely Eclectic, using only those agents which are safe and reliable. INVALIDS however despairing, are invited to call, as no expense will be incurred without a corresponding prospect of recovery.

Residence—American Hotel.

Peterboro', Oct, 10, 1857. 41

FARM FOR SALE.

EAST Half Lot No. 14, in the 11th Concession of Asphodel, three miles from the Village of Norwood. There are fifty acres cleared, and good fencing, and a never-failing spring of pure water upon the premises. The Land is of a superior quality.

Terms, Liberal.

For further particulars apply to JAMES MILLER, Otonabee, or upon the premises, to

W. B. SCOTT.
Asphodel, 19th June, 1858. 34tf

Miscellaneous.

BY-LAW, No.—

A By-Law to authorize the Warden of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria to issue Debentures for, and to raise by way of Loan the sum of Six Thousand Pounds for the purposes therein mentioned.

WHEREAS it is desirable to raise by loan on the credit of this Municipality the sum of Six Thousand Pounds for constructing and repairing the Roads and Bridges in the said United Counties.

And Whereas—it will require the sum of Seven Thousand Nine Hundred and Eighty Pounds to be raised by a special rate for the payment of such loan and interest for the space of ten years, to be computed from the 8th day of October now next ensuing, until the 8th day of October A. D. One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Eight exclusive of the first and last days by annual amounts as follows—that is to say,

For the first year—Nine Hundred and Sixty Pounds.
For the second year—Nine Hundred and Twenty-four Pounds.
For the third year—Eight Hundred and Eighty-eight Pounds.
For the fourth year—Eight Hundred and Fifty-two Pounds.
For the fifth year—Eight Hundred and Sixteen Pounds.
For the sixth year—Seven Hundred and Eighty Pounds.
For the seventh year—Seven Hundred and Forty-four Pounds.
For the eighth year—Seven Hundred and Eight Pounds.

SCOBLES PATENT.

PRINTING

OF

EVERY DESCRIPTION,

Plain, Colored, Fancy

AND

Ornamental.----Bronzing,

&c., &., &c.,

Neatly executed, on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the

EXAMINER STEAM PRINTING ESTABLISHMENT,

BURNHAM'S BLOCK,

OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1858.

Volume 3.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 37.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

Are Ten Shillings in Advance, for One Year; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING

	£	s	d
Six Lines, and under, first insertion	0	7	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	7½
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0	9	0
Each subsequent insertion	0	1	3
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0	0	5
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	1

☞ Advertisements without written instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognized.

Business Directory.

MESSRS. FITZGERALD & DENNAN,

Provincial Land Surveyors, Civil Engineers and Land Agents. Office in Scott's Chambers, corner of George and Simcoe Streets.

Messrs. F. & D. having lately surveyed the outlines of eight new Townships now included in this County will be happy to give any information to intending settlers. 24

MR. DENNISTOUN,

Barrister at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

E. BURNHAM,

Barrister and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,

Barrister and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, Lately occupied by W. H. J. Vhard, Esq.

W. B. RUBIDGE,

Barrister and Attorney at Law, &c. &c., &c.

Peterboro', March 10th, 1856.

DR. HOLYWELL,

Has removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Rubidge's.

Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,

Surgeon and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' West.

ALBRO & VINDIN,

Commission, Shipping, Forwarding

AND GENERAL AGENTS,

Lumber Merchants, &c.,

Port Hope, C. W.

Office—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets.

MESSRS. STEWART,

Architects, Engineers, Land Surveyors, and Land Agents. Office, Mill Street, Port Hope.

GEO. A. STEWART.

CHAS. B. STEWART.

Port Hope, May 22, 1857. 21.

JOHN HAYDEN,

Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, Window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.

King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 35—3m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.

Interest will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.

Peterboro', May 25th, 1857. 22

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD.

PLANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.

COMMUNICATION THROUGH THE POST OFFICE,

Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S

Fashionable Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.

Port Hope, Sept. 29, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,

Hunter Street, Peterborough, Canada West.

Meals at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.

Peterboro', Sept. 2, 1858. 2

BOOKSELLERS AND STATIONERS.

SAWERS & MURRAY,

Have always on hand a complete assortment of Books in every department of Literature, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, &c., &c.

New Book and Stationery Store,

33 Burnham's Block, George-st.

A. MERCER & SONS,

TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,

HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

Fashionable Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.

Peterboro', June 9, 1858. 23—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.

HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.

A. MUNRO, Agent.

May, 1858. 19

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,

Architect, Civil Engineer, &c., Scott's Chambers, George Street.

Peterboro', July 23, 1858. 29

QUARRY TO LET,

Near Peterborough.

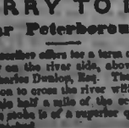
The Subscriber offers for a term of years, the Quarry on the river side, above the residence of Charles Dunlop, Esq. The bridge in contemplation to cross the river will bring the Quarry within half a mile of the centre of the Town. The stone is of a superior quality, and is easily worked.

For Terms and other particulars, apply to Charles Dunlop, Esq., or

GEORGE A. STEWART,

Port Hope.

Peterborough, July 16, 1858. 27



Notice to the Asthmatical.

Asthma Cured for $20!

An English view of our Telegraph Jubilee in England.

From the London Times, August 31.

We are in a fair way for another unpleasantness with our cousins across the Atlantic. The time, too, there can be no aunande; it's all come and gone, and it's now a matter of history, that when America was all enthusiasm at the success of the Electric Telegraph we all took it very easily indeed. They have literally 'piped,' and we have not "danced;" for England and America have been married, and the former has behaved as if wholly unconscious of the ceremony. New York, and every other city to the further West, went off into ecstasies. It was a dozen Anniversaries of Independence rolled into one. There were as many salutes as at Cherbourg; three hundred and thirty-three guns from the batteries; a hundred guns here, a hundred there; a hundred monster rock blasts in the Central Park, and some heavy salutes from the top of the Astor Hotel. All the church bells were rung. Every house was illuminated in that extempore fashion which tells better than our brilliant uniformity. All the world was out in the streets. There were the banners of every nation and of no nation, and transparencies with sentiments, verses, puns, allegories, and devices in which, if England had not quite its due meed of honor, it was not the least forgotten. The Agamemnon was the greatest of kings; Cyrus, the new, made a grander union than that of Medi and Persia; the cable had opened a new Field of usefulness; the Niagara and the Hudson had been beaten the Atlantic, and the union of the two worlds—it reads almost like a profaneness—was actually ranked with the Declaration of Independence. The cable itself is declared to be the wedding-ring of the two cousins, the strongest bond of amity, the deed of eternal partnership. But it is in vain to think of beating our neighbors—now hardly transatlantic—at this sort of description. To wind up the day, there were volcanoes of fire-works, chiefly, as it appears to us, from the top of the large buildings, concluding with the conflagration and destruction of the City Hall, from the roof of which the principal volcano had been discharged.

All this time we did not ring a bell, or let off a squib, or light a kitchen dip, or even walk out into the streets, or do anything whatever in honor of the event. In all England we believe that no one man congratulated his neighbor about it. We were all pleased in our own quiet fashion, and somewhat surprised at so complete a success coming so quickly on the heels of repeated failures. Of course, those who had shares in the Company were delighted to find the quotation rising from 350 to 900. The Queen did her duty, though unfortunately, as it turns out, only the first sentence of her message arrived in time for the first burst of American jubilation. The lord Mayor followed. We cannot charge ourselves with having slighted the occasion.—We sent one of our best men on board the Agamemnon on her first attempt, and he did as much as man could do to tell the fearful tale. It really would not have been common humanity to risk his life a second time in an enterprise of apparently such remote success. When success came at last, we proclaimed it in terms, as we thought, sufficiently glowing. Had we raised our key one note higher, we should have been thought proper inmates for a private lunatic asylum. The High Church pulpits would have denounced our exaltation of the miracles of science and our worship of progress, and the poor cable would have been forthwith stigmatised as an engine of Anti-Christ.

The fault, if fault there be, is in the British public. It is not so intensely interested in this affair as the Americans are. There must be some reason for this, as we are not an unreasonable people. Without the least wish to show a slight, without being even conscious of it, we have betrayed a want of national sympathy very little in accord with so great an event. Among the future marvels of nature, Bacon predicted "communication by sympathy." The communication has surpassed even Bacon's expectations, but it is not with the expected amount of sympathy. This is a question which concerns both the Americans and ourselves.

In matter of fact, this is a greater event to the United States than to ourselves.—They gain thereby instant communication with the whole of the Old World. With them it is the "union of the whole world," as one of their transparencies has it. We gain only the United States and British America. The information to be expected from these places will be chiefly interesting to merchants, who regard the electric wire as a convenience, or a necessity, and not as a new source of pleasure. In other respects American intelligence is often startling, curious, dismal, and interesting as a matter of speculation, but without the sentimental interest which attaches to the event of most States in the Old World.—Scarcely anything ever happens on this side of the Atlantic which is now associated with our reading, our travels, our acquaintance, or our persons. Every novelty is the next step of a train already deep in our recollection. This cannot be as much the case in a new world, which few of us have seen, and which we do not read much of. But the Americans themselves are somewhat to blame for the lesser interest with which we read fresh news from that quarter or hail the prospect of instantaneous intelligence. How many times during the last ten years have the steamers brought us the disagreeable tidings that all the American papers were in a blaze of indignation against this country for some stupid affair that we absolutely knew nothing about. Have we not the conviction forced upon us that American politicians never scruple to raise capital at our cost by manufacturing grievances against us and carrying them to the very verge of war? It is the belief in this country that the Yankees several times asserted war by encroachments which were only not followed by a declaration of war with our full knowledge and consent, and that the Canadian Militia during the Trent affair—

There is even the misgiving that we may have to do this again and again, and that there are American politicians speculating on this game. Now, the English don't like this; they feel somewhat alienated by it, and they don't feel a secure and unreserved pleasure at the sight of an American mail. It may any day bring a new demand, unjust in itself and not improved by the language.

The Americans may like this, they may feel it amusing; they may even find it answer. But, if they choose this line, they must not also reckon on our love and sympathy, as it is now called. A choice must be made in this as in other things. The Americans may appeal to what set of feelings they please, but not to all at once; and if they wish us to be overjoyed at the thought of hearing every morning what they were doing and saying over night, they must adopt their deeds and words to this new and more intimate relation. Our recent proceedings with regard to British Columbia will prove to the whole world our anxiety to avoid all occasion of quarrel; but nevertheless, we should not be surprised if, the interchange of compliments once over, the first real message by the cable were some ridiculous molehill magnified into a mountain by the public press and indignation meetings at New York. May it not be so! May our foreboding be proved needless and discourteous! But it will not unless American statesmen resolve to be more just in their demands and amicable in their tone.

☞ The speed with which the Czar of Russia lately received intelligence of the conclusion of peace with China has excited some attention, especially when taken in connection with the well known intrigues of Russia with the Celestial Empire. The St. Petersburg correspondent of the N. Y. Herald, writing under date Aug. 24th says:—"On the 19th inst., a courier, just arrived per express train from Moscow, drove up to the hotel of the Minister for Foreign Affairs. He was immediately ushered into the private cabinet of Prince Gortschakoff, and, after a long conference with his Highness, accompanied him out to Peterhoff to be presented to the Emperor. This messenger proved to be Lieutenant Colonel Martynoff, attached to the embassy of Count Putiatin in China. His approaching arrival had been announced by telegraph several days before, and it was rumoured in town that he was the bearer of despatches containing most important and favourable intelligence—that in fine, a treaty had been concluded, by which China resigned all her claims to the territory on the Amoor, and acknowledged that river as the frontier between the two empires.—These rumours have since been confirmed, and were then confirmed by a statement in the official papers, from which it appears that not only has a convention been signed by which Russia becomes undisputed mistress of the Amoor, but that another treaty has been negotiated opening the Chinese harbours to Russian trade, and conferred upon us the same privileges that England and France have only succeeded in obtaining by expensive armaments. The former was concluded on the 16th of May, by General Mouraviefl, at Agra, in Mongolia; the latter by Count Putiatin himself, at Tiendsin, from whence the news has been brought by Colonel Martynoff, through China, Mongolia, and Siberia, a distance of 10,000 versts, in the incredibly short space of fifty days. It will undoubtedly be some time before the details of the negotiations that have led to this propitious result will be unfolded to the world; as yet we can only just raise one corner of the veil that enshrouds them: but we may be sure that when they are fully known they will present one of the most piquant chapters in what may be termed romance of diplomacy."

Distinguished Visitors.

Quite a number of distinguished citizens of the United States purpose, we understand a visit to the Province during the Fair.—Among others named are ex-President Fillmore, Senator Seward, Hon. R. McClelland, ex-Secretary of the interior; ex-Governor Medary, member of the National Executive Committee of Agriculture, and President of the Ohio State Board of Agriculture; ex-Governor Hunt and Governor King, of New York, and the Hon. Horace Greeley. Canada will, no doubt, give her distinguished visitors a hearty welcome.—Colonist.

The Queen and Canada.

The London Times thus refers to the proposal that her Majesty shall visit Canada:—

"No State without a King, no Church without a Bishop, no land without its Lord." So ran the proverbs of Ancient Europe, and, though these saws of mediæval polity have been rudely shaken by modern institutions, the principles surveyed with extraordinary vitality, even amid the first risings of democracy, and are traceable in their influence up to the present hour. Republics existed long ago in the European commonwealth, but only by accident or through royal sufferance. The Republic of Venice escaped the supremacy of the Western Empire only by pretending to owe obedience to the Eastern; the Republic of Switzerland arose from the opposition of the mountaineers, to the Counts of Hapsburgh under the sanction of their common sovereign, the Emperors of Germany, and the Republic of Holland only assumed the form of a democratic State when every effort of its chiefs to procure a monarch had proved utterly unavailing. The Dutch asked for Queen Elizabeth, or, if that gracious sovereign would not come in person, for one of her dominions. Lord Bolingbroke tells us that even in America royalty was not given up without a struggle, and that the States which now flout the Southern governors of the Union actually sent their agent over to their comrade the young Pretender, to entitle him the title of King then rooted in the peculiar institution.

But even in the United States monarchy crops up in aggregate of dominions, and when the original type of a kingdom is transformed into a vast territorial empire, embracing realms in every quarter of the globe? Even in a more compact inheritance, if the provincial divisions are numerous, the influence of the royal element is sometimes but imperfectly distributed. The people of Brittany had never seen a Sovereign since the days of Henry IV, until Napoleon III. visited them the other day, and most readers will be able to recollect the calculations of a similar kind which have been suggested by the progress of Queen Victoria. We believe, in fact, that George III was never north of Cheltenham in his life, and the actual presence of that popular monarch was mainly felt round the town and park of Windsor, and the neighbourhood of Weymouth. In this, as in many other respects, the British dominions owe much to the reigning Queen; but how is a Sovereign to throw even a glance over an empire on which the sun never sets? Queen Victoria has kingdoms not only in Europe and Asia, like the Czar—not only in Europe and Africa, like the Emperor of the French—not only in Europe and America, like the ancient Kings of Spain, but in Europe, Asia, Africa, America, and Australia together. From the Arctic to the Antarctic Ocean, in British Columbia and in the Falkland Islands, on the confines of Bokhara and on the confines of Burmah, in Southern Africa and Australasia, may be found territories depending on the Crown of England.

That British subjects in all regions should rejoice at the idea of seeing their sovereign is entirely natural, but such views would be hard to realize. Some time ago a distinguished novelist introduced an Oriental personage in one of his tales who was all for India. Europe was "used up," said he, and the only city for a Queen was Delhi—rather an unlucky choice. Within these few weeks the Americans—both Canadians and States men—have been hankering after the sight of a crowned head. The New York journals are decidedly of opinion that the time is favourable for this novel flight of royalty. The Queen should go to Canada they think. "Let her come by all means," says a New York paper, "and visit her republican cousins too; she would get such a reception in New York just now as never greeted monarch in the world before."—We have not a doubt of our contemporary's sincerity, or of the accuracy of his estimate of American feeling. Canada, however, as is but natural, has outstripped the Union in its aspirations, and we must now surprise our readers with the announcement that, though our North American brethren discern some difficulties in attracting the Queen, a Canadian gentleman has arrived by the last steamer to see if he can't borrow the Prince of Wales.

At Toronto, on the 1st proximo, there is to be a great Exhibition opened—a regular Crystal Palace, not quite so grand as that in Hyde Park, or the Champs Elysees, but of good colonial proportions and similar in design. Now, that these exhibitions should be inaugurated by Sovereigns or Princes has become a kind of fixed principle, and the Canadians think their future King would be the very Prince for the occasion. It will be thought a remarkable illustration of the force and individuality pervading Transatlantic character when we add that this proposal for the loan of our Heir Apparent does not proceed from the Legislatures, the Administration, the authorities, or, indeed, any officials of the colony whatever, but has been undertaken by a private gentleman, at his own cost and on his own responsibility. He put into circulation a petition, procured the signatures of such members of Parliament as happened to be "in town," and, fortified by this public "indorsation," started on his own hook, and has arrived, we are told, by the Persia on the prosecution of his complimentary errand.

Mr. John Norris, for that is the name of this independent envoy, will not, we are afraid, tempt the Prince of Wales, but he will learn that we appreciate the invitation, and that we wish every success to the colony and to its exhibition. In fact we have not the smallest doubt but the journals of Canada and the Union are entirely right in predicting for a royal visit to America, when the fullness of time may bring about such an event, the most triumphant and unprecedented success. It is in the very nature of things that it should be so. No people are so attracted by Royalty as Republicans, and it is perfectly possible that even the genuine loyalty of our own colonists might be altogether outdone by the exuberant transports of democracy. Nature is nature even in the New World, and no yearnings are so natural as those for the things of which we hear much and have never seen. An extract from an American paper informed our readers yesterday how the President of the United States got out at a railroad public-house, pitched his coat and neckcloth on the chair, tucked up his sleeves, and "took his turn for a jolly good wash in the bar-room." "We took our admiration," says the editor, "of this scene of Republican simplicity quietly with us into the cars for Baltimore, and mused with some complacency over the sterling honour of being an American citizen."

Very probably; but our fellow-craftsman would have gazed, we suspect, if only for the novelty of the thing, with considerably greater emotion at the Queen of a mighty empire, and the representative of a hundred kings. The most forcible impressions are those made by unfamiliar wonders. Londoners are struck with American forests; Yankees with Westminster Abbey. Perhaps, too, the admiration of dignity and title which seems all but inherent in mankind passion which fluctuates even rampant Radicalism with ready servility, and implants in every class of our society a respect more or less active for the class above it, may not be quite extinguished even in democratic America; and those who have no respect of their own may feel all the more reverence, at least on the account, for the respect of another people. We can conceive, at any rate, that the reception of a British Sovereign on the American continent would, indeed, be a unique event in the world's history, which the Canadians are resolved, if possible, not to miss. There is nothing in the way of such an event are ready to

The Count De Persigny on the Anglo-French Alliance.

Count de Persigny has just delivered a speech, at the opening of the Council General of the Loire, which is certain to become celebrated, perhaps historical. The Count is one of the oldest friends of the Emperor. Twenty years ago he sought Louis Napoleon in exile, and saluted him as the future Emperor of the French. From that day he has been attached to the fortunes of his chief. He had no small part in founding the second empire, and he has participated in its honours and rewards.—He was for some time ambassador to London, and he is known to be higher in the confidence of the Emperor than any other person; his address, therefore, which touched most points of the internal and external policy of the empire, is of great political importance.

M. de Persigny began at the beginning with a justification of his faith in the Napoleon dynasty. France, he contends is monarchical by her history, her traditions, and her whole spirit and character. The question, therefore, is not whether there shall be a monarchy or a republic, but what monarchy, or what dynasty! The Bourbons are effete, and fail to represent the new societies and new glories of France. They are as alien to the French people as the Stuarts formerly were to the people of England. Taking these propositions as proved—that France must be monarchy, and could no longer be so under the Bourbons, M. de Persigny arrives at the conclusion that there was no alternative but the restoration of the dynasty of Napoleon. He defends the imperial system from its antagonists. "I am not ignorant, gentlemen, of the reproaches addressed by some parties to the imperial Government. They cannot deny the great services which it has rendered to social order—the calm which it has re-established in men's minds—and the security which it has rendered to all interests. But they accuse it of a tendency to disinherit the country of its legitimate influence in the conduct of public affairs by founding, as at Rome, a sort of Cæsarian dictatorship, aided by the prestige of the name of Napoleon. Allow me to repudiate this analogy. Between Cæsar and Napoleon there is nothing in common except the glory which founded the prestige of the two names. But the situations are totally different. At Rome the problem was to transfer a society corrupted and disorganised by civil war from a republic to a dictatorship by the destruction of its ancient liberties—while in France, on the contrary, the task of the Napoleons is no other than to continue our monarchical state by a fourth dynasty—not to destroy ancient liberties, but to consolidate new ones." He argues on these grounds that the Government of Napoleon III. is in accordance with the principles and ideas of the revolution 1789—"popular suffrage, the free vote of the taxes, and the irremovability of the judges." As to the restrictions placed upon discussions in Parliament and the press, he says: "In point of fact, gentlemen, these splendid parliamentary struggles, which some people now look back to with so much regret, were most perilous things: for in a country where people were not agreed as to the principle of government, where there were four or five nations in a nation—a Legitimist nation, an Orleanist nation, a Bonapartist nation, and a Republican nation—that is to say, factions and parties, the complete enjoyment of public liberty could only have led to the formation of coalitions, and coalitions tending not to the substitution of one set of principles, but to the overthrow of the Government itself, to the immense peril of society. At this day, gentlemen, the most ordinary patriotism suffices to put us on our guard against such folly. Before putting in motion all the machinery of liberty—before giving free scope to every private opinion, let us first found a Government; let us establish a dynasty which, like that in England, shall be secure from party attacks, and elevated above the regions of public discussion. All dynasties require the consecration of time. Time alone can complete the reconciliation of the parties which have so long divided France. The day is not, I trust, far distant, on which this great result will be achieved, when there will be but only one nation in the nation under the throne of the Napoleons, on that day the French revolution will be terminated, and freedom of discussion be no longer a peril or a threat for any one, but will become a benefit for all." Looking to the recent history of France we do not find ourselves in a position to controvert the first half of the foregoing passage, and we can only hope that the promises in the second part may be speedily fulfilled. We give M. de Persigny's arguments without comment, and our sole desire for the French people is that they may be free and prosperous.

We have more immediate interest in the references made by M. de Persigny to the relations between England and France. "A cloud which might have proved dangerous, recently hung over the alliance, but it has happily cleared away. As the Emperor said at Cherbourg, the good sense of the public would defeat any attempt at reviving the animosities of former days, and the interest of the two countries are so closely connected that, says M. de Persigny, "if to-morrow London or Paris were beset, we should each suffer immense commercial losses, and while a catastrophe falling upon Berlin, Vienna, or St. Petersburgh, would excite only our sentiments of pity, were it London we should be wounded in our interests almost as seriously as at Paris itself. Now, when two peoples have arrived at this point, they are certainly destined to draw together more closely every day their present mutual relations. Let us remember the letter of Queen of France of the English sailors. With England on our western, and Italy on the south, and consequently have nothing before us but Germany, the continent opened to us, it is possible; general peace is assured. Our country can give itself up to all the developments of its activity without any pre-occupation, and complete the work of establishing its institutions without incurring any risk. Elsewhere, we have no material rivalry with England, since she has opened to our commerce as to her own the access to her immense colonies; it is not her fault if, continuing our system of production at high prices, we do not know how to profit by it." Passing on to his personal experience in England, he bears witness to the abhorrence unanimously felt by the English public of the attempt made upon the life of the Emperor on the 14th of January. The disposition, therefore, which seemed to prevail in France to hold this country responsible, in any shape or manner, for such an outrage, produced an instant revulsion of feeling in England, and the change in the passport system, and the addresses of the army, raised irritation to the highest pitch. "Then took place," said M. de Persigny, "what always takes place in a free country, when the national sentiment is once excited—popular passions knew no longer any bounds, and the political situation was dominated by those passions." In conclusion, he declares his conviction that the new instincts of the English and French people draw them naturally to union, and that "in fact there is really no interest, no serious question between the two countries upon which the simplest good sense cannot put the two Governments in accord; and thus that it only depends upon us to maintain an alliance which is so advantageous to both." The friendly allusions to England were received with applause and expressions of approbation from the audience that M. de Persigny addressed, and such sentiments coming from the friend and confidential adviser of the Emperor are calculated to inspire confidence in the continuance of the alliance with this country, and of the peace of Europe.

The Arctic Expedition.

The following letter to Capt. Collinson gives information of the whereabouts of the expedition under Capt. McClintock:—

Yacht Fox, Holsteinborg—Commenced May 3, and closed May 7, 1858.

My Dear Collinson,—Our cruise hitherto has been short and sharp—most lamentably short, indeed, but, thank God, it is not at an end; the real work is only now beginning. We have only got to repeat the attempt this year which failed so signally last year. Our course was finally stopped in Melville Bay, Aug. 18, from which time up to the 25th of April we remained in the pack, drifting southward with it. While beset we have drifted down from 75½ north to 63½ north; the whole amount is 1,194 geographical miles. You will understand what disappointment and anxiety this ill-fortune entailed upon me. For a whole month in Melville Bay our fate hung on a balance. The season was very similar to 1848, when I was with Sir J. Ross; the whole Bay was crammed full of light pack, and there was no land ice. Having previously examined the edge of the middle ice down as far as 72 deg. 20 m.in. without any prospect of success, there was but one course open to me—to enter the pack whenever a favorable opportunity offered, and trust to boring through into the north water. This is what Sir J. Ross did, and, being on the same spot, and also on the same day, and moreover, a very favorable opportunity of long leads opening out, I tried the same plan. We did not succeed; a long run of southerly winds closed the ice together so much that it did not open again. Still I had the precedent of the North Star from which to draw the hope to drift through to the north water, and this, I think, we should have done in time to save our season but for the grounding of some bergs on a bank off Cape York, which it has been our lot to discover. We drifted up within 24 miles of that cape, and subsequently far to the westward before commencing our southern march. But all this you will see in my statement of proceedings and track chart which I have sent to Lady Franklin.

We are thoroughly efficient, but rather short-handed, and I am sorry to add that R. Scott, (the leading stoker,) died on the fourth of December.

We are in excellent health, and the ship uninjured. She leaks a little, and we had to pump her out all winter three times weekly.

Forty tons of coal remain on board, and we will take in as much more at the Waigal. As for provisions, we have excellent in quality, of salt meat 17 months, preserved meat and pemican 13 months, &c.—From this you will see how well provided we are, and how easily we can complete ourselves for a third winter at Beechey Island.

With regard to my future plan I see no reason for departing from my original scheme. If early into the west water I will thoroughly sift the Pond's Bay natives, so as to separate the history of Belcher's abandoned ships from such knowledge as they may possess respecting Franklin's ships.

I hope to look into Port Leopold before visiting Beechy Islands, as the former would be a place to which we would have to fall back. If the launch is injured, I will take a boat from Beechey Island, and leave her there should I go down to Bellot Strait, or at Cape Walker, should I succeed in getting down Peel Strait.

Should I get down to the Magnetic Pole, I will pass on the east side of King William's Land, communicating with the natives, and into Fish River. If I can manage to complete my work in Fish River by ship, it would be an immense advantage to winter near the southwest angle of King William's Land.

Disco, May 24, 1858.

For the early part of this season I shall be among the whalers, leisurely following their motions; but should they not persevere to the north so long as I think desirable, I must then judge for myself whether to persevere or return south with them, and seek a southern passage. I propose either to-morrow morning or return south with them, and seek a southern passage. I propose either to-morrow morning or return south with them, and seek a southern passage. I propose either to-morrow morning chandelabrum of highly polished red granite from which rise jets of gas to light the apartment. The floor is laid with Minton's tiles, and the appearance of the tomb and the sepulchral chamber, if not sumptuous, is grand and massive. The tomb is stated to have cost £1,100. As the visitor enters the chamber he sees in the distance the sarcophagus containing the remains of Nelson. The crypt has been cleansed, throughout, and, after the visitor has inspected the tomb of the great duke, he may find other objects to interest him in several monumental effigies preserved from the ruins of the old cathedral, as well as among the memorials of painters and architects here deposited, not forgetting that of Sir Christopher Wren and his family. The chapel in St. Pauls is open free on Mondays, Thursdays, and Saturdays; and on other days on the payment of sixpence, to defray the expenses of light and attendants.

The Political Morality of Shakespeare's Plays.

Last night, Thomas D'Arey McGee, Esquire, M. P. P., delivered a lecture on the "Political Morality of Shakespeare's Plays," to one of the largest audiences ever gathered together, upon a similar occasion, in the St. Lawrence Hall. He was frequently interrupted by bursts of applause, evidencing the complete influence which his eloquence had attained over his hearers. Shortly before eight o'clock, Mr. George Brown, M. P. P., entered the Hall amidst tremendous applause. Mr. McGee also received a most enthusiastic greeting, the whole audience rising to give him a welcome.

Dr. CONNOR, M. P. P., upon motion of J. Hallinan, Esq., took the chair. In a few words he introduced to the audience "Thos. D'Arey McGee, the Irishman, he believed he might say of Canada at the present time." (Loud applause.)

Mr. MCGEE, on presenting himself, was again loudly cheered. Passing westward, he said, to fulfil an engagement of several months' standing, some friends in Toronto desired that he might appear in this Hall in his old character of a public lecturer, and as opportunity served, he was most happy to comply with their request. In so doing he had desired to select a subject which would be a relief to his own mind, as probably it would be to the minds of some present, from other and more familiar topics, with which they and he had been dealing the greater part of the year. (Applause.) We had not in our language any treasure to be compared, in its wit and in its wisdom, to the plays of Shakespeare. There were passages in his comedies which nobody would like to read; the age in which he lived, and the tone of manners in that age, must be an apology for an occasional grossness and coarseness, which was entirely unworthy of his exquisite ideas, of his deep science, of the moral truths, which, in every drama he had written he had inculcated. But in what might be called the historical plays of Shakespeare, the objectionable portions were of rare occurrence. He had given us four or five plays of Roman and Grecian history, and eleven of that class of dramatic writings which by the old playwrights were called histories, embracing almost the whole mideval period of English history. In these plays, the high affairs of politics were the interest of the drama. We had kings and conspirators—we had the mob and the aristocracy—we had the soldier and the civilian—we had learned judges, chief justices, and chancellors, with Jack Cade philosophers—hailing the time when there should be but one law in England, and "seven half-penny loaves sold for a penny;" (laughter)—representatives of every society speaking their own wants in their own special language. Shakespeare's wisdom was equal to his wit, and must always be a source of remunerative enquiry, to learn what were the opinions of this wisest writer in our tongue—he had looked down all the arcades and corridors of our chequered and many-chambered nature—he whose various productions were less a creation of fancy, than a transcript of nature. Such a man must have had views on the constitutional questions of his day. It was hardly possible that his mind, deep and clear on the one side, should be narrow and contracted on the other. In dealing with his mimic world, in creating kings for the stage, and statesmen for the stage, in making them pass their hour before the multitude, he never lost sight of the moral consequences of the example to those who were his spectators. In collating some of the best known of what might be called Shakespeare's performances, in which political interest gave the dramatic interest to the whole, he (the lecturer) found there were certain invariable characters, although presented in many varieties and changes. In the first place, there was no difficulty in coming to the conclusion that this great author was a hearty hater of despotism in every shape. He always presented despotism to us either as disease or corruption of the mind, but never pictured it as something in the course of nature—as a thing the despot could not help. In Henry the Eighth we had the vicious and lying King, in Richard the Third, the bloody, audacious and murderous King. The tyranny of Leontes sprang from a sudden jealousy of his wife. In this latter case we had a man who, while in the full possession of his senses promoted peace and happiness throughout his dominions, but so soon as his mind was deranged by one master passion, destroys the welfare and order of Sicilian society. The spirit of justice which pervaded all things, departed immediately, because on the will of one man, driven mad had devolved the maintenance of the previously happy state of things. In the next place we had the despot (Henry the Eighth) accomplishing his purpose under cover of the law. And what made us detest him the more, was, that he observed the letter of the law, while at every step in his prosecution and persecution of the Queen, he was evading the spirit of the laws he invoked. (Applause.) Catherine is summoned to appear in open court, and the King, with great ostentation, points to the able and subtle advocates he has assigned to defend her cause against his own, and his tones serve to protest now and again to Heaven that it is to on account of a scruple of conscience that he desired to put away one wife and take another. (Laughter.) Leontes is fearful and terrible, and makes us fear the result of placing irresponsible power in the hands of an insane man. Henry was hypocritical, and not only fearful but contemptible. In John and Richard, we had despots of an opposite nature. Richard is violent and unscrupulous; John is equally unscrupulous, but fickle and treacherous in his method of attaining his purpose. The dramatist took care to bring each of these despots in the end to an appropriate death. The lecturer then passed on to consider the way in which Shakespeare had dealt with usurpers. They were never predictable. This element in the character he had drawn of Macbeth and the other Hamlet. In both cases they were the usurper of illegitimate power. In Hamlet, what the unfortunate queen was there in those three short days, of the end of the usurpation which he contrived in the murder he had previously wished his uncle, after murdering his father, where he speaks of the King as the thief who had stolen the diadem from a shelf to place it in his own pocket. The play of Henry the Fourth was the only exception to this rule. It was somewhat singular to find, in Elizabeth's time, such sentiments as Shakespeare had put into the mouth of that King when giving advice to his son. He tells him to strengthen himself in the opinions of the people, and to seek their support if he wished to secure his throne. Throughout the plays, no sanction was given to the doctrine of divine right, though it was a very prominent political doctrine when the poet wrote. No monarch ever contended so stoutly for it as James the 1st, and his controversy with Bellarmine attracted great attention.—Shakespeare, on the contrary, though laying down royalty as a virtue, maintained that rulers should be ruled, that there was a law above the individual will of the prince —(applause.)—and everywhere made an appeal from the passion of the sovereign to some higher tribunal. But although nowhere sanctioning the pretensions of divine right, Shakespeare held up loyalty as the very brightest social virtue, a virtue not only of Governors, but also of clowns and court fools. Mr. McGee then proceeded to show what Shakespeare understood by loyalty, as instanced in the character of Kent in King Lear, and also showed the way in which the poet had ridiculed the opinions of those who thought the acts of men in power were not subject to criticism. In this he was highly successful, frequently exciting the laughter of the audience, and concluded a masterly lecture, by passing defence of those engaged in politics, and by advising all who wished to study the art of ruling mankind, or to gain knowledge for their own personal advantage to read this greatest of poets. He concluded amidst loud applause.

Mr. BROWN being called for by the audience, said he had not expected to say anything on this occasion, and could only understand the cry which had arisen, as an expression of the wish of the audience that he should propose a vote of thanks to their friend who had given so able a lecture.—(Applause.) In this way he interpreted their plaudits, and was quite sure that every one present must feel deeply indebted to Mr. McGee for the service he had rendered them this night. (Applause.) Mr. Brown concluded by moving a vote of thanks to the lecturer.

Mr. MCGEE briefly acknowledged the honour done him; and W. McMaster, Esq., having taken the chair, a vote of thanks were tendered to Dr. Connor for the way in which he presided. The audience then dispersed.

The "Times" on the Canadian Crisis, and a Federal Union of the Provinces.

The Ministerial crisis in Canada has terminated much as we thought it would. Mr. Brown has been unable to form a Government, and the displaced Ministry returns to office with few and inconsiderable changes of its members. There is, however, change enough to enable them to represent themselves as a new Ministry, and thus to get rid of the unpleasant question which occasioned their previous resignation of office. That question, as our readers are aware, related to the selection of a capital for Canada, and involved, as it seemed to us, a question of good faith and courtesy between the Colony and Her Majesty. The Queen had consented, under the advice of the late Ministry, to relieve the Canadian Parliament and people from a very serious embarrassment, and one from which, at the time, there appeared no escape. It seemed impossible to obtain any agreement as to the situation of the future capital of the Colony. Each district naturally looked at the question from a merely local point of view, and therefore no district could obtain a majority. To rescue the Colonial Legislature from this dilemma, the Queen undertook to name the future capital, and fixed upon the City of Ottowa, as lying somewhat remote from the frontier, on the limits of the two provinces, situated in a fine country, as yet imperfectly settled, and accessible by railroad to every part of the colony. We do not pretend to such an amount of local knowledge as would enable us to say whether this selection was the best that could have been made. At any rate, it had one defect,—it conciliated no amount of local selfishness. It was believed that the appropriations had been made for the new buildings required for the permanent seat of the Government and the Legislature, so that the Assembly would have no power to disturb the decision of the Crown be it what it might. Such a precaution may appear superfluous, for we are quite sure that before the award of the Crown was made known, the people and Parliament of Canada would have considered themselves grossly insulted, had any one on this side of the Atlantic insinuated for a moment that they would not faithfully abide by the undertaking into which they had entered.—The result, however, shows that the only mistake was, that too much was trusted to the good faith of the Canadian Parliament. A motion was made in the Assembly rejecting the award of the Queen, and repudiating Ottowa as the future seat of Government. The motion was carried, and the Ministry resigned, but it has now returned to office with a very slight modification, and announces on its return its intention of giving up Ottawa as the future seat of Government.

This, we confess, appears to us to be a rather shabby transaction. The Queen never took the award subject to an appeal to the Canadian Assembly, and the Ministry who involved her Majesty in such a choice were bound, we think, to stand by her decision, and not, by a mere nominal change of members, to seek to combine the retention of office with the semblance of a good faith, which, in substance they have violated. The whole affair gives but a poor specimen of the state of public morality and the feelings which actuate public men in Canada. The truth is, Canadian politics, as we explained on a former occasion, have, in the absence of really exciting questions, degenerated into an attempt to solve the problem of securing to a minority of the English colonists the support of the French Canadians. The means by which this end has been obtained have often not been of a very elevated character, and we are inclined to surmise that the good faith of the Colony has, in this instance, been sacrificed to obtain for the Ministry the votes of those who would insist upon having the capital of the country fixed either at Montreal or Quebec. It is, we fear, only too evident that, from whatever cause it may arise, there does not exist among the public men of Canada at this moment a body of men sufficiently qualified to fulfil the duties either of a Government or an Opposition; that government by parties, in its stricter sense, can hardly be said to exist, and that, by the endless attempts to procure popularity and votes by intrigue, among the public measures are thrown into confusion and the interests of the Colony seriously compromised.

The unfortunate state of affairs in our great Trans-atlantic colony leads us to regard with much favour, though we confess with more favour than hope, the proposition thrown out by the Governor General in his speech proroguing the Canadian Parliament, of a Federal Union between the American colonies. These settlements have arrived at a point of development which seems to render such an union, for the sake of their commercial and material interest, highly desirable. They will before long be united by a chain of railways; they have all easy access to the great arterial communication of the St. Lawrence; they are all, except Lower Canada, thoroughly English in people, language, laws and institutions, they are not divided by any great natural feature; and they have many, and these increasing, interests in common.—Their geographical position is so commanding, and the necessity of opposing the progress of the United States by a progress equally well conceived and energetic so pressing, that it seems impossible to conceive a measure in principle less liable to objection. It will, however, have to contend with the same narrow and local selfishness on which the award of the Crown with regard to the future capital of Canada seems to have made shipwreck, and we are not without apprehension that the colonies may be found unwilling to concur in a measure which is equally for the benefit of all, exactly because it is equal, and therefore no one gains any advantage over his neighbour. There is also another difficulty which encounters us on the very threshold of the question. It is quite clear that the Federal Constitution of the United States of America forms a precedent which cannot possibly be followed in its principle or details by the British colonies so long as they remain, however nominally, part of the dominions of the Imperial Crown. The principle of the American Federation is, that each is a Sovereign State, which consents to delegate to a central authority a portion of its sovereign power, leaving the remainder, which is not so delegated, absolute and intact in its own hands. This is not the position of the Colonies, each of which, instead of being an isolated sovereign State, is an integral part of the British Empire. They cannot delegate their sovereign authority to a Central Government, because they do not possess the sovereign authority to delegate. The only alternative, as it seems to us, would be to adopt a course exactly the contrary of that which the United States have adopted, and, instead of taking for their motto "E pluribus unum," to invert it, by saying "Ex uno plura." The first step towards a Federation of the American Colonies would thus be to form them all into one State, to give that State a completely organized Government, and then to delegate to each of the Colonies out of which that great State is formed such powers of local government as may be thought necessary reserving to the Central Government all such powers as are not expressly delegated. The Government of New Zealand, ridiculously large and complicated as it is for so inconsiderable a set of communities, forms a precedent well worthy the attention of those who are undertaking this arduous negotiation. Possibly, on a more extended field, with higher objects of ambition and greater chance of obtaining renown and consideration in the eyes of the world, the standard of public capacity might be raised, and men might be induced to undertake the guidance of the destinies of the whole British population of North America East of the Rocky Mountains, possessing those qualifications for the task which we fear have not always been found in the Responsible Government to which the destiny of our fellow subjects across the Atlantic have been formed.

Lake Superior and the North West.

From the Scottish American Journal.

Through the kindness of the owners of the Rescue—a small propeller recently placed on the line from Collingwood to Fort William—we had an opportunity, a week or two ago, of visiting Lake Superior in a direction which has just been opened up for the first time to steam navigation.—The immediate object is to establish a fortnightly mail from Canada to Red River, to which the communication has hitherto been by way of the United States, and at irregular intervals. Besides half-breeds there is a considerable settlement at Red River composed chiefly of Scotch and French Canadians, along with a few English and Irish, the Scotch element being by far the most numerous, next to the half-breeds. These settlers have nearly all reached Red River by way of Hudson's Bay, having come from the north of Scotland, from Orkney and such be Lewes, in the employment of the Company. They have settled down for the most part for farming pursuits, but having no markets for their produce, and scarcely any means of communication with the outer world, their lot has been one of extreme loneliness and privation. Their condition has excited the sympathy of some zealous friends, who have exerted themselves with great perseverance for its amelioration, among whom we may mention Mr. Isbister, who formerly lived in the settlement and is now resident in London and Captain Kennedy the friend of Sir John Franklin, who some years ago at the request of Lady Franklin led one of the searching expeditions into the Artic regions. The establishment of the mail from Canada has been effected through the exertions among others of Mr. Allen McDonnell, Mr. John McMurrich and Captain Thomas Dick of Toronto, and Mr. Dawson, the member for Three Rivers.—Captain Kennedy has himself undertaken in the meantime the arduous task of pioneer on the long and rugged overland route. The hardships he has undergone during the present season have been sufficient to have daunted a less preserving spirit. Just a few days before our arrival at the head of the lake, he had come in with the first mail from Red River. By the present route the distance is upwards of six hundred miles which is travelled by canoe through lakes and rivers with dangerous rapids and innumerable interruptions—where the canoes and its contents have to be carried from one point of navigation to another. When within seventy miles of his destination, Captain Kennedy was obliged, from some cause or other, to leave his Indians behind, and, taking the mail-bag on his back he travelled the remainder of the journey and at a single stretch. It was past midnight when he arrived at the Grand Portage, quite exhausted, and, entering a cabin without awakening any one, he lay down on the floor and fell asleep. During the greater part of the way from Red River, he and his men had subsisted entirely on flour and dried sturgeon. He set out again almost immediately with the return mail.

Such difficulties are necessarily inevitable in the attempt to open a new country, and, of course will be overcome in time.—To represent the natural obstacles existing as any reason why the attempt should not be made, as has been done in this instance by selfish reasons, is absurd; and, fortunately there are men who will not be deterred by such representations. A company has just been incorporated by act of the Canadian Legislature for working up this region, and Captain Kennedy and the Rescue under Captain James Dick, are but the pioneers of a more extensive undertaking. The originators of this laudable movement are almost exclusively Scotch, as the other pioneers in the boundless regions of the North-West have been before them. The first voyageurs who navigated the shore of Lake Superior for purposes of commerce, who carried their canoes across to Lake Winnipeg, who ascended the Saskatchewan fifteen hundred miles to the Rocky Mountains, who crossed the great barrier and travelled westward to the Pacific, nay more who penetrated into the vast solitudes of the north till they reached the frozen ocean itself, were independant Scottish traders, chiefly retired officers in Highland regiments which came to Canada with General Wolfe, or at a later period. Finding their movements oppressed by the Hudson's Bay Company, whose operations had been previously confined almost entirely to the neighborhood of Hudson's Bay, they formed themselves into a corporate body, under the title of the North-West Company. For many long years a bloody feud was waged between the two companies, and many of the combatants on both sides being Highlanders, it was like a revival in the wilds of America of the old hostilities of the Scottish mountains. It was shortly after the commencement of these hostilities that the settlement of Red River was formed by Lord Selkirk, the Governor of the Hudson's Bay Company, chiefly, no doubt, with a view to a supply of provisions for a body of German auxiliaries, the De Meurons, with whose aid he carried on the war against the McDonnells and the Camerons and their Highland followers from Glengary. Strange stories are told of this feud, in which kinsmen met, fought, and were killed or took each other prisoners. Many of the combatants still survive, and it is to be hoped that the annals of the great North-West, embracing an untouched wealth of stirring incident and romantic daring, will find a worthy pen before the time has gone past when the story can be written with interest. The hostility of the rival companies was at length brought to an end, and they were united in one company about thirty years ago, chiefly through the efforts of Mr. Ellice, who was originally a shareholder in the North-West Company. This was not the only great public difficulty which Mr. Ellice has had the chief hand in comprising during the course of a long and active life which is still as active as ever. At the present moment there is not a more sagacious or influential man in Britain than Mr. Ellice, and it is doubtless owing in a great measure to his good sense that the Hudson's Bay Company have avoided the error of opposing unreasonable obstacles to the admission of civilization into regions which have been proved to be fit for such a change. We should not be surprised to learn that the shrewd "Hercules," as he is not inaptly nicknamed in the London clubs, has taken shares in the North-West Company, and lent it the influence of his name and position.

We had intended to give some account of our eight days' voyage to the head of Lake Superior, and back to Collingwood, but we prefer occupying our space in conveying a general idea of the great country which lies across the barrier, at the head of the lake, the route by which it is reached, and the means that are being taken to open up both. Of our own trips we need only say briefly, that without any exception it was the most pleasant we ever made. The scenery at every point within sight was magnificent.—In the Georgian Bay which extends for three hundred miles north from Collingwood innumerable wooden islets stud the passage and part of the way there is a range of fine mountain summits on the mainland. The soil is here reputed good, and the country awaits the advenure of settlers. By a river some twenty miles in length, we pass into Lake Superior above Sault Ste Marie, the only sort of settlement we saw on the whole voyage, and a place which must eventfully become of some importance. On the American side there is a fine canal which though only a mile in length, cost a million of dollars; there is also a big wooden fort without any soldiers in it, and with cannon which may be wooden too, so unmeaning does this fortification seem. On the British side nothing has been done for the place; all the way indeed, from Collingwood to Fort William, the Canadian Government have done literally nothing to promote trade and navagation, and there is not a single lighthouse on the entire voyage, except one miserable rushlight near Collingwood, which can scarcely be seen even in the clearest weather. At British Sault Ste Marie, a good landing place is much wanted, and without one any passage trade that may arrive will be sure to go to the other side.

The scenery on Lake Superior is much bolder and more picturesque than on any of the lower lakes. The entrance to the bay on which Fort William is situated is very striking, Thunder Cape running out into the lake nearly a thousand feet perpendicular height. There are several other rocky eminences of considerable height and picturesque appearance around Thunder Bay which remind us a good deal of some of the lochs in the west of Scotland, the dense forest which here clothes hill and valley, and climbs up every crevice in the rocks where it can obtain foothold, constituting the only difference. The temperature of Lake Superior is very cool, the water never rising above 42 degrees. This is accounted for by the lake being 600 feet above the sea level and 1,000 feet deep.—The air is necessarily somewhat chilly, except during the sunshine in the neighborhood of such a vast body of cold water. While tourists, therefore can go nowhere on this side of the Atlantic to get so thoroughly cooled down and braced after the heat of an American summer, they should bear in mind to take warm clothing with them.—with this precaution, there is no place where a stock of fresh health and vigor is so easily within reach of the inhabitants of this part of the country as Lake superior. The change is almost as great as going to Scotland, and is very much of a similar character. To the lover of natural history, there is no place in the world more attractive on account of its geological wonders; and the size and abundance of the fish, including river and lake trout, will make their angler's heart leap with joy. The lake trout are quite commonly taken in the bays by means of trolling-tackle, upwards of twenty-five pounds in weight, while in the smallest brooks, with "a stick and a string and a worm at one end" or a piece of pork or fish skin, which are found to answer better than flies, any angler may pull out dozens of splendid golden-head trout, with flesh as red and fine flavored as that of a salmon.—What the general size of these brook trout may be, we do not know, but in a more rivulet over which one could leap, the average did not seem to be less than a pound and a half. In larger streams we were told the average weight is much greater.—We regret that our opportunities were not limited for ascertaining such facts for ourselves. At Fort William, the Secretary Athenæum Journal, which we were pleased to find at that remote outpost of civilization, promised us a hearty reception from the agent, Mr. McIntyre, and the effect of his hospitality for a fortnight, of which we can only say that we could not avail ourselves, the more especially as in Mr. McIntyre we should have had an opportunity of making the acquaintance of one who performed the feat of the overland journey round the globe in company with Sir George Simpson. We turned from Lake Superior with unsatisfied longing and regret. Once visited it is one of those places to which the mind, when tired of the busy world, must always recur with wild pleasure, to its vast unbroken solitudes, its wilderness of beauty, and its stupendous natural wonders. We are not surprised to learn that there are men who, from choice have spent years on its shores. "D—n your civilization," was the expression of one who had spent much of his life there, and during the intervals had resided in civilized parts of America and Europe, "D—n your civilization; I'm going back to Lake Superior." He felt at home nowhere else.

Next week, we shall direct further attention to the North-West region beyond Lake Superior, with reference more particularly to the results of an exploring expedition, whose report we have now before us.

Emigration Report.

From the Montreal Gazette.

There was printed by order of the House of Assembly, a short time ago, "Report of the Chief Emigrant Agent for Canada for the year 1857," which contains much interesting matter not yet made public through the press. The following is an abstract:—

"The number of persons embarked for Quebec from Europe during 1857, was 32,335, of whom 9,151 were children. The deaths on passage and at Quarantine, was 238, leaving 32,091, the number landed in this country. The number of vessels engaged in the conveyance of emigrants was 231; 213 of which were of the ordinary class of sailing ships, and have an average passage of 44 days. The remainder were steamships, 180 of the sailing ships from ports in the United Kingdom. The foreign emigration employed 51 ships, of which 7 were British. The immigration was very free of disease, the mortality of the passengers of the United Kingdom having been no more than one third per cent., chiefly of children. The foreign passengers suffered more, the morality among them having been not quite 1 3 8 per cent. The deaths at sea were on sailing vessels, not a single death occurring on steamers. The increase of arrivals over 1856, was 9,658, or 43 per cent., principally on the English and Norwegians. There was an increase also from Scotland, and a small one from Ireland and Germany. From Belgium and the Lower Provinces a decrease of 837 persons. The number of emigrants admitted for medical relief at Quarantine Station and at the Hospitals in Quebec and Montreal, was 537; of these 40 died. The total number of males who embarked for Quebec was 12,443, divided as follows: farmers and agricultural laborers, 3,518; mechanics, 2,185; merchant's clerks, &c., 327; servants, 134; laborers, 6,279. The total number of emigrants landed at Quebec since 1829 is 901,005, or an average of 31,070 per annum.

1740 persons were aided in their emigration by private individuals, societies, &c., and were paid on arrival £885 10s 8d of which £816 15s 8d was paid through the Emigration. The Wellington Society sent out from England 1062 persons, who received 10s each and a free passage to Western Canada. 33 lads were from the London Reformatory School, and 62 persons were sent by their parishes. Two cases of disaster at sea occurred: the ship Martin Luther, with 499 passengers, was dismasted and carried into Plymouth, where she refitted, and the ship St. Clair, from Tralee, with 227 passengers, having sprung a leak, was abandoned, and her passengers rescued by the Ariel, of Bristol, and taken into Cork, where they were provided with a passage by the Maria. In both cases, though there was much suffering and hardships, there was no loss of life. But though there was no loss of life from disasters at sea, that by the burning of the steamer Montreal was very great. Of 258 emigrants by the ship John Mackenzie, supposed to have embarked on the Montreal, only 67 are ascertained to be saved, and those saved suffered the entire loss of their baggage and property. Much humane attention has been directed to these survivors and assistance presented. The St. Andrew's Society of Montreal, zealously seconded by the sister Quebec society, have taken a most active and efficient course for the relief of the Scotch emigrants. In the course of the season, complaints were made by the passengers in five vessels, of infringements of the Passengers' Act. In three cases, legal proceedings were instituted and convictions obtained, and in the other two compensation was made to the passengers. The numerous testimonials and complimentary addresses presented to masters of passenger ships on their arrival here, show that the treatment experienced is generally satisfactory. The only case of personal ill-treatment was against the subordinate officers of the E. A. Bright.—Complaints of this kind are of rare occurrence. The masters of the regular traders are generally kind, humane men, and being interested in obtaining and preserving a good name for their ships, provide with every care for the comfort of their passengers. Casual ships are not always so well commanded, but it is seldom that any charge can be urged beyond want of experience in the carriage of passengers.—A very large portion of the emigration to the Western Province still takes the New York route. Numerous complaints are made of the treatment on this route, not only on the journey inland. Emigrants, and particularly families and single females, are cautioned against this route. The passage by Quebec in summer, and Portland in in winter is no longer, and on the whole less expensive, and the inland route by the river and lakes or railway more direct and a good deal cheaper. There is no detention, and any attempt at imposition will be promptly punished. Emigrants are advised when circumstances will permit, to take their passage by steamer instead of sailing vessel. "If the time, health and comfort are considered fully, the steamship will prove the cheapest in the end." The establishment of a regular weekly line will afford emigrants a speedy, safe and regular conveyance. The service performed by this line during 1857 gave general satisfaction. They brought out 1466 cabin and 2631 steerage passengers.

The total expenditure of the emigration department, including the Quarantine establishment, was £11,939. The cost of the Quarantine establishment, £2,803—an increase of £186 over 1856. The expense was equal to 2s 6d. a head on each emigrant. The expenditure of the department, up to 31st December, was as follows:—Quebec, £2,227; Montreal, £1,108; Ottawa, £947; Toronto and Kingston, £3,040; and Hamilton, £1,812. The total direct relief throughout the Province—Transport, £4,725; provisions, £28.5; funeral and other expenses upon the loss of the steamer Montreal, £213; office charges, £160; and sundries, £2,668. The number of persons assisted at Quebec was 4,180. These were forwarded to different places at an average cost of 15s. 6½d each adult. 1,519 of these were Norwegians and Germans. At Montreal 917 were assisted at an average of 2s. 5d., of which 223 were foreigners. No returns have been received of the number of persons relieved in Upper Canada. The total expenditure of the department for 1857 shows an increase over 1856 of £3,928. This has been chiefly incurred for transport and provisions. In Lower Canada the increased expenditure is only £1,414, in proportion only to the increased number arrived. But at Toronto and Hamilton, the extra expenditure has been £1,916, while in proportion to the emigration it should have been nearly £1,000 less. During the latter part of the season the demands for assistance at these two agencies were very numerous, consequent upon the superabundance of labour accumulated there, and the duty of dispersing those unable to obtain employment became extremely burthensome. The establishment of an agency at Ottawa also involved some additional expenditure, but this is likely to exercise an important and beneficial influence in future, and be the means of attracting future emigration to the Government lands offered for sale in the neighbouring districts. The emigrant tax realized this season was £7,248 10s., or an average of 4s 8d on each emigrant. The total expenditure was 7s 9d per head. From Mr. Hawke's report on the Immigration to Western Canada, it appears that the total arrivals in Canada during 1857 were 71,250—32,097 by the St. Lawrence, and 39,123 by the United States. Of these 36,034 proceeded to the Western and 34,186 remained in Canada. Only 2,240 of these settled in Eastern Canada. It is difficult to form any reliable estimate of the amount of property brought into the Province by emigrants. The Norwegian passengers drew, on their arrival, $140,000, equal to $23 per head. The general condition and prospects of those who had been fitted by education and previous habits for removal, are not unsatisfactory. Labourers and agriculturalists have been in general demand. Domestic servants readily found employment at fair wages. A large number of skilled mechanics, such as machinists, tool makers, &c., have found it difficult to obtain employment. The demand for this species of labour is always limited, and new comers are at a disadvantage in finding places for themselves. Some of this class have gone to the United States, and a few have returned dissatisfied to England. The class to whom this country offers the least encouragement, are those who have no business or calling. Persons who are unaccustomed to labour, those whose sedentary employment has affected their strength or who have been confined to a single branch of a manufacture until unable to take any other labour; no such persons should be induced to emigrate, unless previous preparation has been made for them. For merchants and clerks there is really no employment. The country has an over supply of these, and many among the selfstyled mechanics and tradesmen are unfit for any branch of labour the country offers. Persons having capital, with judgment and experience, must possess great advantages in Canada, but there is ample encouragement for all the hardy and industrious.—Farm laborers are the most generally sought for; but no man who possesses health and strength with a determine to take such employment as may be offered him, can fail to obtain a good livelihood, nor within a short time greatly to improve his condition with that of his family. Any laborer who is saving can soon lay up sufficient to buy a lot of land for himself, which, in a few years, may become a valuable farm. The condition of the Province does not promise so favorably for the unskilled laboring emigrant this year, as for some years past.—The commercial difficulties have exercised a depressing influence. Agriculturalists, however, and all who can assist efficiently in the farm work of the country, with plough, hoe, or axe, will not fail to meet with employment at fair wages.

Scottish Controversy.

Among the staple questions of controversy in Scotland for a number of years past, the drinking customs of the country, we are sorry to say, have occupied a prominent place. This is one of those subjects which are sure to come up when the newspapers have nothing else to write about. It is the favourite theme with gentlemen of a controversial turn of mind, like Duncan McLaren and the editor of the Scotsman, not to speak of declamatory orators like Sir Archibald Allision, who indulge in loose statements about Scotland being the most drunken country in the world, the population consuming we know not how many bottles or gallons of whiskey per annum, for every man, woman, and child. The subject is an ungrateful one, and consulting our own national feelings, as well as those of our readers, some of whom have clad us for recording in our weekly news incidents tending to show that the same crimes are committed in Scotland as in other countries, we would gladly keep our thumb on it and say nothing about it. But at the present time it is one that all the world are discussing. It has found its way beyond the columns of the Scottish newspapers—the London press has taken it up, the Times and the Saturday Review and even the New York Tribune are writing leaders about it, and it would be ignoring the most prominent Scottish topic of the day were we to pass it over in silence.

We must say, however, that we are not disposed to take side with either party in the positions they have assumed. We have had too much to do with this very subject to take any partizan interest in a question in which such a strong desire is manifested to make facts square with foregone conclusions with reference to a certain legislative enactment. The whole question relates to the working of the measure known as the Forbes Mackenzie's Act, which was passed some years ago, the object of which is to close public houses and hotels, except in the case of bona fide travellers, during the entire Sabbath, and after eleven o'clock on week nights. Ever since this Act came into force, it has given rise to constant statistical disputes, the question raised in the first instance being as to the extent to which there had been a diminution in the number of convictions for drunkenness. The controversialists handled the subject so skilfully on both sides, that it was extremely difficult to tell to whom the victory belonged, a result which will not appear surprising to any one who understands the jaggery by which figures may be made to prove anything. The question, we believe, was one which it did not require any hair splitting to decide. A sound conclusion could only be arrived at on a very broad basis, and in order to prove that the Forbes Mackenzie Act was a success such as to justify the importance attached to it, and supporters of it ought to have addressed facts sufficient to have removed the question beyond all doubt. This they were unable to do, and if there was any public improvement even to that limited direction in which alone they laid claim to it, it was very inappreciable that there was good reason to question whether it had not been effected by ordinary causes apart altogether from the operation of the new Act.

The subject that is now giving rise to such a great amount of statistical ingenuity, has reference to the quantity of spirits consumed since the year 1853, the date of the Act, as compared with the previous four years. The question of increase of cost has also come into controversy; the subject is further complicated by the fact of the duty on spirits being increased by nearly a hundred per cent., while the duty on malt employed in the manufacture has been abolished; and there in the difficulty, moreover, of distinguishing the whiskey consumed in Scotland from that exported to England. Here is a pretty complication for our ingenious friends to unravel. Not having before us everything that has been written on the subject, we feel incompetent to pronounce a decision, and we doubt exceedingly if we should be able to do so though we were in possession of all the minutiæ on both sides. Our readers will understand our difficulty when we mention one of the main points under discussion; whether, in seeking to arrive at the increase of expenditure for whiskey, allowance should be made for an increased proportion of water, added by the retail dealers on account of the rise in price? The Scottish Press hits upon this idea, not without some shrewdness, and sets down the probable amount of water for which the public pay as so much whiskey, at 1,000,000 gallons.—Mr. McLaren, on the other hand, scouts this idea altogether, and will not admit it into his statistics, by which he endeavours to show that the statements of increased consumption are unfounded. Where there is so much room for ingenuity, and where ingenious men, aiming at opposite conclusions on the same subject, attain them with such an array of conflicting figures, it is hard to say who is right to a hair; but again we must say that the Forbes Mackenzie people, if they have the best of it—which, however, we do not admit,—having it only by a hair, even on their own showing, have no great reason to boast, very loudly or confidently about the beneficial results of their favorite Act.

The question of reforming the drinking habits of the people by means of legislative restrictions on public houses, in one which the public of the United States have before them at the present time no less than the people of Scotland. Here, in New York, we have recently had an attempt made, just as in Scotland, to prevent the sale of intoxicating liquors on the Sabbath, but without success; a few months ago the public houses were nearly all closed for a short time, but now the traffic is again being carried on with nearly as much openness as before there was any law on the subject.—Any experience, however, of the working of a legislative act is of no value in the case of a city like New York where law of any kind is little regarded. But in Scotland matters are in a very different position; the laws are habitually respected; yet we find this Forbes-Mackenzie Act not merely evaded or set at nought, but in the larger cities, Glasgow more especially, giving rise to innumerable illicit modes of indulgence which are actually creating new kinds of offences, which form a heavy set-off against any gain that may be imagined to have resulted from the Act. Legal restrictions require to be employed with great judgment and delicacy, for the suppression of any habit which has taken a strong hold of the public, a habit, moreover, which people do not believe to be wrong in itself, but only in its abuse by excess. Now, drinking is in Scotland such a habit, and there are circumstances which palliate it to a great extent. In a climate like this in which we live people may well be sober, and drinking here appears to be nothing more than an idle habit. We have a beautiful, clear atmosphere, in which, if people did not injure themselves by what they eat, depression of spirits would scarcely be known. In Scotland it is otherwise; and much of our countrymen may sigh for their native hills and glens, they cannot forget the "guid auld misty weather," which may sound very well in an exiled shepherd's poetical lament, but is exceedingly damping to all human sensibilities, and naturally provocative of hard drinking as an antidote. We have often wondered that there are so few suicides in Scotland, and are half disposed to think the circumstance may be owing to people following the advice of Solomon as paraphrased by Burns. In the cities, especially on the western side of the country, the depressing effect of climate is greatly aggravated by a low sanitary condition; and we must say that it is a matter of no surprise to us that the people of Glasgow —the lower classes especially, who are confined in such damp, close, crowded dens —should be addicted to drinking deep, and that they should have recourse to illegal devices to obtain liquor when the law attempts to withhold it from them. In such aggravated cases as this, reformers go about their object in a wrong way when they attempt merely to prevent the use of the pernicious stimulant. The only way in which they can attain even partial success, is by obviating or diminishing, as far as possible the necessity which drives people to have recourse to it. The case is a complicated one, and calls for an elaborate remedy—the habit of hard drinking can only be got rid of by substituting some other. What we have said on the point of climate, indeed, may tend to show that there are natural causes not so easily to be got rid of as those of man's creation. This may be so, and as long as drinking continues in this wicked world, our countrymen at home may perhaps be addicted to it to a somewhat greater extent than people in more genial climes. One consolation is that they can drink more with impunity than the people of any other country; and the moral point of view with reference to this matter, is not how much men drink, but how much they get intoxicated. The climate of Scotland, while it certainly does predispose to the use of strong liquor, also gives an unusual amount of strength to resist its injurious effects.—In this view of the case, we revert to the statistics of commitments for drunkenness as throwing more conclusive light on the subject than any mere statement of the quantity drunk; and if these cases could only be got rid of, we should have no particular fault to find with the consumption of so many gallons of the mountain dew.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, July 16.

There is a lull in the campaign which will last, all Europeans regiments hope, till the cold weather. The Commander-in-Chief is actively exerting himself to bring his soldiers under cover, and prohibits all further action, except in Jeypore and Behar. In Jeypore the Gwalior insurgents, after a series of marches to and fro within the state, which it would be difficult to make intelligible without a local map, suddenly avoided Tonk. On the 9th they had entered the town and commenced the siege of Bheempur, the Rajah's fortress. They had, however, no guns. The Rajah held out gallantly enough, and the approach of Holmes's Brigade, a body of Cavalry and Horse Artillery, despatched, I think, from Agra, compelled them to raise the siege. They fled southward, and invested Rampore, a town belonging to Tonk, and which contains 12 guns and some military stores. These they hope to obtain, but Holmes's Brigade, at the latest date to which we have intelligence (July 11), was only 15 miles behind and these flying corps never stop to think about odds. Col. Napier, at Gwaire, attacked 11,000 men with 600 horse, and had their number been quadrupled would have attacked them all the same. A few of the Tonk soldiery have joined the Losing side, but unless the garrison of Bampore are traitors the rebels must fly again. Their course is expected to be southward, as they do not know that Mhow now contains three European and four or five Bombay regiments. They may en passant defeat Kotah; but whatever they do, their career must be short. They are fairly surrounded by British troops and have neither leaders, guns, nor ammunition. Unless joined by some local potentate, they can obtain none, and I would not waste so many words on them but for the uneasy feeling, obviously shared by Government,

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

For Sale.
Money Wanted.
P. H. L. & B. Railway—A. T. Williams.
That By-law—A Ratepayer.
The "Globe" Newspaper—G. Brown.
Axe Factory—R. D. Rogers.
Notice—W. B. Read.
To be Let.
Godey's Lady's Book.

The Examiner.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 23, 1858.

Arrival of the "North Briton."

Quebec, September 21.

The North Briton arrived at 11 o'clock this forenoon, having been detained below over night by the storm. She brings 128 cabin and 92 steerage passengers. Did not see the Saxon Harlequin off Kamouraska.

The North Briton experienced strong head winds during the whole passage. We append a few items of news by her.

Through the political intelligence generally speaking of the North Briton is not of importance, there are some points of marked interest, especially in relation to the Atlantic Telegraph.

The Royal mail steamship Niagara from New York, arrived at Liverpool on the 7th inst.

The cessation of signals through the Atlantic cable, was announced in London on the 6th inst., but no particulars had been given to the public. It was believed, however, from what had leaked out, that the difficulty was near the shore and remediable. The non-working of the cable had caused a decline in the shares—a nominal quotation to £400 to £500 on a par value of £1,000.

A petition in bankruptcy was presented against the European and American Steamship Company.

Queen Victoria visited Leeds on the 6th and 7th instant, and had an enthusiastic reception. After Knighting the Mayor she left for Balmoral.

A grand banquet in honor of the Atlantic cable was given at Killarney on the 7th of September.

Chas. T. Bright, the engineer of the Telegraph Co., had been knighted by the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

Queen Victoria has opened the Town Hall at Leeds. The proceedings were attended with great eclat.

The indemnity from China to France and England, for the expenses of the war, is believed to be considerably greater than was reported via Russia.

Banquet at London to Mr. McGee.

HIS VIEWS ON POLITICAL AFFAIRS.

(Reported for the Globe.)

The citizens of London marked their sense of his public services and their appreciation of his private worth, by entertaining Thomas D'Arcy McGee, Esq., M. P. P., at a public banquet, given in the Royal Exchange Hall, in that city, on Wednesday evening last. Mr. McGee had been called from Montreal to London to deliver a lecture, and his presence was taken advantage of by his friends and fellow Reformers in the West, to do him the honour we have named. The arrangements had been admirably conceived, and were well executed under the direction of the efficient committee of which James Daniell, Esq., was chairman. Covers for about 320 gentlemen were laid on four tables, placed longitudinally, a cross table at the head of the hall being reserved for the chairman and the invited guests. The room was tastefully decorated with flags, white and blue drapery, evergreens and p intings. Immediately behind the presidental chair were two large and beautiful oil portraits of the Queen and Prince Albert, flanked on either side by British ensigns, and surmounted by the Royal Arms, resting on the Union Jack, which was supported by the flags of England's firm allies, France and Turkey. At the foot of the room was a design not less attractive and ingenious, the subject being the mighty achievement of uniting the continents of Europe and America by means of the Ocean Telegraph. On the eastern side of the room, was unfurled the English flag of a size such as to fitly represent the greatness of the English nation, the American colours being displayed in the far west. The centre was filled up by an exquisitely-wrought flag of Ireland. The Union Jack was connected with the Stars and Stripes, by a link of wire, indicative of the Atlantic Cable and land termini, which passing the Irish banner on its way, made that flag the medium of communication. A graceful compliment was thus paid to the native country of the talented gentleman who was present as the guest of the evening.

At seven o'clock Mr. McGee entered the Hall, and was welcomed by hearty applause. He was accompanied by the Chairman, (Mr. Daniell,) at whose right he sat during the evening, and by Dr. Connor, M. P. P., the late Solicitor General, who was seated on the left of the chair. The chairman was also supported by A. McKellar, Esq., M. P. P., and other influential gentlemen of the city and neighbourhood. The catering had been left to Mr. McCann, proprietor of the Western Hotel, who won the good will of the numerous company for whom he had to provide, by the excellency of the dinner he had caused to be so well served up. A select band performed several pieces of music during dinner and between the several toasts which were drunk in the interest of the evening. The cloth having been removed,

The CHAIRMAN gave the usual loyal toasts, after which he proposed a bumper to the health of the guest of the evening, which was received with vociferous cheering and which lasted several minutes.

Mr. MCGEE, M.P.P., who was received with another burst of enthusiastic applause, spoke as follows:—Mr. Chairman, Mr. Vice-Chairman, and Gentlemen,—I would certainly be very ungrateful if I did not deeply feel the high compliment you, Mr. Chairman, have paid me, and which this large and respectable assemblage have so cordially endorsed. I feel that to the honour you have done me I have, as yet at all events, established no claim. I have neither the authority of office, nor have I accomplished—indeed, I suspect my I have undertaken—anything to justify in a portion of the Province where I am not fully personally known so very emphatic an expression of opinion as has been evinced by the assembly to-night. It is very true that at the close of a lengthened and laborious Session of Parliament, when two or three of the ablest men of her Majesty's loyal Opposition (loud applause)—were deprived of their seats in the House of Assembly, I in common with several other gentlemen who remained after our chiefs had been cut off in an ambush specially prepared for that purpose—(cheers)—it is perfectly true, I say, that the few gentlemen of the Opposition who remained did make the best fight they could offer, and enter the most emphatic protest they could pronounce against the injustice, the wrong, that had been perpetrated. (Applause.) I in common with Mr. Wallbridge, Mr. McDougall, Mr. McKellar, the patriotic representative of Kent, whom I rejoice to see now present—(applause)—and other members of the Opposition, I endeavoured in the absence of those who from age, talent, and experience were the legitimate leaders of the Opposition, to do the best that could be done under our rather disheartening circumstances; and in now acknowledging the compliment you have paid us, I do so as their representative here as I was their colleague on that occasion. I regard this meeting of the Reformers of London and its neighbourhood as a serious and important political occasion. (Applause.) If it is not so it is our fault, because we may make it an important political occasion. A firmer tone, a clearer prospect, a more decided policy for the Reform party of Upper Canada may date from the your banquet at London, on the 15th September, 1858, (cheers). Gentlemen, I believe we are all agreed that it is of the last importance to the present government of this country, as well as to its future growth and development in the ratio of its resources, that we should have a Reform party, just, liberal, firm and co-extensive with all the constituencies of both Upper and Lower Canada, (cheers). I think you will agree with me that the necessity for aggregating to that party every possible source of strength is most urgent, and that there is enough of public work before such a Reform party to occupy it for many years to come, (hear, hear.) Gentlemen, there is one point upon which, at least to start with, we are all thoroughly agreed—we are all agreed in using, in acknowledging, in boasting of, in being proud of the title of Reformers. (Loud cheers.) We desire the political party with which we shall be associated to bear no other title; and, Mr. Chairman, I fervently hope that the day is near at hand, if is not already come, when that single word "Reformer" need not be qualified by the addition of one other word, (loud cheers.) I hope the time is not distant when the common voice of the Reform party throughout the Province will declare that by their politics shall men alone be known—that throwing aside all religious denominationalism, be it Protestant or Roman Catholic—(loud cheers)—and rejoice in the common name of Reformers, having common objects in view, we shall harmoniously do battle side by side for the maintenance and establishment of our common principles, (renewed cheering). The urgency of the case is this, that our present Administration is confessedly most rotten and corrupt, (cheers.) If it were a question of the introduction of great fundamental changes, there might be raised an issue as to time. It might be argued that it was not yet wise to disturb the existing state of things. But when the annual expenditure—the monthly, daily expenditure of the Province, is directed to corrupt constituencies—to suborne the representatives of the people; when the revenues of the Province are funded not to meet our honest debts, not economically so as to enable us to live within our means; when the Estimates are annually stuffed with jobs entered into for the purpose of buying over and rewarding a corrupt Parliamentary majority—when these things are seen to go on day after day, and men are grown proud, and brazen, and insolent, whilst receiving the wages of corruption—when it is openly proclaimed in the organs by whom they are represented that in similar circumstances any other man would act in precisely the same way,—while such practices continue, it is hopeless to expect an honest and an upright Government, (cheers.) It is, then, under these circumstances that I plead the urgency for immediate organization, without one unnecessary day's loss of time, of the Reform strength of both Provinces, on principles common and essential to both, (loud cheers.) Gentlemen, Administrative Reform will never be carried without a vigorous party in Parliament and in the country to indicate the details and make them tests of allegiance binding upon their supporters and their colleagues and the leaders of the party. The vessel of State has been silently accumulating a coating of corruption which impedes her course and threatens her safety, and to use the dockyard phrase, she must be "careened." (Cheers and laughter.) We must apply ourselves, however unodorous the occupation may be, to the work of cleansing her timbers, and show that the ship in which our fortunes and our children's fortunes are embarked, may with safety go on in a prosperous career, (applause.) Administrative Reform can only be effected by party organization, for in no other way is the giant evil, corruption, to be combatted. There is nothing strong enough to put down the diseased desire for bribery which is becoming a general and chronic canker in our system, but earnest determination on the part of leaders in whom the people have hope, and faith, and confidence; and in the establishment of great principles, in which they have still greater hope, and faith, and confidence than in any leader. There is no appeal so strong to the sordid sentiments of our nature—to the deep enthusiasm which lies latent in all men, and which a good cause never invoked from freemen in vain, (loud cheers.) The expenditure of the Province has been trebled since the year 1854. The public offices are encumbered with an immense and unnecessary standing army in coloured clothes—men who are the worst enemies to the really valuable public servant. The heads of departments are mere figure heads; they are only nominal heads. Those of us who have seen the inside of the administrative system, know that the real men who manage the departments of this Province are not the men who are paraded as the head and front; but it is a secondary and silent class who are absolutely the masters. The responsible heads of departments are in reality subordinate to these permanent and immovable heads over whom neither Parliament nor the people can exercise an effective supervision, (cheers.) Gentlemen, oh (been grounds these Administrative Reforms are urgently needed. Then, again, events are coming upon us, in which the Reform party ought to lead, and upon which the Reform party ought to say the first word. I think there is no man who, attentively regarding the present condition and probable future of Canada, can fail to see that we are upon the eve of great constitutional changes, (hear, hear.) I suppose that the minds of public men have been more directed by the recent conduct of his Excellency to the necessity of changes in the Constitution of Canada, than by any other single act of recent date, (hear, hear.) If a Governor General can with impunity be a party to the swearing in of men into two classes of office within 24 hours, addressing to them oaths to discharge duties which they had never inaugural in performance, and if other Governors (cheers) can repeat the outrage, then, I say, we have no security for responsible Government save in a written and exact instrument containing the constitution, (cheers.) It has been said that we have Responsible Government, but it is a very serious question to ponder how we can have Responsible Government without a Responsible Governor, (hear, hear.) We have in Canada no court of impeachment. These Ministers hold office, as many eminent jurists believe, without any other title to the offices than would be possessed by any other twelve men you may meet in the street; and yet Parliament itself is dumb—it has no power to arraign them, to impeach them, to punish them. Because we have no power—because it is possible, as we saw towards the end of July and in the beginning of August, it was possible—by supineness or collusion—by either the active or passive participation of the Executive,—for twelve men who have lost the confidence of the country, and lost even the confidence of most of their habitual supporters in the House—because it is possible that twelve such men as these can go through the farce of resigning, with the understanding that within a week they will be back again in their old offices, and by so doing unseat twelve of the leaders of the Opposition, whose presence in the House was essential to the good government of the country—because these things are possible, I believe we are driven to consider whether the only alternative for securing to ourselves Responsible Government is not that of a written constitution, (cheers.) Gentlemen, there is another question which was broached during last Session, and upon which, if rumour speaks truly, some of those who claim to be the present Government of this country have departed to-day from the port of New York to deliberate with the Colonial Secretary—it is the question of the federalization of the Provinces. This is a question upon which also the Reform party to ought to lead. It is one on which we ought to deliberate and have our minds made up upon, so that our collective strength might be thrown one way. Hitherto this has been an individual speculation; but it was originally projected by one of the most amiable and able public men in the service of the country, my hon. colleague, Mr. Dorion, the senior member for the city of Montreal, (loud cheers.) In the session of 1856-7 he prepared resolutions on this subject with a view to the settlement of the difficulties which then existed between Upper and Lower Canada. This federalization, whenever it takes place, must include the carrying out of the principle which I said last session from my place in Parliament I regarded as irrefragable and unanswerable—the principle of representation is Parliament by numbers, (loud cheers.) On this subject, also, the Reform party should have their minds made up and their energies at work. We should take our own ground early and be prepared to keep it. When Mr. Galt joined the Administration, he stole and carried with him this portion of the furniture of his former associates as a peace-offering to the men whom he has deserted. But it will not avail the party of expediency, the party of corruption, to affect regard for one of the principles of the statesman who preferred to remain, as Mr. Dorion did prefer to remain, honestly in opposition, when a year ago they pressed him to become one of their Ministry and kept back Cabinet arrangements nearly a week in order to induce him to accept office; but who refused to go in among them, (loud cheers.) Gentlemen, because there is an urgent need of, and an immediate necessity for Administrative Reform, without the loss of a single day, indeed, if it can be avoided, it is greatly to be desired that all those who really do believe that our present Administration requires such reform, should come forward and unite themselves for that purpose. Because, also, we have reached a period in our political development in which constitutional changes must be at hand, it is necessary that a great independent Reform party, representing well the feelings of the people, should be organized in order that it may pronounce upon the details as well as upon the principles which are to lie at the basis of those new changes. Both immediately and prospectively, then, it is absolutely essential that without loss of time we should have a united Reform party with a clear and full understanding of our principles and the means by which we expect to attain success. Speaking on this topic you will permit me to make a single remark incidental to the subject. I make it thus publicly, because I received several letters respecting it, which, during the excitement and pressure consequent on the Lower Canada elections, I was unable to answer. I cannot perceive, estimate or understand the tactics of those who contend for the election of a Reformer to the Lower House and are willing to vote for a Tory for the Upper House, (cheers.) The only safe rule would seem to be to carry the principles into the electoral contests for the Upper House which we have insisted on in the late elections for the House of Assembly. No Government in this country can be carried on without the co-operation of both branches of the Legislature. The more largely the electoral element is infused into the Legislative Council the more will it be necessary that the same principles should be avowed by those who act in that co-ordinate branch of the Legislature which are upheld in the Lower House, (cheers.) And my hon. friend the late Solicitor General West, the member for South Oxford, and his late colleagues in the Ministry, will shortly have to consider—for I look upon their return to power as certain—(loud cheers)—as an event that most inevitably happen—they will by and by have to consider how they shall divide the offices with the Upper House; because there is no question that when it comes from the people and is composed on the electoral principle, more than one or two seats—perhaps three or four of the offices (if the heads of the public departments are to continue to have seats in both Houses of the Legislature) will be claimed by the members of the Upper House. We saw in the late case the Upper House rivalling in indecency the House of Assembly in their attempt to condemn unheard the members of the Brown-Dorion Administration. It would be but natural to expect that the corrupt majority of the Lower House, including the two model members—the member for Quebec with the apocryphal and inconceivable majority of 1,500, (laughter)—the member for Russell, or rather the member for Trey, Albany and Rome,—(laughter)—it would be only natural to expect that these men, and others elected by fraudulent and unlawful means, would express want of confidence in honest men, because they knew that no honest men in the House or in the country had any confidence in them, (cheers.) But it is somewhat surprising that the Upper House a body specially organized, and into which it is said that no political hacks ought to be introduced, should sit in judgment and condemn unheard and untried. And, therefore, I apprehend that it does not lie with them as their apologists to say that, in the election for the Legislative Council we ought not to carry out our political principles as steadily and firmly as we did in the election for the Legislative Assembly, (cheers.) That seeing question put to every candidate ought to be, "Are you a Reformer? and will you vote want of confidence in the Draper-Macdonald ministry? If you can't vote for you." Before loyal considerations or personal merits, the first Reform necessity in this country is to Reform the Cartier-Macdonald Administration out of existence, (cheers.) That is the condition precedent of all subsequent Reform in Upper Canada, and if the candidate for the Legislative Council will not vote such want of confidence, he is not deserving of support, (cheers.) No personal merits should take precedence of principle. On no other condition ought a conscientious Reformer to vote for a candidate than that the candidate abides by and upholds the Reform party, (cheers.) Gentlemen, having referred to this matter, I shall allude to another, and then I shall make way for others, because I feel considerable delicacy in occupying an inadequate share of your time. (No, no.) In the path of the Reform party in Canada, urged on, as it is by the important necessities which are felt by the great majority of the people, to the solution of the great constitutional problems which will stir men's minds and feelings to the lowest depths, I perceive no difficulty insuperable or indeed, formidable, but one difficulty stands in the way; and as your guest and one who desires to be your fellow-labourer, I will give you my opinion upon that one—it is the School Question. All other questions are essentially political. In dealing with them we deal by the rules of worldly wisdom; and men of all religious denominations feel but little difficulty in uniting together to dispose of them. But the educational question is a subject of much difficulty. In all countries for many ages past it has been found that this temporal tree with the theological trunk—this vitally important question, descending to the basis of men's religious opinions, and stirring up their emotions, their passions and their prejudices—is surrounded with much difficulty. I say I see in our way but one difficulty of a formidable nature, though I do not consider it insurmountable—that is in dealing with the National School system. Candidly, frankly and fully I will state my views in relation to this question. But before I do so, I would refer to a statement which I have denied in Lower Canada, and which, considering the source from which it came, it is scarcely necessary that I should refer to here. However, I will just say a word upon the subject. The statement is that the Brown-Dorion Administration had designed to send me on a mission of enquiry into the working of the Irish National System of Education. [Laughter.] I never dream't of such a thing until I saw it in the columns of the Leader newspaper. [Dr. Connor—"Nor any one else." Cheers.] All the information we need in relation to that system we can obtain from the Parliamentary reports which are published annually. But as to any commissionership, or other occupation, profit, or emolument in connection with the Brown-Dorion Administration, I never once thought of it. It never entered into my calculations, nor did I expect a greater reward for the little part I might have taken on this subject than to see the sectarian war which has unfortunately been too long waged in this country, closed for ever, and an era of nobler and better feeling inaugurated, (Loud and enthusiastic cheering.) But, gentlemen, I do believe it is possible, by the minds of our statesmen being turned to the study of the systems of national education which obtain elsewhere, that we may borrow from them very important improvements.—I believe it is possible that a Parliamentary enquiry occupying the minds of our best men, may devise a system of public instruction upon which public schools could be organised, such as would be satisfactory to all classes of the parents of children, and not objectionable to any class of the pastors of the people of this province. (Hear, hear.) My own feelings were never in favour of the school system of the United States, which is too much of a political institution. It teaches pretty nearly the same prejudices that the old Chinese cosmographers taught the youth of the Celestial Empire—that China occupied the centre of the universe, and the other countries of the world were like little plumbs surrounding it.—(Laughter.) The American system has many merits; but its chief detect is its being a powerful and effective political propaganda. It is a political institution for wielding children of foreigners into thorough-going young Americans. (Hear, hear.) Nor do I believe that the system of Catholic France and Austria are such as we should imitate; for like the American system, they partake too much of the character of State machines. Perhaps of all the systems of Europe, the least objectionable one is the Irish National system. (Hear, hear.) It was founded on the Bill of the then Lord Stanly, the present Lord Derby; and though it has undergone many alterations during the last four or five and twenty years, it is the one of which the majority are in favour. It has been liable to abuses in its administration, and it is no doubt susceptible of many improvements; but it has won the suffrages and approbation of a majority of all classes—Presbyterians, Episcopalians, and Roman Catholics. (Hear, hear.) Doubtless this system would not be entirely suited to our condition, but I think that what has been done once in one difficulty, in not altogether dissimilar circumstances, may be done again. I think it is possible that a Parliamentary enquiry, conducted by our ablest men, would make it acceptable to all creeds and classes, and under which our children might be educated together. (Cheers.) I believe this to be possible, and I am willing to devote my best energies to the task of making it possible. (Much cheering.) But, gentlemen if by partizanship or from any other cause, such a system should be defeated—or if, after it had received a fair trial, it should be found oppressive to the minority of any religion, however small that minority, I would never deny them a remedy—whether it is a Protestant minority in Lower Canada, or a Roman Catholic minority in Upper Canada. If they solemnly and emphatically declare in the face of the law and the authorities of the land, that they could not conscientiously avail themselves of the system of education established by Parliament and the country, I would not cut them off from a remedy. Their rights as parents should be sacredly preserved, and any Separate Schools they might desire to maintain, should have the full protection of the law of the land. (Hear, hear.) The difficulty in relation to education being overcome, I see nothing to impede a thorough union of the Reformers of United Canada, which you all heartily desire, and to the preliminary part that has been taken to bring about which, I know I owe the favour of your presence to-night. (Cheers.) Gentlemen, it has been charged against those of us who remained in Parliament after our leaders had been entrapped and withdrawn that we conducted ourselves in a manner disrespectful to the Representative in this Province of the Sovereign. I totally and entirely deny the imputation. (Cheers.) It is preposterous—and no one does not understand the distinction is but a mere turn in constitutional history—to speak plainly the grievances of the people and at the same time was perfectly loyal to the Sovereign who presides over and supports the interests of the people. (Cheers.) Are the one things inconsistent—to be loyal and to be liberal? Is loyalty in reality what the enemies of the monarchial principle assert—a piece of servility, of whispering humbleness? Is the Governor General—the shadow of the Sovereign—to receive more than Oriental adulation? When we are hurt in our dearest rights, are we not to be permitted to cry out. (Cheers.) It was the Governor General himself who invited the discussion by despatching a state correspondence to the House. His sending it there was a voluntary act on his part, and after he had done so, it was our right to discuss it fully and freely. We should have been false to our duty if we had held any doubtful speech on that occasion. The fewer our numbers, the more reduced our ranks, the more necessary it was for us to up holdour dearly-bought rights and to speak out energetically on the wrong which had been done. (Cheers.) We regard it as a dangerous experiment on the free institutions of the Province. (Hear, hear. When those constitutional changes which have now begun to be canvassed come, it will be seen—I rest upon the future, for I am conscious of having harboured no thought which is not favourable to the advantage and advancement of the country, and calmly resting upon the future to vindicate, I am in no hurry to vindicate myself. (Cheers.)—these changes are wrought, it will be seen that no man was ever more anxious than I am to preserve the connection so happily existing, for the welfare and benefit of Canada, between us and the mother country. (Loud cheers.) Changes in the constitution will secure our liberties, which have been freely given to us by the Imperial power, and if we do not reap the full benefit from them, gifts it is the fault of the electoral body—it is the fault of public opinion in Canada, which ought to concentrate and consolidate itself, in order to purge the Province of a bad government, and to establish a good and honest administration in its stead. (Cheers.) I feel disposed to say more in relation to public affairs; but I restrain myself. And why? Because we have a most unscrupulous opponent to contend with, and my every word might be distorted by those who lie in wait, to the disadvantage of my friends. (Cheers.) I care not for myself, because for my own words I am alone responsible. We know that they are fully capable of every such meanness. The reforms and projected improvements which have been foreshadowed session after session of Parliament have been systematically stolen by the succession of Coalition, which have of late years misgoverned the country, and more especially since 1854. (Cheers and laughter.)—Therefore, standing in the position of a private in the ranks—neither a member of the late Administration nor a Minister expectant—anxious as an apprentice to faithfully serve out my time, and to earn the confidence of my fellow-subjects in Canada, by my acts rather than by my professions—standing in this position, I do not feel that it would be courteous to you if I were to traverse the whole field of Provincial politics. I trust that at one of the Reform Banquets which will be held at an early day, we shall hear discussed what they consider essential for the welfare of the cause. (Cheers.) As to the past, I may say I have simply endeavoured to do my duty. If I had wavered during the crisis, I should have felt dishonoured, for that was the moment when, few in numbers, reduced in prestige, and deprived of those to whom we looked for guidance and example, plain speaking was essentially necessary. (Cheers.) I was anxious that the Brown-Dorion Administration should have had a fair trial, because the line of conduct they would have pursued would have been a practical proof that they desired to close the sectarian war which had unfortunately been waged, and they wished also to put an end to the era of corruption. (Cheers.) I feel that there is no way in which the feeling of the country could be more strongly expressed than for myself, an Irishman by birth, and a Roman Catholic by religion, to maintain that Mr. Brown, a Scotchman by birth and a Presbyterian by religion, should have had a fair trial. (Cheers.) No old sores, no ancient animosities should be dug up for the purpose of impeding him in his trial. (Hear, hear.) I have been happy to observe in the Lower Province, where it was said that Mr. Brown's name would be extinguished, and where his associates would be rejected, that so far from being defeated they have gone back to Parliament with a very much larger majority than they would have obtained had they returned to their constituents without that association. (Cheers.) There is but one exception—Mr. Drummond—and having been in Shefford I state this as a fact, that had Mr. Drummond gone early to the county instead of depending upon him whom he conceived to be his bosom friend, Mr. Foster, who raised the cry of non-residence, he could easily have carried the county with 500 majority.—(Cheers.) The Brown-Dorion principles were not at all at issue, nor did the advocacy of these principles cost Mr. Drummond a vote. I state this as an eye witness, and it will not be denied by any person who was in Shefford at the time. (Cheers.) The feeling manifested in this election both in Upper and Lower Canada is the best evidence that old allies have become new friends. (Applause.) I date my experience in public life from the assembling of Parliament in February. I attentively observed the leading men on both sides, and I was soon satisfied that Mr. Brown had been grossly misrepresented by my co-religionists. (Loud cheers.) On the other hand I was persuaded that what was called the moderation of the moderate party was chiefly a cloak which very poorly concealed an immoderate appetite for public plunder. (Cheers and laughter.) My choice was soon made up, for I early discovered on which side of the House was the real liberality and honesty. (Cheers.) I thank you for the honour you have done me this night. If I should err in the future, I think I may say for myself in advance that it will be an error of judgment. I sincerely desire to see good feeling and fellowship existing between all classes and denominations of her Majesty's subjects in this country; and because I desire this, I desire first of all a re-union of the Reform Party, and as a natural consequence of that, the speedy return to power of the Brown-Dorion Administration. [Mr. McGee resumed his seat amidst enthusiastic cheering.]

DISCOVERY OF TREASURE.—A most extraordinary discovery, which, for obvious reasons, is sought to be kept if profound secrecy, has taken place in an old ruined house at Trier. An immense chest full of gold and silver coins of English stamp, has been found concealed in one of the cellars, where it had been carefully walled up. [illegible] the papers and documents contained therein in the chest, it has become evident that the house was once inhabited by Bolingbroke, who must have hid here during the period wherein his whereabouts was [illegible] and banishment. It is one of his letters to mention that "his retirement is convenient to the Seine, and the house in question is found to possess subterranean passage leading down to the water's edge. The money is distributed by the agents of the pillage-hunt ranged by the party of the Pretender, for want of which the latter was prevented from striking a decisive blow. At present the papers and coins remain in the hands of the owners of the house.—Court Journal.

THE 100TH REGIMENT.—We understand the 100th Regiment is now under orders for Malta, and unless war comes to a speedy close in India, in all probability the East will be the destined field for their first brush with an enemy. The regiment is full, and is one of the finest in the British army. The regiment, we learn, has received new clothing, accoutrements, and bronze. The drill is rapidly progressing, and the men will soon be ready for the field.—They have also a fine band, a service of plate for the officers' mess, of the most beautiful description.—Colonist.

☞ The Halton Journal says that contrary to the expectations of many, the wheat crop, in Halton, has turned out a complete failure. Though some farmers realize twenty-five and thirty bushels per acre, the average yield will not exceed from ten to fifteen bushels per acre. The cause of this great deficit is attributed to rust which struck the wheat a few weeks before harvest. The wheat insect was said to be detected in the neighborhood of Campbellville, but subsequent accounts seem to determine the rumour to be fallacious. Farmers agree, however in placing the wheat crop considerably below the average, at least fifty per cent below ordinary years.

☞ A few days ago, Mr. S. Emerson, a very respectable farmer of Hemmingford, met with an accident which resulted in his death. Mr. E. was drawing brick from St. Jean Chrysostome for the Presbyterian Church, of which he was a member, when in going down a steep hill the pole of his waggon broke, the horses losing all control over it, it ran to the bottom with great velocity, and capsized, crushing Mr. Emerson under the load. He survived only a few minutes. Mr. Emerson had been many years a resident of Hemmingford, and was much respected by all who knew him. He leaves ten children to deplore their sudden bereavment of a good parent.

Peterboro' Markets.

Examiner Office,
Thursday, Sept. 23rd, 1858.

	$ c.		$ c.
Wheat per bushel	0 90	a	1 00
Oats "	0 20	a	0 25
Potatoes "	0 20	a	0 25
Turnips "	0 22½	a	0 00
Beets "	0 30	a	0 00
Onions "	0 50	a	1 00
Apples "	0 40	a	0 00
Flour per barrel	5 00	a	5 50
Pork "	14 00	a	15 00
Mutton per lb.	0 05	a	0 07
Beef "	0 07	a	0 08
Butter per lb.	0 10	a	0 12½
Cheese "	0 08	a	0 10
Eggs per dozen	0 07	a	0 10
Hay per ton	7 00	a	8 00
Wood first quality	2 00	a	2 50
Straw per load	1 00	a	2 00
Cabbage per head	0 03	a	0 07

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.

Married.

At Toronto, on Wednesday 15th September, by the Rev. Mr. Vincent, in St. Basil's Church, Mr. Daniel D. Savage, of Peterborough, to Miss Mary E. Smith, of Toronto.

At Edrom, Peterborough, C. W., on the 7th inst., by the Rev. P. S. Warren, W. E. Sanswood, Esq., of Forest Home, Peterborough, C. W., to CHARLOTTE E., only daughter of John Carnegie, Esq.

At Emdale, Williamsburg, C. W., on the 8th inst., by the Rev. Dr. Boswell, JOHN CARNEGIE, Jr., Esq., of Edrom, Peterborough, C. W., to ELEANOR, youngest daughter of Lieut. Billiard, H. B. M. 5th Foot.

At the residence of the bride's father, on the 8th inst., by the Rev. John Gilmour, HENRY DENNIS, Esq., late of Toag Mills, Kent, England, to AGNES, third daughter of Gerald Fitzgerald, Esq., Smithtown, C. W.

MONEY WANTED.

WANTED to borrow on good security £200 or £300. Apply at this Office.
September 23, 1858. 37—tf.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK,

THE best of the monthlies for the Ladies, and now so well known, as to render description unnecessary, is always on hand, for sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'
☞ October Number received, price 25 cts.

AXE FACTORY.

THE subscriber is now having manufactured by P. J. AYRES, at his old stand, near the Otonabee Mills, a large lot of

DOUBLE STEELED AXES,
BROAD & NARROW AXES,
CARPENTERS TOOLS, &C., &C.,

of the best quality and workmanship, which may be had either at the Factory or at the subscriber's store, on reasonable terms.

R. D. RODGERS.
Ashburnham, September 23rd, 1858. 37

NOTICE.

THE subscriber notifies all persons indebted to him, whose accounts are overdue, that in consequence of the amendment in the Usury Laws, TWELVE PER CENT INTEREST will hereafter be charged.

All accounts due from last year, and not paid immediately will be put in suit for collection.

W. B. READ.
Peterboro', 22nd Sept., 1858. 37

THAT BY-LAW.

THE Statute 16 Vic., chapter 2, section 5, gives, it appears, to the Municipalities of this Province the same amount of control over the annual funds accruing from the sales of the Clergy Reserves as from those derived from ordinary taxation; and most enough, our Municipality of Peterboro' have not gone beyond the exact letter of the Act, when they appropriated some £900 the other year to the Union School, that is, to educational purposes generally! But Dr. Nyerson declares that all rate-payers have an equal right to share in these Clergy Reserve Funds—the appropriation being, in each case, to either ratio to the number of rate-payers and nothing else. Wherefore our Municipality have not been just, certainly not generous, in overlooking, upon the occasion above referred to, those rate-payers who are supporting Separate Schools—but as the law protects this exclusive dealing we shall let it pass.

Not so, however, must we treat the new By-law which contemplates the early issue of Debentures in support of this lucky Union School. I therefore begin by asking, how are these Debentures to be provided for? Is it by special rate upon all rate-payers except the supporters of Separate Schools? Or is it by the taxes which are equally levied upon all persons in proportion to their property within the corporation? What power to them in this By-law providing for the redemption of the property of the supporters of Separate Schools from the payment of those bonds or debentures upon maturity, in the event of their being sold? What we purport to be Board of Trustees must be hopelessly in the dark as to the Corporation has not been just, and as I said before, certainly not generous, in the late distribution of the Clergy Reserve money—but they ought equally to conform to the letter of the School laws when these laws happen to protect the interests of rate-payers whose conscientious ties bind them with heavy pecuniary burdens to support Separate Schools. What think you, Mr. Editor?

Yours truly,
A RATE-PAYER.

Peterboro', Sept. 13, 1858.

 Toronto Mirror and Montreal True Witness will oblige by giving the above a few insertions.

TO BE LET.

A FARM in Otonabee, No. 11, 14 Con., 72 Acres cleared; an Orchard, good dwelling house, Barns, Stables, &c., within ten minutes walk of the Keene Station, the land is of the first quality.
☞ Apply at the Examiner Office.
Peterboro', 23rd Sept., 1858. 37-3

P. H. L. & B. RAILWAY.

AND PETERSBORO' SECTION.

WILL carry Passengers and Freight at Half the usual rates of Fare, from all Stations to and from the PROVINCIAL EXHIBITION at Toronto. Return Tickets must be procured in all cases.

For further particulars apply to the undersigned.

D. McLEOD, Managing Director.
A. T. WILLIAMS, Superintendent.
Port Hope, Sept. 20, 1858. 1t.

The Globe Newspaper!

1858-9.

THE success which has attended the publication of the GLOBE NEWSPAPER since its establishment in 1844, is the best certificate of its merits as a public journal, in the estimation of the community. No labour has been spared, and large outlays have from time to time been made to render it a comprehensive and reliable

COMMERCIAL, POLITICAL,
AND FAMILY JOURNAL.

The gratifying result is that it possesses by far the widest circulation and the greatest advertising patronage in British America.

The efforts which have been made in past years to keep pace with the progress of journalism, in other countries will be redoubled in the future. The EDITORIAL CORPS has been strengthened—the staff of REPORTERS enlarged—and contributions of numerous Correspondents, at home and abroad, will give new interest to its columns. The English and Foreign News is received at the earliest possible moment by Telegraph and Express. The Proceedings of Public Meetings, of the Law Courts and Municipal Councils are accurately reported by stenographic writers, and no expense is spared in sending corps of Reporters to any part of the country, and transmitting their Reports by Telegraph for publication the following morning. The Debates of the House of Assembly, of each day, are fully and accurately reported in the DAILY EDITION of the following morning, and carefully condensed for the WEEKLY paper. All matters of Trade, Commerce and Navigation—the proceedings of the several Boards of Trade—the arrivals of vessels at Quebec and Inland Ports—and every other subject of interest to Mercantile men is watched with special care and faithfully chronicled and commented on.—The Markets and Prices Current of Great Britain, the United States, and at home, receive special notice. The Agricultural interests command that earnest attention to which their importance entitles them.

The Globe will Continue to Advocate:

The Adoption of Population, without Regard to Locality, as the Basis of Parliamentary Representation.

The Entire Separation of Church and State—the Abolition of all Appropriations of Public Money for Sectarian Purposes; the Restraint of Ecclesiastical and other Corporations from Locking-up Land in Mortmain except for use and occupation.

National Education—Common School, Grammar School and Collegiate—Free from Sectarianism, and open to all on Equal Terms.

Economy in the Public Expenditure, and a Thorough Reform of the Departmental System.

Uniform Legislation for Both Sections of the Province.

Curtailment of the Power and Patronage of the Executive.

A Free Trade National Policy, so far and so rapidly as the Maintenance of the Public Credit will Permit.

Incorporation of the Hudson's Bay Territory as a Part of Canada.

&c., &c., &c.

THE DAILY GLOBE,

Is $6 per annum, payable strictly in advance.—It is published at four o'clock, every morning but Sunday, and is despatched by the early trains to all parts of the country. It is a very large sheet, containing a vast amount of news, mercantile intelligence, and general information, of the latest and most interesting character,

Any person sending the CASH for FIVE DAILY Subscribers, will be entitled to an additional copy FREE.

THE TRI-WEEKLY GLOBE,

Is issued every MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, and FRIDAY, at $4 per annum in advance. It is printed on a large sheet, and in its columns is given all that appears in the Daily Edition, with the Telegraphic and other news to the latest moment.

Any person sending the CASH for FIVE TRI-WEEKLY Subscribers, will be entitled to a FREE Copy.

THE WEEKLY GLOBE,

Is issued every FRIDAY morning, at $2 per annum, payable strictly in advance. It is printed on an immense double sheet of paper, of first-rate quality; it is made up in a handsome quarto form, comprising eight pages of seven columns each; and contains more reading matter than any other political newspaper on the Continent. Great care is taken in the compilation of the paper; the news is carefully collated from the Daily Edition, and articles especially prepared for its columns. The Market Reports, at home and abroad, receive constant attention.

To induce exertion on the part of the friends of the Globe throughout the country, it has been resolved, that any person making up a Club may have—

Ten Copies for.....Fifteen Dollars!
Twenty-five Copies for...Thirty-five Dollars!!
Eighty Copies for.... ...One Hundred Dollars!

Any person sending $10 for Five WEEKLY Subscribers, will be entitled to a FREE Copy.

The WEEKLY GLOBE will be sent to all Clergymen for One Dollar a year.

Money Letters addressed—"The Publisher of the Globe, Toronto," can be Registered by payment of one penny; and their safe arrival will then be at the risk of the Publisher.

☞ Subscriptions may commence at any period of the year, and be made for any term; and persons desirous of receiving the Paper need not w

BY-LAW No. CIII.

A By-Law to authorize the Mayor of the Town of Peterborough to raise by way of loan the sum of Two Thousand Five Hundred Pounds for the purposes therein mentioned, and to issue Debentures therefor and to provide for the payment thereof;

WHEREAS,—The United Board of School Trustees for the Town of Peterborough have made a demand upon the Town Council of the said Town for the sum of Two Thousand Five Hundred Pounds for the purpose of aiding in the erection and furnishing of a School House for the use of the Grammar and Common Schools in said Town.

And Whereas,—It is desirable and would conduce to the advantage of the inhabitants of the Town of Peterborough that such School House should be built and furnished.

And Whereas,—It will require the sum of Two Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Seven Pounds to be raised by a special rate for the purpose of such loan and interest for the space of ten years to be computed from the day of now next ensuing until the day of A. D., One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Eight, exclusive of the first and last days by annual amounts as follows—that is to say:

For the first year	£310
" second "	354
" third "	395
" fourth "	433
" fifth "	468
" sixth "	550
" seventh "	576
" eighth "	529
" ninth "	619
" tenth "	563

And Whereas,—It is proposed that Debentures to the amount of Three Thousand Five Hundred Pounds shall be issued payable with interest as hereinafter mentioned for the purpose of aiding in the erection and furnishing such School House as aforesaid.

And Whereas,—The amount of the whole rateable property of the said Town of Peterborough amounts to the sum of Sixteen Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-four Pounds one Shilling, according to the Assessment Returns thereof for the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Fifty-seven, being the financial year next preceding the year of the passing of this By-law.

And Whereas,—It is necessary for the payment of the interest aforesaid, and for the creation of a sinking fund for the payment of the principal of such loan to raise ten annual special rates in the Pound upon the total value of the whole of the rateable property as hereafter described—viz:

For the year
1859—Four pence half-penny in the pound.
1860—Five pence "
1861—Five pence three farthings "
1862—Six pence one farthing "
1863—Six pence half-penny "
1864—Eight pence "
1865—Eight pence one farthing "
1866—Eight pence half-penny "
1867—Nine pence "
1868—Eight pence "

or and above and in addition to all other rates and assessments therein imposed for the payment of the said interest and for the creation of a sinking fund for the payment of the principal money of the said Debentures according to the requirements of the statutes in such case made and provided.

And Whereas,—This By-law has been and was approved of by a majority of the duly qualified Municipal Electors of the said Town of Peterborough at a Meeting called and held in the Town Hall, in the said Town of Peterborough, on Saturday the 25th day of September, A. D., 1858, in conformity with a resolution passed by the Municipal Council of the said Town of Peterborough for that purpose and also in conformity with the requirements of section two and the sub-sections thereof of the Act of the Parliament of this Province 16 Vic. cap. 22, in so far as by the act of the said Parliament of the said Province 18 Vic. cap. 133, the same is made applicable to all By-laws for the purpose of raising money by any Municipality.

Be it therefore enacted,—By the Town Council of the Town of Peterborough, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same,—That for the purpose of raising the said sum of £2,500 for the purposes aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for, and the Mayor of the said Town of Peterborough for the time being is hereby authorized and required to make and execute Debentures upon the credit of the said Town of Peterborough to the amount of Three Thousand Five Hundred Pounds, in sums not less than fifty pounds, such debentures to be under the common seal of the said Town of Peterborough, signed by the Mayor and countersigned by the Clerk thereof, made out in such manner and form, and payable at such periods not exceeding ten years from and after the day when this By-law shall come into operation as said Mayor shall see fit, and all sums of money so raised by the issue of the said Debentures shall be paid into the hands of the Treasurer of the said Town of Peterborough to be applied by him for the purposes hereinbefore set forth and mentioned and no other.

And be it enacted,—That the interest on such Debentures shall be payable half-yearly at the office of the said Treasurer in the said Town of Peterborough, on the days of and respectively.

And be it enacted,—That this By-law shall come into force and take effect on the day of in the year of our Lord, 1858.

NOTICE.

THE above is a true copy of a By-law which will be taken into consideration by the Town Council of the Town of Peterborough upon the expiration of one month from the 2nd day of September, 1858, being the date of the first publication thereof in the Examiner newspaper.

And notice is hereby given that a general meeting of the qualified Municipal Electors of the said Town of Peterborough will be held for the purpose of considering such by-law and for the approving or disapproving of the same on the 25th day of September, 1858, at the hour of 10 o'clock in the forenoon at the Town Hall in the said Town of Peterborough.

J. EDWARDS,
Town Clerk.

Peterborough, August 20, 1858.

SCOTLAND'S AUTHORS.

Arnott's, Rev. Wm.—Laws from Heaven for Life on Earth, or Illustrations of the Book of Proverbs	$1,50
Bonar's Desert of Sinai, 3 plates	1,00
Do. Land of Promise, 5 plates	1,25
Do. Night of Weeping	0,30
Do. Morning of Joy	0,30
Do. Story of Grace	0,30
Do. Truth and Error	0,40
Do. Man, his Religion and his World	0,40
Do. Eternal Day	0,50
Boston's Four-fold Estate	0,30
Do. Crook in the Lot	0,30
Brewster's—More World's than One	0,30
Brown's Concordance, gilt 90 cts., plain	0,75
Chalmer's Dr., Miscellanies	1,50
Do. Moral Philosophy	0,80
Do. Astronomical Discourses	0,60
Dick, Dr.,—Christian Philosopher	1,00
Duncan's—Tales of the Scottish Peasantry, Illustrated	0,50
Do. Cottage Fireside, Illustrated	0,60
Family Worship.—A series of Prayers adapted to Domestic Worship, by one hundred and eighty Clergymen of Scotland, 320 pages	3,00
Gilfillan's Martyrs, Heroes and Reads of the Scottish Covenant	0,60
Guthrie's, Dr., Gospel in Ezekiel	1,00
Do. The City, its Sins and Sorrows	0,50
Hetherington's History of the Church of Scotland up to the disruption	1,50
Howe's Lamia Worthies, or Historical account of those who suffered for the Reformation	1,00
Martyrs and Covenanters of Scotland	0,60
Macduff's Memories of Gennesaret	1,00
Do. Bow in the Cloud, and the First Resurrection	0,40
Do. Morning and Night Watches	0,60
Do. Footsteps of St. Paul, with plates	1,00
Do. Words of Jesus	0,40
Do. Mind of Jesus	0,40
Do. Family Prayers	0,75
Do. Great Journey, or Pilgrimage to Mount Zion	0,30
Do. Faithful Promiser, and After Entrance	0,35
Do. Memories of Bethany	0,60
Rebel Grant,—A Highland Story	0,30
McCheyne's Life, Letters, Lectures and Songs of Zion	1,50
McCrie's Martyrs of Divine Government	2,00
Nantaith's, Mrs.,—Logic of the Kirk and Covenants	0,50
Pearson's Infancy, Its Amount, Causes and Accounts	1,00
Scottish Tales of the Covenanters	0,30
Scott's Bards—The Choicest productions	1,00
Wilson's Life and Times of Knox	1,00
Wodrow's Sufferings of the Church of Scotland	1,00
Young's Last Days of Knox	0,75
Do. Life of Knox	1,25

For Sale at the New Book Store of
SAWERS & MURRAY.
George St., Peterboro'.

August 5, 1858. 30

Miscellaneous.

LETTER AND NOTE PAPERS.

CREAM and Blue Colors, ruled and plain.—Envelopes, all sizes and qualities to match. A very complete stock on hand. Merchants supplied on liberal terms.

SAWERS & MURRAY,
Stationers, &c., Peterboro'.

PETERBOROUGH LIVERY STABLE

THE SUBSCRIBER begs to inform the public that he is always ready to furnish them with horses, sleighs, carriages, and every thing required at a Livery, on the shortest notice, and on reasonable terms. His horses are in fine condition, and everything about his establishment is in good order.

He very reluctantly has to withdraw from the long credit system, and begs all who may favor him with their patronage, to remember that he can only continue to accommodate the public, by them, in turn, enabling him to keep up his business, that is, by ready pay.

THOS. EASTLAND.

Peterboro Livery Stables,
Hunter Street, Jan. 1st, 1858. 1

UNION HOTEL.
Peterborough.

GEORGE ALLEN

RESPECTFULLY intimates to his friends and the public generally, that his establishment is still open for the reception of guests in his usual good style.

The house is new and beautifully situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, where travellers will find a quiet and desirable retreat.

☞ A limited number of respectable BOARDERS can be accommodated.

Good Stables and Sheds

On the premises. An Ostler in attendance, who will give the best attention to horses entrusted to his care.

Peterborough, Oct. 20th 1857. 42.

NORTH AMERICAN HOTEL.

DIVISION STREET, COBOURG.

THE above Hotel having been recently repaired, painted, and newly fitted up, and being now entirely complete in all its appointments, is now opened for the reception of the travelling public.

The House is commodious, and neither pains nor expense will be spared to make it one of the best in the Province.

The Liquors are of the best brands, and the Larder will be constantly supplied with all the delicacies of the Season.

The Stables are commodious, and an attentive Ostler is always in attendance.

The proprietor pledges himself that every attention will be paid to the wants of his guests.

☞ Omnibusses will attend at the Cars and Boats to carry passengers to the Hotel free of charge.

RALPH FRANCIS,
Proprietor,

Cobourg, August, 1857. 35

VALUABLE WORKS.

AMONGST a large assortment of Valuable Books, the subscribers now offer for sale the following useful and interesting works, suitable as appropriate presents to OLERGYMEN or SABBATH SCHOOL TEACHERS, or as useful and instructive additions to the Family Library, viz:

KITTO'S DAILY BIBLE ILLUSTRATIONS;—being Original Readings from Sacred History, Biography, Geography, Antiquities and Theology. Morning and Evening Series; complete in 8 volumes; uniform cloth binding,—$1 each volume.

PALEY'S EVIDENCES OF CHRISTIANITY —Complete $1 25.

RYLE'S, J. C., EXPOSITORY THOUGHTS ON THE GOSPEL,—For Family and Private use, with the Text complete; Matthew and Mark published, at $1 each volume.

BEECHER'S, HENRY W., LIFE THOUGHTS —New edition. $1.

CECIL'S REMAINS & MISCELLANIES—$1.

BAYNE'S ESSAYS IN BIOGRAPHY AND CRITICISM—$1 25.

HALEY'S LITERARY ATTRACTIONS OF THE BIBLE; or a plea for the Word of God considered as a classic—$1 25.

BALDWIN'S REPRESENTATIVE WOMEN,—from Eve the wife of the first, to Mary the mother of the second Adam,—$1.

CHEEVER'S LECTURES ON THE PILGRIM'S PROGRESS,—$1.

LECTURES delivered in London to the Young Men's Christian Association,—$1.

SAWERS & MURRAY,

NEW BOOK STORE, GEORGE STREET.

Peterboro', Sept. 8, 1858.

FARM FOR SALE

THE South 70 acres of the west half of the 23rd lot in the 6th Concession of Smith.—The land is of the best quality, well fenced and in good cultivation, upwards of 50 acres being cleared of stumps and stones, with a good young orchard bearing fruit. There are on the premises

A New Frame Barn, a Good Log Barn,

Stables and Sheds. Also two Good Wells. For further particulars apply to the proprietor,

PATRICK WOOD.

Smith, Sept. 7, 1858.

READ! READ!!

SAM Slick's Nature and Human Nature.....50 cents.
Sam Slick's Sayings and Doings.....50 "
Sam Slick in England, or the Attache.50 "
Mrs. Partington's Carpet Bag of Fun..50 "
Tom Cringles' Log.....75 "
The Cruise of the Midge.....75 "
Yankee Notions for September.....12½ "

And a host of other capital things at
SAWERS & MURRAY'S BOOK STORE.

Peterboro', August 26, 1858.

FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE AND WELL SITUATED PROPERTY, being a part of Lot No. 12 in the 7th Concession of Smith, and within the Village of Bridgenorth, containing eight and one quarter acres; bounded on the front by the Lake, east on the rear by the Main Road leading from Peterborough to Harvey, and situated between Mr. S. Kelly's Mills and the Wharf on Dunbar's Landing. There are on the premises a good substantial HOUSE AND BARN. An undisputed title can be given.

For further particulars apply to the owner on the premises.

JANE HARRINGTON.

Bridgenorth, Sept. 10, 1858. 36

NOTICE.

ALL Persons indebted to the Subscriber are requested to call and make payment and SAVE COSTS, as on all Notes and Accounts over due, interest will be charged at the rate of 12½ per cent per annum from this date.

WILLIAM EASTLAND.

Peterboro', Sept. 1, 1858. 29-4t

LUMBER.

THE Subscribers offer for Sale 200,000 feet of SELECTED CULLS AND STAVES, on reasonable terms, in quantities to suit purchasers.

SHAW & WAIT.

Peterboro', Sept. 12, 1858. 35—3t

THE STEAMER "FLY,"

HAS resumed her regular trips between LINDSAY AND MUD LAKE; leaving Kelly's Wharf, Mud Lake, on Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings at 8 A.M., and Lindsay on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday mornings at 8 A.M.

GOOD'S LAKE BOAT.

THE best of the meetings of the season will now be well known, and the boat for the accommodation of visitors on hand, for sale or to Messrs & Murray's New Book Store, Peterboro'

☞ September Number received, price 20 cts.

Insurances.

TIMES AND BEACON
ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....£250,000 STG.

£140,000 PAID UP.

HEAD OFFICE IN CANADA, KINGSTON, C.W.

CANADA BOARD OF DIRECTORS OR TRUSTEES:
The HON. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES MORTON, Esq., Kingston.

DIRECTORS

Chairman—M. U. STRANGE, Esq.
Vice Chairman—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.
JAMES MORTON, Esq., | A. J. McDONELL, Esq.
JOHN MOWAT, Esq., | JAMES HARDY, Esq.

AUDITORS

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Esq., Kingston,
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.

Standing Counsel—A. J. MACDONELL, Esq.
Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.

LOCAL MANAGER:
W. CLUXTON, Peterboro'.

Peterboro', March 21, 1857. 13.

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON
Fire & Life Insurance Co.

CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.

Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.

RESPONSIBILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS UNLIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTREAL.

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on almost every description of property, at as reasonable rates as any other responsible office.

Losses paid without reference to the Old Country.

W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.

Peterboro.' March 24th, 1857. 12

WESTERN
Insurance Company.

CAPITAL £500,000.

Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF
FIRE & MARINE ASSURANCE
BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',
W. CLUXTON.

Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

UNITY FIRE AND UNITY GENERAL
INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS OF ENGLAND.

FOR every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.

CAPITAL £2,500,00 Sterling.

CHIEF OFFICE,—Unity Buildings, Canon St., London. Agent for Peterboro',
W. EASTLAND.

Peterboro', July, 1856.

Provincial Insurance Company.

OF TORONTO, C. W.

Subscribed Capital, $1,927,600. Paid up Capital, $430,256.

PRESIDENT, J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
VICE-PRESIDENT, HON. J. H. CAMERON.

Directors.

HON. W. B. ROBINSON, | E. F. WHITTEMORE, Esq.
GEO. DUGGAN, Jr., Esq. | GEO. CRAWFORD, Esq.
J. S. HOWARD, Esq. | JOHN CAMERON, Esq., M.P.P.
WM. L. PERRIE, Esq. | A. M. CLARKE, Esq., M.D.
HON. J. H. CAMERON, | DUNCAN MCDONNELL, Esq.
CAPT. P. WALLACE,

MANAGER AND SECRETARY:
HON. J. LEANDER STARR.
ASSISTANT SECRETARY:
J. JOSEPH WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK.—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS:—Messrs. DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE:
TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurance business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as in any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Bankers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.

Toronto, April 20, 1858. 42

THE COLONIAL
Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

HEAD OFFICE—Edinburgh, Scotland, and MONTREAL, CANADA.

Proposals for assurance disposed of in Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Adviser for Peterboro,—Dr. MacNab.

AGENT,
W. H. READ.

Peterboro', July 28th, 1857. 30

ALL ABOARD!

THE SUBSCRIBER respectfully begs leave to announce to the Public, that his House at Bridgenorth, (Mud Lake) is always supplied with the best accommodation and entertainment for travellers.

GOOD STABLING, DRIVING HOUSE, YARD ROOM AND STORAGE.

He also runs a STAGE to and from Peterboro' in connection with the Boats, leaving McGregor's Hotel, Peterboro', at half-past seven, A. M., to meet the boats at Bridgenorth, returning to Peterboro' on the arrival of the Boats, about 4 o'clock, P. M.

For freight or passage, enquire at McGregor's Hotel, Peterboro', or at the Subscribers Hotel, Bridgenorth. Fare each way 1s. 10½.

JOHN POPE.

Bridgenorth, June 12, 1858.

AMERICAN HOTEL.
PETERBORO'.

THE undersigned, proprietor, begs to return his sincere thanks to the travelling community and the country at large for the liberal patronage which the above house has received from them. He hopes by continued attention to their wants, and careful management of the House to retain the successful business which has attended his previous efforts.

The Bar

Will always be stocked with the best Liquors and Cigars.

Great care taken that in selection of servants good, careful Ostlers always in attendance at the stables.

Terms moderate.

A continuance of the public favor is respectfully solicited.

LOUIS McGREGOR.

Peterboro', 1858. 34-6

Business Notices.

SPLENDID INVESTMENT.
FOR SALE,

LOT No. 9, West of George Street, and South of Charlotte Street, adjoining the Port Hope and Peterboro' Railroad Depot, having three good buildings on it the situation is adapted to any public business. Those who desire to profit by such a rare chance, will please address the undersigned, by letter (post-paid) to Lindsay.

N. B.—It will be sold altogether or in building lots, to suit purchasers.

CHARLES McCARTHY.

Peterboro' July 29/1858. 29-tf

EVERY SCOTCHMAN

SHOULD read the "Scottish American Journal," published weekly. It contains the best summary of old country news of any paper published in this country, and has besides a series of articles on the "Highland Bonnets," or Achievement of the Scottish Regiments in India and elsewhere. For sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'. Price $2,50 per year in advance, or 3d per single number.

NOTICE.

THE PARTNERSHIP existing between us, and known as the firm of Hurst & Denne is this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts due to, and by, the said firm, will be settled by Henry Denne, who will grant receipts for the same.

WALTER HURST,
HENRY DENNE.

The business will hereafter be carried on by W. Hurst, who respectfully solicits a share of the Public patronage.

Big the Mills, Peterboro',
July 20, 1858. 28

NOTICE

IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Partnership, lately subsisting between HENRY MORROW & ALEX. MORROW, both of the town of Peterboro', under the firm of Morrow & Brother, was this day dissolved by mutual consent

All debts owing to the said partners will be received by the said Henry Morrow and all debts due by the said firm will be paid by him.

HENRY MORROW,
ALEX. MORROW.

Peterboro', July 1st, 1858.

IN REFERENCE TO THE ABOVE, I would take the opportunity to inform my friends and the public that I will continue the business carried on by the firm in the same premises, and I hope by strict attention to business, and a thorough knowledge of the wants of my customers, to merit and receive a continuance of the patronage so liberally extended to the late firm.

HENRY MORROW.

Peterboro', July 1st, 1858. 26

LOOK OUT!
SAVE YOUR MONEY
AND REMEMBER THIS,—
"ONE DOLLAR SAVED IS TWO EARNED."

IT is a certain fact which we offer to prove to any purchaser who would wish to visit our immense Stock of

Summer Ready-made Clothing,

That we will offer for sale, (to begin the 16th instant,) at 25 per cent. under the ordinary prices.

SMALL COATS, PANTS & VESTS, FOR BOYS, Of all descriptions, may be had also.

The undersigned, in calling the public attention, will not fail to give

CHEAP BARGAINS,

To any who patronize them.

☞ TERMS—STRICTLY CASH. ☜

F. & L. LEMAY.

Peterborough, July 13, 1858. 27

ROOM PAPER, PAINTING, &C.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, at his shop on Brock Street, a large and varied assortment of Room Paper, among which will be found patterns of English, French and American manufacture, which he has just received, and which he will sell at the lowest possible price, for ready pay, or short approved credit.

He keeps constantly a number of hands, who can be employed in

PAPER HANGING!

And he recommends his Stock and Workmanship to the public.

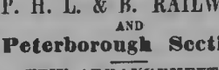
The Papers range in price from 5d per Roll, up to 17s 6d per roll, and from their great variety, he is sure the most fastidious will find their choice.

The Painting, Glazing and Finishing business carried on as usual.

ROBERT STEVENSON.

Brock Street, Peterboro, April 8, 1858. 41

The only Reliable Route to Peterborough
BY RAILWAY.



P. H. L. & B. RAILWAY,
AND
Peterborough Section.

NEW ARRANGEMENTS.

ON and after WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 18th 1858, Trains will run as follows:—

Leave Lindsay, 6 40 A. M., arrive at Port Hope, 10 10 A. M.

Leave Port Hope, 2 10 P. M., arrive at Lindsay, 5 40 P. M.

Leave Port Hope, 12 A. M., arrive at Peterborough, 2 P. M.

Leave Port Hope, 7 30 P. M., arrive at Peterborough, 9 00 P. M.

Leave Peterborough, 7 A. M., arrive at Port Hope 9 10 A. M.

Leave Peterborough 2 50 P. M., arrive at Port Hope, 5 P. M.

Trains run by Port Hope time.

All the above Trains run in connection with Grand Trunk Railway, East and West The splendid Steamer Maple Leaf, also runs in connection with P. H. L. & B. Railway, leaving Port Hope on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, at 11 a. m., arriving at Rochester at 6 p. m., in time for evening Trains to New York, Boston and Philadelphia, and leaves Rochester on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, at 11 a. m., arriving at Port Hope at 5 p. m. in time for passengers to reach Peterboro' same day.

Port Hope, August 16, 1858. 33

NOTICE.

FARMERS AND OTHERS, trading in produce, liable to Market fees, are hereby notified that I have purchased the right to collect such fees, under the Market By-law by which they are authorized, and in order to conform to the Market rules, all persons interested are respectfully requested to go of their own accord to the Market Square, and give no unnecessary trouble by attempted dodging. The law will be enforced with the utmost rigor.

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.

Peterboro', Aug. 4th, 1858.

THE "COLONIST."

THE "COLONIST" HAS A BONA-FIDE Circulation of
TWELVE THOUSAND,
And is therefore
THE BEST ADVERTISING MEDIUM IN CANADA.

TERMS:

DAILY—4d a line for first insertion, and 1d a line for each subsequent insertion.

WEEKLY—6d a line for first insertion, and 2d a line for each subsequent insertion.

N. B.—Postmasters who send advertisements on these terms, will have a commission of 10 per cent allowed them.

The terms of Subscription to the DAILY COLONIST are six dollars a year, payable in advance. For the WEEKLY, the price is a dollar and a half, half-yearly in advance.

To Clubs of ten, the WEEKLY will be supplied at one dollar a year. 35

Farms, &c., For Sale.

PROPERTY IN OMEMEE
FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, in the flourishing Village of Omemee, on the Port Hope & Lindsay Railroad, village Lot No. 10, north side of King street, containing ¼ acre of land.—The buildings consist of a frame dwelling house and store, now occupied by Mr. John Henderson, a dwelling house adjoining, also a large workshop, and stabling, with every other convenience attached. The buildings are all new, and well put up.

If the above is not disposed of before 20th of OCTOBER NEXT, it will then be sold to the highest bidder, by PUBLIC AUCTION.

TERMS are, £200 cash, or a bankable note; the remainder in installments as may be agreed upon.

For further particulars apply to John Henderson, on the premises, or to the undersigned proprietor, in Otonabee, or at the Examiner office, in Peterboro'.

There will be no difficulty as to title.

JOSHUA DAWSON.

19th Lot, 13th Concession,
Otonabee, Aug. 12, 1858. 31

FOR SALE.

ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND IN THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH.

THAT excellent farm of land, situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, being composed of the south parts of lots Nos. 27 and 26, in the 6th Concession of Smith, 6 miles from Peterborough, is offered for sale. The farm is thoroughly improved; has a first rate house, barn, &c., and a capital water frontage. The soil is equal to any in that section of country.

For particulars of price and terms apply to the proprietor in Peterborough.

A. SAWERS.

Smith, July 29, 1858.

FARM FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale East half 6 in 7th con. and East half of 7 in 7th con. Dummer, containing 100 acres, of which

80 ARE CLEARED

In good cultivation and well fenced; a good

CEDAR LOG HOUSE,

And two large barns, with other good out houses, and a superior well close at hand.

The property is three miles from

NORWOOD,

On an excellent road, and will be sold for £2 10s an acre. From one third to one half to be paid down, the payment of the balance as agreed upon.

HENRY GARDNER.

Dummer, July 10th 1857. 28.

VALUABLE FARM, SAW-MILL, FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber is desirous of selling his property, consisting of 250 acres, 50 of which are under cultivation, comprising a

FINE YOUNG GRAFTED ORCHARD.

There is an excellent DWELLING HOUSE, with Barns, Sheds, and all other necessary Out-Houses, a good water

SAW MILL,

in good running order. The premises consist of Lot No. 9, and south-east quarter of Lot No. 8, in the 11th Concession of the Township of Monaghan. The Farm is one of the finest in the County, and most favorably situated on the Gravel Road, two miles from Peterboro. The wood land consists of hardwood and cedar, and the whole lot is furnished with a good supply of running water.

For further particulars as to terms, &c., apply on the Premises to

W. W. BOSWELL,

Peterboro, Sept. 8, 1857. 36

TO LET.

TWO NEW BRICK STORES fronting on George Street, one for Dry Goods, the other for Groceries. Both finished in the newest and finest style of workmanship, and elegantly painted and varnished, equal to any in Town; the basement stories are well lighted and perfectly dry, and warranted against frost. Application to be made to the proprietor on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.

Peterboro', Feb. 1st, 1858. 5

TO LET.

That Splendid Three Story Brick Store, lately occupied by Mr. E. Peplow on Hunter Street.

Also 18 Town Lots for sale. Terms easy.

Apply to the Subscriber on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.

Peterboro', June 2, 1858. 22

Hardware.

New Stove Warehouse!!!

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform their friends and the Public that they have entered into Partnership as Stove-Dealers, Tinsmiths, &c., and respectfully invite public inspection to their new styles of Stoves, consisting in part of

The Improved Burr,
The Star of the West,
The Wide World,
The Commodore,
The Improved Canadian Farmer,
The Buffalo,
The Black Rover,
The King Stove,
The Premium.

Besides a variety of Parlor and Plate Stoves. They also receive orders for all kinds of

COPPER, SHEET-IRON AND TIN WORK.

Which their Patrons may depend upon getting done in a manner which will give the greatest satisfaction.

A large stock of TIN-WARE, STOVE-PIPES, and other such articles belonging to their business, kept constantly on hand.

Their premises are on George Street, lately occupied by Messrs. Harvey & Thomson, and next door to Messrs. Glover & Robinson

BIGELOW & ROBINSON.

Peterboro', October 27, 1857. 43

AXES BY STEAM

THE subscriber invites public attention to his increased facility of making the

SUPERIOR AXES

he has so long supplied to the community, and begs to assure his patrons that he will be unremitting in his efforts to retain for his work the good reputation it has hitherto enjoyed. He offers

Narrow and Broad Axes,
AND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF
EDGE TOOLS,

WHOLESALE and RETAIL, as cheap as they can be purchased here or in any other market, and of a quality that cannot be surpassed.

His premises are located on GEORGE ST., opposite the OLD BURYING GROUND, and to enable him to supply his manufacture in sufficient quantity, and at modern prices, he has called in steam power to his assistance.

☞ Axes Ranged and Ground to quick order.

W. MCCOCK.

Peterboro', Sept. 22, 1857.

FOR SALE CHEAP

BOILED and Raw Linseed Oil, Spirits Turpentine, and Varnishes, together with an assortment of

PAINTS GROUND IN OIL.

Also White Mountain Spars or Shantaroy Oil.

E. B. CURRY & Co.

Peterboro', Aug. 24, 1858. 33-3in

Miscellaneous.

HATS! HATS!

THE New York and Canadian Style of Hats is now ready for inspection. Also, a large assortment of Fur Hats and Cloth Caps, &c., &c.

The Trade Supplied as Usual.

A. SECOR,
Hatter, &c.

Cobourg, March 19, 1858. 12

CABINET ROOMS
RE OPENED!

THE subscriber informs his old customers and the public generally, that he has recovered from the effects of the late fire, and has erected a new building on the old site which he has fitted up as a show room. He is daily receiving and making up a choice assortment of

FURNITURE & CABINET WARE,

Of every description, which, as usual, he offers at moderate prices.

He has removed his workshop to the building just erected by Mr. Moocck, where by the use of Steam and the most recent improvements in

LABOUR SAVING MACHINERY,

He will be prepared to manufacture for sale or to order every description of Furniture, at prices unprecedent, in this Town.

W. Y. SWAYNE.

Peterboro', July 8th, 1857. 18.

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE LOT OF LAND, on the Gravel Road, about 3 miles from Peterborough, containing 25 acres, being part of the eastern portion of the North-East quarter of Lot No. 7, 11th Concession North Monaghan, on the West of John Green's Tavern, and adjoining it. Apply to the Subscriber,

WILLIAM BELL.

Monaghan, Jan. 11, 1857. 2

HORSE SHOEING.

BARNARD McGARRITY and WILLIAM MILLER, beg to inform the public, that their horse shoeing prices are as follows:—

A full set, new 6s,

Each remove 6d.

their terms are, if not Cash, well-approved credit.

Peterborough, Jan. 1st, 1858. 1

PERIODICALS, MAGAZINES, &C.

THE subscribers receive every Saturday the Weekly Periodicals in the following list, and on the third Saturday of each month the Monthlies for the next ensuing month, all of which they are prepared to supply on the annexed terms.

Orders respectfully solicited.

PER YEAR.		PER NO.
$2,25 ..	New York Ledger	0s 3d.
2,50 ..	Harper's Weekly	0 3½
3,00 ..	Ballou's Pictorial	0 4
3,25 ..	Waverly Magazine	0 4
1,50 ..	Yankee Notions	0 1½
2,50 ..	New York Clipper	0 3½
2,50 ..	Flag of Our Union	0 3½
2,50 ..	Scottish Amer. Journal	0 3
3,25 ..	Leslie's Illustrated	0 4
9,00 ..	Illustrated London News	1 0
5,50 ..	" " Times	0 7½
5,50 ..	Punch	0 7½
3,00 ..	Harper's Magazine	1 3
3,00 ..	Household Words	1 3
3,00 ..	Chamber's Journal	1 0
2,20 ..	Mrs. Stephen's Journal	1 0
2,20 ..	Peterson's Journal	1 0
3,00 ..	Godey's Lady's Book	1 3
3,00 ..	Atlantic Monthly	1 3
2,50 ..	New York Mercury	0 3
2,50 ..	" Weekly	0 3
2,50 ..	Rural New Yorker	0 3

YEARLY SUBSCRIPTIONS
MUST BE STRICTLY
in Advance.

Back Nos. must be paid for when ordered.

SAWERS & MURRAY.

Peterboro', June 28, 1858. 2

LOOK HERE.

ONLY ONE QUARTER DOLLAR!
FOR THE
VICTORIA PAPETERIE,
OR
CHEAP PACKET OF WRITING MATERIALS
WHICH CONTAINS

12	Sheets fine ruled Letter paper usually sold for	7½d
12	Sheets fine ruled Note paper "	4
12	Large sized Envelopes adhesive "	3
12	Note " " " "	2
3	Steel Pens	1
1	Holder	1
1	Pencil	1
1	Sheet Blotting paper	½
Making a total of		1s 9d.

NOW SOLD FOR
ONE QUARTER DOLLAR,
BY
SAWERS & MURRAY.
AT THE
NEW BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE,
Burnham's Block George-st, Peterborough.

June 22nd, 1858. 24

FRESH TEAS.

JUST RECEIVED from the Ship "Cambaln," direct from China, an assortment of

Hyson, Young Hyson.
Gunpowder, Twankay,

S. R. CURRY, & Co.

Peterboro', 29th June, 1858. 26

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

THE attention of Clergymen, Teachers, and others interested in Sunday Schools is respectfully invited to our large and varied assortment of

Reward Books, Tickets, Admission Cards, &c., &c., &c.,

Especially adapted for Sunday Schools, and which we will sell on the best possible terms.

A CALL SOLICITED,

SAWERS & MURRAY,
NEW BOOK AND STATIONARY STORE,
Burnham's Block, George Street Peterboro'.

DR. J. B. ALFORD'S
ECLECTIC, MEDICAL & SURGICAL OFFICE.

CORNER OF HUNTER AND ADELAIDE STREETS,
Near the Residence of James Hall, Esq.,
PETERBOROUGH.

DR. A. would announce to the citizens of Peterborough and vicinity, that he has located in this place for the purpose of attending to the duties of his profession. His system of treatment is purely Eclectic, using only those agents which are safe and reliable. INVALIDS however desponding, are invited to call, as no expense will be incurred without a corresponding prospect of recovery.

Residence—American Hotel.

Peterboro', Oct, 16, 1857. 41

FARM FOR SALE.

EAST Half Lot No. 14, in the 11th Concession of Asphodel, three miles from the Village of Norwood. There are fifty acres cleared, and good Buildings, and a never-failing spring of pure water on the premises. The land is of a superior quality.

Terms, Liberal.

For further particulars apply to JAMES HALL, Otonabee, or upon the premises, to

W. H. SCOTT.

Asphodel, 19th June, 1858. 24tf

Miscellaneous.

BY-LAW, No.—

A By-Law to authorize the Warden of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria to issue Debentures for, and to raise by way of Loan the sum of Six Thousand Pounds for the purposes therein mentioned.

WHEREAS it is desirable to raise by loan on the credit of this Municipality the sum of Six Thousand Pounds for constructing and repairing the Roads and Bridges in the said United Counties.

And Whereas—It will require the sum of Seven Thousand Nine Hundred and Eighty Pounds to be raised by a special rate for the payment of such loan and interest for the space of ten years, to be computed from the fifth day of October now next ensuing, until the fifth day of October A. D. One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Eight exclusive of the first and last days by annual amounts as follows—that

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND
Ornamental----Bronzing,
&c., &c., &c.,
Neatly executed, on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the
[illegible]
Burnham's Block,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1858.

Volume 3.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 38.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

Are Two Shillings in Advance, for One Year; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING

Six Lines, and under, first insertion	£0 5 0
Each subsequent insertion	0 0 3
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0 7 6
Each subsequent insertion	0 1 3
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0 0 9
Each subsequent insertion	0 0 4

☞ Advertisements without written instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognized.

Business Directory.

MESSRS. FITZGERALD & BRENNAN,

PROVINCIAL Land Surveyors, Civil Engineers and Land Agents. Office in Scott's Chambers, corner of George and Simcoe Streets. Messrs. F. & B. having lately surveyed the outlines of eight new Townships now included in this County will be happy to give any information to intending settlers. 34

MR. DENNISTOUN,

BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

B. BURNHAM,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough, Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. B. J. Vinard, Esq.

W. B. RUBIDGE,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, &c. &c., &c.
Peterboro', March 10th, 1856.

DR. HOLYWELL,

HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Rubidge's.
Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,

SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' West.

ALBRO & VINDIN,

Commission, Shipping, Forwarding
AND GENERAL AGENTS,
Lumber Merchants, &c.,
Port Hope, C. W.

Offices—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets.

MESSRS. STEWART,

ARCHITECTS, Engineers, Land Surveyors, and Land Agents. Office, Mill Street, Port Hope.

GEO. A. STEWART.
CHAS. B. STEWART.
Port Hope, May 23, 1857. 21.

JOHN HAYDEN,

Importer of Hanks and Pier Looking-Glasses, window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.
King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 35—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.

INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.
Peterboro', May 20th, 1857. 32

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD.

PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.
COMMUNICATION THROUGH THE POST OFFICE, Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S

FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.
Port Hope, Sept. 20, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,

Hunter Street, Peterborough, Canada West.
MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.
Peterboro', Sept. 3, 1856. 2

BOOKSELLERS AND STATIONERS.

SAWE'S & MURRAY,

HAVE always on hand a complete Assortment of Books in every department of Literature, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, &c., &c.
New Book and Stationery Store,
32 Burnham's Block, George-st.

A. MERCER & SONS,

TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.
Peterboro', June 9, 1856. 23—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.
A. MUNRO, Agent.
May, 1858. 19

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,

ARCHITECT, Civil Engineer, &c., Scott's Chambers, George Street.
Peterboro', July 23, 1856. 29

QUARRY TO LET,
Near Peterborough.

THE Subscriber offers for a term of years, the Quarry on the river side, above the residence of Charles Dupton, Esq. The bridge in contemplation to cross the river will bring the Quarry within half a mile of the centre of the Town. The stone is of a superior quality, and it is unlimited.
For Terms and other particulars, apply to Gamaliel Bethune, Dover, or
GEORGE A. STEWART,
Port Hope.
Peterborough, July 15, 1858. 27

Notice to the Asthmatical.

Asthmatic Cured per Post!

[illegible]

The Cruise of the "Betsey."

The last volume which has appeared of the works of Mr. Hugh Miller, contains an account of several geological tours undertaken by the author. They are an illustration of what may be called the cultivated or educated enjoyment of nature which marks the nineteenth century. They show how an eye trained to observe nature can find in her prospects what would never reveal itself to the vague, wandering gaze of ignorance; and they are singularly adapted to awaken and to educate that observational faculty to which they owe so large a portion of their charm. Hugh Miller was peculiarly fitted to perform the task of introducing the general mind to nature, and of teaching it to impress a scientific accuracy upon its perceptions. The observational and the imaginative faculties were in this case very rarely and exquisitely blended. The separating and classifying power of the man of science did not deprive him of the uniting, the coloring, the vivifying power of the poet. By possessing in a highly intensified degree the sympathies which all men share, he was able to lead men on to knowledge in which they might otherwise have felt no interest. His more general sense of the grandeur of nature was combined with an inquisitive in her minute aspects and characteristics. He marked the sunlight striking ruddy along the crag, while seeking to disentomb the fossils at its base; he felt the poetry of the wide sea horizon, the beauty of the long curving line of tinted foam, the majesty of the storm descending on the furrowed sea, while observing the tendrils of coral in the sheltered bay, and noting the shades of color in the delicate bivalve. His descriptions are accurate as those of the geographer, beautiful to those of the poet. His scientific details do not, so to speak, break up nature, and give us an idea of that wondrous whole which fascinated us in childhood, reduced to its elements, and arranged in a museum. He knows the formations underlying the mountain, but he knows the mountain itself in its mass and stability, with the films of mist lying dreamily along its brow. A merely scientific faculty without the corresponding power of imagination is a very poor affair. It can never do more than hod-work. It can help to great results, but in itself it is worthless. It is not desirable that we should represent nature to our minds as a vast museum. It is not well, amid its wild inspiring freedom, amid the magnificent play of its forces, amid its ranges of peaked mountains, its storms, its clouds, its rainbows, to think only of the little lines of system which man has drawn along its surface. It is probably because of this effect that so many scientific works are repulsive and dry. But Hugh Miller ever made science the minister of that nobler imaginative faculty which sees, admires, rejoices in, the works of God in their wholeness. Thus used, science is of an advantage which it is perhaps impossible to overestimate. It imparts definiteness to the conceptions and pictures of the imagination. It displaces that vagueness and that exaggeration which characterize the imagination of the man as distinguished from the imagination of the child, and the imagination of the European as distinguished from the imagination of the Asiatic. The essential liberty and independence of imagination are not thus effected, but the instruments of a more delicate charm are put into her hand, or she is taken to a loftier height, whence to soar into new and still higher regions. This close union between truth and imagination is highly characteristic of the present century. It was first exhibited on a scale of magnitude calculated to affect the intellectual life of the nation by Wordsworth. With a haughty boldness which at the time seemed insolence, he flung aside the old stage properties of the Pope school, the nodding crags, the sylran bowers, the vernal shades, and the rest, and went back straight to nature. By really looking at nature, he discovered in her a greatness and beauty beside which the conventional trappings of poetry showed like a faded tinsel. Once he had filled his mind with nature's facts, once he had seen well her "many gloom and radiance bold," he could cast over her a veil of poetical idealization, woven of delicate association and tender sympathy, and the light that never was on sea or shore; his imagination retained her plastic power, though commencing with the truth of fact, not with the dream of fancy. Mr. Ruskin has furnished numerous examples of the very highest order, of a like exercise of the imagination based on a similar exercise of the observational faculty. He has devoted his whole energies to establish, in the schools and canons of Art, a sound relationship between truth and beauty, between the science that observes and the poetry that sees or imagines. But Wordsworth was a poet in the strict sense of the word, and Mr. Ruskin is a writer on Art, not on science. It may without hesitation be affirmed, that man writing with a distinctly scientific aim has brought as much of real imaginative beauty into his works as Mr. Hugh Miller. He is one of the very few for whom may be claimed the honor of strict scientific discovery, and, with precisely equal justice, the name of poet. To all, therefore, who would desire to form some accurate conception of the laws and processes to which, under the guidance and at the command of God, the earth owes its present formation, and would at the same time retain the enthusiasm, the delight, the imaginative liberty, with which in youth they looked upon the face of the mighty mother nature, we would recommend the works of Mr. Miller.

The volume before us contains "The Cruise of the Betsey; or, a Summer Ramble among the Fossiliferous Deposits of the Hebrides;" and "The Rambles of a Geologist; or, Ten Thousand Miles over the Fossiliferous Deposits of Scotland." While exhibiting all the highest qualities of the author's style, these pieces are peculiarly adapted to afford instruction and entertainment to the large class of readers to whom we in the outset referred. Mr. Miller had a marvellous style of thought and composition, so distinguished the records of a summer ramble from dull logs and prosy theoretic works. The fluency, finish of style, and exquisite grasp of materials, in the volumes, seem to us beyond praise. It cannot be too much to say that there are few passages in the language to be put in comparison with the description it contains of the island and Scuir of Eigg. But the subjects are such as impart vivacity and variety independent of style of treatment, and afford admirable opportunities for exhibiting the many sides of Mr. Miller's mind. He had an eye for everything, and his fine humour hit off the salient points of a striking figure or an amusing conversation, with a felicity similar to that with which he caught the characteristic features of a landscape, or perceived the direction and dip of strata. His brief voyaging in the Free Church yacht has also an historical interest. Under his vivid pen, the congregation of lonely islanders, whose minister could find no place among them whereon to lay his head, and who might see in the evening the yacht in which he sailed stretching away for safety into the wide Atlantic, rise vividly before us. Mr. Miller's power of bringing a scene within sight of his readers was indeed remarkable. As we read, we hardly think of the words used; we see the thing itself. We are on board of the little Betsey, straining and staggering through heavy seas, and almost tremble in the expectation that the leak which has sprung will bring us to the bottom; the huge shadow of the Scuir of Eigg seems to lie at our feet; we see the look of surprise, yet not disconfort, in the face of the old Moderate minister, when, after a long confiding chat, he learns that this companion is the editor of the Witness. The book is one that will repay perusal in the study; but of all places in which to appreciate its charms and to benefit by its instruction, the best would be those in which the sights and sounds of nature are present to illustrate,—the hill-side cottage, or the glen among the hills, or the deck of the pleasure-yacht, or the sounding shore.—Edinburg Witness.

Adventure in the Mammoth Cave.

From the Louisville Journal.

At the supposed end of what has always been considered the longest avenue of the Mammoth Cave, nine miles from its entrance, there is a pit, dark and deep and terrible, known as the Maelstrom. Tens of thousands have gazed into it with awe while bengal-lights were thrown down it to make its fearful depths visible, but none ever had the daring to explore it. The celebrated guide, Stephen, who was deemed insensible to fear, was offered six thousand dollars, by the proprietors of the Cave, if he would decend to the bottom of it, but he shrank from the peril. A few years ago a Tennessee professor, a learned and bold man, resolved to do what no one before him had dared do, and making his arrangements with great care and precaution, he had himself lowered down by a strong rope a hundred feet, but, at that point, his courage failed him, and he called aloud to be drawn up. No human power could have induced him to repeat the appaling experiment.

A couple of weeks ago, however a young gentleman of Louisville, whose nerves never trembled at mortal peril, being at the Mammoth Cave with Professor Wright of our city and others, determined no matter what the danger and difficulties might be, to explore the depths of the Maelstrom. Mr. Proctor, the enterprising proprietor of the Cave, sent to Nashville and procured a long rope of great strength expressly for the purpose. The rope and some necessary timbers were borne by the guides and others to the point of proposed exploration. The arrangements being soon completed, the rope, with a heavy fragment of rock attached to it, was let down and swung to and fro to dislodge any loose rocks that would be likely to fall at the touch. Several were thus dislodged, and the long continued reverberations, rising up like distant thunder from below, proclaimed the depth of the horrid chasm. Then the young hero of the occasion, with several hats drawn over his head to protect as far as possible against any masses falling from above, and with a light in his hand and the rope fastened around his body, took his place over the awful pit and directed the half-dozen men who held the end of the rope to let him down into the Cimmerian gloom.

We have heard from his own lips an account of his descent. Occasionally masses of earth and rock went whizzing past, but none struck him. Thirty or forty feet from the top, he saw a ledge, from which, as he judged by appearances, two or three avenues led off in different directions. About a hundred feet from the top, a cataract from the side of the pit went rushing down the abyss, and, as he descended by the side of the falling water and in the midst of the spray, he felt some apprehension that his light would be extinguished, but his care prevented this. He was landed at the bottom of the pit, a hundred and ninety feet from the top. He found it almost circular, about eighteen feet in diameter, with a small opening at one point, leading to a fine chamber of no great extent. He found on the floor beautiful specimens of black silex of immense size, vastly larger than were ever discovered in any other part of the Mammoth Cave, and also a multitude of exquisite formations as pure and white as virgin snow. Making himself heard, with great effort, by his friends, he at length asked them to pull him partly up, intending to stop on the way and explore a cave that he had observed, opening about forty feet above the bottom of the pit. Reaching the mouth of that cave, he swung himself with much exertion into it, and holding the end of the rope in his hand, he let most only let it go, and it swung out apparently beyond his reach. The situation was a fearful one, and his friends above could do nothing for him. Soon, however, he made a hook of the end of his limp, and by extending himself as far over as possible, without falling, he succeeded in securing the rope. Fastening it to a rock, he followed the avenue 150 or 200 yards, to a point where he found it blocked by an impassable avalanche of rocks and earth. Returning to the mouth of this avenue, he helped up almost exactly similar mouth of another on the opposite side of the pit, but, not being able to swing himself into it, he refastened the rope around his body, suspended himself again over the abyss, and shouted to his friends to raise him to the top. The pull was an exceedingly severe one, and the rope, being ill-adjusted around his body, gave him the most excruciating pain. But soon his pain was lost in a new and dreadful pearl. When he was 90 feet from the mouth of the pit and 100 feet from the bottom, swaying and swinging in mid-air, he heard rapid and excited words of horror and alarm above, and soon learned that the rope by which he was upheld had taken fire from the friction of the timber over which it passed. Several moments of awful suspense to those above, and still more awful to him below, ensued. To them and him a fatal and instant catastrophe seemed inevitable. But the fire was extinguished with a bottle of water belonging to himself, and then the party above, though almost exhausted by their labours, succeeded in drawing him to the top. He was as calm and self-possessed as upon his entrance into the pit, but all of his companions, overcome by fatigue, sank down upon the ground, and his friend Prof. Wright, from over-exertion and excitement, fainted and remained for a time insensible.

The young adventurer left his name carved in the depths of the Maelstrom—the name of the first and only person that ever gazed upon its mysteries.

The hero of the exploit is William C. Prentice, the son of George D. Prentice.

The Effect of the Atlantic Telegraph upon Commerce.

The political importance of the Atlantic Telegraph has naturally attracted the attention of the English public; but there are some questions of another kind connected with it which will have to be discussed and settled. What, for example, is to be its effect on commercial speculation? Is it to be a mere monopoly, disarranging enterprise for the benefit of a few, or are its advantages to be equitably diffused among the whole trading community? So far as we can judge from present appearances, the number of separate private messages transmitted in a day will be comparatively few; and, unless some measure is taken for making public the commercial intelligence received from the other side of the Atlantic, there will of course be a hot race for priority among persons interested in the state of American markets. We hear it asserted [with what truth we do not profess to know] that among the directors and principal shareholders are the representatives of many great firms which trade in American staples; nor need we be surprised that the motive attributed to them is the desire to secure precedence in the use of the wires. If it turns out to be possible for any one house, or set of houses, whether by influence in the company or through the natural advantages of great capital to get the start of rivals in the receipt of American prices current, we shall have a disturbing influence of prodigious force brought to bear upon the importing and manufacturing interests. The displacement will not, however be a healthy one for commerce, for nothing is better established than that mere uncertainties, however they may promote speculations, are so much clear drawback on legitimate business. The best thing which could happen for the interest of the country in general is that the price of cotton at New Orleans, or of corn at New York, should be simultaneously known to every broker and trader in Liverpool or London. The subject ought surely to engage the attention of the Chambers of Commerce in the north. Why should not these bodies effect arrangements for receiving authentic intelligence of the American markets daily or oftener, and for publishing price lists in all the important trading towns in the country? To such messages the Atlantic Telegraph Company might fairly allow priority. We are convinced, at all events, that the more impartial their dealing with the public at large, the greater will be their ultimate profits. The discontent occasioned to the many by any preference the company may give, or may be the involuntary instrument of giving, will be proportioned to the advantage conferred on the few; and the many, in the long run, will find the means of gitting rid of a monopoly, though it may be perfectly legal, and, on the surface, not immoral.—Saturday Review.

Will the Atlantic Telegraph Cable Last.

The cable having been laid, questions which have for a time been set aside again become prominent. Among the chief of these is the probability of its continuance. Is it likely to last for any considerable time now it is laid? The considerations affecting this question divide themselves into two classes—those which affect the shore ends of the cable, and those which relate to the deep-sea portion. The former of these need no discussion, because we have already had sufficient experience to prove that with ordinary precautions submarine cables run but little risk of injury near the shore; and at Valentia there are even fewer sources of danger, we believe, than at many other places, in consequence of the absence of shipping from that part of the coast. We are unacquainted with the nature of the Newfoundland coast at the point at which the cable is landed, but there is no ground for believing it other than well selected. With regard to the deep-sea portion of the cable, we see no reason for apprehending its destruction. It has already existed for two weeks, and this affords excellent ground for confidence in its durability, at least for a considerable period. It is, of course, impossible to predict how long the insulation of the wires may remain intact, after the many forces and novel circumstances to which the cable has been subjected. There are good reasons for believing that the conditions of water low down in deep seas are highly favourable to the durability of a cable. We may confidently believe that the greater part of the Atlantic cable is now surrounded by water which is at rest, and at low in temperature as to retain it in security for a long time to come.—Telegraph.

French and English at Cherbourg.

A gentleman from Bristol, who was one of the visitors to Cherbourg, gives some instances of the fraternization between the French and English on the late brilliant occasion. The cafes were in the evening always full to overflowing, and always numbers (such was the disproportion between accomodation and visitors) crowded around the doors waiting for others to go in, in order to make room for them to enter; a seat was a luxury that could not always be enjoyed, so numbers stood against the walls with cup and glasses in hand. At intervals up started some Frenchman or Englishman to propose complimentary toasts to the respective nations; fraternization and felicitations were the order of the day. John Bull drank to the Emperor, and Johnny Crepaud to the Queen. One morning about one o'clock, when the festivities had been going on warmly for some time, a Frenchman rose in the cafe where our friend was, and with [illegible] de la Gaula and English—"Messieurs gentlemen," said the spokesman, "I do rise, I do drink je bois, to the very good health of de very good Queen of England—ve vill sing the song that the Anglais do sing to be health of her Majeste—

'For he's de jolly good fella,
For he's de jolly good fella,
Which nobody can deny,"

Not a little amused at this rollicking ditty being mistaken from the grave national anthem, the English goined their French brethern in the chorus which swelled and roared like a hurricane, until wild with enthusiasm, the French rushed into the streets and hand in hand went singing the Jolly Good Fellow along the main thoroughfare, until they caught the sound of other voices approaching from the opposite direction.—When the two musical bodies came nearer our informant could hardily believe his ears or his eyes to find the new comers were French mariners, whom a lot of young English yachtsmen had been fraternising with, and who, by the dilligent instructions of the latter were busily singing the air, without being at all conscious of what the words meant, of Rule Britannia. Just fancy French mariners singing and praying for the supremicy on the seas! Indeed the sight of the English yachts in the harbour was the finest sight of all; it showed what hundreds of thousands of pounds young Englishmen of fortune were expending in the favourite and aquatic pleasure of the bold islanders.—Bristol Times.

The Confessional.

A country vicar writes to the Times—"I thank you also, for the testimony which you have, justly, I believe, borne to the spirit and manner in which the ministerial offices of our Church are discharged—viz., "within boundaries of moral propriety, and almost universally under the goverance of gentlemen-like good taste.' It is a just remark of Dr. Chalmers, that 'a house-going minister has a church-going people. Much of course, will depend upon the character of the visit, which should be strictly pastoral. Although I have been accustomed to go in and out among the people committed to my charge for thirty years, and although I believe I am never an unwelcome visitor, yet I always feel it due to the inmates of the poorest hovel to give a gentle tap at the door, if for no other reason to show that I have no right or desire abruptly and unceremoniously to enter without such a notice. It may also be a useful hint to my younger brethern in the ministry, if I state that I never go upstairs to visit a female parishoner without first inquiring whether it is convenient for me to do so, and where practicable, I manage that a relative friend of the sick person should be present. I would also further remark, that when, according to the rubric of our Church in the order for the visitation of the sick, 'the sick person shall be moved to make a special confession of his sins, if he feel his conscience troubled with any weighty matter,' it is rather the province and duty of the clergyman to listen to the person who is thus unburdening his conscience than to apply the probe, with a view to ascertain the particular weight which presses upon it.—For nearly 40 years that I have been a ole gyman, and not, I would hope an inactive one, I have never once used the form of absolution prescribed in the order for the visitation of the sick, although I have in it by the bedside of very many dying persons."

A Shooting Affray.

On Tuesday night a shooting affray took place on Church-street, which fortunately did not result in any serious consequences It appears that while a person named Mora was attempting to obtain an entrance into Mr. Irwin's tavern, about half-past eleven o'clock, he was set upon by a number of men and knocked down. Mr. William Lennox, Colborne-street, who was in his stables at the time, hearing the noise, went to the place accompanied by some of his boarders. Observing the parties maltreating Mora, he endeavoured to rescue him. The men then attacked Mr. Lennox and those with him, but a number of persons came to their assistance. The first assailants then attempted to make their escape in a cab, but the others stopped the horse, and one of the party alighted, firing a pistol at Mr. Lennox and his friends, who immediately rushed forward, when several more shots were fired, but they injured no one. The person who had used the pistol then ran towards King-street, followed by the others. One of them named Lynch was captured in Toronto-street, and on being searched a double-barrelled pistol was found in his pocket one of the barrels being loaded. He was then into custody by the constables and conveyed to the police-office. Two persons named McCarthy and Jordan were apprehended subsequently, also charged with being concerned in the affair. The parties were brought before the Police Magistrate yesterday morning and were remanded till Saturday. Shortly afterwards, Mr. Corby and Jordan were admitted to bail. The magistrate, however, would not take bail for Lynch as the charge against [illegible]

Fearful Aerial Voyage.

We gain from the Toledo Blade of Friday evening, 17th, the particulars of the fearful ascension of Mr. Thurston:—

A gloom is suddenly thrown over the sympathizing public, by a sad termination to the balloon ascension at Adrian yesterday. We learn the facts from a gentleman who has seen and conversed with most of the persons interested. The balloon, with Messrs. Bannister and Thurston in the car, arose from the inclosure at about 3½ o'clock. It went up steadily and beautifully, taking a southeast direction, and soon became lost to the sight of the multitude assembled at Adrian. After the aeronauts had been up what they considered sufficient length of time, they let the gas escape slowly and made a handsome descent near Knight's Station, (Riga Post-office) a few miles from Sylvania. The aeronauts stepped from the car, and immediately proceeded to unfasten the car, and to remove the netting from the balloon, which gradually turned over, finally resting with the neck upwards. Mr. Thurston got straddle of the main valve, which was a circular wooden box or frame, fixed in the top of the gas sack, (which was very large, containing 25,000 cubic feet of gas,) and was engaged in forcing back the valve, which opened inward, at the same time requesting Mr. Bannister to untie the neck of the bag.—The latter, Mr. B., who was busy with the netting, neglected to do.

The moment the netting was off, the sack suddenly rose, and Mr. T., still clinging to the valve. Mr. B. instantly grasped for the ascending balloon, but Thurston exclaimed—"Hold on, Bannister, she will soon come down again;" for he supposed that his companion had untied the neck of the sack, which would, of course, soon relieve it of the gas, and therefore of its upward tendencies; but he was doomed to a terrible disappointment. Up, and up, the balloon ascended with its precious burden of human life, and, when last seen by the horrified Bannister, was full two miles high, and sailing rapidly to the northward. Mr. B., sick at heart, and dreadfully alive to the extreme danger of his comrade, hurried to Sylvania, arriving in time for the up train (from Toledo, 11:25 a. m.) on which he soon arrived at Adrian with the unhappy tidings.

Mr. Thurston resided at Adrian, and has a daughter there, his wife being dead.—Hopes are yet entertained of his having landed in safety somewhere in the interior, by perforating the sack with his knife, or some other means. Nothing further has been heard from him up to a late hour this morning.

Neglect of British Colonies by British Statesmen.

It is a frequent complaint with the inhabitants of our numerous Colonies that they do not receive from the mother country that amount of attention to which they consider themselves entitled. The great men of Canada and New Zealand find that their very names are strange to the people of Great Britain. The inhabitants of Newfoundland or Tasmania are aggrieved to find that nothing which may occur among them,—hardly even a civil war, if such a thing were possible—would awaken the notice of the English public, or gain more than a passing mention from the English press.—There are few among us who know one or two of the most salient points in the history, the commerce, the politics, or the social life even of our most important trans-marine possessions.

Politicians, amateur and professional, are better acquainted with the affairs of Egypt and the position of the Ottoman Empire than with the most momentous events that may happen in the most valuable of our Colonies. Constantinople and St. Petersburg, not to say Paris and Rome, are infinitely more familiar to all classes of Englishmen than Sydney, Quebec, or Toronto. Nay, it has been more than once whispered that even the Statesmen to whom the seals of the Colonial Office have been intrusted are by no means always impressed with a due sense of the importance of the dominions placed under their charge, and that they are allowed to be deficient both in knowledge and in capacity in a degree far exceeding anything that would be tolerated in a colleague holding an equally high official place. Moreover, the discontented among the settlers in our distant possessions complain that, whatever be the excellence or the errors of the Colonial Secretary, they are depradent on him by the ignorance of three-fourths of the House of Commons, and the indifference of the whole.

In regard to the west important, or at least the largest, of our Colonial possessions, this absence of interest is, perhaps, owing principally to two circumstances—the extreme mutability and uncertainty of political affairs in Australia, and the great distance, and consequently slow communication, which renders us almost certain that before news can be reached from Australia, and an answer returned, the position of affairs, both political and commercial, will be very materially altered. The first of these causes it rests with the Colonists to remove; and we trust ere long their Governments will acquire somewhat more of stability, and their politics will present less forcibly the appearance of levity and confusion which has hitherto characterised them. It is possible, however, that the communication may be made more rapid and sure than it is at present; and if so, it is greatly to the interest both of our Colonial empire and of the commerce between this country and Australia, that no pains should be spared to effect that object.

With a view to induce the Government to take measures for the improvement of the postal communication, an influential deputation [illegible] B. Lytton, and have presented to him a memorial urging "the delays and irregularities" which have hitherto occurred as a reason for the dispatch of an additional mail by Panama, toward the expenses of which New Zealand and New South Wales have voted £15,000 and £35,000 a year respectively. Now that we have telegraphic communication with America, the first summary of intelligence might reach us within thirty days after leaving Australia by the route proposed. The insufficiency of the present mail service appears pretty evident, and the wish of the memorialists is reasonable enough, if it can be conveniently carried into effect.

It is a favorable augury for their success that another deputation waited upon the Colonial Secretary on the same day, from the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company, offering to establish a communication by the same route with New Zealand and Vancouver's Island. Sir E. B. Lytton gave hopes that the Government would meet the wish of the former deputation; and we trust that they may make up their minds to do so. The increased convenience is well worth an increased expense, especially as a large sum is to be contributed by the party most immediately interested. If the Colonies contribute an annual sum of £50,000, England can hardly plead poverty as an excuse from shrinking from a corresponding exercise of liberality.—London Star.

The Last Day of the East India Company.

(From the London Times, Sept. 1.)

We are living in the midst of very great events. Within a few days we have heard of the jointing of two worlds and the opening of a third of the human race in the commerce, the society and the religion of the rest. Yet these things pass as every-day occurrences, and we are children, not without reason, for the small interest they seem to excite. "What next?" is always the question, and, in that forward spirit to which the Roman poet ascribed the achievements of his countrymen, "We think nought done while aught remains to do." In the very words of Hotspur, we have found it easy to "Dive into the bottom of the deep,

Where fathom line could never touch the ground
And pluck up drowned honor by the locks."

And with equal facility we have broken down that wall of ages which shut up the oldest nation in the world from the rest of the human species. Yet these are events that look to the future, and no man can tell what is comprised in them. This day will have a place in chronologies for another great event, but one which might almost have slipped from notice, for it looks to the past. To-day the East India Company ceases to hold a place among States and Sovereignties. Like the many princes whom it has deposed from power, and left in the enjoyment of revenues and titles, it has long been deprived of actual dominion. The Company has been only a name, and an income; or only adding to those what India supplied to her conquerors—the modest offices of information and advice. But, as the great Mogul no longer exists even as a name, the East India Company has now wholly ceased from political existence.—This day Queen Victoria becomes the Sovereign of India without any fiction or tradition of the past coming between her and her just titles. We join heartily in the good wishes and the prayers with which the East India Company resigns the sovereignty into the hands of the Queen. That peace shall be speedily restored, and that India may now enter upon a path of improvement in some degree comparable to that of Europe and America, is all that we now hope for. Room for conquest there is none, and its spirit has now received a severe rebuke. But there is no reason whatever, either in the country, or the race, or the Government, why India should not receive all those material improvements which have altered the face of this Continent, and even the New World. It is chiefly for backwardness in these things that the mixed government hitherto adopted for India has been tried and found wanting. Should the simpler government in the name of the Queen be found equally wanting, patriotism itself will hardly regard British rule as a blessing for India.

(From the Daily News.)

On this day the Court of Directors of the East India Company holds its last solemn assembly. The 1st and 2nd days of September, 1858, which witness the extinction of the old and the inauguration of the new system of Indian government, constitute an epoch in our national history—nay, in the world's history, second in importance to few in the universal annals of mankind. . . . Its government may have been anomaly—its very existence a sore; but the verdict of history upon the Company will be that which Parliament, after a long and memorable debate, passed upon the conduct of the greatest of the Company's servants—that it "did at the same time render great and meritorious services to this country." No argument, no declamation, no legislative enactment can vitiate the great truth which finds outward expression in the map of India. The Company has given to the Crown two hundred millions of subjects. The conquests may have been fairly or foully made; the country may have been won or worked [illegible] governed; but the Anglo-Indian empire is a great fact, patent to the whole world; and if, after two more centuries of British connection with the East, it is still paralleled to exult in the same great fact, there will be abundant room for national gratitude and national wonder.

THE OWNERS OF THE LONDON "TIMES."—The Boston (U.S.) Watchman states that John Walter, M.P., principle proprietor of the London Times as supposed holds nineteen shares out of the twenty-four to which they that valuable publication is divided. The publisher who is responsible for all libels, &c., has two shares; Mr. John Delane, the editor, has two shares; and the remaining shares are held by the Walter family, Lord Stanley, and other gentlemen connected with the paper.

The Queen and Canada.

The Morning Post contains the following article in reference to the visit of Mr. Norris to England, with a petition inviting the Queen to Canada. The people of this country will appreciate the kind terms in which their loyalty and devotion to the Crown is spoken of, and will be thankful to the Post for the faithful and intelligent manner in which our condition, progress, and probable future has been brought by it under the notice of its readers:—

A Crystal Palace for the exhibition of the products of Canadian industry and skill is about to be opened in Toronto; and the good people of the province, through Mr. J. G. Norris, have certified their devotion to "the Queen of Canada" by entrusting to the hands of that gentleman a petition which respectfully invites her Majesty either to preside in person at the inauguration of the Palace, or to authorise his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, or some other member of the royal family, "to represent her Majesty" at the interesting ceremony which, on the 1st of October, is to take place "in the most important dependency of her Majesty's empire." Etiquette, we presume, would not permit the petitioners to approach the Throne with the formal invitation which they have felt themselves at liberty to prefer to the Prince of Wales, and therefore they merely remind her Majesty of the circumstance that "her Majesty has been graciously pleased to honour the inauguration of similar undertakings in England and elsewhere with her royal presence." Only one inference can be drawn from the words, namely, that the people of Canada, without distinction of creed or party, are anxious to receive the distinguished honor of a visit from her Majesty, and failing in this, to have an opportunity of evincing their loyalty and devotion to the Prince who is destined, at some future, and we hope distant day, to become King of the magnificent province of Canada.

The petition which we published in extenso on the 26th of August, has, we believe, been left with the Colonial Secretary for submission to her Majesty; and as it is a document which has received the signatures of all the leading men of the province, no one can doubt that the request which it contains will meet with the gracious and kind consideration of her Majesty. Canada, in the possession of responsible self-government, is only united to England by that link of affectionate attachment to the British Crown and to the mother country, of which, during the war of 1812, during the rebellion of 1839, and since the union of the two provinces, the vast majority of the population has given such marked, such emphatic, such constant, and such noble proofs. The electric telegraph has now connected Great Britain with the continent of America; and whilst the people of the United States and Canada rejoice thankfully and hopefully at the last crowning triumph of science—one which is destined to consolidate the power of the Anglo-Saxon race to an extent the results of which no man can venture to predict—the loyalty and devotion of the people of Canada can now be surely gratified, and the friendship of the people of the United States can now be permanently secured, by the progress of the Queen of Great Britain through "the most important dependency of her empire," and by her visit to that great neighbouring Republic, the citizens of which would enthusiastically hail her presence amongst them as the restoration of that intimate relationship between nations identical in origin, language, religion, and liberty, of which the electric telegraph is the material but imperfect type. If her Majesty should visit Canada she will see a happy, contented, industrious, and loyal people advancing in prosperity at a rate which has never been equalled even in the marvellous progress of the United States. She will see a magnificent country, rich in natural products—a country which at present is the home of three millions of her subjects, and which, half a century hence, will be inhabited by a population which will constitute a great and powerful nation. She will see what the enterprise of Britain in Canada has already accomplished—the vast canals which unite the St. Lawrence and the ocean with those inland seas which penetrate the very heart of the continent. She will see the Grand Trunk Railway, the longest separate line of communication which exists in the world; and she will see the Victoria bridge, a structure with which her royal name has been gracefully and appropriately associated. She will, moreover, see that English institutions, English liberty, English self-reliance, and English loyalty are plants which do not deteriorate in the soil of Canada. The day is not far distant when the rich commerce of the East will be borne from the Pacific, through Canada, to the ports of England and of continental Europe. The day is not far distant when British civilization and British enterprise will stretch from Canada to the far West—to those gold regions the discovery of the wealth of which has laid the foundation of a new British Empire on the coasts of the Pacific. The time which has been chosen by the people of Canada to prefer this respectful request is singularly opportune; and physical science has accomplished a grand and lasting triumph by bringing into intimate union the two great families of the Anglo-Saxon race. Then, let this happy and auspicious event be chronicled by the gracious condescension of her Majesty in yielding to the affectionate wishes of her Canadian subjects, and by visiting that great Republic the citizens of which know as well as Englishmen how to appreciate the personal virtues and womanly graces of the illustrious lady who at once adorns and elevates the British throne.

The Daily News has also a kind word for us; and, while lamenting that the invitation could not possibly be accepted this year, if appearances go to show that a Royal progress to Canada is not improbable ere long. The indifference with which we, in common with the other great dependencies of England, have been treated, from ignorance, from neglect, is put by our contemporary in a very plain case, the inference more obvious, is future to our interests, to our natural connection with the British Crown.

advanced and daily advancing progress, socially and commercially. Our contemporary says:—

By steam and rail Galway can be reached in about a day. In six days the royal yacht might reach Newfoundland or North Scotia from Galway. Six weeks would amply suffice for the out and home voyage to and from the principal cities of British North America. Such a visit would do more than mere substantial benefits to rivit the loyalty of the colonists to the Crown. Our colonial fellow-subjects feel, and not without reason, that they are scarcely made sufficient account of in the mother country. While the news of foreign states is eagerly run after, comparatively few ask what is passing in our colonies. Illustrious strangers—French Dutch and Russian—are eagerly fated, but the most distinguished of our colonists are allowed to come and go with scarcely any notice. And yet how infinitely more important to us are our colonies than any alien nation! How much larger a space ought their leading spirits to occupy in our estimation! This neglect, we have had reason to know, is deeply felt throughout our colonial empire. It was a mistake, when sending telegraphic messages to the President of the United States, to overlook entirely the governors and legislatures of our own American provinces. The undercurrent of resentment which flows from this neglect might be materially checked by a Royal visit to Canada. As far as regards time, we have shown that there are no insuperable obstacles to such a visit. And for our sailor Queen, with all the luxurious appliances of her royal yacht, it would, we confidently believe, be a source of unmingled pleasure. The glorious St. Lawrence would afford spectacles yet ungazed on by any crowned head. Elizabeth—like the poet's Gloriana, in whom she was shadowed forth—was contented to receive from her adventurous knights tidings of the strange new world they had visited: Victoria may see it with her own eyes.

The Court Journal has the following allusion to the invitation:—

Mr. Norris, the Canadian envoy for the purpose of soliciting a Royal opening of the Canadian Great Exhibition, has proceeded to Osborne on his mission. We need not say that the request made received the most gracious consideration from her Majesty, but there is little doubt that ministers will advise the Queen that the Prince of Wales is not yet old enough to take part in a public ceremonial of this kind. Mr. Norris was in the Isle of Wight at the time of the Privy Council, when the Queen could readily refer the subject to the ministry.

Sir Colin Campbell and the Army in India.

We extract the following from the latest letter of the Times' correspondent, which is not otherwise of interest:

The most serious objections against Sir Colin Campbell's tactics have been founded—first, on his presumed sufferance of escape on the part of the enemy; secondly, on the slowness and caution of his movements, either in attack or in pursuit; thirdly (an objection connected with and arising out of the second), his practice of moving with large trains of artillery and provisions, and of enforcing the observance of the practice on all his subordinates. I do not, of course, condescend to notice such objections, or rather charges, flung against the gallant veteran by a very small and disreputable minority of Indian journals. As to this question of baggage and camp followers—it is a grave question in India. In former days, when the sympathies of the population in many districts were not against us, it was ever found necessary to march with trains of provisions organic and inorganic, and of camp followers and animals, which exceed anything in European armies. I did not say far exceed, because I know the Russian camp followers in the Crimea numbered tens of thousands, and that ours were numerous enough, although we had regular corps of armed men to do the work of those people, and the sea which brought us our supplies cut off that stream of men and women which would have otherwise flowed upon us, and also rendered their presence unnecessary. Nevertheless, it may be fairly asserted that, after an army had been a short time in the field in India the camp followers to each fighting man are about six or seven to one. In our march to Lucknow we had 70,000 camp followers. That is enormous. How was the mass constituted, and is it greater or less proportionally than it was in those laudad old times? In Lord Lake's day—I have it on the best written and oral authority—the proportion of non-combatants to soldiers was as 10 to 1. The reduction of that ratio to six to one is a very great gain; and I am assured that the camp establishment of the Commander-in-Chief is smaller than that of Sir Charles Napier, who was thought to have pushed economy of hands and reduction of staff and camp to the verge of inefficiency. On a former occasion I sent you a detail of all the animals attached to our camp. The animals come first, as they are the most important. First, there are the elephants, used for carriage of heavy tents of departments, boxes of departments, records, and public equipage; to each a Mahout, or one man at least. There are attendants on the Mahouts, no doubt, many sprites, for the elephant is a great consumer, and will eat more than his own bulk of leaves and succulent branches in the day, but we don't reckon them. Then there are the camels, two to carry each field tent and equippage, to each couple there may be reckoned one man; next the tents themselves to pitch and strike, to each of these there are two kelassies, or tent-men. Horses come next, each animal requiring the services of two men, one the syce or groom, who cleans and grooms the beast, the other a grass-cutter, who goes out with an instrument like a cheesemen's knife, lays waste the country by cutting the herbage to the very roots to feed it, as there is no grass properly so called till the rains, and hay does not appear to be used. Then men have tents of some kind in bad weather, and sprites in attendance on them. The artillery and siege trains are drawn by horses and droves of bullocks. Then there are private carts, public carts, spare ammunition carts, hundreds of hackeries with grain, and all drawn by bullocks. To every three ordinary bullocks there is one man. The hackeries and their bullocks belong to the representatives of the old "bandjarries" or brinjarries, who formerly collected and sold grain all over India, and were in some sort like the ships which carry corn from Odessa and Taganrog to more populous bread-eating populations. Each pair of artillery bullocks has its own attendant. Then there are the cheoty-bearers, the private servants, the banner-store-keepers, and their dependents and cattle. The private servants in Lord Lake's time were ten to each subaltern, twenty to a captain, thirty to a field officer. Each cavalry soldier has a man to clean his horse—even privates of infantry regiments club together and buy or hire a cotton, or pony, to carry their little luxuries, as well as a man to take care of both. The list is not nearly full. The native soldier grains for himself—the European has his cook, waiter, bullock-boy, bheestie—also to each pair of tat, and sometimes one to each man, and you will hear orders from Private Brown for dinner, which would be worthy of Vitellius:—"See that my cutlet is done brown, and mashed potatis! do you hear? and don't put too much inyons in me curry, or I'll break yer head." Or "Ai shud loike my beef stewed the day—pumpkins in slices, and just a smeek or garlick in the stew wid the rice." Then there is a dhoby, or washerman, to each mess, and one to each officer, and bheesties, or water-carriers to the same proportion. All these are indispensible.—There are also the women allowed to accompany each regimental bazzar, in certain proportions to the strength of the regiment. There are women who follow the army in the capacity of vivandieres or otherwise, and there are hosts of itinerant dealers in all sorts of wares likely to be required by soldiers. When the camp is pitched there is a clamour and tumult from the bazzars like that of a large town.—Through the long lines of the streets of the canvas city, the bustle of life resembles that of a fair in full swing, nor do the swarming masses mind anything but the crack of the provost sergeant's whip. Tailors, cobblers, saddlers, smiths, carpenters, ply their trades; heaps of gram, rice and dhal are exhibited for sale; and the eternal tom-tom and the monotonous song begin only to cease when the camp moves again. The tom-tom, the bubble-bubble and the camel unite at night in forming a dreadful chorus. No place is safe from the native musician, and every native is able to play on the tom-tom. The repose of the Head-quarters is invaded by its monotonous rub-a-rub with impunity; it is the invested interest in enjoyment of the Hindoo, which no one ventures to disturb. I have known a quiet street in London to tom-tom and a nasal voice, and often have I wished in camp that I was a Crœsus, and able to buy silence from the army who were making night hideous. The camels furnish a drone to the music, and bubble-bubbles established under the eaves of every tent contribute a haze—a time olong-suffering—close the weary eyelids. You may hang a Hindoo without causing him great mental annoyance; in fact, there are some people who are angry with him for his equanimity of deportment under the tree or at the muzzle of the howitzer, and who maintain he rather likes being executed than otherwise—but woe to the man, the ruler or the race who would touch his hubble-bubble! I have never yet seen a man on the tramp without it. I have known many a good servant leave his master and run away with his cherished source of delight, because he was not allowed to smoke it under the flap of the tent, and to "go somewhere else." In the bazaar, the native's paradise, there is of course unlimited indulgence in that and other luxuries, and the noise which rises from the camp is, as I have said, like that of some vast city. An officer is rarely or never seen in the bazaar. He sends his servants there for anything he may want, and he is lucky if he sees the aforesaid domestic for many hours afterwards. The commissariat do not, as in other armies, provide horse rations, etc., and grain must be purchased from the bazaar people, who are obliged to keep stores of all necessaries. A Babel of voices in many languages, from Madrassee, Sikh, Hillman, Mussulman, and Rajpoot, English, Scotch, and Goorkha, resounds through the multiform and many colored tents, and swelling high above all is a grand tintinnabulary of bells from neck of goat, elephant, and camel, over which again are heard the most utterly diabolical sounds ever uttered from the human throat—the shrieks of the buffalo and bullock drivers.—I fear no native of our Isles will believe it, but the statement is true, that when one of these quadrupeds halts under its load the mode most in vogue among the drivers for exciting it to action is for the particular driver of the affected animal to fall into a violent convulsion, to stamp with his feet on the foot-board of the cart, in little short hysterical pats, while his body, face, and arms are violently agitated, and his open mouth emits the most piercing cries, as if in mortal anguish. Till I became used to it I imagined I was surrounded by perennial murder. But the animal, out of sheer horror apparently, is moved, and yields to those awful suasions—often till it drops dead. For note—your Hindoo won't kill a cow, or let any one else do it if he can help it, but he will lead or drive it to death with the utmost indifference, and will leave it in its dying struggles on the ground without one thought as to the possibility of its being one of his near relations who is enduring the last agony.

The writers and talkers who refer to forced marches in former days forget that they were made under different circumstances and by different men; the populations were not hostile or sullen; the troops were mostly natives, who can find their food anywhere. But until John Bull can live on a handful of rice and a drink of dirty water—until he eschews beef, mutton, bread, tea, sugar and rum, he must sacrifice his mobility to his stomach, and be content with the ordinary movements of grand armies. We are fast enough to prevent the enemy carrying off their guns, and to drive them in disorganized masses before us. As to parting with our heavy guns, by the judicious use of which we have won all our main successes, we might as well discard all the improvements of scientific warfare, go back to its rice and water, and take to bows and arrows. The only serious check we have experienced—such as that under Walpole at Rooer—have been produced by neglecting our heavy artillery, especially it is necessary to avail ourselves of pieces capable of throwing shell and effecting breaches when we engage with an enemy who never stand in the open, unless in very large disproportioned numbers, when our heavy guns teach them to keep at a respectable distance—in a country studded with forts and works, which, however contemptible as fortifications, can resist field guns and afford cover to fight well when assailed from outside their walls by infantry only. Remember Lake's three desperate assaults at Bhurtpore, wherein we lost in vain more men than fell at either Alma or Inkerman. Remember, as the natives do, the repulses—more numerous than most of us think, seeing, as we do, only the broad fact that Hindostan is ours—which we have met before native fortresses. Even in the campaign just over, in addition to the repulse at Rooer or Ekshameer, we saw Franks's division obliged to leave a small fort it had attacked near Lucknow, and although we lost officers and men, that gallant officer, for the want of his heavy guns, was unable to force the gates, and marched off, giving the garrison the occasion to say they had beaten 4,000 English soldiers. But the question is not susceptible of argument in a military point of view. It seems to be forgotten that we are seeking to assert our supremacy, to conquer what we have lost, and that we are fighting merely to kill the enemy. The guilty will be punished when the civil power is restored. No doubt it would be exceedingly desirable to inflict on the enemy tremendous loss, to sweep every rebel off the face of the earth, and to cut their dying throats into submission, to prevent their re-assembling and fighting us again; but it would be unjust to punish the wholesale the demands being of such character, they were to refer them to the Emperor for his pleasure to be made known. After hearing this, the Earl's chair was hurried up, the guard presented arms, and the band played "God save the Queen." The staff also mustered their chairs, and the mandarins were left making speeches, to demonstrate that it was quite impossible that they could ever receive larger powers than those they had just opened.

On June 8th, Keying, who in 1842 deceived Sir Henry Pottinger, came down, having intrigued to get himself appointed joint commissioner. His orders to the populace to annoy the Europeans at Canton induced a military demonstration at Tientsin. He entered into strict relations with the Americans and the Russians.

Some of the letters speak confidently as to the truth of the reports current in the expedition, that the Americans had offered to guarantee that if Lord Elgin would not insist on opening the Yangtze, and would give up the demand for a minister at Pekin, a treaty should be at once arranged. The Russians on the contrary, were said to be doing the utmost to prevent any Europeans but themselves being tolerated at Pekin; and the Americans were loud in their expressions of a virtuous horror of the opium trade, and urged the commissioners to stick to that as their point of conflict. Keying was becoming embarrassing. Fortunately, however, Mr. Wade had found a report from Keying to his master, urging him to make no account of the treaty of Nankin, and describing it as a mere snare to delude the barbarians. The English and French envoys then declined any further communication with such a man, and he was recalled; and the Emperor authorized the commissioners to sign a letter promising a treaty in the terms of Lord Elgin's demands, and couched in language dictated by one of the interpreters.

This letter is the most important step in the negociations, and it is hoped is being superseded by the treaty. The knowledge of the details is not exact, but the following are believed to be the conditions for the basis of a treaty:—

1. Residence of a British minister at Tiensin, with access to the court and direct communication with the ministers. An official yamun for him during his visits at Pekin. All official documents to be written by him in the English language (to be accompanied by Chinese translations until the court of Pekin has procured interpreters.) An English college similar to that kept up by Russia to be allowed at Pekin.

2. China to be opened to all the world. Persons to go whither they please and to do what they please under a passport system.

3. Yangtze to be opened to its commerce from its mouth to its source.

4. Christianity to be tolerated.

5. The indemnity for the war and losses at Canton to be paid for by the two Quangs, and the amount to be agreed on by special commissioners at Canton. The tariff to be corrected; the custom-house system to be revised; and the English to aid the Chinese in the suppression of piracy.

6. In proof of the friendship and goodwill of the Emperor of China towards the Queen of England, a special embassy shall be sent to England forthwith.

If this treaty was signed on the 28th of June, then Lord Elgin has fulfilled all our desires and surpassed all expectations.

The "Niagara's" Mails.

THE ATLANTIC CABLE.

LONDON, Sept. 10, 1858.

The official announcement at the beginning of the week that all communication between Newfoundland and Valentia had ceased since mid-day last Friday, produced a very depressing effect upon the public mind, and I am sorry to say that up to the present time the cause has not been removed; nor in fact discovered. The only thing certain is that a defect exists somewhere in the cable, and the prevalent opinion of those who have it in charge is, that the portion injured lies within three miles of the Irish shore. It seems that signals continue to be received, but they are too faint and uncertain to be intelligible. Occasionally an entire word is given but never anything approaching to a sentence. An unhappy dispute which has arisen between some of the English Directors and Mr. Whitehouse, "electrician projector, and one of the four original promoters of the Atlantic Telegraph," is understood to have tended considerably to the length of delay in finding out the faulty part, and the supply of at length a temporary remedy. This gentleman, in a letter to the journals explains that as early as the fourth day after the landing of the cable at Valentia, he strongly urged upon the Directors the immediate necessity for protecting its home end; warning them of the impending injury and of the certain interruption of communication that would occur if this was not done. But of this warning he says no notice whatever was taken, nor of a second of the same import that followed it a few days later. Soon afterwards when Mr. Whitehouse was left in sole charge at the Valentia station, the dreaded injury actually occurred, but so near shore as to be easily accessible, and with some hesitation he took upon himself the onus of raising and repairing the faulty part of the cable. Next day the President's message, which was kept waiting in consequence of the defect, was sent through. Mr. Whitehouse again, and in stronger language than before, urged the Directors to protect the slender wire, prepared and fitted for deep sea use only, and liable at any moment to be damaged if not broken asunder by the full force of the Atlantic swell on the Irish coast. Instead, however, of being thankful for the vigilance of their servant, the managing Directors would seem to have taken umbrage at his importunity, and "drew his attention to the fact, that his engagement as electrician to the Company terminated when the cable was laid, and intimating to him that his authority as an officer of the Company had then ceased;" and this, Mr. Whitehouse says, "was conveyed in such a manner as to amount in fact to a summary dismissal." It deserves to be noted that this Mr. Whitehouse is no inferior man and mere subordinate, whom these Directors can afford to treat in this off-hand and unjust manner, as if they wanted to contract their own character and conduct with the spirit of the first message flashed along their Atlantic wire, "Peace on earth good-will towards men," which can only be obtained by individual uprightness among men. Professor Thompson, a Director of the Company, from the very first seems not to share the dishonour in this matter of his co-directors, for at the banquet given to Sir Charles Bright at Kilkenny, he called upon the company present to rejoice that men of the right stamp had been found to project and carry forward the great enterprise, and he added:—"The day before the work was completed it was said to be a chimera. Electricians doubted the possibility of sending the electric current through a wire two thousand miles long, and submerged in the sea to a depth of more than two miles; but the genius of a great man anticipated that difficulty, and to Mr. Whitehouse they must look as the man who had removed the barrier between Great Britain and America."—(Loud cheers.) And yet this is the man of all others who must be sacrificed at the shrine of some offending dignities! The probability is that the public will take the matter up and see that justice is done to a gentleman who has made the nation his debtor.

In the speech from which I have quoted the above sentences, Professor Thompson alluded to the stoppage of communication which had occurred and said—"There could be no doubt that the most serious defect now existed is the cable; and the only question was whether the locality of that defect could be discovered, so if necessary to furnish a new piece of cable." In his own mind hopes and fears alternate dwelt and were about of equal strength; but remembering the great difficulties that had been overcome before in the progress of the undertaking, he was content to wait the time with patience. The strong portion of the cable manufactured for the Valentia shore, was commenced to be shipped from Plymouth on board the Bulbou, on Wednesday, and proceeded until yesterday afternoon, when orders arrived to cease operations, but why is not known. Only half the cable or thereabouts, had been shipped at the time of suspension. It is not expected that the nature of the defect in the submerged wire will be ascertained until it will have been taken up and replaced by this much stronger portion, which is about ten miles long. At that distance from the Valentia shore the sea is about a hundred fathoms deep. The time which will be occupied in securing the cable will vary, it is officially reported, according to the weather, from three days to as many weeks. The portion of strong cable required for the Newfoundland shore, will it be said, be only two miles in length, owing to the greater depth of water on that coast.

THE QUEEN'S STATE VISIT TO LEEDS.

Monday and Tuesday last were high festivals days for the people of Yorkshire and the adjacent counties. It is computed that no less than four hundred thousand of them thronged into Leeds on the second named day, to catch a sight of the Queen as she went to open the new Town Hall, which has just been erected by the Corporation, at a cost of £100,000. Those who were present at Manchester last year, and also at Birmingham when the Queen went to open the Arts Treasures Exhibition, and the Free Park and Library, affirm that neither display came up in real effect to that just witnessed at Leeds. But as the last good thing is proverbially the best, although not always so in fact, one may suppose that all these Provincial royal receptions were pretty much alike. There was not much novelty in that of Leeds, except, perhaps in the collection in one spot, of about thirty-thousand Sunday-School children on two long galleries between which the Queen passed in her carriage, while these almost interminable rows of the future men and women of the West Riding, blended their infant voices in singing the National Anthem, and various popular airs suited to their character and the time.—The correspondents of the London journals unite in testifying that the effect was universally impressive, far surpassing the more ambitious endeavours of the Corporation to gratify the Queen, and produce an imposing display. The gorgous scene within the Town Hall, however, at the moment it was declared opened, filled as it was by all the rank and fashion of the great county of Yorkshire, and not wanting in grandeur; and when the Queen took General Grey's sword and commanded Mr. Peter Fairburn to kneel and rise with "Sir" prefixed to his name, instead of Mr., the interest of the scene was at its culminating point, the Mayor being one of the most popular and best-liked men of Leeds; and besides he had just before purchased a white marble statue of the Queen for £1,000, and placed it in the entrance of the new Hall for the gratification of the town; and the Queen herself had bestowed upon the statue as she passed words of warm approval of its resemblance to the original, and beauty of execution. Immediately after the conclusion of the ceremony the Queen took her departure for Scotland, and arrived at Edinburgh the same evening at twenty minutes after seven o'clock, and at Balmoral next evening.

The shouting of the great crowd in the streets as her Majesty passed through them, both in going to and returning from the Hall, is described as something quite awful in its power,—Yorkshire voices having about double the strength of those possessed by more Southern people; and the fact that barriers of massive timbers bent and burst, though bound with iron, by the pressure of the people as they passed along in compact masses, bespeaks the strength of their bone and muscles as well as of their vocal organs, and loyal appreciation of the honour done them in the visit of the Sovereign—and the more so as it was the first occasion of the kind in the history of the Borough, ancient as it is. It is not a little singular that while no accidents are known to have occurred to any of the countless sight-seers, both her Majesty and family, and the Mayor—the chief personages in the day's ceremonial—were placed in some degree of danger on Monday evening. First the Mayor in driving to the station to meet his royal guest, had both his horses bort and his carriage broken, and was obliged to go in a borrowed vehicle to the station; and next, a curtain of the Queen's bed-room took fire, but of course is was speedily extinguished and no great harm was done.

MISCELLANEOUS TOPICS.

A letter appeared in yesterday's Times in reference to a plan said to have been submitted to the Colonial Minister for the construction of a Railway from Halifax to Fraser River, connecting the Atlantic with the Pacific by a chain of communication passing entirely through the British Territory. Instead of 39 days being occupied as at present from Liverpool to Fraser River by way of Panama and San Francisco, it is believed that 17 days would suffice for the passage by this new route. It is endeavoured to be shown that the scheme is perfectly practicable, and taking the Australian mails into account and changing their route, it would be a good commercial speculation, and greatly benefit Canada at the same time.

Railway managers and directors are engaged in an earnest discussion of the proposal which emanates from several scientific men of the fraternity, to substitute coal for coke in railway locomotives. If it can be done it is found that the cost of fuel will be reduced by one-half. On lines of 500 miles with 400 engines the saving of coal over coke would be £30,000 sterling per annum. The only difficulty consists in the consumption of the smoke, and it is believed that this has been overcome by the invention of a cheap and easily worked furnace that can be placed in old engines as well as provided for new ones. If these hopes shall be realized shares will speedily advance.

FOREIGN NOTES.

A terrible railway accident is reported to have occurred on the line of railway that connects St. Germain with Pecy, near Paris. A stationary engine drawn the carriages up an incline; the chain on this occasion connecting the carriages with the engine, gave way, and carriages full of people descended the incline up which they had been drawn, and a collision ensued. The result was the death of four people and the injury of twenty; at first it was said that the deaths were seven and the injured fifty in number; but happily this is not so.

The French Emperor, in company with that "angel of grace and goodness" the Empress, has been calling forth the gratitude of the people of Bayonne, by presiding at the inauguration of some new works designed for the removal of a sand bank at the mouth of the Adour, which if ever taken away, Bayonne would rise into a place of great importance. A bishop was present "to bless the sea and the first pile," and the Emperor made a speech after a blessing from Heaven had been invoked upon his Imperial head; after which he went back to Biarritz, where he is now staying. The authorities of the Town had provided for his amusement and that of his fair lady, a most elaborate bull-fight, but for decency's sake it is pleasing to learn that neither royal personages attended the cruel sport, but whether because the opportunity was not suitable or because it was felt to be a scandal to mix prayers and blood is not stated.—The horrid entertainment is described in the French journals to have been unusually exciting, in consequence of the remarkable skill displayed by the baiter of the bull, one Egan "a rising man in his profession."

The Queen of Madagascar, Ranavolo, is reported to be seriously ill, and strong are the hopes that death will take the monster, and leave her amiable and excellent son to inaugurate a new state of things in that horribly migoverned island.

The English Press on Canadian Affairs.

CANADIAN POLITICS.

From the Scottish Guardian.

The remark of Prince Albert some time ago that the representative institutions of this country are on their trial, applies in a very special manner to the state of affairs in Canada at the present moment. The Ministry is eminently unpopular, and not without reason, as in addition to its owing its existence to a coalition of parties, it has within a few years doubled the debt of the colony, doubled also its taxation, and is under the necessity of adhering to a stringent commercial economy, alien to the progress of free trade. The Macdonald Ministry was outvoted in the House of Assembly at the end of July and resigned. Sir Edmund Head, the Governor Governal, confided the formation of a Ministry to Mr. George Brown, whose Cabinet was installed on the 2nd of August. But before the new Ministry had an opportunity of maturing their plans and announcing their policy, a vote, of want of confidence was passed by a majority of the House of Assembly. The constitutional course in such circumstances would have been to appeal the constituency. Mr Brown accordingly proposed to the Governor General to dissolve Parliament. This alternative, by an arbitary stretch of the power and prerogatives of the Crown as administered by the Governor General, was refused by Sir Edmund Head. No Alternatives was left to Mr. Brown and his colleagues but at once to retire. The Governor General offered the post of Premier to Galt, but that gentlemen shrank from the responsibility of attempting to construct a Ministry. No other party offering any prospect of success, the Governor General was necessitated to recall the former Ministry, which was forthwith re-installed in office, with the substitution of Mr. Galt for Mr. Cayley as the Minister of Finance.—The conduct of the Ministers on resuming the Government was not a little startling. According to the constitution of Great Britain and Canada, they were bound on taking office to return to their constituents. But this step they well knew, would have proved fatal, it being certain that they would one and all have been rejected by the electors. In order to secure themselves in power, they resorted to one of the most discreditable subterfuges in the history of representative institutions. It seems that some years ago a statute was enacted to facilitate the management of public affairs, by enabling one department to exchange places with another official, without the necessity of either of them being re-elected by their constituents. The law was intended, obviously to remove obstacles to the progress of the Administration in full working order, and never contemplated the emergency which had now arisen, when the ordinary check provided by the constitution ought naturally to have come into play. Yet, this was the statute under which the Ministry when restored to power sought refuge from their incensed constituents. They all took new offices which they had no intention of filling; but this brought them for the nonce within the operation of the Act, and enabled them to evade one of the safeguards of public freedom; and having all sworn the oath binding them to be faithful discharge of the duties of their respective offices, next morning (in the words of Mr. Brown's address) "they changed back to their old positions, and swore all around a new set of oaths." A law, therefore, which was framed solely to meet the case of an exchange or transfer of official duty, where only one or two of the members of an existing Cabinet are concerned, was actually employed to evade a constitutional check by a whole Administration, and that, too, by a process of hard swearing which to say the least of it, was anything but decorous. It is to be regretted that these extraordinary proceedings have taken place with the concurrence of the Governor General, who has not escaped the necessity of taken pen in hand, and vindicating the anomalous position he occupies amidst this shifting and shuffling of parties. In a memorandum justifying his having declined to take the extreme measures of dissolving Parliament, Sir Edmund Head says that "he is no doubt to be tried fairly with all political parties; but he has also a duty to perform to the Queen and the people of Canada paramount to that which he owes to any one party, or to all parties whatsoever." It is of course difficult for us to form an opinion on colonial questions, but looking at the matter simply in the light of constitutional law and practice, it seems to us that the Governor General, by refusing to dissolve Parliament, has created more serious evils than he has evaded, and, at all events, no such irregular and arbitrary proceedings would have been tolerated in England for a single hour.

Mr. Brown's policy, so far as it has been sketched, appears to be of a description fitted to secure for him the general support of the Upper Province. The present ministry is upheld chiefly by Lower Canada votes in the Legislature. Mr. Brown maintains the principle of Representation by Population; and on the great educational question, which is by no means adjusted even in Canada, he is opposed to the system of allowing separate schools to the Roman Catholics, being of opinion that certain modifications, the common Schools of Upper Canada might be rendered acceptable to all classes of the community. He is also friendly to establishing commercial reciprocity with the United States, so as to throw open to the trade of Canada the markets and ports of the States. The ministry of Mr. Brown in short, were prepared to enter upon a system of thorough-going reform and progressive improvement, which we would fain hope, will not long be deferred by the feuds of parties. Mr. Brown is a man of character and capacity, and popular feeling runs strongly in his favour in Upper Canada. No doubt he is biding his time. It is creditable to him that in the late session of Parliament he introduced a bill for relieving the Post Office department and Government officials on canals from Sabbath labour, a measure which was defeated by a majority of seven votes.

A Frightful Accident.

A HORSE AMONG THE PEOPLE.

From the Cincinnati Times, Sept. 11.

A frightful accident occurred at the State Fair ground, in Sandusky, yesterday. An excited horse, on exhibition, in a contest for the prize, broke through the barriers of the arena, dashed in among the people, injuring five persons, two so badly that they died soon after the accident. The following are the details:

The arena, a rising ring for the exhibition of animals at the State Fair, is inclosed by a post and board railing, a shingle board running all the way round the circle. Facing the judges stand is an extensive step platform ascending gradually until it reaches a height of some thirty feet. Beneath this platform were arranged one or two booths and a number of seats for visitors. The spot was a pleasant retreat from the sun, and was constantly crowded with fatigued visitors. It was there the damage was done.

About two o'clock, four celebrated Roadsters were brought into the ring in competition for the prizes. It was evident to be a close contest between them, and they attracted great attention. The entire circle was surrounded by spectators, who manifested the greatest interest in the movements of the horses. While running at full trot, one of the horses became unmanageable, and dashing off at his fullest speed, came near upsetting his driver and creating quite a consternation among the spectators. He was finally stopped however, and the Marshal of the ring observing that the animals as well as their drivers were becoming much excited, determined to put an end to the race. He had just given orders to that effect, when the hub of one of the vehicles accidentally raked the wheel of another, and in an instant split and tore from it every fellow.

The horse attached to the broken sulky, a spirited animal, which had already become the favorite of the spectators, was then going at a rapid rate, but with a crash which upset the vehicle to which he was attached, and threw out his driver, he bounded off at a fearful speed. He dragged after him the one-wheeled sulky, which filled the air with dust. As he run fearfully around the circle, the mass of people rushed away from the inclosure though they were called upon to stand still and keep the horse within the ring.

The excited horse suddenly left the track and running over the award aimed directly for the upper end of the ladies' platform.—The crowd that occupied this spot attempted to get out of his way, and a rush was made in every direction, and a number of persons fell or were thrown down. The horse—still dragging the vehicle—hurried on, dashed against the enclosure, broke down the barrier, and pursued his course. Turning suddenly to the left, he bounded in under the ladies platform, where a number of men, women and children, totally ignorant of the cause of confusion, were sitting. As he sprang among them he fell, and his progress was stopped. The scene at this point at that time was fearful—men, women and children flying in every direction, and the latter screaming with alarm.

Those who preserved their presence of mind hastened to secure the horse, which was done, and, somewhat injured, he was conducted to his stable. Several injured persons were picked up. An old gentleman named Mallack for some time afflicted with the palsy, was taken up fatally injured. He was carried into the ladies' saloon and received prompt medical assistance. The horse's fore feet had struck him in the forehead and in the breast. He died, we understand, in one hour and a half after the accident. A lady residing in the country was sitting holding her little girl by the hands. The horse fell upon them, and in rising again, kicked the child in the back. The mother also was carried to the ladies' saloon, and her injuries pronounced not dangerous. She suffered very much.

The child was carried into the Manufacturer's Hall and received every attention. It was about 7 years of age. She was removed with her mother to the City, and died, it was rumored, last night. A young lady, whose name we could not learn, also received some injuries, but after recovering from her fright was able to walk to a carriage and ride home. Quite a number of others were hurt in the rush, but only slightly. The driver of the animal, who was thrown out in the ring, was considerably bruised, but escaped, and miraculously too, with whole bones. At the time of this occurrence crowds of people were all over the Fair grounds. It is considered fortunate that the horse, so soon after leaving the arena, dashed into a spot where his progress was stopped.

Ten Thousand Women Floundering in the Mud.

A Terrible Storm at the State Fair in St. Louis, and the entire scene converted into a Grand Mud-hole.

It must have been one of the most ludicrous, pitiful, terrible and exciting sights ever witnessed by mortal eye, to have seen the consternation, panic and dispair produced at the State Fair in St. Louis last Thursday—where the Democrat says there were not less than 25,000 people in the middle of the day—by a storm which came up about three o'clock. There had been two or three dashes of rain before that, but the sky had cleared up again having an unpleasant effects but considerable mud.

By three a long rain began to set in, and the panic began with white pants and crinolines. The mud began to get ankle-deep, and the ladies had to descend the steps leading to the amphitheatre, in order to get to the horses and carriages. This was an excruciating trial, for the steps were muddy and slippery, and at the bottom of them were hundreds of gaping loafers and mischievous boys, watching with a barbarous impudence to take advantage of every improper elevation of the skirt, or to laugh at every such mishap as making a slip, and sliding instead of walking down the muddy steps.

But descend they must, though with mortifications and at the same time indignation upon their faces, with their silk dresses thrown over their bonnets, their skirts stretched up knee high, their crinoline collapsing and bending in every direction in the rain, and their gaiters, hose and underclothes all inspected and canted upon with nature's self-made mortar. Slippers were stuck in the mud, umbrellas were as rare as comets, no one had any time to stop and demand apologies or give any, for being run over or knocked down in the scramble, and omnibuses and carriages were besieged as if it were the last chance to get to kingdom come.

Women and children were caught up by frantic husbands and fathers and pitched into the doors and windows of the carriages. The horses crowded upon one another—men cursed and raved, screams of terror arose from the women on all sides, some were knocked down in the mud others fell sprawling under foot, dresses and bonnets were torn and scattered around—many who were afraid to mingle with the crowd stood upon its verge without shelter of any kind, the rain beating pitilessly upon their finery, streaming down their bare shoulder and necks, washing away their rosy cheek and dark eyebrows—well, we are not equal to the description. It was a terrible suffering and mortification to thousands who were caught in the dilemma.

Robbery at the Bank of Upper Canada.

One of the boldest robberies which has lately come under our notice was committed on Saturday last, at the Bank of Upper Canada. The messenger of the Custom-house, Mr. McKay, having been dispatched to the Bank with a sum of about $4,000 in money and cheques to deposit, he went to the counter, and laying the package thereon, he, as usual, sat down till the money was counted and found correct. The receiving teller, being engaged at the time with another person making a deposit, the money lay on the counter for a short time. The Bank was crowded with different persons, among them four who, it afterwards appeared, had no matter of business there, except that of theft. While the teller was engaged, as mentioned, he saw the money left by the messenger removed. On looking up he perceived the package in the hands of a respectable-looking man standing at the counter. He at first thought that the man was a new messenger for the Custom-house; but shortly afterwards, on looking around the room, he saw Mr. McKay, and then, his suspicions being aroused, he ran around and immediately closed the door leading to the street, ordering back, at the same time, the man who had taken the money and found correct. The receiving teller, being engaged at the time with another person making a deposit, the money lay on the counter for a short time. The Bank was crowded with different persons, among them four who, it afterwards appeared, had no matter of business there, except that of theft. While the teller was engaged, as mentioned, he saw the money left by the messenger removed. On looking up he perceived the package in the hands of a respectable-looking man standing at the counter. He at first thought that the man was a new messenger for the Custom-house; but shortly afterwards, on looking around the room, he saw Mr. McKay, and then, his suspicions being aroused, he ran around and immediately closed the door leading to the street, ordering back, at the same time, the man who had taken the money and found correct. The receiving teller, being engaged at the time with another person making a deposit, the money lay on the counter for a short time. The Bank was crowded with different persons, among them four who, it afterwards appeared, had no matter of business there, except that of theft. While the teller was engaged, as mentioned, he saw the money left by the messenger removed. On looking up he perceived the package in the hands of a respectable-looking man standing at the counter. He at first thought that the man was a new messenger for the Custom-house; but shortly afterwards, on looking around the room, he saw Mr. McKay, and then, his suspicions being aroused, he ran around and immediately closed the door leading to the street, ordering back, at the same time, the man who had taken the money and found correct.

Yesterday great crowds visited the Crystal Palace, for the most part exhibitors.—They might be met with on any part of the road—one carrying curiously shaped parcels, an gingerly as if they were treading on eggs; others driving wheel-barrows before them filled with curiosities; and there was no end to excited females hurrying along with pictures or crotchet work. Cabs containing fancy work, looking-glasses, and pictures were arriving every hour; and carts conveying flour, and fruit trees might be met with on any part of the road. On approaching near the Crystal Palace, it looks very promising, and, from its glittering appearance in the sun, fully bears out its name. At the gate, a large space of ground is inclosed for the convenience of cabs and omnibuses. The grounds inside, leading up to the Palace, and indeed all around it, are neatly laid out with rows of trees. The space allotted to the trotting horses is at the right hand side of the entrance below the gate. The cattle sheds are ranged round the length of the ground along which the road runs, and are put up in the most comfortable manner. At the end of the ground allotted for cattle, refreshment tents for the farmers are erected. Sheep and rams are penned in booths at the right hand side of this ground; and further up, a large quantity of tall cloth is spread out for exhibition. Behind the booking another large refreshment stall is erected, and between the building and the southern boundary more trees are planted, in walks and drives. Before entering the Palace an assortment of wire work and iron railings, from the Atlas Iron Works, are worth looking at; and also a couple of neat carriages. Passing around the Palace, its grand entrance facing the south, is reached. A verandah, supported by iron pillars, serves to distinguish it from the back entrance. But notwithstanding that the grand entrance is placed at the southern side, every body goes in at the eastern end, inasmuch as that faces the city.

The view which presents itself on entering the building is not what is generally called grand or sublime, but it is nevertheless very strange and very pleasing, and no doubt when the exterior are completed, and the articles of exhibition all in their places, the effect will be greatly enhanced. Commencing at the right hand side of the entrance entrance, the first thing that attracted our attention were bundles of chandeliers of the most fantastic shapes which were hanging from the roof. A large portable exhibition for clothing, &c., from Thompson, Keith & Co's, Toronto, stood in the centre, which looked as if it were only waiting for the opportunity to manufacture gas for all the chandeliers before it. After stumbling over a great many open boxes, we came upon a small machine from Turner & Co.s' which, we found on enquiry would cut straw or wood with equal facility. Several circular saws from the same manufacturers were also scattered about. After duly examining the cutting machine, we turned to a lot of upright posts, turned with skill, and on perusing a card attached to them it became apparent that C. R. Parks, Toronto, was the ingenious individual who exhibited them. A quantity of axe handles, which did not seem to belong to any one in particular, were stretched on the counter a little further off; and beyond them again, a dozen of baby-propellers stood so invitingly ready for use, that it would be dangerous to allow a nurse to inspect them too long. A small churn, standing at the left hand side, worked by a new mechanism—which the owner announced in a small handbill was about to be patented—was an object of fond regard to some farmers who had gathered around, but who could not make out how it worked. Beyond the churn, lay a ruinous apuse, intended for the reception of sundry farming implements, reaching to a department allotted for cabinet-ware. Here a sofa stood ruefully in the corner, and a piano might be observed peeping out of a half-opened case at a dozen odd-looking boxes which might contain coffins, as well as anything else, from their shape. Going on further, a large fire-engine stood in our path, from the hands of Marks & Co., Toronto; and having made our way by it, the northern entrance was reached. At this side of it, some plaster ornaments were displayed, and on the western side a large glass case, reaching to the gallery, displayed the Bible in every language in the world. Having sufficiently admired this curious collection, and studied the peculiarities of several new-fashioned pick-axes and gun-cases, which were knocked about, we stopped to examine some half-opened bundles of grocery scales from Dalley, Ware & Co., of Hamilton. Various weighing machines were here scattered about in confusion, waiting to be placed upright. A lady's beautiful fancy work table, with any number of out-of-the-way drawers, which had by some chance lost its way into this part of the building, was at this time surrounded by a dozen eager ladies, who happened to be at hand; and it was with some difficulty that the exhibitor, who could not speak English plainly, could get it away from them. His name is Gottestrew Fisher, and his work-table is now in the left hand side of the southern gallery, near the corner.

Having now reached to the end of the manufactured articles on this side of the building, we turned our attention to the Horticultural portion of the Exhibition. In this department many of the articles had not yet been placed. On one side of our path were a great many small compartments railed off, for the deposit of bags of wheat or other produce, and on the other were a series of shelves one over the other, which by this time, no doubt, are filled with vegetables of all kinds. When we saw it, there were only a score or two of bags of fall and winter wheat, mixed up with tempting-looking heads of Indian corn, and rolls of butter and cheese that seemed a miracle of good quality. Several large white carrots were also deposited in this department.

Arranged along the western end of the building, were several mammoth pumpkins and brobdignag squashes, together with a large quantity of fall and winter wheat.—On an adjacent stand was china and crockery ware, and further up the same walk were several geraniums. The southern side of the Exhibition is entirely devoted to fruit. Large bunches of grapes, both of hot-house and open air growth, were displayed here, together with some beautiful kinds of apples and pears. The grapes were white and purple, and were in clusters and bunches—the difference between which we learned from one of the exhibitors is, that "a bunch is a bunch, and clusters is clusters."

Arrived at the end of this row we face the northern gallery. This gallery which is distinguished by the royal arms, is fitted to accommodate the choir who will assist at the opening. For the purpose of giving effect to the choruses an organ has been erected. Opposite to it is a raised dais, on which His Excellency and those engaged in the ceremony will be seated. Behind this stand is a collection of peaches, apples and grapes and other fruit, which will be sure to attract much attention; but scarcely so much as some very fine specimens of cabbages which are also in the same department.

On the other side of the dais, going down, a telegraph machine and printing press are placed side by side with a sewing machine. Mr. Dwight has the charge of the telegraph instruments; and the three machines will be in full play during the Exhibition. The leather and harness departments next come under observation. All the articles intended for view were not arranged in the forenoon of yesterday; but several rolls of leather were ready for immediate display, and some half-dozen skeleton horses were harnessed in the most captivating manner. Boot-trees and hides of leather were piled up here in the greatest confusion. Towards the end of this counter was a collection of fine saddles, and farther on were dummy horses, harnessed unexceptionably, and a case of neat whips. Opposite to these a large quantity of draining-pipes, vases, bricks, fruit-baskets and earthenware of every description, were arranged in a showy manner.

Having now walked round the building, there remained nothing to look at down stairs; except some of Taylor's fire-proof safes, a few straggling stores, and the fountain in the middle of the building. The fountain is of Toronto manufacture, and when in play will look very well. An attempt was made in the afternoon to get it to go off, but only a thin stream of water was thrown up, from the centre fount, while the nymphs, immovable, and serene refused to send forth a drop. As we came away, the plumbers were busy putting new mouths and noses on the obstinate creatures, and no doubt they will each throw a brilliant jet of water up on the opening day.

The view from the gallery is very animated, while the articles which are for exhibition in it, comprising for the most part the fine arts, fine leather work, make it the pleasantest part of the building. The Eastern gallery is filled with collections of curious birds, insects and beasts. The first object attracting attention at the left hand side is a large glass case containing specimens of the feathered tribe, from the barn-door fowl to the royal eagle. Beside this is a good-looking beaver, with a stick in his mouth. On the same counter is a case of fish (cyprin) preserving, and also another which is labelled "Insect exhibition here." In the latter case nothing except the difference between the Government and Bureau classes may be noticed. A couple of mosquitoes and small spiders appear to be interesting in their confinement. A case of butterflies is also displayed here, and one of beetles and grubs. A design representing a fox trapping a goose, entitled "The Wolves" is hung in the gallery, as it also a glass case, in which a stuffed fox is represented gazing ruefully after an escaped pigeon.

A case of teeth, looking bright enough to reconcile any one to false teeth, is placed in this gallery; alongside which is a case containing sundry human skulls and bones. The former case is owned by Dr. French, Toronto, and the latter by Dr. Ghent, Hamilton. A radial-winged propeller, stationed further on, professes a wonderful superiority over the clumsy propeller at present in use.

The first batch of the fine arts which we come to is a lot of architectural drawings, representing the public buildings of Canada in unintelligible sections. Passing these, a few nice steel engravings may be seen; and also numberless well-executed pen and ink sketches, pencil and crayon drawings, paintings in oil and water color—all of which are worth individual attention.—Several groups of beautiful wax flowers now arrest the attention They are placed near that part of the gallery set apart for the orchestra, which has been described already. At the other side of the gallery are the oil paintings proper, comprising portraits and landscapes, and holy and secular subjects.

Without waiting to admire the paintings, or stopping to examine the piles of fancy needle work, we must hurry on, and briefly glancing at the worsted and fancy knitting which is lying about, come at once to the southern gallery. Here is a large display of lace, and other ornamental needle and patch-work. A case of turned ivory ornaments is stationed to the left; and beside it, another case of electro-magnetic machines. To the right of a perfumery stand may be seen a plaster plan of the Georgian Bay Canal, by Kivas Tully, Esq., showing the elevations of the districts through which the canal must pass. A number of maps and globes, and other articles for educational uses, are displayed in this gallery. Some haberdashery displayed by Rutherford and Saunders is also conspicuous. The above sketch of the building and its contents, is necessarily imperfect, inasmuch as one half of the articles intended for exhibition were not in their places at the time it was made.

Lord Napier, the English Ambassador at Washington, has been invited by His Excellency, and will, it is thought, be present at the opening ceremony.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Take Notice—T. G Hazlitt.

The Examiner.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 30, 1858.

Arrival of the "Prince Albert."

HALIFAX, Sept. 27.

The steamship Prince Albert, Captain Watson, from Galway, reached her dock at nine o'clock on Sunday morning.

The political news by this arrival is generally unimportant.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The shipment of the shore end of the Atlantic Telegraph Cable was in progress on board the steamer Bilboa, at Plymouth. As the cumbrous nature of the cable necessitated caution in the work of storing, it was not expected to be all on board before the night of the 16th, when the Bilboa would proceed to the Thames. The shares were steadily maintained at about £500.

The English and French treaties with China had been received

The British Government has just renewed the contract with the Pacific Steam Navigation Company of Liverpool, for the period of six years, for the conveyance of the semi-monthly mails along the west coast of South America from Panama to Valparaiso.

The Literary Gazette says there is a well-founded hope that Canada will, next summer, be visited by some prominent member of the Royal Family, if not by the Queen and Prince Consort.

FRANCE.

The political news is unimportant.

The Lyons silk market continued to improve and prices had further advanced.—This favourable movement is in a great measure ascribed to the arrival of orders for the American spring trade on a better scale than had been hoped for. Two large cotton mills near Rouen, one occupied by M. Piel and the other by M. Fleury, had been destroyed by fire with their valuable contents.

TURKEY.

Constantinople letters state that a conspiracy existed there to get rid of the present Sultan, and replace him by his brother Abdul Aziz. It is further stated that the conspiracy had gone so far that the majority of the foreign ambassadors at Constantinople, had thought proper to inform certain leading persons in the plot, that if Abdul Aziz came to the throne by violent means, he would not be recognized by the European powers.

ITALY.

The Neapolitan government had received a notice that a quantity of fulminating grenades, in the form of fruit, were about to be introduced into the Neapolitan States.

England and France had notified Naples of the exact conditions on which they would renew diplomatic relations.

SPAIN.

Reports of the discovery of a new republican conspiracy were current.

The Bank of Valladolid had raised its rate of discount to 8 per cent.

The Queen and royal family had reached Corunna, and were received with great enthusiasm.

CHINA.

The French and English treaties had been published.

The French government proposes to maintain in China a stronger naval squadron than in the time past. A division of gunboats will remain there permanently, and a body of marine infantry will also be kept until the conditions of the treaty have been carried out.

INDIA.

Further details of the Indian news had been telegraphed, but were no later, and added nothing of moment to the despatches per Niagara.

FOUNDERING OF THE "ARCTIC" AT SEA!

350 SOULS ON BOARD.

Only SIXTY-SEVEN SAVED!

The melancholy intelligence of the loss of the Arctic is established by later night's telegraph report as follows:—

HALIFAX, Sept. 27.

The bark Lotus from Liverpool, arrived in Halifax harbour on Sunday afternoon, with 12 of the 67 surviving passengers of the steamship Austria, burst at sea, on the the 13th September, in lat. 45 1, long 41 30, taken from the bark Maurice, Captain Earnest Renaud, on the 14th inst. At a little after two o'clock on the 13th, dense volumes of smoke burst from the after entrance of the steerage. The ship was instantly put at half-speed, at which she continued till the magazine exploded. The engineers, it is said, were instantly suffocated. Fire was next seen breaking through the freight amid-ships, and travelled aft with fearful rapidity. Some persons let down a boat from the port side of the quarter deck, and she was thought to be crushed under the screw. An attempt was made to launch a boat on the starboard side, but it was swamped from the number who rushed into it, and all were lost. All the first cabin passengers were on the poop, except a few gentlemen who have been smothered in the smoking room. Many second cabin passengers were also on the poop, but a number of them got shut into their cabin by the fire. Some of them were pulled up through the ventilator, but the greatest number could not be extricated.—The last woman drawn up said there were six already suffocated. The ladies and gentlemen on the poop jumped into the sea by twos and threes—some of the ladies in flames. Several hesitated, but were driven to it at the last moment. In half an hour not a soul was to be seen on the poop. The French bark Maurice, Captain Earnest Renaud came alongside the steamer at about 5 p. m., and received 40 passengers, chiefly taken off the bowsprit. A few were picked up floating around about 8 o'clock. One of the metallic boats came up with 23 persons in it, including the first and third officers. Afterwards three or four men were found floating on a piece of broken boat. The second officer was taken up after swimming seven hours. He and the third officer were severely burned. One male passenger was burnt frightfully, and several others slightly. There were but six women saved, three of whom were burnt. A Norwegian bark came up with the steamer next morning, and a boat was observed going round the burning ship. They may have picked up a few persons, but only a few. The Maurice had no communication with the Norwegian.

The Austria was built by Caird & Co., of Greenock, last year, and was a large and fast vessel. She belonged to a Hamburgh Company, which has not been very long in operation.

The Austria had on board:

First cabin—Full passengers	49
" —Children	19
Second cabin—Full passengers	103
" —Children	8
Steerage—Full passengers	211
" —Children	30
Total	420

The crew consisted of about 100 persons, and twenty or thirty more steerage passengers may have been taken on board at Southampton. The first and second cabins were full, making a probable total of 550 souls on board.

The Great North-West.

From Labrador to Vancouver's Island, from Minnesota to the Artic Ocean, is a region of greater extent than the whole of Europe, being upwards of 4,000 miles from east to west, and some 3,000 miles from south to north. This vast territory is traversed in all directions by the agents of the Hudson's Bay Company, yet we know as little with accuracy of its soil, climate and general capabilities, as we do of those of Siberia; nay less, for the single volume of Mr. Atkinsons has communicated more information regarding the Asiatic dominions of Russia than has been conveyed to us regarding British North America by the servants of the Hudson's Bay Company. Only one impression has been distinctly conveyed to the public, by the various narratives of travel in those regions that have found the light, namely, that the entire country from east to west and north to south is barren and unproductive in soil, and rigorous in climate, fit only for the abode of Indians and Esquimaux, and producing as the only possible staple of commerce a commodity which must be monopolized as the only condition on which it can be preserved. Rumours, indeed have reached the outer world of quite a different character, and in limited circles it has been known on the best authority that this region comprises vast tracts of country of great agricultural mineral and commercial value, with a climate in some instances of a far milder and more equable character than either Upper Canada or any of the northern States of the Union. These facts, known hitherto only to a few, are now beginning to reach the general public.—The gold discoveries in British Columbia have brought to light the true character of the soil and climate of that country, despite the efforts of our Yankee friends to misrepresent matters in the interest of their own golden State of California. And now we also begin to get at the true state of the case with reference to the immense territory stretching from Lake Superior to the Rocky mountains, and are in a fair way of being enabled to decide conclusively to what extent this region is fit to become the abode of the European race.

We have before us the first documentary result of the expeditions that have been set out to explore this terra incognita. One party under Mr. Palisser was sent by the British Government in the summer of last year with instructions to explore the country west of the Red River settlement, and to ascertain the best route across the Rocky Mountains on British territory. From this expedition there is as yet no published report, but one may be looked for, we believe in the course of the present season. Contemporaneously with the sending out of his party, the Canadian Government last year somewhat late in the season, appointed as exploring expedition under the direction of Mr. Gladman, a retired officer of the Hudson's Bay company, with Professor Hind as geologist, Mr. Dawson as surveyor, and Mr. Napier as Engineer. The instructions to this party were to ascertain the best route from Lake Superior to Fort Garry (Red River settlement), and the blue book before us contains the result of their investigations during last season.

From Lake Superior to Red River there are two routes which have been followed by the traders, the one starting from Fort William, following the course of Kaministiquia River and a chain of lakes across the height of land to Rainy Lake; the other starting from the Grand Portage about forty miles east of Fort William, taking the course of the Pigeon River and a number of small lakes, terminating like the former in Rainy Lake. Which of these routes is most practicable is not determined by the report before us, and the point is not yet settled. It seems probable, however, that the starting place will be from some point in Thunder Bay, at or near Fort William, whence a conveyance road will be carried to Rainy Lake. The selection of a starting point is looked forward to with much interest in Canada, and parties are prepared to go forward as soon as it is decided to commence clearing. In the immediate neighborhood of Lake Superior the soil is poor but a few miles inland it improves, and is capable of growing good crops. At the Catholic Mission on the Kaministiquia, within two miles of the lake, where the land is low and damp, we saw a patch of excellent ripe oats in the last week of August.—Fifteen miles up the same river the soil is so much superior that a quantity of it has been carried down to form the garden at the post of the Hudson's Bay Company. There we saw all kinds of garden produce growing in luxuriance, including splendid potatoes.

From Fort William to Rainy Lake the distance is about two hundred miles. This will have to be crossed by a continous road which can be made without much difficulty or expense, as the greatest height of land is only six hundred feet. Rainy Lake and Rainy River, a distance of 160 miles, are navigable the whole way, with a single interruption caused by a rapid at Fort Francis, a post of the Company at the head of Rainy River. In the event of immediate steps being taken to complete the land communication, we believe the North-West Transportation Company intended to place two small steamers on this part of the line next season. The banks of Rainy River are very fertile, and are covered with the finest timber, consisting of oak, elm, basswood, etc., while the pine is found in abundance on the heights to the east. Professor Hind and Mr. Dawson give the most glowing accounts of the fine scenery and fertile soil of this region, which they state to be admirably fitted for settlement. At Fort Francis, Professor Hind says, "Wheat is sown from the 20th to the 23rd of May; it ripens about the 1st of September. Potatoes, turnips, carrots, and, indeed, all common culinary vegetables, succeed well.—Potatoes are dug by the first week in October, and barely is ripe by the middle of August."

From Rainy River to Fort Garry, the present water communication by Lake of the Woods, Winnipeg River, Winnipeg Lake, and up Red River, is circuitous, and also dangerous on account of the numerous heavy rapids on the Winnipeg. It is proposed to avoid all this by a road running straight across the country from Rainy River, the distance being about one hundred miles. This part of the proposed route has not been surveyed, or even traversed by any one, chiefly from the difficulty of obtaining guides, the Indians appearing specially desirous not to allow any one to deviate from the route hitherto followed by the traders, more particularly at this point, for some reason or other. This was experienced by all the members of the expedition who attempted to go that way, and when Captain Kennedy recently wished to make the same short cut with the mail, his Indians threatened to desert him on the pretence that there was an impassable swamp in the way. This tract of country has been penetrated to a considerable distance, however, from the side of Red River, without any unusual obstacles to the construction of a road being discovered.

The proposed route, then, from Lake Superior to Fort Garry, on Red River, will be but 460 miles, of which 300 will be by road and 160 by water. Mr. Dawson makes an estimate of the expense, on the supposition that the first section of the line, namely from Fort William to Rainy Lake, will be partly by road and partly by canoe, with a number of tedious portages. According to this estimate the expense of the entire route would be £51,575. But from the Provincial Secretary's letter of instructions to Mr. Gladman it appears that "a continous road" was contemplated for this part of the line. No other idea ought to be encouraged, as by any other mode the travelling would be exceedingly tedious. It is of the utmost consequence, while the Government are about it, that good efficient roads should be made at once, for important reasons which we shall afterwards state; and taking Mr. Dawson's estimate to guide us, the cost of complete communication in the way we have mentioned would only be about £100,000.

We have not got over the impassable mountains, forests and morasses which were to shut out civilization forever from the great regions of the West. When the Canadian Government confided the task of pioneer to a veteran of, we suppose, nearly threescore and ten, it seems to have been their idea that he would never accomplish the task; but they did not reckon on the enthusiasm which gives life even to advanced years, and they overrated moreover, the difficulties that had to be encountered. Mr. Gladman conveyed his party in safety to Fort Garry, and then left them to pursue their further investigations.—What did they find there—in this land which Sir George Simpson and the Times have represented in such doleful colours?—We shall allow Professor Hind to speak; and we may mention that, in the estimation of those who have known the country intimately for a much longer period, his statements are by no means too highly colored. The following observations occur in the introduction to his lengthened report, and are fully sustained by the interesting details:

"Of the valley of Red River, I find it impossible to speak in any other terms than those which may express astonishment and admiration.

"The description which I had read previous to my arrival here, certainly did not in any way prepare me for the magnificent country at present occupied and controlled by those whose interests, no one seeks to deny, have been opposed to settlement or communication with what may be termed the outer world.

"I entirely concur in the brief but expansive description given to me by an English settler on the Assiniboine, that the valley of Red River, including a large portion belonging to its great affluent, is a 'paradise of fertility.'

"During my visit to Assiniboia, a district embracing the settlements on both rivers, I paid particular attention to the objections which had been urged against the climate and soil of the country with reference to agricultural operations, and I have no hesitation in saying that erroneous impressions respecting the available area of cultivable land, the soil, the crops, and the climate still exist, and find publicity.

"The summer climate of this region appears to be very well adapted for agricultural operations.

"The summer temperature is nearly four degrees warmer than at Toronto as ascertained by a comparison of corresponding observations.

"Indian corn, if properly cultivated, and an early variety selected, may always be relied on.

"The melon grown with the utmost luxuriance without any artificial aid, and ripens perfectly before the end of August.

"And yet with these natural and most truthful registers of climate, we are accustomed to hear late spring and early autumn frosts deplored, lamented, and held up as one of the great drawbacks of Red River.

"The opinions expressed, at the settlement by different individuals of the soil, climate and natural productions of this country, are often of a very opposite character; and I found invariably that descriptions and opinions were remarkably affected by the relation which the individual bore to the Honourable Hudson's Bay Company.

"In making these statements, I do not wish it to be supposed that any attempt was ever made intentionally to mislead, but the habit of decrying everything not connected with the Fur Trade, appeared to have been a second nature to many of the old residents whose interests are locked up in it.

"All kinds of farm produce common in Canada succeed admirably in the district of Assiniboia; these are wheat, oats, barley, Indian corn, hops, flax, hemp, potatoes, root crops, and all kinds of common garden vegetables.

The potatoes, cauliflowers, and onions, I have not been surprised at any of our Provincial Fairs; an enumeration of the weight of some of these productions of the garden and farm will be found in the text, and numerous specimens accompany this report.

"The character of the soil in Assiniboia, within the ancient lake ridges, cannot be surpassed. It is a rich black mould ten to twenty inches deep, reposing on a lightish colored alluvial clay about four feet deep, which again rests upon lacustrine or drift clay to the level of the water, in all the rivers and creeks inspected.

"I frequently examined the soil some miles distant from the rivers along my line of route, as shown on the map, and invariably found the prairie portion to exhibit a uniform fertility.

"The area occupied by fertile prairies I visited and saw, certainly exceeds 1,500,000 acres, and, as will appear from an inspection of the map of Minnesota, the greater portion of the rich and available prairie land in the valley of the Red River lies within British territory, while the valley of the Assiniboine is wholly within it.

"The altitude of the valley of the Red River above the sea is about 680 feet or 320 feet less than the elevation given to it by high authority, and from which erroneous conclusions respecting its climate, in relation to agriculture, have been drawn.

"As an agricultural country, I have no hesitation in expressing the strongest conviction that it will one day rank amongst the most distinguished.

"The present state of society, and the condition of the people in the settlements, is far from being a pleasing or encouraging subject.

"The European and Canadain element have been gradually diminishing for years, and the half-breed population is apparently drawing closer to the habits and tastes of their Indian ancestry.

"That agriculture and all the simpler arts have been discouraged, is but too apparent.

"The interests of the Fur Trade are necessarily opposed to the centralization and settlement of the half-breed and Indian hunters, and it is everywhere evident that these interests have been upheld at a great sacrifice of means, and by the practice of a far-seeing and skilful policy.

"Red River has been settled for forty years, and now contains a population of 7,000 souls, yet no single branch of industry common even in the thinly settled parts of Canada, is practised there.

"Whatever efforts were made in times past, and there have been many, they have determined in failure, and it is difficult to resist the impression that these failures were designed by some one in authority.

"Such artifices appear to have been thought necessary when the controlling authorities were weak, and indeed almost powerless, in the face of a strong but irresolute and uneducated people.

"The valley of the Red River is capable of supplying all the necessaries of life, with the exception of iron, for some years to come. The most important want is fuel but there is much probability that on the Upper Assiniboine and the Little Somis River, one of its affluents, territory coal or lignite, will be found in available quantities."

This has reference only to the Red River and Assiniboine. The entire prairie region of British America, watered by the streams that fall into Lake Winnipeg, extends to upwards of 400,000 square miles, and is all of a fertile character. Both soil and climate are even better on the Saskatchewan than on Red River, and it is a well ascertained fact, and one that is accounted for in accordance with natural laws, that the further you proceed west the temperature in the same latitude becomes milder. That this is really the case is proved by the circumstance that horses and cattle are allowed to go in search of their own fodder on the plains in winter; the hunters pursue their occupation in all the year round, chasing the buffalo on horseback in the month of January; and the very fact that such vast beards of these wild animals, which derive their subsistence exclusively from prairie grass, are found in these latitudes during the winter months, is exclusive proof that fall of snow must be slight as compared with the more easterly sections of the continent. This was ascertained to be the case, indeed by Professor Hind at Red River, where although the cold reaches a lower point than even at Quebec, there is much less snow than at Toronto, the atmosphere being drier; while in summer there is more rain, and the heat is slightly greater, which accounts for the high fertility of the region.—But on the Saskatchewan, as we have said the soil and climate are still better. This is fully borne out, we believe, by a report that has just been sent in by Mr. Dawson, but has not yet been published. He and Professor Hind have been exploring in that quarter since spring, and the result of their explorations, when given to the world, will we are told, place the extraordinary resources of this great country beyond all doubt with the public, as they have long in the minds of those who have had opportunities of access to correct information.

We have now dwelt on this subject probably long enough for the patience of our readers, though not too long if we consider its world wide importance. There is only one point which we should desire to consider further, that is, the means of transit across this region. We observe that the Canard Company have made an offer to the British government to carry the mails to Vancouver's Island viz Panama in thirty-two days. In the same space of time the mails might be carried entirely through British territory by the route we have now been speaking of, without the assistance of railways further than those constructed in Canada. All that is necessary is that good roads should be made from Lake Superior to Red River, and from the Saskatchewan to Fraser River, by the routes that are now being surveyed—achievements of no great difficulty so far as is yet known, and which we may now regard as in immediate prospects. Let the British Government do its part of the work with promptitude, and our countrymen of the North-West Transportation Company will do the rest, and supply the means of steam communication over two thousand three hundred miles of water transit, as well as the land carriage over the newly constructed roads. By this means, and without a mile of railway, the distance from Canada to Fraser River, including six or seven hundred miles of road, may be accomplished within twenty days, and in less time, if the roads are found and the Government afford sufficient [illegible] would thus be afforded for opening up those vast fertile regions to British settlers! As to the Americans they are already on the qui vive, and preparing to pour across the line from Minnesota.

The Comets.

There are three comets now visible. Of these only one is visible to the naked eye. It may be readily seen by the naked eye on any clear evening, from about quarter-past seven to eight o'clock, although it is, of course, viewed to much better advantage with a telescope, even of a low power, not magnifying more than ten or twenty times. It is now situated near the hind foot of Ursa Major, and is moving toward Arcturus; or, in other words, it is near the horizon, and ranging with the two stars known as the Pointers, the comet being about as far to the left of the Pointers as the North star is to their right. The tail is tolerably well defined, and three degrees in length.

Those who look upon the small nebulous star now visible can hardly realize the terrific appearance of this same object, when, in 1264, it approached the sun with a tail one hundred degrees in length. Its tail came streaming up in the morning several hours before its head, and when its nucleus was in the zenith the train stretched below the Western horizon. Its train was first very broad, but it decreased in width, extending enormously in length. This comet had appeared before in 975, and also it 305, and 104, as mentioned by Chinese annalists. This would give it a period of about 200 years. In 975, its tail was 40 degrees in length, and its nucleus or head was so bright as to be visible in the day time. Its next appearance after 1284, was in 1556, in the month of February. Its aspect was very similar to its present one, being "somewhat paler than the planet Mars, and with a train of four degrees in length." It has been known as "the great comet of Charles V." because it appeared in the year in which his abdication took place. The Emperor Charles V., of Spain, considered it an omen of his death, although he survived it some years.

What rendered this comet particularly interesting was its near approach to the earth, being on the 12th of March only seven millions of miles distant. The orbit of the comet in 1264 was computed by Pingre and Dunthorne, while that of 1556 was computed by Halley, and afterwards by Hind, of the Southville Observatory, Regent's Park, England. It was found that the two orbits agreed, and Pingre concluded that they were the same, and that it would return again in 1848. It was accordingly expected at that time, and its non-appearance stimulated some to a re-examination of the previous calculations. Mr. Barber found that the attraction of the outer planets, Jupiter, Saturn, and Herschell had retarded it. Mr. Hind predicted its appearance in 1858, after making allowance for the disturbance.—Colonist.

A DOCTOR FATALLY OPERATED UPON.—A Strange affair has occurred at Constantinople. A resident physician, Dr. Zalloni, an Austrian, was called in to perscribe for the favorite wife of a Turkish personage and on questioning her in the harem, he found that she was suffering from an inflamation of her bowels. He slightly touched with his finger the part affected, on which a eunuch, who was in attendance, misinterpreting the act, rushed on him, knocked him down, and beat him until he was half dead. The woman's husband hearing the noise hurried in, and being told what had taken place, stabbed the physician in the thigh with a dagger. The blow was so violent that the weapon broke. The wounded physician, bathed in blood, was removed to the street, and left to get home as he could. Dr. Zalloni a few days after died of the injuries he had received.

Communication.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Smith O'Brien on McGee.

By the following extract from a letter received by me this morning, from the illustrious Irishman whose name appears at the bottom, you will be able, dear sir, to judge of the current calumnies directed against the junior member for Montreal by his political opponents. I would premise, however, by observing that it is as an Irishman and not as a Canadian politician that I desire to be judged in connection with the present production. I dont approve of the policy which would subordinate private honour and public virtue to "party politics":—

CROSSMALINA, COUNTY MAYO, Sept'r 4th, 1858.

DEAR SIR,—Your letter of the 12th August has been forwarded to me from Cahirmoyle. In reference to the enquiry it contains I beg to assure you that I had never entertained a suspicion that Mr. D'Arcy McGee betrayed the confederate party in 1848. After his arrival in America he wrote an indiscreet letter, which was calculated to injure the men who were under sentence of death and transportation, but I feel assurred that this indiscretion was the result of inadvertence, not of any intention to injure us. He subsequently took part in some efforts which were made to induce the President of the United States to intercede with the British Government in our behalf, and I have no doubt that he felt sincerely anxious for our liberation. It has afforded me much pleasure to find that he has taken a prominent place in the Canadian Legislature: and though of course I am not prepared to identify myself with all the opinions which he has in past times expressed, I should rejoice if he were destined to occupy a position in Canada similar to that occupied by Mr. C. G. Duffy in Australia.

* * * * * * *

Yours very faithfully.
WILLIAM S. O'BRIEN.
P. E. McKEON, Esq., M. D.,
Peterborough.

Commercial.

New York Markets.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.

Flour dull and 10a lower—sales 800 brls at $3 80 a $4 70 for unsound; $5 20 a $5 35 for superfine State; $5 60 a $5 65 for extra State; $5 50 a $5 80 for common to good Western; $5 80 a $5 95 for shipping brands extra round hoop Ohio.—Canadian also lower with sales of 400 brls at $5 20 a $5 25 for superfine; $5 75 a $5 50 for extras.

Rye flour quiet and unchanged.

Wheat buoyant; sales 16000 bushels at 94 for unsound Chicago spring; 106 for mixed Milwaukie club; 122 for red Western.

Corn steady; sales 809 bushels at 70 a 76 for mixed Western.

Oats steady at 44 a 52 for State and Western.

Rye quiet and unchanged.

Pork market opened dull and lower, but closed active at firm prices; sales 1000 brls at $16 75 a $16 80 for mess; $14 75 for prime.

Beef dull and unchanged.

Beef hams and prime mess beef quiet and nominal.

Butter selling readily at 12 a 18 Ohio, 15 a 21 State.

Peterboro' Markets.

Examiner Office,
Thursday, Sept. 30th, 1858.

	$ c.		$ c.
Wheat per bushel	0 90	a	1 00
Oats "	0 20	a	0 30
Potatoes "	0 20	a	0 25
Turnips "	0 12½	a	0 00
Beets "	0 20	a	0 00
Onions "	0 50	a	1 00
Apples "	0 40	a	0 00
Flour per barrel	5 00	a	5 50
Pork "	14 00	a	15 00
Mutton per lb.	0 05	a	0 07
Beef "	0 07	a	0 00
Butter per lb.	0 10	a	0 12½
Cheese "	0 08	a	0 10
Eggs per dozen	0 07	a	0 10
Hay per ton	7 00	a	8 00
Wood first quality	3 00	a	3 50
Straw per load	1 00	a	3 00
Cabbage per head	0 03	a	0 07

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.

TAKE NOTICE!

ALL Parties indebted to me, who wish to avoid paying 12½ per cent interest, will please to settle their liabilities immediately, as I will charge that rate of interest on all Notes or Accounts, due, or accruing due from the 1st instant.

All debts due prior to this date must be settled before the 10th October, or they will pass into other hands for collection.

T. G. HAZLITT.
Peterboro', September, 1858. 36—3t

MONEY WANTED.

WANTED to borrow on good security £200 or £300. Apply at this Office.
September 23, 1858. 37—tf.

BOY WANTED.

A SMART INTELLIGENT BOY about 18 or 14 years of age is wanted for the Book and Stationery Business Apply at the Store of SAWERS & MURRAY.
Peterboro', Sept. 13, 1858.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK,

THE best of the monthlies for the Ladies, and now so well known, as to render description unnecessary, is always on hand, for sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'
☞ October Number received, price 25 cts.

AXE FACTORY.

THE subscriber is now having manufactured by P. J. AYRES, at his old stand, near the Otonabee Mills, a large lot of

DOUBLE STEELED AXES,
BROAD & NARROW AXES,
CARPENTERS TOOLS, &C., &C.,

of the best quality and workmanship, which may be had either at the Factory or at the subscriber's store, on reasonable terms.

R. D. RODGERS.
Ashburnham, September 23rd, 1858. 37

NOTICE.

THE subscriber notifies all persons indebted to him, whose accounts are overdue, that in consequence of the amendment in the Usury Laws, TWELVE PER CENT INTEREST will hereafter be charged.

All accounts due from last year, and not paid immediately will be put in suit for collection.

W. B. READ.
Peterboro', 22nd Sept., 1858. 37

FOR SALE
BY PUBLIC AUCTION
ON TERMS OF EASY PAYMENT,
AT THE COURT HOUSE
IN
PETERBOROUGH,
AT 12 O'CLOCK, NOON, ON Tuesday, 5th Oct. next,
the undermentioned
LOTS,
in the Town of Peterborough, viz:—

NOS. 1 and 2, south of Edinburgh, and east of George Street.
Nos. 1 and 2, north of Edinburgh and east of George Street.
Nos. 1 and 2, south of Antrim and east of George Street.
No. 2, north of Dublin and west of Water Street.
No. 1, north of Antrim and east of George Street.
No. 1, north of Dublin and east of George Street.
No. 2, north of Antrim and west of Water Street.

TITLE.—A Patent Direct from the Crown.

For any further information apply, if by letter post-paid to the proprietor, JAMES HARRISON, Esq., at the office of the Home District Savings Bank, Toronto.

☞ The Lots will be divided to suit purchasers.

1st Sept., 1858. 37—tf.

The Globe Newspaper!

1858-9.

THE success which has attended the publication of the GLOBE NEWSPAPER since its establishment in 1844, is the best certificate of its merits as a public journal, in the estimation of the community. No labour has been spared, and large outlays have from time to time been made to render it a comprehensive and reliable

COMMERCIAL, POLITICAL,
AND FAMILY JOURNAL.

The gratifying result is that it possesses by far the widest circulation and the greatest advertising patronage in British America.

The efforts which have been made in past years to keep pace with the progress of journalism, in other countries will be redoubled in the future. The EDITORIAL CORPS has been strengthened—the staff of REPORTERS enlarged—and contributions of numerous Correspondents, at home and abroad, will give new interest to its columns The English and Foreign News is received at the earliest possible moment by Telegraph and Express. The Proceedings of Public Meetings, of the Law Courts and Municipal Councils are accurately reported by stenographic writers, and no expense is spared in sending corps of Reporters to any part of the country, and transmitting their Reports by Telegraph for publication the following morning. The Debates of the House of Assembly, of each day, are fully and accurately reported in the DAILY EDITION of the following morning, and carefully condensed for the WEEKLY paper. All matters of Trade, Commerce and Navigation—the proceedings of the several Boards of Trade—the arrivals of vessels at Quebec and Inland Ports—and every other subject of interest to Mercantile men is watched with special care and faithfully chronicled and commented on.—The Markets and Prices Current of Great Britain, the United States, and at home, receive special notice. The Agricultural interests command that earnest attention to which their importance entitles them.

The Globe will Continue to Advocate:

The Adoption of Population, without Regard to Locality, as the Basis of Parliamentary Representation.

The Entire Separation of Church and State—the Abolition of all Appropriations of Public Money for Sectarian Purposes; the Repeal of the Jesuits' Estates Act, about Confederation, and all other Questions of Practical Statesmanship, engage his earnest consideration.

National Education—Common School, Grammar School and Collegiate—Free from Sectarianism, and open to all on Equal Terms.

Economy in the Public Expenditure, and a Thorough Reform of the Departmental System.

Uniform Legislation for Both Sections of the Province.

Curtailment of the Power and Patronage of the Executive.

A Free Trade National Policy, so far and so rapidly as the Maintenance of the Public Credit will Permit.

Incorporation of the Hudson's Bay Territory as a Part of Canada.

&c., &c., &c.

THE DAILY GLOBE,

Is $4 per annum, payable strictly in advance.—It is published at four o'clock, every morning, but Sunday, and is despatched by the early trains to all parts of the country. It is a very large sheet, containing a vast amount of news, mercantile intelligence, and general information, of the latest and most interesting character.

Any person sending the Cash for Five DAILY Subscribers, will be entitled to an additional copy FREE.

THE TRI-WEEKLY GLOBE,

Is issued every MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, and FRIDAY, at $3 per annum in advance. It is printed on a large sheet, and in its columns is given, all that appears in the Daily Edition, with the Telegraphic and other news to the latest moment.

Any person sending the Cash for Five TRI-W

BY-LAW No. CIII.

A By-Law to authorize the Mayor of the Town of Peterborough to raise by way of loan the sum of Two Thousand Five Hundred Pounds for the purposes therein mentioned, and to issue Debentures therefor and to provide for the payment thereof.

WHEREAS.—The United Board of School Trustees for the Town of Peterborough have made a demand upon the Town Council of the said Town for the sum of Two Thousand Five Hundred Pounds for the purpose of aiding in the erection and furnishing of a School House for the use of the Grammar and Common Schools of said Town.

And Whereas,—It is desirable and would conduce to the advantage of the Inhabitants of the said Town of Peterborough that such School House should be built and furnished.

And Whereas,—It will require the sum of Four Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Seven Pounds to be raised by a special rate for the payment of such loan and interest for the space of ten years to be computed from the day of now next ensuing until the day of A D., One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Eight, exclusive of the first and last days by annual amounts as follows—that is to say:

For the first year		£310
" second	"	354
" third	"	395
" fourth	"	433
" fifth	"	468
" sixth	"	500
" seventh	"	576
" eighth	"	599
" ninth	"	619
" tenth	"	563

And Whereas,—It is proposed that Debentures to the amount of Three Thousand Five Hundred Pounds shall be issued payable with interest as hereinafter mentioned for the purpose of aiding in the erection and furnishing such School House as aforesaid.

And Whereas,—The amount of the whole rateable property of the said Town of Peterborough amounts to the sum of Sixteen Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-four Pounds one Shilling, according to the Assessment Returns thereof for the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Fifty-seven, being the financial year next preceding the year of the passing of this By-law

And Whereas,—It is necessary for the payment of the interest aforesaid, and for the creation of a sinking fund for the payment of the principal of such loan to raise ten annual special rates in the Pound upon the total value of the whole of the rateable property as hereafter described—viz:

For the year		1d.
1859—Four pence half-penny in the pound.
1860—Five pence	"
1861—Five pence three farthings	"
1862—Six pence one farthing	"
1863—Six pence half-penny	"
1864—Eight pence	"
1865—Eight pence one farthing	"
1866—Eight pence half-penny	"
1867—Nine pence	"
1868—Eight pence	"

for and above and in addition to all other rates and assessments therein imposed for the payment of the said interest and for the creation of a sinking fund for the payment of the principal money of the said Debentures according to the requirements of the statutes in such case made and provided.

And Whereas,—This By-law has been and was approved of by a majority of the duly qualified Municipal Electors of the said Town of Peterborough at a Meeting called and held in the Town Hall, in the said Town of Peterborough, on Saturday the 25th day of September. A. D., 1858, in conformity with a resolution passed by the Municipal Council of the said Town of Peterborough for that purpose and also in conformity with the requirements of section two and the sub-sections thereof of the Act of the Parliament of this Province 16 Vic. cap. 22, in so far as by the said Act of the said Parliament of the said Province 16 Vic. cap. 182, the same is made applicable to all By-laws for the purpose of raising money by any Municipality.

Be it therefore enacted,—By the Town Council of the Town of Peterborough, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same,—That for the purposes aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for, and the Mayor of the said Town of Peterborough for the time being is hereby authorized and required to make and execute Debentures upon the credit of the said Town of Peterborough to the amount of Three Thousand Five Hundred Pounds, in sums not less than fifty pounds, such debentures to be under the common seal of the said Town of Peterborough, signed by the Mayor and countersigned by the Clerk thereof, made out in such manner and form, and payable at such periods not exceeding ten years from and after the day when this By-law shall come into operation as said Mayor shall see fit, and all sums of money so raised by the issue of the said Debentures shall be paid into the hands of the Treasurer of the said Town of Peterborough to be applied by him for the purposes hereinbefore set forth and mentioned and no other.

And be it enacted,—That the interest on such Debentures shall be payable half-yearly at the office of the said Treasurer in the said Town of Peterborough, on the days of and respectively.

And be it enacted,—That this By-law shall come into force and take effect on the day of in the year of our Lord, 1858.

NOTICE.

THE above is a true copy of a By-law which will be taken into consideration by the Town Council of the Town of Peterborough on the expiration of one month from the 2nd day of September, 1858, being the date of the first publication thereof in the Examiner newspaper.

And notice is hereby given that a general meeting of the qualified Municipal Electors of the said Town of Peterborough will be held for the purpose of considering such By-law and for the approving or disapproving of the same on the 20th day of September, 1858, at the hour of 10 o'clock in the forenoon at the Town Hall in the said Town of Peterborough.

J. EDWARDS,
Town Clerk.

Peterborough, August 20, 1858.

SCOTLAND'S AUTHORS.

Arnott's, Rev. Wm.—Laws from Heaven for Life on Earth, or Illustrations of the Book of Proverbs	$1,50
Bonar's Desert of Sinai, 3 plates	1,00
Do. Land of Promise, 5 plates	1,25
Do. Night of Weeping	0,30
Do. Morning of Joy	0,40
Do. Story of Grace	0,40
Do. Truth and Error	0,40
Do. Man, his Religion and his World	0,40
Do. Eternal Day	0,50
Boston's Four-Fold Estate	0,50
Do. Crook in the Lot	0,30
Brewster's—More World's than One	0,60
Brown's Concordance, gilt 20 cts., plain	0,70
Chalmer's Dr., Miscellanies	1,50
Do. Moral Philosophy	0,60
Do. Astronomical Discourses	0,60
Dick, Dr.,—Christian Philosopher	1,00
Duncan's—Tales of the Scottish Peasantry, Illustrated	0,50
Do. Cottage Fireside, Illustrated	0,40
Family Worship—A series of Prayers adapted to Domestic Worship, by one hundred and eighty Clergymen of Scotland, 350 pages	3,00
Gilfillan's Martyrs, Heroes and Bards of the Scottish Covenant	0,60
Guthrie's, Dr., Gospel in Ezekiel	1,00
Do. The City, its Sins and Sorrows	0,50
Hetherington's History of the Church of Scotland up to the disruption	1,50
Howe's Seven Worthies, or Historical account of those who suffered for the Reformation	1,50
Martyrs and Covenanters of Scotland	0,40
Macduff's Memories of Gennesaret	1,00
Do. Bow in the Cloud, and the First Resurrection	0,40
Do. Morning and Night Watches	0,60
Do. Footsteps of St. Paul, with plates	1,00
Do Words of Jesus	0,40
Do Mind of Jesus	0,40
Do Family Prayers	0,75
Do. Great Journey or Pilgrimage to Mount Zion	0,30
Do. Faithful Promiser and After Shower	0,25
Do. Memories of Bethany	0,60
Mabel Grant,—A Highland Story	0,30
McCheyne's Life, Letters, Lectures and Songs of Zion	1,50
McCosh's Method of Divine Government	2,00
Monteith's, Mrs.,—Lays of the Kirk and Covenant	0,30
Paterson's Infidelity, its Aspect, Causes, and Agencies	1,00
Pollok's Tales of the Covenanters	0,30
Sketch's Birds—The Choicest productions of the Scottish Poets with Biographies	3,00
Tweddell's Gowks of Scotland	1,00
Wardlaw on Miracles	0,75
Wilson's Tales and Sketches of Scottish Life, Illustrated	0,75
Do. Life, Genius and Writings of the Rich Harry of Scotland

SAWERS & MURRAY,
College st, Peterboro'.

August 5, 1858. 29

Miscellaneous.

LETTER AND NOTE PAPERS.

FOOLSCAP and Blue Colors, ruled and plain.—Envelopes, all sizes and qualities to match. A very complete stock on hand. Merchants supplied on liberal terms.

SAWERS & MURRAY,
Stationers, &c., Peterboro'.

PETERBOROUGH LIVERY STABLE

THE SUBSCRIBER begs to inform the public that he is always ready to furnish them with horses, sleighs, carriages, and every thing required at a Livery, on the shortest notice, and on reasonable terms. His horses are in fine condition, and everything about his establishment is in good order.

He very reluctantly has to withdraw from the long credit system, and begs all who may favor him with their patronage, to remember that he can only continue to accommodate the public, by them, in turn, enabling him to keep up his business, that is, by ready pay.

THOS. EASTLAND.

Peterboro Livery Stables, Hunter Street, Jan. 1st, 1858. 1

UNION HOTEL. Peterborough.

GEORGE ALLEN

RESPECTFULLY intimates to his friends and the public generally, that his establishment is still open for the reception of guests in his usual good style.

The house is new and beautifully situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, where travellers will find a quiet and desirable retreat.

A limited number of respectable BOARDERS can be accommodated.

Good Stables and Sheds

On the premises. An Ostlerin attendance, who will give the best attention to horses entrusted to his care.

Peterborough, Oct. 20th 1857. 42.

NORTH AMERICAN HOTEL.

DIVISION STREET, COBOURG.

THE above Hotel having been recently repaired, painted, and newly fitted up, and being now entirely complete in all its appointments, is now opened for the reception of the travelling public.

The House is commodious, and neither pains nor expense will be spared to make it one of the best in the Province.

The Liquors are of the best brands, and the Larder will be constantly supplied with all the delicacies of the Season.

The Stables are commodious, and an attentive Ostler is always in attendance.

The proprietor pledges himself that every attention will be paid to the wants of his guests.

Omnibusses will attend at the Cars and Boats to carry passengers to the Hotel free of charge.

RALPH FRANCIS,
Proprietor,
Cobourg, August, 1857. 35

VALUABLE WORKS.

AMONGST a large assortment of Valuable Books, the subscribers now offer for sale the following useful and interesting works, suitable as appropriate presents to Clergymen or Sabbath School Teachers, or as useful and instructive additions to the Family Library, viz:

KITTO'S DAILY BIBLE ILLUSTRATIONS;—being Original Readings from Sacred History, Biography, Geography, Antiquities and Theology. Morning and Evening Series; complete in 8 volumes; uniform cloth binding,—$1 each volume.

ALEYN'S EVIDENCES OF CHRISTIANITY —Complete $1 25.

RYLE'S, J. C., EXPOSITORY THOUGHTS ON THE GOSPEL,—For Family and Private use, with the Text complete; Matthew and Mark published, at $1 each volume.

BEECHER'S, HENRY W., LIFE THOUGHTS —New edition. $1.

CECIL'S REMAINS & MISCELLANIES—$1.

BAYNE'S ESSAYS IN BIOGRAPHY AND CRITICISM—$1 25.

HALSEY'S LITERARY ATTRACTIONS OF THE BIBLE; or a plea for the Word of God considered as a classic—$1 25.

BALDWIN'S REPRESENTATIVE WOMEN,—from Eve the wife of the first, to Mary the mother of the second Adam,—$1.

CHEEVER'S LECTURES ON THE PILGRIM'S PROGRESS,—$1.

LECTURES delivered in London to the Young Men's Christian Association,—$1.

SAWERS & MURRAY,
NEW BOOK STORE, GEORGE STREET.
Peterboro', Sept. 8, 1858.

FARM FOR SALE

THE South 70 acres of the west half of the 23rd lot in the 6th Concession of Smith.—The land is of the best quality, well fenced and in good cultivation, upwards of 50 acres being cleared of stumps and stones, with a good young orchard bearing fruit. There are on the premises

A New Frame Barn, a Good Log Barn,

Stables and Sheds. Also two Good Wells. For further particulars apply to the proprietor,

PATRICK WOOD.

Smith, Sept. 7, 1858.

READ! READ!!

SAM Slick's Nature and Human Nature ..... 50 cents.
Sam Slick's Sayings and Doings ..... 50 "
Sam Slick in England, or the Attache ..... 50 "
Mrs. Partington's Carpet Bag of Fun ..... 50 "
Tom Cringles' Log ..... 75 "
The Cruise of the Midge ..... 75 "
Yankee Notions for September ..... 12½ "

And a host of other capital things at

SAWERS & MURRAY'S BOOK STORE.
Peterboro', August 26, 1858.

FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE AND WELL SITUATED PROPERTY, being a part of Lot No. 12 in the 7th Concession of Smith, and within the Village of Bridgenorth, containing eight and one quarter acres; bounded on the front by the Lake, and on the rear by the Main Road leading from Peterborough to Harvey, and situated between Mr. S. Kelly's Mills and the Wharf on Dunbar's Landing. There are on the premises a good substantial HOUSE AND BARN. An undisputed title can be given.

For further particulars apply to the owner on the premises.

JANE HARRINGTON.

Bridgenorth, Sept. 10, 1858. 36

NOTICE.

ALL Persons indebted to the Subscriber are requested to make immediate payment and SAVE COSTS, as on all Notes and Accounts over due, interest will be charged at the rate of 12½ per cent per annum from this date.

WILLIAM EASTLAND.

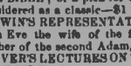
Peterboro', Sept. 1, 1858. 36—4t

LUMBER.

THE Subscribers offer for Sale 200,000 Feet of SELECTED CULLS AND STRIPS, on reasonable terms, in quantities to suit purchasers.

SHAW & WAIT.

Peterboro', Sept. 13, 1858. 36—4t



THE STEAMER "FLY,"

HAS resumed her regular trips between LINDSAY AND MUD LAKE; leaving Kelly's Wharf, Mud Lake, on Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings at 9 A. M., and Lindsay on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday mornings at 8 A. M.

Peterboro', Sept. 16, 1858.

BOY WANTED.

A SMART INTELLIGENT BOY about 13 or 14 years of age is wanted for the Book and Stationery business. Apply at the Store of

SAWERS & MURRAY.

Peterboro', Sept. 13, 1858. 3-4t

Insurances.

TIMES AND BEACON
ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....£250,000 STG.

£14,000 PAID UP.

HEAD OFFICE IN CANADA, KINGSTON, C.W.

CANADA BOARD OF DIRECTORS OR TRUSTEES:
The HON. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES MORTON, Esq., Kingston.

DIRECTORS.

Chairman—M. U. STRANGE, Esq.

Vice Chairman—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.

JAMES MORTON, Esq., | A.J. McDONELL, Esq.
JOHN MOWAT, Esq., | JAMES HARDY, Esq

AUDITORS.

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Esq., Kingston,
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.

Standing Counsel—A.J. MACDONELL, Esq.

Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.

LOCAL MANAGER:
W. CLUXTON, Peterboro'.
Peterboro', March 21, 1857. 13.

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON
Fire & Life Insurance Co.

CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.

Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.

RESPONSIBILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS UNLIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTREAL.

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on almost every description of property, at as reasonable rates as any other responsible office. Losses paid without reference to the Old Country.

W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.
Peterboro.' March 24th, 1857. 12

WESTERN
Insurance Company.

CAPITAL £500,000.

Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF
FIRE & MARINE ASSURANCE
BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',
W. CLUXTON.
Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

UNITY FIRE AND UNITY GENERAL
INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS OF ENGLAND.

FOR every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.

CAPITAL £2,500,000 Sterling.

CHIEF OFFICE,—Unity Buildings, Canon St., London. Agent for Peterboro',

W. EASTLAND.

Peterboro', July, 1856.

Provincial Insurance Company.

OF TORONTO, C. W.

Subscribed Capital, $1,897,000. Paid up Capital, $430,200.

PRESIDENT, J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
VICE-PRESIDENT, HON. J. H. CAMERON.

Directors.

HON. W. R. ROBINSON.
GEO. DUGGAN, JR., Esq.
J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
WM. L. PERRIN, Esq.
HON. J. H. CAMERON.
CAPT. P. WALLACE.
E. F. WHITTEMORE, Esq.
GEO. CRAWFORD, Esq.
JOHN CARRUTHERS, Esq., M.P.P.
A. M. CLARKE, Esq., M.D.
DUNCAN MCDONNELL, Esq.

MANAGER AND SECRETARY:
HON. J. LEANDER STARR.
ASSISTANT SECRETARY:
J. JOSEPA WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK.—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS:—Messrs. DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE:
TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurance business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as in any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Brokers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.

Toronto, April 20, 1858. 42

THE COLONIAL
Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

HEAD OFFICE—Edinburgh, Scotland, and MONTREAL, CANADA.

Proposals for assurance disposed of in Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Adviser for Peterboro,—Dr. MacNab.

AGENT,
W. B. READ.
Peterboro', July 29th, 1857. 30

ALL ABOARD!

THE SUBSCRIBER respectfully begs leave to announce to the Public, that his House at Bridgenorth, (Mud Lake) is always supplied with the best accommodation and entertainment for travellers.

GOOD STABLING, DRIVING HOUSE, YARD ROOM AND STORAGE.

He also runs a STAGE to and from Peterboro' in connection with the Boats, leaving McGregor's Hotel, Peterboro', at half-past seven, A. M., to meet the boats at Bridgenorth, returning to Peterboro' on the arrival of the Boats, about 4 o'clock, P. M.

For freight or passage, enquire at McGregor's Hotel, Peterboro', or at the Subscribers Hotel, Bridgenorth. Fare each way 1s. 10½d.

JOHN POPE.

Bridgenorth June 12, 1858.

AMERICAN HOTEL. PETERBORO'.

THE undersigned, Proprietor, begs to return his sincere thanks to the travelling community and the country as well as the townspeople, for the very handsome support his Hotel has received from them. He hopes by continued attention to their wants, and careful management of the House to retain the successful business which has attended his previous efforts

The Bar

Will always be stocked with the best Liquors and Cigars.

Good care taken in selection of servants and Omnibus Coaches always in attendance at the stables.

Passengers to or to the cars conveyed free, and attended to promptly.

ROBERT HENDERSON.

Peterboro', 1858. 3-6t

Business Notices.

SPLENDID INVESTMENT.

FOR SALE,

LOT No. 9, West of George Street, and South of Charlotte Street, adjoining the Port Hope and Peterboro' Railroad Depot, having three good buildings on it the situation is adapted to any public business. Those who desire to profit by such a rare chance, will please address the undersigned, by letter, (post-paid) to Lindsay.

N. B.—It will be sold altogether or in building lots, to suit purchasers.

CHARLES McCARTHY.

Peterboro' July 29, 1858. 29-tf

EVERY SCOTCHMAN

SHOULD read the "Scottish American Journal," published weekly. It contains the best summary of old country news of any paper published in this country, and has besides a series of articles on the "Highland Bonnets," or Achievement of the Scottish Regiments in India and elsewhere. For sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'. Price $2,50 per year in advance, or 3d per single number.

NOTICE.

THE PARTNERSHIP existing between us, and known as the firm of Burst & Denne is this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts due to, and by, the said firm, will be settled by Henry Denne, who will grant receipts for the same.

WALTER HURST,
HENRY DENNE.

The business will hereafter be carried on by W. Hurst, who respectfully solicits a share of the Public patronage.

15 the Mills, Peterboro',
July 20, 1858. 28

NOTICE

IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Partnership lately subsisting between HENRY MORROW & ALEX. MORROW, both of the town of Peterboro', under the firm of Morrow & Brother, was this day dissolved by mutual consent

All debts owing to the said partners will be received by the said Henry Morrow and all debts due by the said firm will be paid by him.

HENRY MORROW,
ALEX. MORROW.

Peterboro', July 1st, 1858.

IN REFERENCE TO THE ABOVE, I would take the opportunity to inform my friends and the public that I will continue the business carried on by the firm in the same premises, and I hope by strict attention to business, and a thorough knowledge of the wants of my customers, to merit and receive a continuance of the patronage so liberally extended to the late firm.

HENRY MORROW.

Peterboro', July 1st, 1858. 26

LOOK OUT!

SAVE YOUR MONEY

AND REMEMBER THIS,—

"ONE DOLLAR SAVED IS TWO EARNED."

IT is a certain fact which we offer to prove to any purchaser who would wish to visit our immense Stock of

Summer Ready-made Clothing,

That we will offer for sale, (to begin the 16th instant,) at 25 per cent. under the ordinary prices.

SMALL COATS, PANTS & VESTS, FOR BOYS, Of all descriptions, may be had also.

The undersigned, in calling the public attention, will not fail to give

CHEAP BARGAINS,

To any who patronise them.

TERMS—STRICTLY CASH.

F. & L. LEMAY.

Peterborough, July 13, 1858. 27

ROOM PAPER, PAINTING, &c.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, at his shop on Brock Street, a large and varied assortment of Room Paper, among which will be found patters of English, French and American manufacture, which he has just received, and which he will sell at the lowest possible price, for ready pay, or short approved credit.

He keeps constantly a number of hands, who can be employed in

PAPER HANGING!

And he recommends his Stock and Workmanship to the public.

The Papers range in price from 5d per Roll, up to 17s 6d per roll, and from their great variety, he is sure the most fastidious will find their choice.

The Painting, Glazing and Finishing business carried on as usual.

ROBERT STEVENSON.

Brock Street, Peterboro, April 8, 1858. 41

The only Reliable Route to Peterborough

BY RAILWAY.

P. H. L. & B. RAILWAY,
AND
Peterborough Section.

NEW ARRANGEMENTS.

ON and after WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 18th 1858, Trains will run as follows:—

Leave Lindsay, 6 40 A. M., arrive at Port Hope, 10 10 A. M.

Leave Port Hope, 2 10 P. M., arrive at Lindsay, 5 40 P. M.

Leave Port Hope, 12 A. M., arrive at Peterborough, 2 P. M.

Leave Port Hope, 7 30 P. M., arrive at Peterborough, 9 40 P. M.

Leave Peterborough, 7 A M., arrive at Port Hope 9 10 A. M.

Leave Peterborough 2 50 P. M., arrive at Port Hope, 5 P. M.

Trains run by Port Hope time.

All the above Trains run in connection with Grand Trunk Railway, East and West The splendid Steamer Maple Leaf, also runs in connection with P. H. L. & B. Railway, leaving Port Hope on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, at 11 a. m., arriving at Rochester at 6 p. m., in time for evening Trains to New York, Boston and Philadelphia, and leaves Rochester on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, at 11 a m., arriving at Port Hope at 6 p. m. in time for passengers to reach Peterboro' same day.

Port Hope, August 16, 1858. 33

NOTICE.

FARMERS AND OTHERS, trading in produce, liable to Market fees, are hereby notified that I have purchased the right to collect such fees, under the Market By-law by which they are authorized, and in order to conform to the Market rules, all persons interested are respectfully requested to go of their own accord to the Market Square, and give no unnecessary trouble by attempted dodging. The law will be enforced with the utmost rigor.

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.

Peterboro', Aug. 4th, 1858.

THE "COLONIST."

THE "COLONIST" HAS A BONA-FIDE Circulation of

TWELVE THOUSAND,

And is therefore

THE BEST ADVERTISING MEDIUM IN CANADA.

TERMS:

DAILY—4d a line for first insertion, and 1d a line for each subsequent insertion.

WEEKLY—6d a line for first insertion, and 2d a line for each subsequent insertion.

N. B.—Postmasters who send advertisements on these terms, will have a commission of 15 per cent allowed them.

The terms of Subscription to the DAILY COLONIST, are six dollars a year, payable in advance. For the WEEKLY, the price is a dollar and a-half, also payable in advance. For clubs of ten, the Weekly will be supplied at one dollar a year. 35

Farms, &c., For Sale.

PROPERTY IN OMEMEE FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, in the flourishing Village of Omemee, on the Port Hope & Lindsay Railroad, village Lot No. 10, north side of King street, containing 1 acre of land.—The buildings consist of a frame dwelling house and store, now occupied by Mr. John Henderson, a dwelling house adjoining, also a large workshop, and stabling, with every other convenience attached. The buildings are all new, and well put up.

If the above is not disposed of before 20th of OCTOBER, NEXT, it will then be sold to the highest bidder, by PUBLIC AUCTION.

THE TERMS are, £200 cash, or a bankable note the remainder in installments as may be agreed upon.

For further particulars apply to John Henderson, on the premises, or to the undersigned proprietor, in Otonabee, or at the Examiner office, in Peterboro'.

There will be no difficulty as to title.

JOSHUA DAWSON.

19th Lot, 12th Concession, Otonabee, Aug. 12, 1858. 31

FOR SALE.

ONE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND IN THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH.

THAT excellent farm of land, situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, being composed of the south parts of lots Nos. 27 and 28, in the 6th Concession of Smith, 6 miles from Peterborough, is offered for sale. The farm is thoroughly improved; has a first rate house, barn, &c., and a capital water frontage. The soil is equal to any in that section of country.

For particulars of price and terms apply to the proprietor in Peterborough.

A. SAWERS.

Smith, July 29, 1858.

FARM FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale East half 6 in 7th con. and East half of 7 in 7th con. Dummer, containing 100 acres, of which

80 ARE CLEARED

In good cultivation and well fenced; a good

CEDAR LOG HOUSE,

And two large barns, with other good out houses, and a superior well close at hand.

The property is three miles from

NORWOOD.

On an excellent road, and will be sold for £2 10s an acre. From one third to one half to be paid down, the payment of the balance as agreed upon.

HENRY GARDNER.

Dummer, July 10th 1857. 28.

VALUABLE FARM, SAW-MILL, FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber is desirous of selling his property, consisting of 250 acres, 50 of which are under cultivation, comprising a

FINE YOUNG GRAFTED ORCHARD,

There is an excellent DWELLING HOUSE, with Barns, Sheds, and all other necessary Out-Houses, a good water

SAW MILL,

in good running order. The premises consist of Lot No. 9, and south-east quarter of Lot No. 8, in the 11th Concession of the Township of Monaghan. The Farm is one of the finest in the County, and most favorably situated on the Gravel Road, two miles from Peterboro. The wood land consists of hardwood and cedar, and the whole lot is furnished with a good supply of running water.

For further particulars as to terms, &c., apply on the Premises to

W. W. BOSWELL,

Peterboro, Sept. 8, 1857. 36

TO LET.

TWO NEW BRICK STORES fronting on George Street, one for Dry Goods, the other for Groceries. Both finished in the newest and finest style of workmanship, and elegantly painted and varnished, equal to any in Town; the basement stories are well lighted and perfectly dry, and warranted against frost. Application to be made to the proprietor on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.

Peterboro', Feb. 1st, 1858. 5

TO LET.

That Splendid Three Story Brick Store, lately occupied by Mr. E. Peplow on Hunter Street.

Also 18 Town Lots for sale. Terms easy.

Apply to the Subscriber on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.

Peterboro', June 2, 1858. 22

Hardware.

New Stove Warehouse !!!

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform their friends and the Public that they have entered into Partnership as Stove-Dealers, Tinsmiths, &c., and respectfully invite public inspection to their new styles of Stoves, consisting in part of

The Improved Burr,
The Star of the West,
The Wide World,
The Commodore,
The Improved Canadian Farmer,
The Buffalo,
The Black Rover,
The King Stove,
The Premium.

Besides a variety of Parlor and Plate Stoves. They also receive orders for all kinds of

COPPER, SHEET-IRON AND TIN WORK.

Which their Patrons may depend upon getting done in a manner which will give the greatest satisfaction.

A large stock of TIN-WARE, STOVE-PIPES, and other such articles belonging to their business, kept constantly on hand.

Their premises are on George Street, lately occupied by Messrs. Harvey & Thomson, and next door to Messrs. Glover & Robinson

BIGELOW & ROBINSON.

Peterboro', October 27, 1857. 43

AXES BY STEAM

THE subscriber invites public attention to his increased facility of making the

SUPERIOR AXES

he has so long supplied to the community, and begs to assure his patrons that he will be unremitting in his efforts to retain for his work the good reputation it has hitherto enjoyed. He offers

Narrow and Broad Axes,

AND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF

EDGE TOOLS,

WHOLESALE and RETAIL, as cheap as they can be purchased here or in any other market, and of a quality that cannot be surpassed.

His premises are located on GEORGE ST., opposite the OLD BURYING GROUND, and to enable him to supply his manufactures in sufficient quantity, send at modern prices, he has called in steam power to his assistance.

Axes Jumped and Ground in quick order,

W. MOCOOK.

Peterboro', Sept. 23, 1857.

TO BE LET.

A FARM in Otonabee, No. 11, 14 Con., 75 Acres cleared; an Orchard, good dwelling house, Barns, Stables, &c., within ten minutes walk of the Rowan Stables, the land is of the first quality.

Apply on the Examiner Office.

Peterboro', 23rd Sept., 1858. 37-3

Miscellaneous.

HATS! HATS!

THE New York and Canadian Style of Hats is now ready for inspection. Also, a large assortment of Fur Hats and Cloth Caps, &c., &c.

The Trade Supplied as Usual.

A. SECOR,
Hatter, &c.
Cobourg, March 19, 1858. 12

CABINET ROOMS RE OPENED!

THE subscriber informs his old customers and the public generally, that he has recovered from the effects of the late fire, and has erected a new building on the old site which he has fitted up as a show room. He is daily receiving and making up a choice assortment of

FURNITURE & CABINET WARE,

Of every description, which, as usual, he offers at moderate prices.

He has removed his workshop to the building just erected by Mr. Mocock, where by the use of Steam and the most recent improvements in

LABOUR SAVING MACHINERY,

He will be prepared to manufacture for sale or to order every description of Furniture, at prices unprecedent, in this Town.

W. Y. SWAYNE.

Peterboro', July 8th, 1857. 18.

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE LOT OF LAND, on the Gravel Road, about 3 miles from Peterborough, containing 35 acres, being part of the eastern portion of the North-East quarter of Lot No. 7, 11th Concession North Monaghan, on the West of John Green's Tavern, and adjoining it. Apply to the Subscriber,

WILLIAM BELL.

Monaghan, Jan. 11, 1837. 2

HORSE SHOEING.

BARNARD McGARRITY and WILLIAM MILLER, beg to inform the public, that their horse shoeing prices are as follows:—

A full set, new 6s,

Each remove 6d.

their terms are, if not Cash, well-approved credit.

Peterborough, Jan. 1st, 1858. 1

PERIODICALS, MAGAZINES, &C.

THE subscribers receive every Saturday the Weekly Periodicals in the following list, and on the third Saturday of each month the Monthlies for the next ensuing month, all of which they are prepared to supply on the annexed terms.

Orders respectfully solicited.

PER YEAR.		PER NO.
$3,25 ..	New York Ledger	0s 3d.
3,50 ..	Harper's Weekly	0 3½
3,00 ..	Ballou's Pictorial	0 3
3,25 ..	Waverly Magazine	0 4
1,50 ..	Yankee Notions	0 1½
2,50 ..	New York Clipper	0 3½
2,50 ..	Flag of Our Union	0 3½
2,50 ..	Scottish Amer. Journal	0 3
3,25 ..	Leslie's Illustrated	0 4
9,00 ..	Illustrated London News	1 0
5,50 ..	" " Times	0 7½
5,50 ..	Punch	0 7½
3,00 ..	Harper's Magazine	1 3
3,00 ..	Household Words	1 3
2,00 ..	Chamber's Journal	1 0
2,20 ..	Mrs. Stephen's Journal	1 0
2,20 ..	Peterson's Journal	1 0
3,00 ..	Godey's Lady's Book	1 3
3,00 ..	Atlantic Monthly	1 3
2,50 ..	New York Mercury	0 3
2,50 ..	" " Weekly	0 3
2,50 ..	Rural New Yorker	0 3

YEARLY SUBSCRIPTIONS
MUST BE STRICTLY

In Advance.

Back Nos. must be paid for when ordered.

SAWERS & MURRAY.

Peterboro', June 23, 1858. 2

LOOK HERE.

ONLY ONE QUARTER DOLLAR!
FOR THE
VICTORIA PAPETERIE,
OR
CHEAP PACKET OF WRITING MATERIALS
WHICH CONTAINS

12 Sheets fine ruled Letter paper usually sold for		7½d
12 Sheets fine ruled Note paper	"	4
12 Large sized Envelopes adhesive	"	3
12 Note " " "	"	2
3 Steel Pens		1
1 Holder		1
1 Pencil		1
1 Sheet Blotting paper		1
Making a total of		1s 3d.

NOW SOLD FOR
ONE QUARTER DOLLAR,
BY
SAWERS & MURRAY.
AT THE
NEW BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE,
Burnham's Block George-st, Peterborough.

June 22nd, 1858. 24

FRESH TEAS.

JUST RECEIVED from the Ship "Cambalo," direct from China, an assortment of

Hyson, Young Hyson.
Gunpowder, Twankay.

S. E. CURRY, & Co.

Peterboro', 29th June, 1858. 25

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

THE attention of Clergymen, Teachers, and others interested in Sunday Schools is respectfully invited to our large and varied assortment of

Reward Books, Tickets, Admission Cards, &c., &c., &c.,

Especially adapted for Sunday Schools, and which we will sell on the best possible terms.

A CALL SOLICITED,

SAWERS & MURRAY,
NEW BOOK AND STATIONARY STORE,
Burnham's Block, George Street Peterboro'.

DR. J. B. ALFORD'S ECLECTIC, MEDICAL & SURGICAL OFFICE.

CORNER OF HUNTER AND ATHOLE STREETS,
Near the Residence of James Hall, Esq.,
PETERBOROUGH.

DR. A. would announce to the citizens of Peterborough and vicinity, that he has located in this place for the purpose of attending to the duties of his profession. His system of treatment is purely Eclectic, using only those agents which are safe and reliable. INVALIDS however despairing, are invited to call, as no expense will be incurred without a corresponding prospect of recovery.

Residence—American Hotel.

Peterboro', Oct, 16, 1857. 41

FARM FOR SALE.

EAST Half Lot No. 14, in the 12th Concession of Asphodel, three miles from the Village of Norwood. There are fifty acres cleared, and good Stabling, and a never-failing spring of pure water upon the premises. The Land is of a superior quality.

Terms, Liberal.

For further particulars apply to James Hogan, Otonabee, or upon the premises, to

W. B. SCOTT

Asphodel, 29th June, 1858. 24tf

Miscellaneous.

BY-LAW, No.—

A By-Law to authorize the Warden of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria to issue Debentures for, and to raise by way of Loan the sum of Six Thousand Pounds for the purposes therein mentioned.

WHEREAS it is desirable to raise by loan on the credit of this Municipality the sum of Six Thousand Pounds for constructing and repairing the Roads and Bridges in the said United Counties.

And Whereas—It will require the sum of Seven Thousand Nine Hundred and Eighty Pounds to be raised by a special rate for the payment of such loan and interest for the space of ten years, to be computed from the fifth day of October now next ensuing, until the fifth day of October A. D. One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Eight exclusive of the first and last days by annual amounts as follows—that is to say,

For the first year—Nine Hundred and Sixty Pounds.

For the second year—Nine Hund

OCTOBER

1858

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND
Ornamental.----Bronzing,
&c., &c., &c.,
Neatly executed, on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the
EXAMINER AND TIMES JOB ROOMS
Burnham's Block,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1858.

Volume 3.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 39.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Are Two Shillings in Advance, for One Year; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Six Lines, and under, first insertion	£0	2	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	9
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0	3	9
Each subsequent insertion	0	1	3
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0	0	5
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	1

☞ Advertisements without special instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognized.

Business Directory.

MESSRS. FITZGERALD & DENNAN,
PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, CIVIL ENGINEERS AND LAND AGENTS. Office in Scott's Chambers, corner of George and Simcoe Streets, Toronto. F. & D. having lately surveyed the million of eight new Townships now included in this County will be happy to give any information to intending settlers. 34

MR. DENNISTOUN,
BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

E. BURNHAM,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. H. J. Vinard, Esq.

W. P. RUSSELL,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, &c. &c., &c.
Peterboro', March 16th, 1856.

DR. HOLYWELL,
HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Rubidge's.
Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,
SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Petersboro' West.

ALBRO & VINDIN,
Commission, Shipping, Forwarding
AND GENERAL AGENTS,
Lumber Merchants, &c.,
Port Hope, C. W.
OFFICE—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets.

MESSRS. STEWART,
ARCHITECTS, Engineers, Land Surveyors, and Land Agents. Office, Mill Street, Port Hope.
GEO. A. STEWART.
CHAS. E. STEWART.
Port Hope, May 22, 1857. 21.

JOHN HAYDEN,
Importer of Manilla and Pier Looking-Glasses, Window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.
King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 35—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.
INTEREST will be allowed on deposits as this agency as per agreement.
Petersboro', May 25th, 1857. 22

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD,
PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.
COMMUNICATION THROUGH THE POST OFFICE, Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S
FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.
Port Hope, Sept. 20, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,
HUNTER STREET, PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST.
MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.
Peterboro', Sept. 2, 1856. 3

BOOKSELLERS AND STATIONERS.
SAWERS & MURRAY,
HAVE always on hand a complete assortment of Books in every department of Literature; Serious Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, &c., &c.
New Book and Stationery Store,
22 Burnham's Block, George-st.

A. MERCER & SONS,
TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.
Peterboro', June 5, 1856. 23—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.
A. MUNRO, Agent.
May, 1858. 19

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,
ARCHITECT, Civil Engineer, &c., Scott's Chambers, Church Street.
Peterboro', July 23, 1858. 29

QUARRY TO LET,
Near Peterborough.
THE Subscriber offers for a term of years, the Quarry on the river side, above the residence of Charles Dunlop, Esq. The bridge in contemplation to cross the river will bring the Quarry within half a mile of the centre of the town. The stone is of a superior quality, and is easily worked.
For Terms and other particulars, apply to Thomas Stinson, Douro, or
GEORGE A. STEWART,
Port Hope.
Peterborough, July 10, 1856. 27

Notice to the Asthmatical.
Asthma Cured for $10!

Overland to Fraser River.

Public attention is at present directed, on both sides of the Atlantic, to the subject of an overland route to the gold regions of British Columbia. In connection with the question of a Pacific railroad, however, the discussion, which has chiefly taken that direction, has reference to an enterprise that can scarcely be regarded as one of immediate interest. A railway over more than two thousand miles of unsettled territory, which is about the distance from Minesota to Vancouver's Island, is a scheme not likely to be realized for a good many years to come; and meanwhile we are in want of a less expensive, if less speedy mode of transit, which, without loss of time, may at once establish overland communication with the remote West, and afford facilities for the settlement of the intervening region. This is a matter of present and practical interest, and the preliminary surveys being now nearly completed, we may approach the consideration of the undertaking as one that should be entered on without further delay.

The territories of Red River and Saskatchewan, comprising the vast fertile prairies of the Northwest, may be reached either by a Canadian route from Lake Superior, or by way of St. Paul, Minesota. By the latter route the access seems to be the most easy and natural, and the Hudson Bay Company have now resolved to import their goods by this line of transit next season, the Right Hon. Edward Ellice, Sir George Simpson, and Dr. Rae having been at St. Paul within the last few days, with a view to making the necessary arrangements. Parties resident in the locality, some of whom we have had an opportunity of meeting in New York during the past week, are taking active measures to open the route. A steamer is to be placed on the Red River at Breckenridge, between two and three hundred miles to the south of the American line, in the course of the ensuing winter; and next summer it will make the passage between that point and the Red River settlement. Meanwhile, the Northwest Transportation Company, located at Toronto, are prepared to take advantage of the first movements of the Canadian or the British Government, whichever may undertake the task, for opening up the line from Fort William to Red River. As we stated last week, above three hundred miles of road will have to be constructed in this direction. There is a hundred and sixty miles of navigation on the route—at Rainy Lake and Rainy River, on which the Company are prepared to run two small steamers, and, as our readers are aware, they have a steamer already on the line from Collingwood to Fort William.

We are thus brought to Red River by two distinct routes, one from the United States, and the other exclusively over British territory. At this point the two parties propose to combine operations with the view of establishing a line of steamers on the lower part of Red River, Lake Winnipeg, and the Saskatchewan, to the head of navigation on the last mentioned stream. The distance by water is believed to be about fifteen hundred miles, with only a single interruption near the mouth of the Saskatchewan; and Sir George Simpson states that the water in the rapids there is sufficiently deep to admit of a steamer being drawn over. After the lapse of another season, therefore, there will probably be at least three steamers on the line from Minesota to the foot of the Rocky Mountains, one on Red River, another on Lake Winnipeg, and a third on the Saskatchewan. Parties desirous of proceeding overland next summer will have to travel from Red River by the Hudson's Bay route across the plains, by way of Assiniboine, in which direction the Company have several trading posts, at which guides and provisions can be obtained. This is a shorter road than the other by nearly a half, but the conveyance by steam will, of course, supersede it.

There are two branches of the Saskatchewan, and the northern branch is the one preferred for navigation by those who have given attention to the subject, for this reason among others, that it is the most direct line to the gold regions. This opinion is confirmed by the remarks recently made by Governor Douglas in addressing the miners at Victoria. He stated that north, and south of Fraser River he believed there were extensive gold fields of great value. Now, on looking at a map of that district, it will be seen that this region lies northwest of Edmonton House, which is at the head of navigation on North Saskatchewan. The distance from the station is certainly not more than two hundred miles, and, from the statement of Governor Douglas, the probability is that gold is to be found much nearer, and, indeed, close to the water-shed of the mountains where the feeders of the Saskatchewan and Thompson rivers rise within a few miles of each other. At this point there is a well-known pass between Mount Hooker and Mount Brown, which is traversed on horseback. According to one of the witnesses before the Parliamentary Committee—an employee of the Hudson's Bay Company—the journey through the mountains occupies three days; and at the western side there is a stretch of table land sloping down in the direction of Thompson and Fraser rivers.

From this sketch it will be apparent that all that is necessary to complete the overland communication with the gold regions, both for passengers and goods, is a road through the Rocky Mountains at the place just referred to. There is no other way of getting across, except by the Kootenais Pass, which is a long way to the south, and cut to the direction of the gold region; or by the head waters of the Peace River, which are further north than the sources of Fraser River. The Pass between Mount Hooker and Mount Brown, is on the direct line not merely to the gold fields, but also to Victoria, by the route indicated by Governor Douglas as the most advisable for the miners to follow in proceeding from the Pacific coast. The witness we have just quoted represents the passage as difficult, but his testimony throughout is so greatly himself that on this point, we cannot accept his opinion as of any value. We could just as soon credit his statement that Mount Hooker is 24,000 feet high, when it is well established that the height of the Rocky Mountains, in that quarter, does not reach exceed 6,000; or that the prairies of the Saskatchewan are covered with moss and marsh, in place of the most luxuriant grass, as we know to be the case. Besides, we have other authority with which to contradict this opinion. The pass has been traversed hundreds of times, and individuals who have frequently gone through give quite a different account of it from this witness, whose evidence, from beginning to end, is a tissue of unscrupulous misrepresentation too gross to serve the purpose for which it was given. It is believed that the construction of a road through this pass would be a work of no difficulty, that it would be easier, indeed, and less expensive than making the road from Fort William. According to the estimate of Mr. Dawson, the Surveyor, the latter work, extending to three hundred miles, would only cost £100,000. Allowing the same amount for the shorter distance from Edmonton to Thompson River, the entire outlay necessary to be incurred by the British and Canadian Governments in opening the communication from Lake Superior to the other side of the Rocky Mountains, will only amount to about £200,000. An undertaking of such great importance, and so little cost, cannot be entered on too soon; and from the excellent spirit shown by the present Colonial Secretary with reference to British Columbia, we believe that no unnecessary delay will occur in doing the little that Government requires to do towards affording the means of communication with the Pacific. Private and combined enterprise from Canada and Minesota will do the rest—will put steamers on the lakes, erect stations on the roadside, and afford every other facility for travel. Settlers will rush in as soon as the roads are opened, or even before then, and ere many years are over we have no doubt there will be numerous thriving communications in this great central region, more especially towards the neighbourhood of the Rocky Mountains, where the soil is fertile and the climate genial, and where, from proximity to the gold regions, an extensive and lucrative trade must inevitably spring up in grain, cattle, lumber, coal—in all the means of subsistence, in short, for which gold miners have usually to pay the highest prices, and which these western plains can produce in unlimited abundance.

Supposing the road ... ers plying, the British mails, as we mentioned ... could be carried by the Overland line quicker than by way of Panama. Let us look into the details, and in estimating the time required we proceed on the assumption that the British Government, with such an object in view, would construct good roads, and be as liberal with the mail contractors in this as in other cases, so as to enable them to secure the utmost speed. We shall take the line from Collingwood, as the preference will of course be given to a route which passes entirely through British territory, leaving the American Government to look after this side of the line.

Collingwood to Fort William	700 miles	2½	days.
Fort William to Red River—Road	300	2½	"
Steam Navigation	160
Red River to Edmonton House—
Steam Navigation	1500 "	7	"
Edmonton to Thompson River my.		6	"
Total from Collingwood to Thompson River.		14	days.
Add for journey from Thompson River to Victoria by Road and Steamer		2	"
Collingwood to Quebec		2	"
Quebec to Liverpool		10	"
Total from England to Vancouver's Island		28	days.

This is no doubt the extreme rate of speed, but it is perfectly attainable, and at a moderate outlay. Why, even now, and without roads at all over half the continent, it is stated as a fact by the California papers, that a dispatch from Governor Douglas to the House Government was carried from Victoria to Boston, by means of relays of horses on the prairies, in the short space of twenty-two days. This may be a fiction, but there is no reason why it may not be a fact. Sir George Simpson once made the journey from Red River to Edmonton in thirteen days without being in any hurry.

Here, then, is a practical and practicable idea, and on which, with the requisite enterprise and energy on all hands, may be carried into effect within two years from now, or three at the most. Considering the liberality of the British Government in subsidizing lines of small steamers, to the extent altogether of more than a million sterling per annum, we cannot suppose that they can have any pecuniary reason for hesitation in such a case as this, where British interests are concerned to so large an extent. If £50,000 a-year is given to a line of Canadian steamers, a like amount, we may be sure, and more if need be, will not be grudged for an enterprise that will not merely supply the means of postal communication, but also subserve the grand purpose of opening up a vast intervening region to settlement, which cannot be promoted by any less expensive means. While, therefore, we have no objection to talk over the subject of a Pacific railway, we say let us have something practical and immediate in the way of connecting and turning to account the great means of water communication which nature has supplied in the Northwest. True, it is only open for seven months in the year, but seven month's clear transit is worth having when it will cost so little. Give us the roads in the meantime, and with as little delay as possible; the railroad will come in due time.—Scottish American Journal.

An Operative Nobleman.

The Earl of Rosse is the Tubal Cain of the Irish Peerage, a noble Vulcan, a smith and an astronomer, equally at home in the forge or among the stars. Most people have heard of his Lordship, or if they have not heard of his Lordship they have heard of his great telescope, fifty-three feet long, and six feet in diameter, through which the celebrated nebula of Sir John Herschel was first seen in its most distinct aspect of myriad clustering stars; and, last summer, it was asserted that his Lordship had an early private view through this noble monster instrument of the apparition of the hot Wanderer, and this thereby doubled to erect sheds for his cattle. The great telescope stands in the demesne, and is slung between two massive stone walls, something like a pier of the suspension bridge, without the arch connecting the side masonry. The first thing that strikes you is, that it is like a gigantic piece of wooden ordnance, being put together with tremendous staves, like a cask. The instrument is pointed at a given angle towards the heavens, and down in the bottom of the huge cylinder or cask, if you choose to call it such, is the speculum or reflector, the largest that has ever been made, and the manufacture of which, under his own superintendence, was the triumph of Lord Rosse's mechanical powers. In this metallic mirror is reflected the heavenly body under observation, and on a stage near the opening at the top stands the observers at leisure on planet, fixed star, meteor, or nebula, just as the case may be. Here pigmy man reviews the heavenly host; but Lord Rosse is no pigmy. If his father had worn a blacksmith's apron, instead of ermine or sables, the son would have risen from the cinders of the forge to be a Stephenson or a Herschel. The Earl's residence, Rosse Castle, is a most amusing mixture of the forge and the feudal fortress.—The greater part of the structure is comparatively new, but portions of the old castle, which, in the Jacobite wars, stood a brief siege, still remain, and bear upon them traces of cannon ball. The present nobleman has surrounded the building with rampart and fosse, so that, in sudden emergency, it might be turned into strategical account. Fortification is one of the many branches of knowledge to which he has turned his thoughts; but when you got within the line of defences, what a contrast to baronial or military force the objects that met your eye afforded! The genius of Watt triumphed over the imitations of Vauban.—Where cannon might have bristled a tidy steam-engine worked; great lathes turned under the towers that frowned defiance at James's forces; in the stables, where racing stud or war steeds might have been sheltered, a most ingenious and powerful apparatus for polishing the great speculum was fixed; in the corner of a castle yard was a furnace, and close by stood the moulds in which the monster reflector was cast by his Lordship, with face and hands begrimed with sweat and coal dust—an event more important, but not as worthily recorded, as the casting of Schiller's bell. Scraps of iron and smith's coal ... ground, and, instead of the braying of hound and horse ... you smelt the sulphureous deep breathing of a pair of forge bellows, above which rang the measured clang of sledge and anvil; for his Lordship is never idle. When Lord Oxmantown, he represented the King's County in Parliament, and, when attending his duties in London, would sometimes escape from a dull debate to the forges of Birmingham or the ship-building yards of Blackwall. Some amusing, circumstances occurred during these incognito visits. His Lordship is a strong-built, mechanical-looking man, and many a time has a brother operative, in admiration of his ability, pressed a bottle of porter upon him. It is even said that he once or twice shared the honest pewter on such occasions with the file-dusted engineer, sooner than part with a clear-headed handicraftsman. One anecdote is well authenticated. He was at some manufactory (the name I heard but have forgotten.) In walking through the works he met with the principal, who, finding him well versed in the subject, and taking him for a practical man, explained some improvements he was about to make. His Lordship discovered a fallacy in the plan and predicted that it would fail; but the other was confident in his calculations; and so they parted. Some time afterwards, when his Lordship was walking to the House of Commons, he was accosted in the street by one who turned out to be his too confident acquaintance, and who said, "I have been often, since we last met, wishing to see you—you were right, and I was wrong, and I am going to make you an offer; my engineering foreman is going to leave me, and if you will come down and construct the work your own way, I will give you a post." "I am much obliged," replied his Lordship, "but I could not accept your offer without consulting my father." "One would think you were old enough," said the other, with some scorn, "to be out of leading strings. And when can you hear from your daddy?" "I can give you an answer at once," said Lord Oxmantown, who saw his father, the then Earl Rosse, approaching. When the latter came up, he was informed of the offer, and, entering into the joke, said he was quite willing his son should accept the post, if it did not interfere with his Parliamentary duties.—"And who the deuce is he? and who are you, old gentleman?" roughly demanded the Brummagem. "I am Earl Rosse," was the reply, "and this is Lord Oxmantown." Eventually the latter consented to look down for a few days into Warwickshire, and gave his friend the benefit of his best advice, which ended, this time, in the thoroughly successful completion of the improvement in hand.—Correspondent of Bristol Times.

Dreadful Conflagration at Sea.

LOSS OF THE STEAMER AUSTRIA AND MORE THAN FIVE HUNDRED LIVES.

Intelligence has been received of one of the most appalling maritime disasters that has ever been recorded. We received the news a few days ago that a steamer had been set on fire near mid ocean, and on the direct line of the European steamers.—From the descriptions and from the circumstance that the Austria, from Hamburg and Southampton, was several days overdue, it was feared that this must be the unfortunate vessel. These anticipations have been sadly confirmed; and by the barb Lotus, which arrived at Halifax on Monday, we have received the particulars of her terrible fate. The narrative we append below, which was supplied by one of the passengers, depicts the terrible scene. Out of six hundred persons, only sixty-seven are known to have been saved. These were picked up by the French ship Maurice. Twelve of the number were taken on board by the Lotus and brought to Halifax, the remainder returning in the Maurice to the other side. The only chance of any others having been saved is founded on the slight circumstance of a Norwegian bark having been not near the burning ship after the Maurice had left. It is possible that one or two more of the unfortunate passengers may have been picked up, but of this there is not much likelihood. The calamity has of course, excited a great sensation, and further details are looked for with the deepest interest. The Austria was a Clyde steamer, built by Messrs. Caird & Co.; and this was only her second trip. The fire it will be noticed occurred through mere carelessness, but at the same time, carelessness of a kind that it is impossible wholly to prevent.

STATEMENT OF CHARLES BREW.

I took passage at Southampton on the 4th, in the steamship Austria, Captain Heydtmann, which left Hamburg on the 2nd.—We sailed at five o'clock P. M., the evening being a little misty; we in consequence anchored between the Isle of Wight and the mainland; sailed again at four o'clock on the following morning. In weighing anchor an unfortunate accident occurred by which one of the crew lost his life. Owing to some mismanagement the anchor ran out whirling the capstan round with terrific force, and hurling the men in all directions. Two were severely injured, and one thrown overboard; he is supposed to have been instantly killed, as he never rose to the surface.

From the time the ship was laid on her course we experienced a strong westerly winds. On the 12th the weather was more favorable, and on the 13th a speed of 11 knots had been attained, and all were in high hopes of reaching New York on the 18th. At a little after two o'clock, P. M., I was on the quarter-deck. I saw a dense volume of smoke burst from the after entrance of the steerage. Some woman ran aft, exclaiming "The ship is on fire what will become of us?" The ship was instantly put at half speed, at which she continued until the magazine exploded, from which I infer the engineers were suffocated. I only walked from where I was on the quarter-deck to the waist of the ship, when I saw the flames breaking through the lights amidships. As the ship was head to the wind, the fire travelling with fearful rapidity, ... to put the vessel with her stern to the wind. He hesitated—probably did not understand me, as he was a native of Hamburg. I then got a German gentleman to speak to him. At this time I saw some persons letting down the boat on the port side of the quarter deck. What became of the boat I don't know, but think she was crushed under the screw. I then went to let a boat over from the starboard side of the quarter-deck, but the moment we laid our hands on the ropes, there were so many people that crowded into it that we could not lift it off the blocks. We therefore left it for a few minutes, until the people got out, when we returned, and launched it over the side of the ship when the people rushing into it again, it descended with great violence into the water, and was instantly swamped, all the people being washed out except three, who held on to the sides.—We then let down a rope and pulled up one person, who proved to be the steward. Another in the act of being hauled up was strangled by the rope.

The fire now came on too fiercely to attempt to get up any more from the swamped boat. All the first cabin passengers were on the poop, with the exception of a few gentlemen who must have been smothered in the smoking room. Many of the second cabin passengers were also on the poop but a number of them got shut in their cabin by the fire. Some of them were pulled up through the ventilator, but the greater number could not be extricated. The last woman who was drawn up said there were six already suffocated. We now perceived that the ship had got her head to the wind again, so that the flames came over the quarter-deck.

In consequence of the crowd, I could not get to the wheel-house to ascertain the reason, but I was informed that the helmsman had deserted his post, and that the vessel, being left to herself, headed to the wind of her own accord. At this time the scene on the quarter-deck was indescribable and truly heart-rending. Passengers were rushing frantically to and fro—husbands seeking their wives, wives in search of their husbands, relatives looking after relatives, mothers lamenting the loss of their children some wholly paralyzed by fear, others madly crying to be saved; but a few persons calm and collected. The flames pressed so closely upon them, that many jumped into the sea. Relatives clasped into each other's arms, leaped over and met a watery grave; two girls, supposed to be sisters, jumped over and sank kissing each other. A missionary and wife leaped into the sea together, and the stewardess and assistant-steward arm in arm followed. One Hungarian gentleman with seven fine children, four of them girls, made his wife jump in, then blest his six eldest children, made them jump in one after another, and followed them with an infant in his own arms. I about this time was standing outside the bulwarks holding on by the davits, leaning out to avoid the flames, which were leaping towards me. I saw a swamped boat under me, spinning by a rope still attached to the ship. As the ends were tied in her I thought if I could get to her, I would be enabled to save myself and some others. I let myself down by a rope, passing over a man who was clinging to it, but who refused to come with me. I took out a pen-knife to cut the tackle; the large blade broke, and I then severed it with the small blade. The ship passed ahead. As the screw approached I feared the boat drawing towards it. I tried to keep the boat off, but the screw caught and capsized her over me. I divided away from the ship and came to the surface near a float which was free upwards. I got on her, and by pressing on one side with the assistance of a wave she righted, but was still pretty full. There were [illegible] on by the waves. The only thing I could find in her to paddle with was some table boards nailed together as a sheathing for the side. When I looked around, the ship was a quarter of a mile away from me. I could see ladies and gentlemen jumping off the poop, into the water in twos and threes, some of the ladies in flames. Several hesitated to leap from the burning ship until the last moment, as the height was twenty-two feet and were only at length compelled to throw themselves off to avoid a more painful death. In half an hour not a soul was to be seen on the poop. I pulled after the ship and picked up a German who was swimming strongly; I got him beside me in the boat, and we paddled after the ship with our laths; I now saw a vessel under sail approaching; she reached the steamer about five o'clock P. M., we continued pulling towards them, and about half-past seven o'clock, after being about five hours in the water, got within hail of the sailing vessel, which put off a boat and took us on board. She proved to be the French bark Maurice, Captain Earnest Renaud, of Nantes, bound from Newfoundland to the Isle of Bourbon with fish. She had up at that time rescued forty passengers of the burning vessel, chiefly taken of the bowsprit though a few were picked up floating around. At about eight o'clock one of the metallic boats came up, with about twenty-three, persons, including the first and third officers afterwards three or four men were picked up, floating on a piece of the broken boat. The second officer was taken up having been swimming, with nothing to float him, for six hours. The second and third officers were severly burned; one male passenger was burned frightfully, and some other male passengers slightly. There were but six women saved, three of whom were burned, one in a shocking manner. Captain Renaud acted with the utmost kindness. He gave clothes as far as he could furnish them to the suffering passengers, and acted as nurse, doctor and surgeon to the burned people, dressing the wounds of the females with a delicacy and tenderness that evinced a benevolent and amiable disposition. I did not see an officer of the ship during the fire, and am certain there was not one of them or the crew on the poop, except the man at the wheel for a short time. I understood that when the Captain heard of the fire, he rushed on deck without a cap, and when he saw the flames, exclaimed "We are all lost!" He tried to get out a boat, which when let down, was swamped, and ... fell into the sea, ... know. hind. The fourth officer was in the boat. He cut her loss from the davits; she was carried under the screw and smashed, and several in her drowned. Three or four then escaped on a fragment, and were picked up by the Maurice, as before stated. About the same time one metallic life-boat was let down from the port bow and swamped, but got cleared away with about thirty-three persons in her, including the first and third officers and several women.

The men in this boat capsized her two or three times in trying to clear her of water. Ten persons were thus drowned, including some women. They afterwards bailed her out with life preservers cut in two, and pulled to the Maurice, having picked up two or three passengers before reaching the bark. Altogether there were sixty-souls taken into the Maurice during the night.

A Norwegian bark came up to the steamer the next morning, and a boat was observed going around the burning ship. They may have picked up a few persons, but only a very few. The Maurice had no communication with the Norwegian. About seven o'clock the Maurice sailed for Fayal to deposit the rescued passengers. At about two o'clock the same afternoon, she fell in with the bark Lotus, Captain Trefy, of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, from Liverpool for Halifax. As I was anxious to get on British territory, Captain Trefy kindly gave me passage. He was anxious to take all the American citizens, but there were such a rush of foreigners into the boats that only one load of eleven could be got off, and even several of these were foreigners.

The fire is known to have arisen from very culpable negligence of some of the crew. The captain and surgeon considered it expedient to fumigate the steerage with burning tar. The operation was to be performed by the boatswain, under the superintendance of the fourth officer. The boatswain heated the end of a chain to dip in tar to produce smoke. The end became too hot to hold, and he let it drop upon the deck, to which it set fire. The tar was upset, and immediately all about was in flames. A feeble attempt was made to extinguish it, but without effect. There was nothing at hand to meet such an emergency.

The rescued passengers saved nothing but the clothes on their backs, and even the greater part of these were torn off and otherwise lost.

Six hundred souls were supposed to be on board, including many women and children.

(Mr. Brew was the only British subject saved. He is in the British civil service, and on his way to British Columbia.)

Arrival of the "Moses Taylor."

NEWS FROM FRAZER RIVER.

GREAT QUANTITIES OF GOLD.

From the N. Y. Herald's San Francisco Correspondent.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept'r 6, 1858.

During the last fortnight the steamers Pacific, Sarprise, and Santa Cruz, have arrived from Victoria with news from Fraser River. About five hundred persons have returned, and the number of departures reaches two hundred. A large body of miners had gone to work and were doing well. The Hudson's Bay Company's steamer Otter arrived at Victoria from the river, having connected with the Americus boat Umatilla, near its mouth on the 20th of August. She brought down thirty thousand dollars in dust.

The following is a summary of the work going on at the mines:—

Messrs. Light & Steele, ... brought down with them 6,000 ounces of dust, the greater portion of which was from the sluice claims on Texas bar.

On his way up the river Mr. Smith counted the number of rockers at work on each bar, and enquired as to the success of the miners in working.

On Puget Sound bar there were forty rockers at work, with three men to a rocker, and all doing well.

On Sacramento bar there were fifteen rockers at work, and few men employed.

On Emory's bar there were thirty six rockers at work, and miners averaging $6 to $8 to the hand.

On Hill's bar 100 rockers and 400 men are at work, averaging an ounce a day to each.

There was little doing at Fort Yale.

From Pike's claim on Pike's bar, above Fort Yale, 80 ounces were taken out in three days.

On the bar above, little else is doing except prospecting.

The accounts from Upper Frazer continued good, but the Indians are very troublesome. Some canoes had succeeded in getting through the Big Canon; one canoe had been capsized and a man drowned.

Another seizure of liquor by the authorities had taken place at Fort Yale.

The weather has been very warm on the river, the thermometer standing at 90 degrees in the shade.

A rise of the water of about fifteen inches had occurred, but when Mr. Smith left the river was at a stand.

Mr. E. C. Johnson, agent of Ballou's Express at Fort Yale, sends up the following:—

Eight companies on Texas bar are making from $15 to $40 per day each to the hand.

Five companies on Emory's bar are making from $8 to $25 per day to the hand.

Fourteen companies on Hill's bar are making $16 to $30 per day to the hand.

Nine companies on Fort Yale are making from $15 to $20 per day to the hand.

Mr. George Barton, agent for Ballou's Express on Pike's bar, took out $45 in one day.

The principal intelligence relates to the Indian disturbances. A number of miners had been robbed and murdered, and their bodies afterwards found floating in the river. The feeling against the Indians was very strong, and it is to be feared hereafter ... little mercy will be shown them by Americans. ... the bravery with the prowess of the Frazer River Indians, and for a long time submitted to the indignities and impositions that few bearing the human form could bear. Their patience was praiseworthy, and could only have been exercised to avoid difficulty. Now that the number of Americans are sufficient to protect themselves it is not likely they will allow ... to ... with impunity.

When the intelligence of the outbreak reached Victoria, Governor Douglass despatched Richard Hicks, Commissioner of Crown Lands, to investigate the matter. From his report, dated Fort Hope, August 22, it would seem the troubles have been settled. He says:—"I arrived at Fort Hope on Saturday, and have visited all the principal mining stations up to Fort Yale; there cannot be less than seven thousand people located on these points, and they are generally doing well. Yesterday morning a report was circulated that forty-two men were killed about Fort Yale, which caused very great excitement. I proceeded to investigate the matter, and found the report to be totally unfounded. It appears that the bodies of three men have been picked up, two of them with their heads cut entirely off, and the other was the person who lost his life by the upsetting of the canoe at this place. It appears that the Indians above and at the Falls have been very troublesome. A company of men, about fifty in number, organized and ... proceeded up the river from Fort Yale, and the Indians challenged them to fight. This was avoided by the American party, and after much talking with the chiefs a treaty was concluded with the Indians, to the satisfaction of all parties. Two men were killed by a party of the same Indians, they not being aware of the treaty at the time. The bodies have since been found and decently interred. I forward your Excellency the above brief statement, as so many flying reports are abroad, and must cause some excitement until contradicted. I have the satisfaction of informing your Excellency that about seven miles of the road above Fort Yale is completed by subscription among the miners. The bridge I will have commenced immediately. I intend to give notice of tenders for the performance of the same."

The agents of the Company have agreed to license one or more steamers to ply from Victoria to and on Frazer River, on the following terms:—

1. To receive and transport no goods to and from Frazer River, except the goods of the Hudson's Bay Company, or such as they may permit to be shipped, and that for the transport of such goods, that freight do not exceed the following rates:—

Victoria to Fort Langley, per ton,	$10
Fort Langley to Fort Hope,	10
Fort Hope to Fort Yale,	5

Return rates to be on the same scale.—2,000 lbs., or 40 feet to constitute the ton.

2. To carry no passengers to or on Frazer River who have not taken out a mining license and permit from the government of Vancouver's Island, and paid one month advance thereon.

3. To pay head money to the Hudson's Bay Company at the rate of two dollars for each passenger proceeding into Frazer river, or taking passage from Fort Langley upwards. A settlement to be made each trip, and an officer of the Hudson's Bay Company to be received on board without charge, to attend to such business, if required by the Hudson's Bay Company.

4. That all vessels plying to or on the river to be chartered or owned by British subjects.

5. That permits on said terms will be continued till the Company's license of trade expires, in the month of May, 1859.

The preceding order or law was intended about ten days ago. The conditions are far from liberal, and will help to bring the monopoly into still further bad odour.

Mr. Nugent, the newly appointed Commissioner to Vancouver's Island, arrived here by the last steamer. He will find his mission a very important one. The large number of Americans now in the British possessions are as it were completely at the mercy of the Hudson's Bay Company, who enforce arbitrary and onerous imposts upon them. The boundary question, the restrictions on trade, the Indian hostilities and oppressive mining regulations, are all matters that require attention.

It is generally expected the fever will break out afresh here next month. The bars of the Frazer river will then be uncovered and the rich deposits withdrawn by the miners. When the water is low enough there is no doubt all that has been said in relation to the richness of the new mines will prove true.

Another correspondent writing from Victoria says:—

"We passed Cape Disappointment on our way out of the Columbia River at 6 p. m., on the afternoon of the 28th, and arrived at this place at about 8 o'clock last evening The Hudsons Bay Company's steamer Otter is just ready to start for Fraser river, and as I propose to depart in her for the gold region, I have no time to take a fair look at the "city," much less to essay any description. Suffice it to say that a single glance at the place presents abundant evidence of the fact that there is faith here in the richness of the Fraser River bars, although the persistance with which the water keeps "high" has caused the spirits of the multitude to fall very low. The river has fallen a few feet; but even that decline has revealed to the miners on the river claims large remuneration for their toil. Of this evidences are conclusive—the croakings of the discouraged to the contrary notwithstanding. But, as I hope to have more to say of this in my next, after personal observation, I refrain from further remarks upon that point at present. It is unfortunate for this place, and for the future of the Fraser River country, doubtless, that the excitement in regard to it has been so intense, because it has drawn hither thousands who can get no mining claims upon the river, even if they had means of subsistence until the subsidence of the water occurs; and their misfortunes are calculated to cause a reaction as unreasonable as the excitement was itself in the beginning. ... work upon the Harrison river cut is ... rapidly ahead, and will be completed to the Upper Frazer within a month in all probability. ... ers in the communities. That ... opinion, the dry placers, whence the float-gold of the river bars must come, will probably be found, and we shall soon know the extent and value of the new El Dorado The ... part of wisdom, therefore, is to wait a little while with patience, neither dreaming of fortunes to be made here in an hour, nor denouncing as delusive the supposition that mining in New Caledonia will be found highly remunerative. A few weeks at furthest will settle the question; and meantime the evidences before us all favour the most flattering expectations of success.

Goods of all kinds are abundant here, at prices quite as low as in San Francisco, if not lower. The market is overstocked, and must remain so beyond doubt, until a new impulse is given to immigration.

Warming a Tomb.

About ten years previous to the commencement of the current century, the convivial usages of Scotland had assumed a peculiarly aggravated and reckless character. Intoxication, so far at least as the upper classes were concerned, instead of being deemed a vice or even a blemish, was looked upon as a mark of aristocratic virility and good fellowship. Almost any gentleman would as lief have been called a thief or a coward as a milk-sop; and he who with the ripest impunity could put the greatest number of bottles "under his belt," was, de facto, regarded as "cock of the walk," and "prince of good fellows." The dinner hour being early, at the period in question, it was no uncommon thing to witness well-dressed men staggering along the streets during broad day-light in a state of mellow elevation. If such phenomena elicited any comment from passing critics, it was merely that Sir John this, or the Laird of that, had been at a party. As for the police or the ecclesiastical authorities taking cognizance of such excesses, the thing was infinitely too preposterous even to dream of. So long as the topers gave a wide berth to murder or manslaughter, the propriety of their conduct was never called in question.

At the epoch under manipulation, Bacchus was no where more religiously worshipped that in Dumbartonshire, on the West of Scotland. Indeed the bibulous prowess possessed by the landowners of that district of North Britain, had long been matter of proverbial notoriety; and people used to talk of Dumbartonshire Lairds as types of everything that was commendable and chivalrous, so far as devotion to the wine-cup was concerned.

There dwelt at the time to which our narrative has reference, in the vicinage of Kilpatrick, on the banks of the Clyde, a landowner named and designated Mungo Mills of Calderwraehaw. The aforesaid village, it may be stated in passing, is famed as being the reputed birth-place of the Saint, to whose special tutelage Ireland is by popular voice consigned.

Mills took it into his head to erect in the church-yard of Kilpatrick a mausoleum or family tomb of ambitious dimensions; and indeed no mortuary hotel in the United Kingdom could challenge any comparison with it, so far at least as extent was concerned. It more resembled a villa than a haven for the departed, and the same three-storied dwelling did not wide even before the completion of the same.

The Thanes of Calderwraehaw belonged to the brotherhood of whom mention has been made above, and the merits and progression of their lately departed proprietor subjects of conversation at the various tea-tables at which he was wont to visit. This became to pass that when the structure was on the eve of being finished, a waggish co-requisitor gravely proposed that Mills should inaugurate the scene by entertaining therein a select party of his friends and boon companions. None of the brightest were the intellects of honest Mungo owing to the libations which they were constantly receiving, but accordingly the suggestion appeared to him perfectly orthodox and reasonable. Without delay he issued invitations to as many of his convivial confreres as the sepulchre could accommodate, and set about preparing for their entertainment in this novel hospitium.

At the day appointed some dozen of the most devoted and enthusiastic "cup-crushers" which the country could boast of, made their appearance in the kirk-yard of Kilpatrick, and were received with open arms by the hospitable Caldercruicks at the door of his unique monster tomb.

This sombre pro re nata caravanseray had been rendered as comfortable as circumstances would permit. Not being endowed with windows a lamp hung suspended from the vaulted roof, which was missioned to burn night and day during the continuance of the Plutonic revel. Within a species of hall or porch was paraded the carcass of a choice ox, slaughtered for the nonce, and in the same locality appeared a pro tempore cooking apparatus, the management of which was intrusted to the major domo-and factotum of the host.

Instead of a carpet, the floor of the tomb was spread with mattrasses, and the compartments in the walls designed for the reception of coffins were plentifully garisoned with liquor-replenished vessels. A hog-shead of claret did duty as side-board at one end of the chamber, and was kept in countenance at the other by a cognate ark filled with transcendental brandy. Of nothing in the shape of chairs did the room boast, but substitutes for such appliances were found in the shape of divers kegs of whiskey, the aboriginal virtue whereof had never been sullied by the profane touch of exciseman's gauging-rod!

The lamp being lighted, and the company having assumed their seats, or rather we should say their kegs, the door of the sepulchre was closed, and business commenced in right good earnest. No one in these our degenerate days would credit the amount of liquid stimulants which were consumed with comparative impunity by those devoted disciples of the vine-crowned god. Were puny microscopic glasses would be employed now, "bickers" spacious enough to hold pints were drained to the honor of the Caldercruicks place of sepulture.—Brother Gough in his most imaginative moments never pictured such a purgatory of anti-teetotalism.

For three long days and nights did these wild outre orgies continue without stint or intermission. Sometimes, it is true, one of the party would drop from his perch upon the ready-spread couch, but a very brief modicum of repose enabled him to resume his part in the jollification. If, in the estimation of his associates, the slumber of such a one was unreasonably long protracted, a copious libation of cold water speedily recalled him from the domains of Somnus to the business of real life.

During this period the office of the butler was far from being of a sinecure nature.—Hardly an hour elapsed in which he was not called upon to put his culinary gifts in requisition, and short were the intervals during which the cooking-apparatus [illegible] by shouts for [illegible]

[illegible] ed in midwinter, was pandiculous eventuated the effect of the uproarious, rousering chants which issued from the womb of the structure, chorused as they were by the shot-charged winds. Many a midnight way-farer travelling along the [illegible] Dumbarton viaduct, felt his hair stand erect, and the cold perspiration rain in torrents from his brow, as he listened to the untimeous and unearthly cantations which came surging from that wierd "howl" of mortality. Not a few sceptics in the creed of popular superstition were weaned from their infidelity by the vocalization of the tenants of the Caldercruicks tomb.

There was one incident connected with the doings of that extraordinary convention which merits to be specially recorded.

The capacious appetites of some of the guests having craved for a mess of oat meal porridge, the cook proceeded to concoct the same accordingly. To all appearance the tasty pudding was canonically prepared, but when placed on the board the most sharp-set of the revellers could not manage to swallow a mouthful of the same. There was something unspeakably peculiar in the gritty viands which they could not away with, and by common consent the manufacture was ordered to be cast out of the door, a sentence which was carried into immediate effect.

Some hours after this had been done, the inmates of the tomb were startled by a most extraordinary combination of sounds proceeding from the exterior of the building. On going out to investigate the nature of the concert, a strange sight was presented to the view of the spectators.—Sundry pigs, and geese beyond number were discovered, some lying and others staggering, manifesting all the tokens and signs of intoxication. The cries which they emitted were undeniably of an unsober complexion, and the most casual observer could not fail to gather that the quadrupeds and feathered bipeds were quite as drunk as their "betters."

What could be the meaning of all this?

Certain of the more chicken-hearted of the synod concluded that Providence had made the beastialities tipsy, in order to read the feasters a practical and impressive homily on the enormity of their deliets.—This theory was probably suggested by the sage practice of the ancient Greeks, who occasionally "earned" their bondsmen, to the effect that their incentive antics might impress the rising generation with a salutary "summer" against excess in using the juice of the grape.

On enquiry a more material key was found wherewith to unlock the apparent mystery. In manufacturing the porridge the artist had moistened the meal with "mountain dew," instead of the unsophisticated beverage of our primary ancestors.

It is hardly necessary to add that when the mystery evaporated so did the morals, and that the incongruous jocket proceeded as before with undiminished vim and glee.

A circumstance hardly opposite, marked the conclusion of this grim saturnalian "earning" of death's cold entourage.

One of the party, named Bonhiet of Bonhill, was a peculiarly stolid-looking personage. In obesity he might have competed with Shakespeare's "fat knight," and there was an oily quality about the general expression of his countenance, which closely verged upon the sublime. Whenever his intoxation distorted the slightest tittling of intelligence in his visage, they at once concluded that something extraordinary was on the cards, and "looked out for squalls" accordingly.

During the grisly carnival, Bonhiet had hardly ever absented his seat. He appeared to consider it a solemn religious obligation to imbibe the greatest possible amount of liquor, and so absorbed was the zealot by this duty, that he seldom permitted himself to join in the secularity of conversation. Bacchus seemed perennially looming before his psychologic optic, and he palpably looked on every moment as lost which was not devoted to the worship of the humid myth.

At the fag-end of the third day's session, one of the guests plucked his host emphatically by the sleeve and directed his attention to the appearance which Bonhill presented.

"Caldercruicks!" quoth he, in a tone of maudlin solemnity: "do you not think that Bankier is looking consumedly gash?"

Presuming that our reader has the misfortune not to be a Scotsman, we may explain, episodically, that "gash," and ultra-intelligence, are, as nearly as possible, synonymous terms.

For a season Mungo Mills essayed to silence his interrogitor by a series of winks, elbowings, punches in the side, and treadings upon the toes. At length when all these pantomimics failed to produce the desired effect, he exclaimed in a smothered whisper,—

"Hold your tongue, sir! Mahoun thank the creature for looking gash! He has been with his Maker for the better of two hours!"

Such was the literal fact. In the midst of "quip and crank," and jest and song, the hapless Laird of Bonhill had been noiselessly called to his last account. The catastrophe had been patent to the landlord alone, and he had not deemed the event sufficient'y important to mar the conviviality of the conlave by its promulgation.—Macgeorge's Tales, Sketches and Lyrics.

Arrival of the "Arabia."

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.

The steamship Arabia from Liverpool at 3 p. m. on the 18th, arrived at 5 o'clock. The Alps from New York, arrived at Liverpool on the morning of the 17th. The Ariel from New York arrived at Southampton on the night of the 17th. The Canada from Halifax and Boston was off Liverpool on the 18th, and would arrive at 5 p. m.

The screw steamship Hammonia, which left Hamburg on the 15th for Southampton and New York, exploded her magazine on the first day out, and put back to Hamburgh, five passengers were wounded. She had 293 passengers on board, and would sail again on the 19th.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The Times publishes a long letter from a correspondent at Valentia, in regard to the difficulty on the Atlantic cable. The view is rather a discouraging one; but it is nevertheless stated that Mr. Henley, who has been for some time back making experiments on the cable, is sanguine of making the line again serviceable, by the use of his powerful magnetic electric machines, which are now on their way from London.

Mr. Lundy, one of the assistants at Valentia, has come to Newfoundland to ascertain the condition of the wire at Trinity Bay, and to arrange a day on which a certain known code of signals is to be sent down at concerted times at both ends, and to endeavour thus to re-establish intelligible communication.

Shares had declined to £420 to £460. Recent experiments induce belief that the [illegible] but it is thought there may be two will be found to exist at a distance of between [illegible] shore; for about 230 or 240 miles the depth is only 410 fathoms, and within that length the mischief could be easily repaired; but a sudden descent then occurs of 1,518 fathoms, where it is extremely doubtful if anything could be done. The probability seems to be that at this abrupt point the [illegible]

Mr. Whitehouse writes another letter to the Times on the subject of his dismissal, in which he charges the managers with incompetency, and demands a full investigation by the shareholders of the grounds on which he was dismissed.

FRANCE.

A treaty is said to have been made with King Korea, a vassal of China for the establishment of a French commercial settlement there.

RUSSIA.

The grain crops in the Russian territory of the Black Sea, have been destroyed by locusts and hot winds.

LATEST BY TELEGRAPH.

The profits of the Bank of England for the six months ending August 31st., were £628,790. Consols closed steady at 2 p. m. 18th at 97¼ to 98¾ for money, and 98¾ to 97¼ for account.

The Atlantic Cable.

From the London Courier.

Up to a late hour on Saturday night the electrician had been unable to discover the precise locality where the interruption of the electric current takes place. In the letter written by Mr. Whitehouse, the late electrician of the Company, that gentleman holds out that the damage which has taken place would be found to be but at a short distance from the shore, and could be easily repaired by the substitution of the larger cable intended for the shore end of the telegraph. This heavy portion of the cable, weighing about six tons to the mile, or rather more than six times the weight of the line which has already been laid, is at present laying at Keyham. It was not taken on board the Agamemnon, for so improbable seemed the chance of the successful submergence of the cable, that it was not deemed necessary to send the shore end to Valentia until the result of the second attempt was ascertained. As soon as the communication had been established, orders were sent for the shipment of the shore end, and the Bilbon steamer was sent to Keyham to take it round to Valentia.—While engaged in putting the cable on board, a message was unexpectedly received to discontinue the progress, and leave it still at Keyham. This message we understand, forwarded from Valentia, as it was found by the electric tests which were applied that the interruption of the communication was not within such a distance of the shore as would admit of the fault being remedied by the substitution of the heavier cable. The shore end of the telegraph is that which is most exposed to the action of the sea, and with respect to which the greatest fears were entertained by the public; but it turns out that this portion is perfect and that the defective part is at a point much further distant from the land. To many persons it will appear impossible, by any mechanical or other scientific arrangement to ascertain the spot at which the continuity of an electric current may cease.—It is difficult enough to conceive the practicability of transmitting to electric spark along two or three thousand miles of wire, or even through a world thereto distance.—But this is done every day, and we have now doubt that the subtle fluid which starts from London will reach Ballinrag or the place to which it is [illegible] and that the railway train will reach its prescribed terminus. But to ascertain the spot at which the lightning leaves its track, and escapes into the depths of the Atlantic, is a task which would appear to be even more difficult than for the manager at the Euston Station to learn, without the aid of telegraph or other communication, the place where the express train had left the line by some unhappy accident, after it had started on its journey to the north. Strange as it may seem, the electrician has the power of ascertaining, by means of the electric fluid itself, the locality and the tiny outlet by which it escapes into the sea. Some time since a most ingenious piece of mechanism was made by which the electricity could be weighed, the fluid being made to act upon a magnet; and this upon the end of a nicely-poised steelyard, would tell with accuracy the weight of the current transmitted from the other end of a wire at a long distance. Following out this experiment, we believe first shown by Professor Farraday, at the Royal Institution. Other electricians have arranged a very sensitive piece of machinery by which the amount of resistance opposed to the passage of the electricity by the conducting wire may be correctly ascertained. The amount of resistance offered through the whole length of the Atlantic cable, or even one half of it, is something very much larger than any which can be marked by the delicate machinery hitherto employed upon shorter distances of wire. The consequence is that the electricians have not yet been able satisfactorily to ascertain the place where the cable is defective. Of one thing, however, they are certain, that is, that the fault does not occur within twenty or thirty miles of the land and we are informed that within the first two or three hundred miles the continuity is still perfect and complete. Beyond this distance all is still doubt and uncertainty, and it is idle at present to speculate upon the subject. Should the defect be found to exist in the deep parts of the sea, the public must be content to hear that for the present the Atlantic Telegraph is a failure. It will not be possible to raise the sunken portion of the wire, or repair it, when laid in great depths. Within a few miles of the shore the wire may be under-run; but when it has been sunk at the depth of two or three miles below the surface, the great length of cable which would be suspended, and the resistance which the water would give to its rising, would produce a strain upon the wire much greater than its strength would bear. A cable which would be strong enough to sustain its own weight while sinking might not possess the requisite strength to admit of its being hauled up through the water.

A Capital jeu d'Esprit.

The following jeu d'esprit we find in a late English paper. The writer is evidently an American.

All the marine mopsters, big fish and small fry of the great deep, lately met in convention, to take into consideration the conduct of the Ocean, and also of Mankind in general. The Whale was elected president, and from his greatness might be termed the Prince of Whales. He opened the convention by stating that he did not wish to make a speech; he would take up as little room and be no longer than possible.—(Cheers.)

The shark whispered to the Swordfish that it was not possible for the whale to be much longer, for he was eighty feet now; in his younger days he remembered him a regular old blower.

The Whale contended that, notwithstanding his general size (he might add tears) he was not exempt from suffering. He had been grossly insulted by man—he would say lampooned; not that he would pun upon the use made of his fat, as he did not wish to make light of such a matter. He had been harpooned at least. Men were sarcastic towards him, and his shafts were sharp and pointed. Some of his fellow whales had been very much cut up and exceedingly tried. He had lately learned that a substitute for oil had been invented, which might lessen the presecution of whales, but he feared that it was all gass. The Whale alluded to a harpoon which lately hit him; it had made a great impression on him, and he feared had affected him deeply. (Great sensation.) Here is feelings overpowered him, and he sat down (on the shark) amid a general blubber.

The Shark rose with some difficulty, and remarked that the tail of the whale had moved him; in fact it was very striking.—His own situation was far from pleasant.—He was by profession a lawyer, and, he flattered himself, one of the deep kind. (Cheers and laughter.) But business was bad, and he had been obliged to take in a few pupils. He had lately presented a fine opening for a young man who fell overboard, but was soon afterwards obliged to reject his suit as indigestible. Unless he had more cases he should leave the law, and open as a dentist, as he was well acquainted with the art of setting teeth. He held up one fin as a signal that he had finished.

The Sea Serpent did not wish to intrude upon the convention, as he did not know whether he properly belonged to the fish tribe; did not appear officious. All he asked was to be classified with the Eel, whom he considered a slippery character. (Here the eel was obliged to wriggle.) Lately he was passing a certain species of the eel, when he just happened to touch him; he had been so shocked that he had hardly recovered.

The Eel hastily rose and said he was electrified at these remarks; it was evident that the Serpent was more than half seas over, and if he was not careful would get himself into regular coil. As for his being a "slippery character," he thanked Neptune he did not belong to such a scaly set as the Serpent.

The Whale called the Eel to order, and the Eel called the Whale a confounded old swell head, and was then summarily put out of the convention.

The Turtle was suffering from a slight indisposition. He was walking ashore, a short time since, when he met a party of jolly young sailors. The result was that he was flat on his back and was unable to move for some time, and since then he has not felt as lively as usual. There was one thing to which he would call the attention of the convention. He prided himself upon the purity of his political principles; he was the alderman's best friend. The Shark had lately insulted him by calling him a regular old hard-shell.

Here the Shark interrupted him by asking if that was not his aim?

The Turtle replied that he should say nothing more at present, but should have something to say before the next meeting.

The Shark, (contemptuously:) yes, a few says probably.

The Porpoise did not exactly understand the purpose of the convention, nor whether all the members were present. The Secretary called the roll. The Whale called him to order, and was sorry to see him reading about in that disgraceful condition.—His motion was quite out of order, and he appeared to be attempting to get up a revolution. The Porpoise assured the convention that his movements proceeded entirely from the motion of the waves; but still he should move his motion. He then took a back spit, amid cries of "you're a blower."

The President remarked that he should be happy to hear from some of the small fry—the oyster, lobster, and others; who if not the bone and sinew" of the tribe, were at least the muscle.

The Oyster proceeded to open his case, which was a hard one. He was continually in trouble, and always in some stew or broil He had family troubles also; his half-brother, the Clam, was a disgrace to the family, always in liquor, and generally considered a "squirt." Some of his family were very lazy, and spent most of their time in beds. There had also been some rakes among them, creating a great disturbance. He was most respectable himself; his father was quite distinguished, and his maternal ancestor was the Mother of Pearl. He went in for his own rights, and did not care whether the rest got theirs or not.

The Jewfish remarked, that was very selfish.

The Oyster continued. There was one of his neighbours—he would not call any names—who was very surly and crabbed; that he was a one-sided individual, and no one approved of his motions.

The Crab protested against this abuse, and said that the rest took advantage of him because he was a "soft." He respectfully retired backwards.

Here the Codfish entered and apologised for his lateness, as he had been visiting a school. He thought the Whale was badly off, since men took his oil to make lights of. His own case was the reverse of this; they took his lights and liver, too, for that matter—to make oil of. This might be very good for consumption, but it was confounded bad for him. The most alarming thing he had ever heard of was the consumption of codfish. It might be very good fun for men to cut him open and salt him, but to hang him up afterwards was rather too bad a joke.

The Herring said there had been a disposition manifested to play tricks of this kind in his school, and that lately some of his companions had been badly smoked.

The Shad, too, in his spring migrations up the rivers, had been greatly persecuted, particularly by the members of the Legislature. Men had greatly nettled him, and had nearly driven him insane. He was a superstitious fish, and a most unlucky day to him was fryday. However, he thought his enemies had suffered somewhat in the warfare, and found his tail a regular bonypart.

The Flatfish was not particularly flattering in reply to the Shad, for he did not believe there was a shadow of truth in his remarks.

The salmon, also, had his troubles. He was an aristocrat—here there was a general turning up of noses and some tittering—not of the codfish kind either, and not to associate with the small fry. He spent most of his time in travelling, and in summer went up to the inland rivers, and took his family to the springs and the falls. He had been lately much afflicted and grossly maltreated at the South. Passing up the Savannah river his party had been surrounded by a party of infamous kidnappers, and some of his children had been hooked. It was his intention to inform Uncle Sam and Tom of this outrage, and the Union would be dissolved immediately.

Here there was a regular row among the small fry.

The Trout called the Salmon a "Northern Fish, with Northern principles, who had no business poking his nose up South-like Salmon all gammon, and got up no political effect. He was a small fish, but any insult to his native streams he would not brook.

The Flying Fish flew into a tremendous passion, and appealed to the Blackfish, who modestly thanked Neptune that though his back was black his belly was white. Just then there was a great disturbance, also among sundry others of the small fry, who had evidently been drinking.

There was a lot of suckers, who were much inebriated, and one small fish sung at the top of his gills that he was "jolly old sole," and the convention like many of our political meetings broke up in a general row. Therefore it is presumed everything will go on as if nothing had happened.

The Sultan's Financial Reform.

It is the good or ill luck, as the case may be, of absolute monarchies, that their fate depends, in a great measure, if not altogether upon the virtues or vices, the genius or insignificance, the energy or weakness of their Sovereigns. Nowhere has this, perhaps been more strongly illustrated than in the Ottoman Empire. An unprecedented succession, almost without interruption, of Sovereigns of high talents and indomitable energy, raised in two and a half centuries one of the greatest empires of the world, by uniting the dispersed tribes of one race and forming them into a mighty nation. This marvellous structure has no parallel in history except the rise of Rome. As in the latter case it was the genius and power of organization of one town which assembled round it the scattered tribes of Italy and led them to the conquest of the world, so in the Ottoman Empire it was the genius of one family which accomplished a similar marvel in a much shorter time. It was not as with the flood of Teutonic or Mongol conquest, where the class was in the tribes themselves which had only to be directed. The family of Osman had first to inspire this spirit of expansion into the Turcoman tribes which had been broken up by internal dissentions into numerous petty States, and then concentrate their efforts by a powerful organization.

As, then, the rise of the Ottoman Empire is owing entirely to the genius of one family, its decay dates, likewise, from the time when this family, as if exhausted by the long succession of able Sovereigns, produced a long list of weak and incapable members, until, in the last remaining scion, the father of the present Sultan, the spark of genius seemed to be again revived, and the long dormant energy broke forth with new vigor.

The question was whether it would be only the last dying flickering of the flame or a sign of organization. The first 10 or 12 years of the present Sultan's reign left us in doubt; good intentions, mildness of disposition, and readiness to listen to advice, were, perhaps, the most desirable qualities at a moment when the task was to build up the empire on a new basis, provided there was a sufficient guaranty that these qualities should not degenerate into weakness, and then be abused by all who schemed. The last seven or eight years of his reign raised an apprehension, and the last two established almost the conviction, that this danger had not been avoided, that sinister influences had got the upper hand, and that our generation at any rate, had lost the chance of witnessing another revival of the genius and energy of Osman the Black.

A clique in the Palace seemed to have taken possession of the spirit of the Sultan, and by it of the direction of public affairs. Every effort against it ceased only to display the net which had been drawn around the person of the Sovereign. While the ostensible Government was trying to remedy the consequences of an unhappy war, the folly and extravagance of the Palace defied all attempts at economy: while every one was denouncing corruption, the clique placed at will its most corrupt members in the most important and lucrative posts, and every one began to despair of this system, which had its chief supporters amongst those nearest to the Sultan, ever being broken through, unless by some catastrophe.

But the East is not in vain called the land of marvels, and last week may form an epoch in the reign of Sultan Abdul Medshid, for it saw the vicious system broken down with one blow.

All I informed you last Thursday, the Sultan went in person to the Porte to attend the reading of the second Imperial Hatt, denouncing in the strongest terms the extravagance of the Palace as well as the public functionaries, and ordering under the severest penalties, the suppression of useless expenditure and the introduction of economy. But few were prepared to see this general condemnation of extravagance followed so closely by an energetic practical application.

There is a private staircase in the old seraglio reserved for the use of the Sultan, and leading to the state-rooms where the high functionaries on such occasions are awaiting his arrival. These latter were assembled when the sultan made his appearance among them, and scarcely leaving time for the usual obeisances, began a philippic against his brother-in-law Nerneed Ali, the Capudan Pasha, and his four sons-in-law, three of whom was present as members of the Council, and one as Minister of Commerce. He upbraided them in the strongest possible terms for their extravagance—above all his brother-in-law, whom he accused of abusing his position to commit and encourage every kind of disorder, and to conceal the real state of things from the Sultan. He then assured the Grand Vizer of his support, but enjoined him to introduce the strictest economy, without any regard to persons, promising to do the same himself.

Two days after his brother-in-law and all his four sons-in-law were dismissed from their places, and Mehmed Kibrisli, named Capudan Pasha, and Husbdi Pasha, formerly Grand Master of Artillery, President of the Tanzimat, in his stead. Mahmoud Pasha, Minister of Foreign affairs ad interim was appointed at the same time Minister of commerce, in the place of Ali Ghalib, the Sultan's son-in-law. Last night again Nizeb Pasha, the Master of the Ceremonies, was unceremoniously dismissed.

But this is not all. An order has been issued that none of the Palace ladies are to go out shopping, and all merchants have, according to the Hatt, been warned not to lend money or goods under any circumstances. A large quantity of jewels bought on credit have been returned with a fair compensation to those who furnished them, so that the price of diamonds, which have risen lately to a fabulous height, has fallen considerably. All the buildings which can remain without being destroyed by the approaching rains have been stopped, and those which cannot are to be covered in temporarily, and then likewise deferred for better times. The commission named to enquire into the expenditure and debts of the Palace and Civil List have likewise not been idle, and have come on the traces of the most impudent speculations. All those who encroach the Sultan say that he is quite another man. [illegible] And what is more, it is [illegible] short all, for the mildness and indecision of his character has become active and energetic; he shows himself master for the first time.

How this sudden change has been brought about one can only conjecture.—The influence which surrounded him never let the truth reach him, and abused his goodness, leading him from bad to worse; we now see the reaction.

One must know to what extent the system pursued hitherto, had produced discontent and indignation in the minds of the people to appreciate the effects which this first beginning of a reaction has had. The most sanguine did not dare to hope for such energy and promptitude, and flattered themselves only with a gradual downfal of the evil. Most people received even with distrust the Imperial Hatt until they saw them executed with vigor. But even those most unwilling to believe must yield to the proofs of the sincerity of the Sultan's intentions, and the most disheartened begin to look up and those who felt surest in their places begin to tremble.

The heart of Kings are inscrutable to common mortals, no there is no use of speculating how long such a vicious reaction may last; the best thing is to take advantage of this favourable turn, and introduce the reforms which are so much needed in the Administration. The most powerful links of the chain have been broken, and it requires only energy and perseverance to destroy those remaining.

The Grand Vizier has now an opportunity such as few men have had in our times in Turkey, to cut at the root of all abuses which every one sees but no one has dared to touch hitherto. The Sultan has done his task; he has emancipated himself from the thraldom of a clique which had got possession of him, he has not spared those nearest to him, he has followed all the suggestions made to him with respect to the changes in the Ministry, he has given full powers to his Sado Azam to reform the Administration and place it on an economical footing.

Now begins the Grand Vizier's task.—He has indeed raised a storm against himself, and has made enemies who may be powerful to-morrow; but he ought to recollect that they will never forget or forgive; and that his only safety lies in destroying their creatures, thus depriving them of the instruments of their vengeance. A dismissal, en bloc of the most noted peculators would strike a salutary terror among the rest, for the greatest of encouragement is ther to was impunity. But it would not be sufficient to change persons, but guarantees must be sought against the recurrence of the evil, and this guaranty can only be found in responsibility. Carpe diem ought to be his motto, for he may be called to task any day and asked what he has done with the power instructed to him.

More Coal in Nova Scotia.

The Halifax Chronicle, of the 24th August, says that a fine seam of coal has been recently opened at Salmon River, about twelve miles from Truro, on the Pictou road. A shaft was sunk on this spot twenty years ago, by the late John Archibald, of Salmon River, and a few chalderons raised, when operations were stopped by the Agent of the General Mining Association. A few individuals in Truro have recently associated themselves for the purpose of making further explorations, and the result has exceeded their most sanguine expectations. The old shaft which had become filled with rubbish was cleansed out, and at the depth of thirty-five feet the seam presented a face of four or five feet in thickness, with a few inches of shale on the surface. Within the last three or four weeks, the miners have been engaged in boring about 250 feet to the eastward of the shaft, and at the depth of 170 feet have reached the shaft six feet in thickness.

The coal has been examined by several practical miners, and pronounced of good quality. The success of these operations has created intense satisfaction in Colchester, and shares which were five pound set the out set, have been disposed at an advance, and £100 have been offered for others. It is believed that the coal can be raised at 3s 6d per ton, and being within twenty feet of the public highway, will become available for general consumption in all the surrounding country.

Amateur Histrionics.

We learn that an appetite for private theatricals is beginning to manifest itself among the rising generation of Western Canada. Such a development cannot be too deeply deplored, or too emphatically protested against.

Universal experience demonstrates that the amateur stage is one of the most patent and direct roads to ruin with which this world is cursed. The police annals of London (and we doubt not of most large cities,) swarm with proofs to this effect. The man who denies the truth of our assertion can have paid very little attention to the dismal statistics of Bow Street and the Old Bailey. Of the ill-fated culprits, who yearly appear before these tribunals, belonging to such classes as clerks or shop-keeper's assistants, a very large proportion date their downfall to a craving appetite for the sock and buskin.

Nor is it strange that such should be the case, when we come steadily to look into the tastes and habits induced by such a pursuit.

The aspirant after histrionic distinction, is necessarily thrown into the society of the idle and dissipated. The getters up of a spouting club are in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, worthless, unsettled vagabonds; the rolling-stones of social life, who never gather the moss of respectability and competence. Every community of any extent can furnish specimens of the creature to whom we have references. He may be recognized by his headmark. You can tell him by the lounging style in which he shuffles along the leading streets, his face deformed by patches of filthy hair, and his garments cut after a rakish pattern. In bar-rooms and free-and-easy clubs, he is the cock of the walk, and he is looked up to as a pregnant authority in all matters connected with the minor stage. He has by heart a list of every farce and melodrama produced within the last five years, and can tell you all the petty current on dits touching the third and fourth rate actors of the day.

It can easily be conceived that the intimate association with such a worthy would have a most pestilential tendency to unsettle the habits of any raw, thoughtless young man. The poor lad, probably fresh from the country, in insensibly led to look up to the loafer as a species of Sir Oracle and to ape his characteristics. He comes to regard the stage as the most enviable arena where renown is to be gained, and consequently to view the shop in the most unappetizing light. Instead of studying the details of his trade or profession, his mind is continually absorbed by vague longings after the laurels of the stage; and the desire to realize a decent competence is superseded by a hankering after the puff puste gems, and the timber [illegible] diadem of the ruinie monarch.

And what is the consequence, [illegible] a great favour, purchased with tears never to be repaid,) he is enrolled as a member of the [illegible] longed for corps dramatic, the demoralizing process progresses with railroad speed. In place of occupying his spare time with solid and instructive reading, the miserable simpleton is engaged committing to memory the turgid trash for the part of which he has been cast. Not only are the most precious moments of his life thus fritted unprofitably away, but his mind is stored with a confused mass of literary rubbish made up of spurious sentiment, and of the lowest ribaldry. He becomes opulent in slang-phrases and high-sounding platitudes, calculated to bring down a clap from admiring galleries, and gain the affections of feather-headed chamber-maids and milliners.

As a necessary result of his miserable training, the hapless youth becomes unfit for useful and laudable pursuits. Almost never will you detect the name of such a one in the list of a mechanic institute's committee. Far more seldom is he to be met with in the noble head-roll of Sunday school teachers. We speak from personal and wide-extending experience when we make these assertions. Exceptions may be found, but they only go to prove the rule.

Then again, every public improvement involves a series of preliminary rehearsals, and of these a majority take place in some Thespian house-of-call. Of course decency demands that something must be done for the good of the landlord; and, moreover, every one knows that declamation is a thirst-provoking work! The cobwebs require to be washed down! Besides, many of the magnets of the stage loved their glass! Old Kean discussed his quart of neat brandy during the progress of a five act tragedy; and George Frederick Cook required to be half-seas-over before he could top his part. These are high authorities to the budding Roscius, and consequently he does as the "stars" did, and becames erudite in the concoction of slings, horns and cocktails!

Need we say how naturally all these antecedents led to dishonesty and peculation? The poor witling contracts habits which require more money for their gratification than he can legitimately command. Fatally opportune is the desk or till of his employer, and—but we need not repeat a tale unhappily too common!

Wind we up with a little incident which came under our own ken.

One of our fellow students in the University of ———, was a young man of more than average abilities. For the first session or two, John Primrose (as we shall call him) attracted attention by the skill which he displayed in performing the prescribed exercises of his classes, and even succeeded in carrying off more than one premium.—John's parents, who, though respectable, were poor, had pinched themselves, as Scottish parents frequently do, to give him a college education; and they looked forward with hopeful pleasure to the time when, at the bar, or in the pulpit, their beloved boy would "gild their humble name," and gladden with competence their pathway to the tomb. Often have we met the old man in his son's humble lodging, when he brought from the country a supply of fresh eggs or butter for the student, and a finer specimen of the small tenant farmer we never beheld.

Unfortunately, John, who had a talent for elocution, was induced to join a theatrical association, and being of an ardent temperament, he soon gave himself up heart and soul to the allurements of his new pursuit. Gradually his studies became neglected; instead of praises he brought down the sharp rebukes of his professors; and no longer did the name of John Primrose appear in the annual prize list of his Alma mater. By and by, the presence became familiar at drinking clubs, where he resigned for liquor, and the increasing spottiness of his garments demonstrated that [illegible] becoming more and more known [illegible] purgatorialness of penury. To cut a long story short, the promising student degenerated into a ruined, ruinous, spirit-broken man.

Many years after we had lost sight of our quondam class fellow, we chanced, one afternoon, to take a stroll through the fair of P———. In front of a booth where a melo-drama, a comic song, and a pantomime were dispensed for the fee of one penny sterling, a motley group of Thespians were dancing in order to attract visitors.—Guess our feelings when in the midst of these squalid vagabonds (vagabonds by position as well as by Act of Parliament) we discovered our poor friend John Primrose! He was tricked out as a flaunting tragedy queen (females being at a premium in the corps) and with simulated glee was taking part in a reel, his partner being the clown of the company!

Pained and disgusted as we were, an impulse not to be resisted led us to mount the platform, and address ourselves to the sorely fallen ex-student. Poor soul! He recognized us at once, and cried like a child when we held forth our hand, and enunciated his name in a tone of rustic kindness.—Through the strata of coarse paint which incrusted the lost one's face, we could distinctly trace the combined furrows of dissipation and famine; and a short, angry, tearing cough, told plainer than words could do that consumption was busy at work in that exhausted frame!

Just as poor John left us to take his part in the clap-trap drama, and as he pocketed the trifle which we forced upon his acceptance, he directed our attention to a filthy, ragged, drunken old man who was officiating as candle snuffer of the establishment: "Do you mind my father?" he hissed forth in accents of indescribable misery and remorse—"See what I have brought him to! Would you have known the old man again?"

Let "young Canada" be warned by this lurid beacon, to steer clear of the shoals and quicksands which it indicates.—Macgeorge's Tales, &c.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Cobourg, Port Hope and Peterborough Railway—John Fowler.
Notice—Robert White.
Portrait—Sawers & Murray,
Crystal Palace—Sawers & Murray.
Books, Stationery & Music—Sawers & Murray.
Notice.—A Fowlie & Co.
Diaries for 1859.—Sawers & Murray.

The Examiner.

THURSDAY, OCT. 7, 1858.

The Public Works at Bobcaygeon.

Now that the improvement of the navigation at Bobcaygeon is completed, and the communication between Mud Lake and Lindsay supposed to be uninterrupted, at an expense to the people of the Province of some £40,000, it will appear strange when we state that one Monsen Boyd, the owner of a mill property there, disputes the public right to the advantage of the works, which the public money has produced. This Mr. Boyd affects to treat the Government as trespassers, and openly takes possession of all the accommodation of the canal sides and the water course, piling the lumber which is made at his mill all along the canal, at its very edge, so as a person cannot even walk between the canal and his lumber piles; in fact, taking up every piece of available ground for shipment, to the great inconvenience of the public, whose money made the improvements; and this is done under the assertion of right, Mr. Boyd defying the Government to dispute it with him. We next find that Mr. Boyd, by throwing slabs and edges from his mill into the race, which empties at the foot of the lock, has raised a bank, over which it is barely possible now, by the use of capstan and poles, to pass the steamboats which require to run through, although there are two feet of water more on the sills of the lock than is necessary to float them. The working of the gates of the lock also is seriously interfered with, and will shortly be prevented, by the practice Mr. Boyd has adopted of removing the bark and other obstructions which collect in his race, and pushing them into the lock, when they sink and interrupt the free working of the gates, so that in place of one man being able to open them, as at first, they now require five or six, to the great injury of the gates themselves. This Mr. Boyd, it seems by the published report, received from government £200 compensation, and had his mill races completed for him in a most expensive and substantial manner. We now ask the Commissioner whether the money expended on the works, the compensation to Mr. Boyd in money and raceways, was to secure the freedom of the navigation to the public, or whether the whole matter is designed merely for the advantage of Mr. Boyd? Mr. Boyd says he owns everything, and takes possession. The public desire to know what they have got for their money. When the navigation was thrown open in the spring, it was pronounced perfect, nothing more requiring to be done, no whatever of inconvenience is suffered now is through the instrumentality of the assertion of the only Mr. Monsen Boyd. If Mr. Boyd's pretensions are founded in justice, let the people know it, and let it be known that the £40,000 expended on the back waters was for the purpose of constructing a grand entry to Mr. Boyd's mill. But if Mr. Boyd is an insolent pretender and a selfish depopulator of his locality, as we believe him to be, let him be so necessarily dealt with as he has been dealing by his victims. His lordly conceptions must be curbed; the day has gone by when the petty village tyrant can be allowed to exercise a sway over the transient occupiers of the public highway, or when a miserable selfish mushroom imitator of a feudal aristocracy can be allowed to levy tribute from any but his own vassals. If it is a drawback to Mr. Boyd's selling operations that the [illegible] of the canal should be as free to others as to him, that the waters of the canal should be open to float steamboats as well as rowboats, let him suffer it; it is no more than others have had to do under like circumstances; besides, he got £200 in money and perhaps £300 to work, and although it may suit him to shut up the country, then he may work away undisturbed, it can hardly have been contemplated by Parliament, when they voted the money to improve the backwaters that the only improvement to be really effected would be in the raceways of Mr. Boyd's mill.

A very strong current of emigration has set in through Bobcaygeon to the newly opened country in its rear, and it is a matter of the first importance to those settlers to know whether the splendid works of Bobcaygeon shall be considered for the accommodation of the steamboats which carry the settlers and their freight in and out, or whether being finished, they are to be left in the hands of a grasping enemy to their interests, whose whole aim is to shut out every thing that tends to advance the civilization of his neighbourhood. We trust that the Commissioner of Public Works will give the subject the attention it deserves, and either procure the perfect freedom of the navigation at this point for the steamboats and other craft, or else declare publicly, so as there will be no misunderstanding, that the property upon which the Government have expended the public money was and continues to be held in fee adversely to them; and that all who travel that way, without permission of his agregance, Monsen Boyd, are trespassers on his rights.

The Provincial Exhibition.

Canada has asserted her right to a position among the leading nations of the world, by her Crystal Palace and Exhibition of her agricultural and industrial products, at Toronto during the last and present weeks. No doubt we are far behind our great prototype of 1851, or even many of its successors and imitators, but our Exhibition is well worthy of us, and we are proud to point to it as an earnest of our healthy persevering enterprise increasing with our extended resources and future national wealth. Our fatherland across the Atlantic has too long had but an imperfect idea of our worth and capability; latterly, though gradually, have its eyes been opening to our true position and importance, but when the story of our Crystal Palace wings its way across the mighty deep, will old John Bull, our hitherto neglectful parent, will stare with astonishment at the doings of his precocious child and may paradventure be aroused to a true sense verdict rendered in each. As to the action on promissory notes and mortgages, though they were obviously owing to the brokers of the times, to be brought to trial, none of them were in reality contested, but merely defended in order to gain time for payment, with perhaps one or two exceptions:—

Bank of Upper Canada vs. James Scott et al. Action on Bill of Exchange. Verdict by consent for Plaintiffs—damages £188 11 7. M. Dunsford for plaintiffs, Smith for defendants.

Bank of Upper Canada vs. McDermott et al. Action on Bill of Exchange. Verdict by consent for plaintiffs for £120 14 2. M. Dunsford for plaintiff.

Moss et al. vs. Scott. Action on Bill of Exchange. Verdict by consent for plaintiffs for £109 4 6½. E. Burnham for plaintiffs, Weller for defendants.

Baxter vs. Wallis. Covenant on Mortgage. Verdict by consent for £115 10 0. E. Burnham for plaintiff, Dennistoun for defendant.

Johnston vs. Clen et al. Action on promissory note—verdict for £212 8 1 by consent. E. Burnham for plaintiff, Vinard for defendants.

Ross vs. Fowler. Action on promissory note—verdict for £139 13 9.

Redman vs. Bowie. Ejectment—verdict for plaintiff. E. Burnham for plaintiff.

Fontin et al. vs. Rebill. Action on a promissory note, for money advanced &c. Verdict for plaintiffs by consent for £62 15 8. Dennistoun for plaintiffs, E. Burnham for defendant.

Commercial Bank vs. Scott et al. Action on promissory note. Verdict for plaintiffs by consent for £299 7 2. Dennistoun for plaintiffs, C. A. Weller for defendants.

Commercial Bank vs. Scott et al. Action on promissory note; verdict by consent for plaintiffs for £129 12 8. Dennistoun for plaintiffs, C. A. Weller for defendants.

Commercial Bank vs. Scott et al. Action on promissory note; verdict by consent for plaintiffs for £202 7 11. Dennistoun for plaintiffs, C. A. Weller for defendants.

Bern vs. Russell et al. Covenant on mortgage—verdict for plaintiffs for £144 4 6. Dennistoun for plaintiff.

Morrow vs. Graham et al. Action on promissory note—verdict for £111 14 0. Dennistoun for plaintiff.

Bank of Toronto vs. Ewing et al. Action on promissory note—verdict for plaintiffs by consent for £335 5 9. C. A. Weller for plaintiffs, Dennistoun for defendants.

Bradfield vs. Peplow. Ejectment—verdict for plaintiff. Burnham for plaintiff, Vinard for defendant.

Kelly vs. Boulton et al. Action on promissory note—verdict for plaintiff for £51 4 3. Weller for plaintiff, Vinard for defendants.

Thorndike vs. Davidson. Executor. Covenant on mortgage—verdict by consent for plaintiff for £141 7 10. Ecourse for plaintiff, Hudspeth for defendant.

Finaly vs. Collins. Ejectment—verdict for plaintiff. Lemoine for plaintiff, Greene for defendant.

Kidd vs. Eyres. Action on unsettled account—referred to arbitration for order of the Judge. E. Burnham for plaintiff, Dennistoun for defendant.

Dunsford vs. Armstrong. Action for account—verdict for plaintiff for £15 damages. Philpotts for plaintiff, Hudspeth for defendant.

Moore vs. Jackson. Ejectment—verdict for plaintiff by consent. Hudspeth for plaintiff, Dennistoun for defendant.

Moore vs. Jackson. Covenant on mortgage—verdict by consent for £155 10 for plaintiff. Hudspeth for plaintiff, Dennistoun for defendant.

Lloyd vs. Shotwell, absconding debtor. Action for amount—verdict for plaintiff for £ . C. A. Weller for plaintiff.

Hamilton vs. Sawright. Ejectment—verdict by consent for plaintiff—damages one shilling. Hethrell for plaintiff, Weller for defendant.

Thorndyke vs. Thorndyke. Action for Seduction of plaintiff's daughter—verdict for plaintiff for £100. Philpotts for plaintiff, Powell for defendant.

Bank of Montreal vs. Boswell et al. Action on promissory notes—verdict by consent for plaintiffs for £206 8 0. Dennistoun for plaintiffs, George Dunsford for defendants.

Burn vs. Town Council Town of Peterborough. Action on £300 debenture—verdict by consent for plaintiff for £318 19 2. Dennistoun for plaintiff, E. Burnham for defendants.

CRIMINAL.

William Crozier. Murder. Guilty—sentenced to be hanged on the 18th December next. Judging from the result of similar trials in these Counties, this sentence will in all probability be commuted to a term of years in the Provincial Penitentiary.

Patrick Rourk alias George O'Rourk. Larceny. Guilty—sentenced two years in the Provincial Penitentiary.

Robert Weir, James Weir, Elijah Bowie, William Bowie and John Mitchell. Assault with intent to commit previous felony burn. Robert Weir, James Weir and Elijah Bowie guilty. John Mitchell and William Bowie not guilty. Sentenced to three month's imprisonment with hard labour, and a fine of £20 each.

☞ We would direct the attention of the Editor of the Review and his confreres of the Mechanics Club to an article which unparalleled in another column, taken from the "Quarterly Review and Literary Journal" by the Rev'd J. MacGregor, the "Bohemian" of Hamilton, entitled "Athletic Education," and would be glad to have their opinion concerning the same.

The Orange Meeting To-day.

The grand demonstration of the people of the County of Peterborough, touching the political conduct of Sir Edmund Head, and his countenance of Governor General, taken place to-day. All lovers of order and popular government will embrace the occasion, to express by their countenance of the movement, which is sympathetic with those already held in other parts of the Province, the abhorrence in which they hold the antiquated and exploded doctrine of divine and indefeasible right among mortals, as well as the forced application of prerogative, in the exercise of a delegated authority by the head of the Executive.

That Sir Edmund Head is an aristocrat dyed in the wool, is well ascertained, and therefore his arbitrary interruption of the rule or custom established for the guidance of the ministers who form his Council, is nothing wonderful; but it will indeed be wonderful, if a people born to freedom, and enjoying the blessings of self-government, should without a murmur, brook the insult to their institutions in which Sir Edmund Head has been lately indulging. It will be a sorry day for Canada, when, forgetful of its position and prospects, it shall tamely submit to have the responsible guarantees of the popular working of its constitution, snuffed out at the there will of a Governor General. Its mission is not as a footstool to an insolent aristocracy, that has already overburdened the land of its growth, but as an example to older countries, from which they may learn how the people of this generation have outgrown the bonds which restrained the action of their ancestors, and proved, by their admirable respect for the laws of their making, and the constituted authority of their choice, how capable mankind are, with religion, morality, education and experience, of performing, through themselves, the functions of government of which, in other ages and in other countries, they have been robbed by an insolent and overbearing aristocracy. Sir Edmund Head and all of his class may rely upon it that loyal as are the Canadian people, their loyalty is reasonable, and its object one which recommends itself; but it does not extend beyond the Crown to the miserable satellites who hover around, blinding themselves with its brilliancy, and watching how, in its name, they can devour and waste the energies and the liberties of a people. Canada has had sufficient acquaintance with this insolent class, who presume in their ignorance to direct and circumscribe the free action of an enlightened race, and now the day approaches when the Crown, in delegating its authority over the dependencies of the Empire, must be advised to make use of such dispositions and qualifications as might be chosen by the Colonists, if the choice were submitted to them. When the Ministers of Great Britain shall have recognized this principle as pertaining to the good government of the Colonial Empire, and the prosperity and contentment of its inhabitants, then will there be strength irrefragible in the bond which unites the offspring to its parent; but, without such a respectful inclination to the wishes of the people of a great and growing country, the security is but uncertain that the bond of union will withstand the occurrence of an opportunity for disruption. We hope, in common with all true friends of our country, that no occasion may arise for the contemplation of such a change, but that whoever is entrusted by the Crown with the patronage of the Colonies, will so exercise it as to let them feel that the kindly feeling of the Empire yearns towards them, and that what offends against their taste shall move the parent heart to destroy. The grievance of to-day is the unconstitutional Governor, Sir Edmund Head. Canada prays that he may be removed, let her be heard. Let England make the sacrifice and the atonement, and so may peace and good will from this Colony to the mother country be proclaimed for ever.

Communications.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Capital Punishment.

In the Assizes held here last week, a fellow mortal received the dread sentence of death for a crime, the awful responsibility attendant on which, every thinking man must contemplate with sadness of heart.—Was the verdict of the jury or the sentence of the Judge a just one, is not what we wish now to discuss. We will take for granted the evidence justified the verdict, and we know the law compelled the sentence. If the sentence be an unjust one, Jury and Judge are alike free from responsibility; the law says death is the punishment of murder, and if it should not be so in the sight of God, then, are the law makers, and those who appoint them the responsible parties before Him for the judicial murder of a fellow being. This throws the responsibility on the people, have they properly considered this responsibility which rests upon them? What if money is generally [illegible] to the Judge? In this our own Canada, (thank God it is so) the misery is optional and the caprice of a ruler may contribute hope. The stern law stands "Death for Murder," and, also that it should be so in fair Canada, death for crimes also which in our mother land, are now forever exept from this category.

We purpose briefly to examine the different points of this important question with reference to an abolition of death punishments under any and every circumstance. We are not in the opening of the question will the "ordained (foreshad) of God to Moses which in [illegible] the cry a Whose shedeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed." Nor is it just here that a matter of current controversy, whether this was a direct command of God to Noah as the representative of the human family, and so binding upon all posterity as a divine institution, or whether it was merely a law forming a part of what is called the Mosaic Economy, but which was repealed by the Christian Dispensation, through the incarnation of our Lord and Saviour, except what was retained of for us in the Gospels of the Evangelists, or whether quite [illegible] only a prophecy indicating that the murderer shall meet his punishment by the hands of men which we abhor not. These various positions we will neither discuss, but we appeal earnestly to the thoughtful perusal of the New Testament, if the whole spirit of the teaching of our blessed Saviour be not in direct opposition to the eye for eye, tooth for tooth, life for life principles of punishments of the Mosaic Economy; and if deliberation, charity and love do not fundamental principles of the Christian religion. We might argument these positions, but we content ourselves with the above appeal to the calm judgment of the careful perusal of the New Testament of Christ.

Another aspect in which the question is viewed is the influence as examples, of death punishments. This involves a supposition which is not always just, viz:—that murder is always premeditated. We know that murders are often the consequences of rashness, of irritability of temper and of the insanity of intoxication; as the example of death punishments potent here, or of any influence at all? Emphatically, no. If a better nature be not a controlling power, capital punishments are forgotten or ignored. Then again with murders which were premeditated, where has been the influence of these punishments? Surely in this respect this argument kills itself. And the influence of the scaffold, who defends this? No one who has witnessed the harrowing scene of an execution and studied the effect upon the mass usually congregated there. Oh no, public executions are not beneficial; they are only instructive to the reflective mind who shuts himself up in his closet and gives way to his thoughts; and this is the class who need not such terrible monitors, the class for whom they may be properly said to be examples, are heedless even of the moral power which rightly punishes crime. Again, what influence has this punishment on the culprit himself? An eminent French novelist, writing on this subject says—"Either they dare it with audacious contempt, or undergo it in stupor, half dead with terror, or present their heads to the axe in a state of sincere and deep repentance. Now, (he continues) the punishment is insufficient for those who brave it, useless for the already morally dead, exaggerated for the sincerely repentant."—This is a comprehensive and pertinent argument against the supposed beneficial influence of death punishments on the culprit.

One word more, and let us grant that the Bible, our rule of faith and guide, not only sanctions but commands life for life, and the murderer in being sentenced to death receives only the just punishment of his crime at the express command of God, where, let us ask in that Bible is the authority for man, weak, fallible man, to revoke this supposed decree of Jehovah, and grant a murderer a reprieve from his sentence. If the Bible has anything that justifies blood for blood in one case, it does in all without qualification, and man dare not take from it or add to it; and yet what is the position of our law-givers in regard to death punishments? Verily, a serious one indeed, and we hope that day is near at hand when our rulers and ourselves shall fully appreciate this fearful responsibility, and banish these punishments from our midst. We may if necessary return to this subject again, meantime we commend these remarks to the earnest consideration of the readers of the Examiner.

YOUNG CANADA.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

The Forbes Mackenzie's Act in Peterboro'.

SIR,—While the columns of our most able Journals are occupied in discussing the working and practicability of the Forbes Mackenzie's Act, having for its object the suppression of the sale of intoxicating liquors, and the better regulation of public morality, in a country where it is computed there is a greater quantity of the "wholesome mountain dew" imbibed than by any other people in the world; and as we pause to think and reflect on the almost incredible amount set forth as having been consumed by every man, woman, and child, we would be apt to judge harshly of such a community, and think it hardly possible that such a state of things could really exist. But let us for a moment apply the Divine command, to "Cast out the beam from our own eye, that we might see clearly how to cast out the mot from the eye of our brother," and look at our own position as a people in the same respect, in this our good Town of Peterboro'.

Let us for an instant indulge in a few facts and figures, which you are aware, Mr. Editor, are sometimes very stubborn things, and see how far we are in advance of our Glasgow friends, in point of the liquor traffic, and its effects on the community.

In the first place, there are at present in the Town of Peterboro' 40 duly licensed establishments for the sale of intoxicating liquors, exclusive of Peterboro' East.—Presuming then that each of these establishments sells at the rate of 3 gallons of spirituous liquors, and 2 gallons of malt liquors per day, (and that is, we are assured, less than the real average) and making an allowance of 65 days in a year for Sundays, holidays, &c.,—and there is generally a double portion drunk on those days,—then say, for convenience sake, there are only 300 saleable or business days in the year, would amount to 1,500 gallons to each establishment, or 60,000 gallons for the 40! Taking this at the low figure of $1 40c per gallon, makes a total of $84,000. Then taking for granted the population of our Town to be at present 4,500 souls, it would leave to each man, woman, and child enumerated the consumption of 13⅓ gallons, at a tax to their pockets of $18 66⅔c.

In this table there is no allowance made for the amount of money expended in the prosecution of cases arising from its baneful effects; the cost for the amount of time lost through its influence; the support of of an inebriate asylum, (for our County Jail is nothing else) or for the [illegible] expenses attending its maintenance; and which, were it added to the above already enormous sum, would make it at least two-thirds more.

It is we who should rejoice the heavens, and upon the [illegible] groan, so freely and so wrongfully put upon the heads of our "brother Scots," on the banks of the Clyde, and for which they have become so famous.

We can well remember the opposition with which the project for the construction of the Millbrook section of the Port Hope Railroad met with on account of the alleged imposition of taxes upon the people; when in fact we expend as much money in the course of 3 years, 1 month and 7 days, for intoxicating drinks, as would build a direct line of Railroad from this Town to Port Hope, at the same rate which was paid Mr. John Fowler for building the Peterboro' Section, viz:—£2,145 cy., per mile. This is a test for any Municipal Councillors to crack, and a subject for the Rate-payers of Peterboro' to contemplate.

The time for the renewal of Licenses to these "drams of wealth," is at hand. Will not our Councillors weigh the matter soberly and candidly, and think before granting this wholesale robbery of our citizens, whether it is consistent with their conduct as Christians, and their duty as the advocates and maintainers of the public welfare?

Truly we need a Forbes Mackenzie' Act in this our Town of Peterboro', and shall we not have it?

JUSTITIA.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Peterboro', 11th Sept. 1858.

DEAR SIR,—Below are a few lines suggested by a visit to the sun back Lakes on the Otonabee.

Yours truly,

J. H.

Fair scenes of beauty which long eyes gone,
Were deep secluded amidst the wilds unknown,
But late emerged into human sight,
Like stars ye shine and by no borrow'd light;
An diamonds studded on old nature's dress,
Her looks to brighten and her sons impress,
And link'd like sisters by your liquid arms,
Ye lend a lustre to each others charms.

With growing rapture, I your shores survey,
Delighted with the prospect they display,
And greet the roaring falls and verdant isles,
With admiration these and those with smiles,
And ask why they by Poets were not sung,
Why with their praises has not welkin rung,
Why prose has not felt happy with the theme,
And paid the tribute of a just esteem.

But trace, why blame, unknown your past career,
As are the siblings of your distant sphere,
Else genius, grateful would record your praise,
And charge her sons to crown you with their lays;
Their fancies tickled would your past to grace,
Have throng'd your shores with an illustrious race.

Have mem'd the spot some bleeding Hector fell,
Or aged Solon bode his friends farewell;
Recounted chiefs, who, anxious for a name,
Did ruin nations in the quest of fame,
And mounted thrones so gained by streams of blood;
To wash the guilt, would ask a second flood,
Shewn cities where art had splendid trophies won
And genius shone with radiance like the sun,
And sages wise as Socrates could be,
Indulged in reveries as deep as he.

More happy ye—no annals have to trace,
Less fraught with horror oft—than with disgrace;
Your past is mute, wrong near you was not found
Your shores to tyrants (so forbidden ground;)
Were growl unheard, and love of glory none,
In search of gold, no Dorado ever gone,
And Mammon's tread told where no riches lay,
Nor greens and sorrow's mark'd her dreadful way

But in peaceful slumber for so long,
The winds your music, and the birds your song,
Deck'd round by natures livery—verdant woods,
And kept in vigour by the pouring floods,
With bays and creeks and streamlets all around,
While deep below the finny tribes abound;
And on your bosoms as engraved on light,
Adjacent scenes are present to the sight;
Ye glow with freshness in the earths old age,
A new performer on a time worn stage;
You may array'd in such a rich attire,
Well suit the mind that nature's works inspire,
Your gentle waves could soothe the weary breast
And shady groves a sweetness gives to rest,
The circling bays with blooming flowers bedeck,
Express the cares which in the bosom frets,
A calm ye yield unto the aching heart,
A solace when the troubled spirits smart,
To natures lovers works they must admire,
And ample scope unto the Poets lyre,
And to these toss'd alike by friends and foes,
A sure asylum where they seek repose.

Safe from past records which might mar your name,
You sail times current in the wake of fame,
Your future beaming as Aurora bright,
Foretells such changes as will cheer the sight
When round your shores and with a hearty will
An active race shall all these woodlands till;
And by their skill combined to nimble hands,
Make gentle lawns where now the elm-tree stands,
And valley soften into shady groves,
Where songsters convert and the student roves,
And blooming gardens which enchant the eye,
Adorn those heights where oaks are towering high,
While grazing flocks on lands from waste reclaimed,
And fruitful fields and mansions neatly framed,
Shall give to beauty lustre, wealth to toil,
And make the brow of honest labour smile.

When [illegible] your charming prime,
Your name accord most with your happy state,
Nor less be thought of than it has come late;
Speak of your past as well as present bloom,
On which to wear you safely may presume,
Of both the past and present it partaker,
As well as honour'ble—The Virgin Lakes.

For the Examiner.

Lines on Peterborough.

BY S. M. D.

Swiftly flows the noble river,
Kindly coursing on its way:
Now through forest wild and dreary,
Now through meadows never weary,
Sparkling in the sunlight's ray.

Noble trees o'er arch its bosoms,
Gently waving in the breeze;
And in countless numbers flowers,
For the Indian maiden's bowers,
Perfume sweetly along the trees.

On the banks of that fair river,
'Mid a forest lone and wild;
A rude hamlet's smoke appeareth,
Through the branches green upreareth,
Curling in the evening mild.

Lonely in that forest dreary,
Did they watch the moonlight rays;
Glimpsing downwards through the branches,
And his bark canoe be launches,
Singing songs of better days.

But behold! not lone to wonder,
Thus was left that settler long;
Others came with hopes, and fearing;
Built their hopes amid the clearing,
Now a joyous happy throng.

Clearing, fencing, ditching, draining,
Smiling homes spread wide and long;
Here by industry and tillage,
Quickly grew a happy village,
Singing sweet their evening song.

All day long upon the greensward,
Little children playful run;
And their father hears the laughter,
And he hurries homeward faster,
Happy he his work is done.

Smiling welcomes greet his presence,
Snow-white table plenteous spread;
And at evening prayers ascending,
High to Him for mercies sending,
Gives to them their daily bread.

Thus grew beautious Peterborough,
In the morning of its days;
Onward, onward, still advancing,
Was its motto, brightly glancing,
Glowing in the morning rays'

Now behold our lovely city,
Smiling 'mid its groves of green;
And our streets so broad and level,
Never you'll hear the midnight revel,
All is happy, gay, serene.

See upon that lofty summit,
'Mid the graceful waving pines;
Stands our church to bless the nations,
Mark its handsome situation,
Morn or evening's changing time.

Other Church-spires pointing heavenward
Glitter in the morning rays;
And a stately building crowneth,
Tender Hill, as Vico it forneth,
Thereto Jubilee gently sways.

Through the trees the tombstones glisten,
In the graveyard old so near;
Gems grown are its walks reminding,
Like these paths our footsteps sounding,
Mem'ning onward—ending here.

Street the recent shadows league,
On Lake Cemetery so fair;
Art and nature there combining,
Circling walks, and paths entwining,
Makes a spot of beauty rare.

Hark! what's this comes sounding onward,
Pealing, fearless, through the wild?
'Tis the railways, trade improving,
Shows that here there's something doing,
Early morn, or evening mild.

Noble spirits reign among us,
High resolve and duty stern;
Shows the task to grandeur leading,
Shows that Peterborough's trending,
Ever thus each to honor turn.

Peterborough, striding onward,
Will in history bear a part;
Colleges of fact and science,
Terrible Wisdom's fiery lances,
Beasts of learning, wizards of art.

Canada, with pride shall name her,
And her sister city say:
"She is wealth and honor reigning,
All our homage now is claiming,
She is Queen of Canada."

The Recent Violation of the Constitution by the Gov. General of Canada.

From the Manchester Daily Examiner & Times, September 16.

The last intelligence from Canada has taken English people by surprise. It carries us back to the events of 1837, with which it has remote personal associations.—The leading incidents of the late ministerial crisis have created a painful sensation in that Colony, and will cause much astonishment in the mother country. The conduct of the Governor General which appears to have been eminently unconstitutional, has aroused a storm of indignation which may lead to his recall.

The circumstances out of which all this excitement has arisen, are detailed by newspaper correspondents, whose testimony we must accept, were it not (as it is) borne out by documentary evidence. On the 28th of July, the ministry then in office, known as the Macdonald Ministry, was defeated in the Assembly by a majority of fourteen, and as an almost necessary consequence, the members resigned their functions. The Governor, Sir Edmund Head, under these circumstances, was constrained to ask Mr. Brown, the leader of the popular party in Upper Canada, to found a new Ministry. This gentleman, it would seem, was not quite prepared for the emergency. He did not thus expect to be raised from the position of a journalist, and representative of a constituency, to the real head of a government. But, on the other hand, Mr. Brown was not the man to shirk the fair responsibilities of a situation to which the faithful discharge of minor duties had led him. He agreed to consider the Governor's request, and his Excellency gave the fullest assurance that he would render him every legitimate assistance. Under this promise, Mr. Brown set to work, and to the astonishment of his antagonists, he soon succeeded. Mr. Dorion leader of the popular party in Lower Canada, first joined his political associate, and, between them, these gentlemen formed an administration. On Thursday Mr. Brown received his Excellency's instructions, and on the following Saturday, Sir Edmund Head was informed by the new Premier that he was ready to accept office. This intimation took the Governor, like his former advisers, by surprise. They had anticipated a contrary result, but were not cast down by a first discouragement. Here the battle of tactics commenced, and we are sorry to say the Queen's representative enlisted in the contest. On Sunday, the 1st of August, Mr. Brown received from the Governor-General an extraordinary "memorandum." It had, in the meantime, been currently reported that his Excellency was "personally opposed to the incoming Ministry" and this gratuitous manifesto proved the accuracy of the statement. Sir Edmund Head wished to let Messrs. Brown and Dorion see how very unpleasant he could make himself by stretching his prerogative, and, notwithstanding his promise of assistance, how little they could rely upon his good will. This document said that his Excellency wished Mr. Brown, and the gentlemen associated with him to understand that he gave "no pledge, express or implied, with reference to the dissolving of Parliament;" and the memorandum went on to say, that he would only consent to prorogue the Assembly under such and such conditions. If the latter course were adopted, Sir Edmund stipulated that certain measures should be proceeded with, and become law, without delay. This missive damped the enthusiasm of the Liberal ministers and their friends; but the new Cabinet was not disposed to tolerate such unusual dictation. Mr. Brown acknowledged the "memorandum" by "a note" in which he respectfully suggested that until the Ministers had assumed their functions, "they would not be in a position to discuss the important measures and questions of public policy referred to" in this premature manifesto. Next day the Brown-Dorion Cabinet was sworn in. The same afternoon they met the House of Assembly; and a vote of want of confidence was obtained by a coup. The denouement instantly followed. On Tuesday, the Ministers called upon the Governor to dissolve Parliament. The Governor refused to grant their request, and they resigned in a body at once. A popular Government was thus ousted by a cabal, with the Queen's representative at its head. After an ineffectual effort to induce a gentleman of no mark to try his 'prentice hand at cabinet making, the Governor General sent for one of his old favorites, and the Macdonald-Cartier administration was re-instated

We come now to the second chapter of this marvellous intrigue. While the short-lived Ministers were put to the trouble and expense of a fresh election, the old Cabinet who had gone out and come in again, were by a trick, for which they are likely to suffer, allowed to retain their seats in the Assembly. This manœuvre was very important. It is doubtful whether the Macdonaldites would have been reseated. A single appeal to the country shews that the constituencies were not inclined to indorse their proceedings. They made a tremendous effort to prevent the re-election of Mr. Brown for Toronto, but that gentleman was returned by a considerable majority.—The struggle was regarded as a test of the opinions of the colonists, and it demonstrates that in the present crippled the Ministers now in office are not popular. On the 28th of August at the close of the election, Mr. Brown had a majority of 150 over Mr. Cameron.

We have nothing to say on the particular questions which form the shibboleth of party warfare in Canada. The antagonisms of race and creed seem more intense in this flourishing country than in any other part of North America; and English journalists are not called upon to take sides in such a bitter controversy. But we are bound to protest against an attempt on the part of a Downing street nominee to destroy the value of representative institutions in an important colony. The "great test of Government question," about which so much bother has been made, is a small matter in the eyes of Englishmen; but the beamless of the Queen's British subjects feels indignation when he is told that one of her viceroys or lieutenants has assumed powers which Her Most Gracious Majesty never claimed. Tennyson has taught us how cleverly allied are poetry and politics; but a declaration of Milton's, which has become a household word among Anglo-Saxon men, should have prevented Sir Edmund Head from indulging in such vagaries as these we lament. Unfortunately there is considerable confusion in the proceedings of the Governor General. The position of support to Mr. Brown while he was forming a Ministry, and the factious opposition to him after the doubtful fact had been realized, can only be spoken of in terms of severe reproof. There is a want of candour and sincerity in this behaviour which cannot be excused or palliated. If the famous amendment of the 91st of July stood alone we might view it as an infelicitous if ill timed or a simple mistake; but it is not a thing apart. It is indeed not the worst, although the most certain indication of the Governor General's partizanship. The attitude and behaviour of Sir Edmund Head, from first to last, exhibit a mistaken and exaggerated estimate of his duties and prerogative. He appears to have thought he was at liberty to set up his own authority against that of the people of Canada, as expressed by their representatives. If conduct like that of Sir Edmund Head is to be permitted, there is an end to Responsible Government in our Colonies; but we are persuaded that Sir E. B. Lytton will reprove the Governor General, and if he should be called upon to resign, we could not sympathise with his misfortunes. We are reminded that a cousin of the present Governor General, in 1837, drove the Canadas into rebellion, and we know that subsequent good government converted the Provinces into a happy, contented and prosperous colony. It is therefore, a monstrous impropriety for Sir Edmund Head to pursue a course which might, if persisted in, destroy the benefits conferred by his immediate predecessors, and reproduce many of the evils which signalized the career of his relative.

Arrival of the "Nova Scotian."

QUEBEC, Oct. 5.

The Nova Scotian arrived here about six o'clock this evening.

The steamer Ariel, from New York, while approaching Southampton on the night of the 7th, ran aground off Stoneypoint; but was got off and proceeded, not having sustained any material damage.

Mr. Bradley, bearer of the United States treaty with China, has passed through France, en route for America. He came from America in company with the bearers of the English and French treaties.

The London Times, in an editorial, suggested by the cable, encourages the continuance of friendly relations between America and England. It says it does not hesitate to confess that it regards the opinions of the American people of far greater importance than the praise or blame, sympathies or antipathies, of any European state The Times also congratulates the American government for the spirited manner in which they are following up the late capture of the slaver Echo, but thinks they will not object to let England share in those expensive operations, even at the risk of "entrapment" on American vessels.

The plan for completing the Great Eastern consists in issuing new £1 shares to the extent of £330,000.

Money continued easy.

Gold was flowing into the bank in large quantities. £300,000 sterling was sent in on the 30th.

Atlantic Telegraph Shares are quoted at 300 to 330.

Mr. Whitehouse, ex-electrician of the Company had issued a pamphlet on the subject of his dismissal, &c. The London Daily News editorially picks it to pieces, and criticises with some severity Whitehouse's pretensions.

An instalment of 25 per cent on the Indian loan was paid without producing any effect on the money market.

The Dublin Mercantile Advertiser learns, that it has been determined greatly to extend and strengthen the defences at Spike Island, Queenstown harbour, placing all ports in the highest state of efficiency.

LATEST.

LONDON, Wednesday.

The Times' city article reports funds inactive yesterday, but improved ¼ in price.

The Daily News says, a slight stir in us was given by the continued influx of gold. The banks had received nearly half-a-million sterling since the date of last return.

The London papers publish a report by Mr. Varley, electrician, on the present state of the cable. Varley's experiments show that the cable has not parted. Faint signals are still received from Newfoundland, and he speaks of another and more distant fault, the locality of which he cannot estimate without going to Newfoundland.

MARSEILLES, Sept. 21.

It is reported from Algeria that serious disturbances have occurred at Oran, but the Government denies the rumor.

FRANCE.

The French naval station of the Antilles is to be augmented by two small vessels. Trade generally in Paris and departments quiet. Breadstuffs in Paris were quite dull. Wheat was abundant and lower in the Provincial markets.

Vintages had commenced in some sections under most favourable circumstances.

The French Consul General from Venezuela is expected home shortly, in consequence of "unpleasant difficulties" with the Venezuelan Government.

SPAIN.

The election of deputies is fixed for October.

A state of siege will soon be raised in Catalonia.

It is expected that the law on the Press will soon be presented.

The Times' Madorian correspondent says the Government has ordered reinforcements of 3,000 men, and all large vessels of war disposable, to be sent to Cuba forthwith.

PRUSSIA.

Several Berlin papers have been seized for publishing articles on the Regency question. The most delicate part of the arrangements are said to have been settled between the Queen and Prince of Prussia. The latter is to assume the title of Co-Regent, with unlimited powers.

RUSSIA.

More Agrarian disturbances are said to have taken place. No particulars. The Emperor and Empress had arrived at Moscow.

TURKEY.

The commission for the settlement of the Montenegrin frontier has completed its labours.

The Doctors are said to have agreed that the epidemic at Benyazi is not a plague, but a malignant kind of typhus.

MARKETS.

Liverpool, 22d Sept.

Breadstuff's market quite stagnant; sales very slow at falling prices. Flour—Western Canal 20s 6d to 21s 6d; Philadelphia and Baltimore 22s 6d to 24s. Wheat—new, unsaleable; prime old without change; white Canadian 6s 4d to 6s 11d; red do. 5s 4d to 6s 2d. Corn—white, 34s 6d to 35s 6d; yellow, 33s 6d to 34s; mixed 33s 6d to 34s.

Provisions—Beef sales better; prime mess 92s 6d to 100s. Pork—mess Western 72s 6d to 77s 6d. Lard—fine 61s to 63s 6d.

Ashes—Both sorts very dull; pots 32s 3d; pearls 32s 6d.

Sugar at steady.

Tea a shade dearer.

Cottons firm at 7⅞ to 8⅛; cottonade 9⅞.

Arrival of the "Hibernonia."

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.

The steamer Hibernonia, from Hamburg, by Southampton, arrived here this morning bringing London dates to the 21st ult.

The Liverpool Cotton Market is quite active, and, holders demanding better prices, in many cases an advance of 1 1-8th has been obtained. The sales on the 20th amounted to 10,000 bales.

The London Corn Market has experienced a decline of 1s a 2s. Money is abundant at two per cent. Consols quoted at 97¼a 97⅜ for money, and 97⅜ a 97⅝ for account.

The question of the Regency in Prussia is satisfactorily settled. The Queen withdraws her pretensions in favor of the Prince of Prussia, who assumes the nominal title of Count Regent, but with unlimited powers.

The Comet.

Each evening, this remarkable visitor from the remote regions of space is increasing in brilliancy. Last night between seven and eight o'clock, in a cloudless sky, it was a most conspicuous object—the nucleus being within half a degree of the bright star of Arcturus, and the tail sweeping towards the north-west in a graceful curve, almost reaching the constellation of Ursa Major. When first visible to the naked eye, about three weeks since, the comet was almost in a straight line with the pointers in Ursa Major, but it is now at a point distant from the position it then occupied by at least thirty degrees. Three weeks ago, Head, the eminent English astronomer, wrote to the Times that the comet was then 120 millions of miles from the earth. Looking at the brilliancy it has now attained, we should fancy it has, in the interval, very considerably shortened that distance. Head, while speaking of it as Donati's comet, which was seen in 1760, and again in 1827, having a period of 31 or 32 years, says the elements of the parabolic curve in which it is now moving, are such that probably it may not revisit the sun for several hundred years. Another astronomer calculates that it has a period of several thousand years, the sun of that time will look back upon our age as clothed with the same hoary antiquity as that which in our estimation attaches to the era of the antediluvian patriarchs! We suspect the astronomers, varying as they do in their opinions as to the period in which the comet completes one of its revolutions, from thirty-one years to several thousands, have not yet obtained sufficient data to enable them, with any certainty, to enlighten outsiders with regard to the course of our erratic visitant. According to one of the accounts we have seen, it will be nearest the earth and attain the greatest brilliancy on Sunday next, the 10th October. Professor Mitchell, of the Cincinnati Observatory, says he has examined the nucleus with powers, varying from one hundred to five hundred, without any evidence being presented of a well-defined planetary disc. It was a brilliant glow of light, darting and dashing forward in the direction of the motion toward the sun, and leaving the region behind in comparative obscurity. But the most wonderful and physical feature presented was a portion of a nearly circular nebulous ring, with its vertex directed toward the sun, the bright nucleus being in the centre, while the imperfect ring swept [illegible] half round the luminous centre. By micrometrical measurements [illegible] Professor Mitchell on the evening of the 25th September, the distance from the central point to the circumference of the ring was found to be nine thousand miles, and on the following evening, 26th September, the measurements indicated a decided increase in the radius of the ring, making it twelve thousand miles, giving a diameter of twenty-four thousand miles, if the ring was entire. Through the telescope, and near the head, the tail presented the appearance of a hollow nebulous envelope, under the form of a paraboloid of revolution, the edges being brightest and well defined, while there was a manifest fading away of light towards the central region. Through the vast depth of nebulous matter composing this wonderful appendage, the faintest telescopic stars shone with undiminished brightness. The length of the nebulous tail has been calculated to be fifteen millions of miles. The only comet observed to have a structure resembling this, was that known as Halley's comet, which was last seen in 1836, but between them there is this difference, that while the envelope of Halley's comet is described as a hemispherical hollow envelope, this shows more the shape of a nebulous ring.—Globe.

From the London Correspondence of the "Globe."

LONDON, Friday, Sept. 17, 1858.

THE QUEEN AND THE CANADIANS.

Mr. J. G. Morris received an answer on Monday last from Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton to his petition for the loan of the Prince of Wales, at the approaching Inauguration of the Toronto Crystal Palace. The Colonial Minister explains that as the time in which the petition should receive an answer would not permit of his consulting the Provincial Government upon the subject of it, there having been a departure from usage in the mode of its transmission; and having regard to the number and importance of the signatures attached to it, he had considered it his duty to present it to Her Majesty, who had been pleased to receive it graciously. He adds that while under the necessity of declining the request of the petitioners, the Queen appreciates the loyalty to the Crown and the attachment to her person and family which prompted the wishes of the petitioners; and he concludes with an expression of hope on the part of Her Majesty, that the forthcoming Exhibition at Toronto will produce important and useful results to Canada.

PRESENT POSITION OF THE ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH.

Incessant experiments have been making all the week to discover the point in the cable where the defect has occurred that prevents the transmission of the "circuits," which began so well and continued for a while to give joy, and were full of promise to the people on both sides of the Atlantic; but until this morning what amount of success had attended the experiment was not known. It now appears that Professor W. Thompson, Mr. Varley, and Mr. Edward Bright, the gentlemen engaged in the testing, have come to the conclusion that the defect is "a loss of insulation about 270 miles (along the cable) from Valentia." This calculating the amount of shunt cable paid out during the latter days of the submerging operations would place the fault 220 statute miles from shore, or somewhere upon the mountain range, which divides the depth of the Atlantic from the comparatively shallow water leading from the Irish coast. "And," says the correspondent of this day's Times, "as the currents received from Newfoundland vary from one two-hundredth to only one nine-hundredth part of the strength they should be deducting the public to state that the fault is other than of Peterboro', Oct. 7th, 1858.

Wheat per bushel	0	0	4	1
Oats "	0	0	1	1
Potatoes "	0	0	1	0
Turnips "	0	0	1	0
Beets "	0	0	1	0
Onions "	0	0	2	0
Apples "	0	0	1	0
Flour per barrel	0	0	0	0
Pork "	14	0	15	0
Mutton per lb.	0	0	0	0
Beef "	0	0	0	0
Butter per lb.	0	0	0	0
Cheese "	0	0	0	0
Eggs per dozen	0	0	0	0
Hay per ton	7	0

TREATMENT OF CONSUMPTION.—"An old Soldier" says:—"I have served between 20 and 21 years as a soldier in India, in the 32d Regiment and I received a medal and two clasps for the Punjaub campaign in 1845 and 1846-7. It was the practice in my company for the men to go out during the hottest weather, contrary to orders, the effect of which was frequently an attack of sunstroke. The plan which we invariably adopted—it was done unknown to the doctors or officers—was to strip the patient naked, and pour a stream of cold water for half an hour over the whole body, more particularly the head, he was then put to bed, and a stiff glass of brandy or attack administered. I have seen several of my brother soldiers treated in this manner; they all quickly recovered. If, on the contrary, the patient was so unfortunate as to be sent to the hospital to be treated by bleeding—generally from both arms—and leeches applied to the temples, he was pretty sure to die.

A store keeper in Worcester, Massachusetts, advertises ten pounds of sausages for a dollar; whereupon the Boston Bee exclaims—"dog cheap!"

VALUABLE WORKS.

AMONGST a large assortment of Valuable Books, the subscribers now offer for sale the following useful and interesting works, suitable as appropriate presents to CLERGYMEN or SABBATH SCHOOLS, TEACHERS, or as useful and instructive additions to the Family Library, viz:

KITTO'S DAILY BIBLE ILLUSTRATIONS;—being Original Readings from Sacred History, Biography, Geography, Antiquities and Theology. Morning and Evening Series; complete in 8 volumes; uniform cloth binding,—$1 each volume.

PALEY'S EVIDENCES OF CHRISTIANITY —Complete $1 25.

RYLES, J. C., EXPOSITORY THOUGHTS ON THE GOSPEL,—For Family and Private use, with the Text complete; Matthew and Mark published, at $1 each volume.

BEECHER'S, HENRY W., LIFE THOUGHTS —New edition, $1.

CECIL'S REMAINS & MISCELLANIES—$1.

BAYNE'S ESSAYS IN BIOGRAPHY AND CRITICISM—$1 25.

BAILSEY'S LITERARY ATTRACTIONS OF THE BIBLE; or a pass for the Word of God considered as a classic—$1 25.

BALDWIN'S REPRESENTATIVE WOMEN,—from Eve the wife of the first, to Mary the mother of the second Adam,—$1.

CHERVER'S LECTURES ON THE PILGRIM'S PROGRESS,—$1.

LECTURES delivered in London to the Young Men's Christian Association,—$1.

SAWERS & MURRAY,
NEW BOOK STORE, GEORGE STREET.
Peterboro', Sept. 8, 1858.

The Globe Newspaper!

1858-9.

THE success which has attended the publication of the GLOBE NEWSPAPER since its establishment in 1844, is the best certificate of its merits as a public journal, in the estimation of the community. No labour has been spared, and large outlays have from time to time been made to render it a comprehensive and reliable

COMMERCIAL, POLITICAL,
AND FAMILY JOURNAL.

The gratifying result is that it possesses by far the widest circulation and the greatest advertising patronage in British America.

The efforts which have been made in past years to keep pace with the progress of journalism, in other countries will be redoubled in the future. The Reporting Corps has been strengthened—the staff of Reporters enlarged—and contributions of numerous Correspondents, at home and abroad, will give new interest to its columns. The English and Foreign News is prepared at the earliest possible moment—the proceedings of Public Meetings, of the Law Courts and Municipal Councils are accurately reported by stenographic writers, and no expense is spared in sending corps of Reporters to any part of the country, and transmitting their Reports by Telegraph for publication the following morning. The Debates of the House of Assembly, of each day, are fully and accurately reported in the DAILY EDITION of the following morning, and carefully condensed for the WEEKLY paper. All matters of Trade, Commerce and Navigation—the proceedings of the several Boards of Trade—the arrivals of vessels at Quebec and Inland Ports—and every other subject of interest to Mercantile men is watched with special care and faithfully chronicled and commented on.—The Markets and Prices Current of Great Britain, the United States, and at home, receive special notice. The Agricultural interests command that earnest attention to which their importance entitles them.

The Globe will Continue to Advocate:

The Adoption of Population, without Regard to Locality, as the Basis of Parliamentary Representation.

The Entire Separation of Church and State—the Abolition of all Appropriations of Public Money for Sectarian Purposes; the Restraint of Ecclesiastical and other Corporations from Locking-up Land in Mortmain except for use and occupation.

National Education—Common School, Grammar School and Collegiate—Free from Sectarianism, and open to all on Equal Terms.

Economy in the Public Expenditure, and a Thorough Reform of the Departmental System.

Uniform Legislation for Both Sections of the Province.

Curtailment of the Power and Patronage of the Executive.

A Free Trade National Policy, so far and so rapidly as the Maintenance of the Public Credit will Permit.

Incorporation of the Hudson's Bay Territory as a Part of Canada.

&c., &c., &c.

THE DAILY GLOBE,

is $5 per annum, payable strictly in advance,—It is published at four o'clock, every morning but Sunday, and is despatched by the early trains to all parts of the country. It is a very large sheet, containing a vast amount of news, carefully intelligence, and general information, of the latest and most interesting character.

Any person sending the CASH for FIVE DAILY Subscribers, will be entitled to an additional copy FREE.

THE TRI-WEEKLY GLOBE,

Is issued every MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, and FRIDAY, at $4 per annum in advance. It is printed on a large sheet, and in its columns is given all that appears in the Daily Edition, with the telegraphic and other news to the latest moment.

Any person sending the CASH for Five TRI-WEEKLY Subscribers, will be entitled to a FREE Copy.

THE WEEKLY GLOBE,

Is issued every SUNDAY morning, at $2 per annum, payable strictly in advance. It is printed upon large and double sheets, of favorable quality; it is made up in a handsome quarto form, comprising eight pages of seven columns each; and contains more reading matter than any other publication in the Province.

Great care is taken in the compilation of the paper: the news is carefully collated from the Daily Edition, and articles specially prepared for its columns. The Market Reports, as prices are altered, receive constant attention.

To increase circulation, on the part of the friends of the Globe throughout the country, it has been decided that the following liberal terms have—

Ten Copies to .....Fifteen Dollars!!
Twenty-five Copies to.....Thirty-five Dollars!!
Fifty Copies to.....Sixty Dollars!!

—any person sending $50 for Five WEEKLY Subscribers, will be entitled to a FREE Copy.

The WEEKLY GLOBE will be sent to all Clergymen free of charge.

Money Letters addressed—"The Publisher of the Globe, Toronto," can be registered by payment of one penny, and their safe arrival will then be at the risk of the Publisher.

☞ Subscriptions may commence at any period of the year, and be counted from last January.

☞ Subscribers may change the direction of their papers as often as they please, by giving notice to the Publisher, stating the name of the Post Office to which they have been sent, and the Post Office to which they wish them sent in future.

GEO. BROWN,
Globe Office, Toronto.
Toronto, Sept. 15, 1858.

Miscellaneous.

AXE FACTORY.

THE subscriber is now having manufactured by P. J. AYRES, at his old stand, near the Otonabee Mills, a large lot of

DOUBLE STEELED AXES,
BROAD & NARROW AXES,
CARPENTERS TOOLS, &C., &C.,

of the best quality and workmanship, which may be had either at the Factory or at the subscriber's store, on reasonable terms.

R. D. RODGERS.
Ashburnham, September 23rd 1858. 37

NOTICE.

THE subscriber notifies all persons indebted to him, whose accounts are overdue, that in consequence of the amendment in the Usury Laws, TWELVE PER CENT INTEREST will hereafter be charged.

All accounts due from last year, and not paid immediately will be put in suit for collection.

W. B. READ.
Peterboro', 22nd Sept., 1858. 37

LETTER AND NOTE PAPERS.

CREAM and Blue Colors, ruled or d plain.—Envelopes, all sized and qualities to match. A very complete stock on hand. Merchants supplied on liberal terms.

SAWERS & MURRAY,
Stationers, &c., Peterboro'.

PETERBOROUGH LIVERY STABLE

THE SUBSCRIBER begs to inform the public that he is always ready to furnish them with horses, sleighs, carriages, and every thing required at a Livery, on the shortest notice, and on reasonable terms. His horses are in fine condition, and every thing about his establishment is in good order.

He very reluctantly has to withdraw from the long credit system, and begs all who may favor him with their patronage, to remember that he can only continue to accommodate the public, by them, in turn, enabling him to keep up his business, that is, by ready pay.

THOS. EASTLAND.
Peterboro Livery Stables,
Hunter Street, Jan. 1st, 1858. } 1

UNION HOTEL.
Peterborough.

GEORGE ALLEN

RESPECTFULLY intimates to his friends and the public generally, that his establishment is still open for the reception of guests in his usual good style.

The house is new and beautifully situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, where travellers will find a quiet and desirable retreat.

☞ A limited number of respectable BOARDERS can be accommodated.

Good Stables and Sheds

On the premises. An Ostler in attendance, who will give the best attention to horses entrusted to his care.

Peterborough, Oct. 20th 1857. 42.

NORTH AMERICAN HOTEL,

DIVISION STREET, COBOURG.

THE above Hotel having been recently repaired, painted, and newly fitted up, and being now entirely complete in all its appointments, is now opened for the reception of the travelling public.

The House is commodious, and neither pains nor expense will be spared to make it one of the best in the Province.

The Liquors are of the best brands, and the Larder will be constantly supplied with all the delicacies of the Season.

The Stables are commodious, and ... The proprietor pledges himself that every attention will be paid to the wants of his guests.

☞ Omnibusses will attend at the Cars and Boats to carry passengers to the Hotel free of charge.

RALPH FRANCIS,
Proprietor,
Cobourg, August, 1857. 35

SCOTLAND'S AUTHORS.

Arnott's, Rev. Wm.—Laws from Heaven for Life on Earth, or Illustrations of the Book of Proverbs	$1,50
Bonar's Desert of Sinai, 3 plates	1,00
Do. Land of Promise, 5 plates	1,25
Do. Night of Weeping	0,30
Do. Morning of Joy	0,40
Do. Story of Grace	0,30
Do. Truth and Error	0,40
Do. Man, his Religion and his World..	0,40
Do. Eternal Day	0,50
Boston's Four-Fold Estate	0,50
Do. Crook in the Lot	0,30
Brewster's—More World's than One	0,60
Brown's Concordance, gilt 30 cts., plain..	0,20
Chalmer's Dr., Miscellanies	1,50
Do. Moral Philosophy	0,60
Do. Astronomical Discourses	0,60
Dick, Dr.,—Christian Philosopher	1,00
Duncan's—Tales of the Scottish Peasantry, illustrated	0,50
Do. Cottage Fireside, illustrated	0,40
Family Worship—A series of Prayers adapted to Domestic Worship, by one hundred and eighty Clergymen of Scotland, 320 pages	3,00
Gilfillan's Martyrs, Heroes and Bards of the Scottish Covenant	0,60
Guthrie's, Dr., Gospel in Ezekiel	1,00
Do. The City, its Sins and Sorrows	0,50
Hetherington's History of the Church of Scotland up to the disruption	1,50
Howe's Scots Worthies, or Historical accounts of those who suffered for the Reformation	1,50
Martyrs and Covenanters of Scotland	0,40
Macduff's Memories of Gennesaret	1,00
Do. Bow in the Cloud, and the First Bereavement	0,40
Do. Morning and Night Watches	0,60
Do. Footsteps of St. Paul, with plates	1,00
Do. Words of Jesus	0,40
Do. Mind of Jesus	0,40
Do. Family Prayers	0,75
Do. Great Journey or Pilgrimage to Mount Zion	0,30
Do. Faithful Promiser and Altar Stones	0,35
Do. Memories of Bethany	0,60
Mabel Grant,—A Highland Story	0,50
McCheyne's Life, Letters, Lectures and Songs of Zion	1,25
McCosh's Method of Divine Government.	2,00
Monteath's, Mrs.,—Lays of the Kirk and Covenant	0,50
Pearson's Infidelity, its Aspect, Causes, and Agencies	1,00
Pollok's Tales of the Covenanters	0,50
Scotia's Bards—The Choicest productions of the Scottish Poets with Biographies	2,00
Turnbull's Genius of Scotland	1,00
Wardlaw on Miracles	0,75
Wilson's Lights and Shadows of Scottish Life, illustrated	0,25

For Sale at the New Book Store of
SAWERS & MURRAY.
George st., Peterboro'.
August 5, 1858. 30

FARM FOR SALE.

THE South 70 acres of the west half of the 23rd lot in the 6th Concession of Smith.—The land is of the best quality, well fenced and in good cultivation, upwards of 30 acres being cleared of stumps and stones, with a good young orchard bearing fruit. There are on the premises

A New Frame Barn, a Good Log Barn,

Stabling and Sheds. Also two Good Wells. For further particulars apply to the proprietor,

PATRICK WOOD.
Smith, Sept. 7, 1858.

READ! READ!!

SAM Slick's Nature and Human Nature.....50 cents.
Sam Slick's Wise Saws and Modern Instances.....50 "
Sam Slick's Old Judge, or Life in a Colony.....50 "
Sam Slick's Clockmaker, 1st Series.....50 "
Sam Slick's Clockmaker, 2nd Series.....50 "
Sam Slick's Attache, or Sayings and Doings.....50 "
Sam Slick's Letter Bag of the Great Western.....50 "
Sam Slick's Wit and Humor.....50 "
Sam Slick's Americans at Home.....50 "
Sam Slick's Traits of Character.....50 "
Sam Slick's Nature and Human Nature, Illustrated.....75 "
Sam Slick's Wise Saws and Modern Instances, Illustrated.....75 "
Sam Slick's Old Judge, or Life in a Colony, Illustrated.....75 "
Sam Slick's Clockmaker, 1st Series, Illustrated.....75 "
Sam Slick's Clockmaker, 2nd Series, Illustrated.....75 "
Sam Slick's Attache, or Sayings and Doings, Illustrated.....75 "
Sam Slick's Letter Bag of the Great Western, Illustrated.....75 "
Sam Slick's Wit and Humor, Illustrated.....75 "
Sam Slick's Americans at Home, Illustrated.....75 "
Sam Slick's Traits of Character, Illustrated.....75 "

SAWERS & MURRAY'S Bookstore.
Peterboro', August 19, 1858.

Insurances.

TIMES AND BEACON
ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....£250,000 STG.

£140,000 PAID UP.

HEAD OFFICE IN CANADA, KINGSTON, C.W.

CANADA BOARD OF DIRECTORS OR TRUSTEES:
The HON. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES MORTON, Esq., Kingston.

DIRECTORS

Chairman—M. U. STRANGE, Esq.
Vice Chairman—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.
JAMES MORTON, Esq., | A. J. McDONELL, Esq.
JOHN MOWAT, Esq., | JAMES HARDY, Esq

AUDITORS

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Esq., Kingston,
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.
Standing Counsel—A. J. MACDONELL, Esq.
Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.

LOCAL MANAGER:
W. CLUXTON, Peterboro'.
Peterboro', March 24, 1857. 12.

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON
Fire & Life Insurance Co.

CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.

Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.

RESPONSIBILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS UNLIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTREAL.

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on almost every description of property, at as reasonable rates as any other responsible office.

Losses paid without reference to the Old Country.

W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.
Peterboro.' March 24th, 1857. 12

WESTERN
Insurance Company.

CAPITAL £500,000.

Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF
FIRE & MARINE ASSURANCE
BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',
W. CLUXTON.
Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

UNITY FIRE AND UNITY GENERAL
INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS OF ENGLAND.

FOR every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.

CAPITAL £2,500.00 Sterling.

CHIEF OFFICE,—Unity Buildings, Canon St., London. Agent for Peterboro',
W. EASTLAND.
Peterboro', July, 1856.

Provincial Insurance Company.

OF TORONTO, C. W.

Subscribed Capital, $1,027,600. Paid up Capital, $429,200.

PRESIDENT, J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
VICE-PRESIDENT, HON. J. H. CAMERON.

Directors.

HON. W. B. ROBINSON. | F. F. WHITMORE, Esq.
GEO. DUNCAN, JR., Esq. | GEO. CRAWFORD, Esq.
J. S. HOWARD, Esq. | JOHN CAMERON, Esq., M.P.P.
WM. L. PERRIN, Esq. | A. M. CLARKE, Esq., M.D.
HON. J. H. CAMERON. | DUNCAN MCDONNELL, Esq.
CAPT. P. WALLACE.

MANAGER AND SECRETARY:
HON. J. LWANDER STARR.
ASSISTANT SECRETARY:
J. JOSEPA WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK.—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS:—Messrs. DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE:
TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurance business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as to any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Brokers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.

Toronto, April 20, 1858. 42

THE COLONIAL
Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

HEAD OFFICE—Edinburgh, Scotland, and MONTREAL, CANADA.

Proposals for assurance disposed of in Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Adviser for Peterboro,—Dr. MacNab.

AGENT,
W. B. READ.
Peterboro', July 28th, 1857. 30

ALL ABOARD!

THE SUBSCRIBER respectfully begs leave to announce to the Public, that his House at Bridgenorth, (Mud Lake) is always supplied with the best accommodation and entertainment for travellers.

GOOD STABLING, DRIVING HOUSE, YARD ROOM AND STORAGE.

He also runs a STAGE to and from Peterboro' in connection with the Boats, having McGregor's Hotel, Peterboro', at half-past seven, A.M., to meet the boats at Bridgenorth, returning to Peterboro' on the arrival of the Boats, about 4 o'clock, P.M.

For freight or passage, enquire at McGregor's Hotel, Peterboro', or at the Subscribers Hotel, Bridgenorth. Fare each way 1s. 10½d.

JOHN POPE.
Bridgenorth, June 12, 1858.

AMERICAN HOTEL. PETERBORO'.

THE undersigned, Proprietor, begs to return his sincere thanks to the travelling community and the country as well as the townspeople, for the very handsome support the House has received from them. He hopes by constant attention to their wants, and careful management of the House to retain the favorable business which has attended his efforts hitherto.

WINE ROOM

Will always be stocked with the best Liquors and Cigars.

Great care taken that the accommodation of servants and careful Ostlers always in attendance at the stables.

Passengers by or to the cars landed free, and extraordinary charges.

LOUIS HARRINGTON.
Peterboro', 1858. 52

Business Notices.

SPLENDID INVESTMENT.
FOR SALE,

LOT No. 9, West of George Street, and South of Charlotte Street, adjoining the Port Hope and Peterboro' Railroad Depot, having three good buildings on it the situation is adapted to any public business. Those who desire to profit by such a rare chance, will please address the undersigned, by letter (post-paid) to Lindsay.

N. B.—It will be sold altogether or in building lots, to suit purchasers.

CHARLES McCARTHY.
Peterboro' July 29, 1858. 29-tf

EVERY SCOTCHMAN

SHOULD read the "Scottish American Journal," published weekly. It contains the best summary of old country news of any paper published in this country, and has besides a series of articles on the "Highland Sonnets," or Achievement of the Scottish Regiments in India and elsewhere. For sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'. Price $2,50 per year in advance, or 3d per single number.

NOTICE.

THE PARTNERSHIP existing between us, and known as the firm of Hurst & Deane is this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts due to, and by, the said firm, will be settled by Henry Deane, who will grant receipts for the same.

WALTER HURST,
HENRY DEANE.

The business will hereafter be carried on by W. Hurst, who respectfully solicits a share of the Public patronage.

By the Mills, Peterboro',
July 26, 1858. } 28

NOTICE

IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Partnership lately subsisting between HENRY MORROW & ALEX. MORROW, both of the town of Peterboro', under the firm of Morrow & Brother, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts owing to the said partners' will be received by the said Henry Morrow and all debts due by the said firm will be paid by him.

HENRY MORROW,
ALEX. MORROW.
Peterboro', July 1st, 1858.

IN REFERENCE TO THE ABOVE, I would take the opportunity to inform my friends and the public that I will continue the business carried on by the firm in the same premises, and I hope by strict attention to business, and a thorough knowledge of the wants of my customers, to merit and receive a continuance of the patronage so liberally extended to the late firm.

HENRY MORROW.
Peterboro', July 1st, 1858. 26

ROOM PAPER, PAINTING, &C.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, at his shop on Brock Street, a large and varied assortment of Room Paper, among which will be found patterns of English, French and American manufacture, which he has just received, and which he will sell at the lowest possible price, for ready pay, or short approved credit.

He keeps constantly a number of hands, who can be employed in

PAPER HANGING!

And he recommends his Stock and Workmanship to the public.

The Papers range in price from 5d per Roll, up to 17s 6d per roll, and from their great variety, he is sure the most fastidious will find their choice.

The Painting, Glazing and Finishing business carried on as usual.

ROBERT STEVENSON.
Brock Street, Peterboro, April 8, 1858. 41

The only Reliable Route to Peterborough
BY RAIL WAY.

P. H. L. & B. RAILWAY,
AND
Peterborough Section.

NEW ARRANGEMENTS.

ON and after WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 18th 1858, Trains will run as follows:—

Leave Lindsay, 6 40 A. M., arrive at Port Hope, 10 10 A. M.

Leave Port Hope, 2 10 P. M., arrive at Lindsay, 5 40 P. M.

Leave Port Hope, 12 A. M., arrive at Peterborough, 2 P. M.

Leave Port Hope, 7 30 P. M., arrive at Peterborough, 9 40 P. M.

Leave Peterborough, 7 A. M., arrive at Port Hope 9 10 A. M.

Leave Peterborough 2 50 P. M., arrive at Port Hope, 5 P. M.

Trains run by Port Hope time.

All the above Trains run in connection with Grand Trunk Railway, East and West. The splendid Steamer Simple Lass, also runs in connection with P. H. L. & B. Railway, leaving Port Hope on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, at 11 a. m., arriving at Rochester at 6 p. m., in time for evening Trains to New York, Boston and Philadelphia, and leaves Rochester on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, at 11 a. m., arriving at Port Hope at 6 p. m. in time for passengers to reach Peterboro' same day.

Port Hope, August 16, 1858. 33

NOTICE.

FARMERS AND OTHERS, trading in produce, liable to Market fees, are hereby notified that I have purchased the right to collect such fees, under the Market By-law by which they are authorized, and in order to conform to the Market rules, all persons interested are respectfully requested to go of their own accord to the Market Square, and give no unnecessary trouble by attempted dodging. The law will be enforced with the utmost rigor.

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.
Peterboro', Aug. 4th, 1858.

THE "COLONIST."

THE "COLONIST" HAS A BONA-FIDE Circulation of
TWELVE THOUSAND,
And is therefore
THE BEST ADVERTISING MEDIUM IN CANADA.

TERMS:

DAILY—4d a line for first insertion, and 1d a line for each subsequent insertion.

WEEKLY—6d a line for first insertion, and 2d a line for each subsequent insertion.

N.B.—Postmasters who send advertisements on these terms, will have a commission of 15 per cent allowed them.

The terms of Subscription to the DAILY COLONIST, are six dollars a year, payable in advance. For the WEEKLY, the price is a dollar and a-half, also payable in advance.

The Clubs of two, the WEEKLY will be supplied at one dollar a year. 33

FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE AND WELL SITUATED PROPERTY, being a part of Lot No. 13 in the 7th Concession of Smith, and within the Village of Bridgenorth, containing eight acres more or less; bounded on the front by the Lake, and on the rear by the Main Road leading from Peterborough to Harvey, and situated between Mr. S. Kelly's mills and the Widow Dunbar's Location. There are on the premises a good substantial HOUSE AND BARN. An undisputed title can be given.

For further particulars apply to the owner on the premises.

JAMES HARRINGTON.
Bridgenorth, Sept. 1st, 1858. 36

NOTICE.

A LL Persons indebted to the Subscribers for ... are hereby notified that ... SIX DOLLARS ... Interest ... after the ... next, ... Interest ... Peterboro', ... 1858. ... 36-6

Farms, &c., For Sale.

PROPERTY IN OMEMEE
FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, in the flourishing Village of Omemee, on the Port Hope and Lindsay Railroad, village Lot No. 10, north side of King street, containing ¾ acre of land.—The buildings consist of a frame dwelling house and store, now occupied by Mr. John Henderson, a dwelling house adjoining, also a large workshop, and stabling, with every other convenience attached. The buildings are all new, and well put up.

If the above is not disposed of before 20th of OCTOBER, NEXT, it will then be sold to the highest bidder, by PUBLIC AUCTION.

The Terms are, £300 cash, or a bankable note; the remainder in instalments as may be agreed upon.

For further particulars apply to John Henderson, on the premises, or to the undersigned proprietor, in Otonabee, or at the Examiner office, in Peterboro'.

There will be no difficulty as to title.

JOSHUA DAWSON.
19th Lot, 12th Concession, }
Otonabee, Aug. 13, 1858. } 33

TAKE NOTICE!

ALL Parties indebted to me, who wish to avoid paying 12½ per CENT INTEREST, will please to settle their liabilities immediately, as I will charge that rate of interest on old Notes & Accounts, due, or accruing due from the 1st instant.

All debts due prior to this date must be settled before the 10th October, or they will pass into other hands for collection.

T. G. HAZLITT.
Peterboro', September, 1858. 28—3t

FARM FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale East half 6 in 7th con. and East half of 7 in 7th con. Dummer, containing 160 acres, of which

80 ARE CLEARED

In good cultivation and well fenced; a good

CEDAR LOG HOUSE,

And two large barns, with other good out houses, and a superior well close at hand.

The property is three miles from

NORWOOD.

On an excellent road, and will be sold for £2 10s an acre. From one third to one half to be paid down, the payment of the balance as agreed upon.

HENRY GARDNER.
Dummer, July 10th 1857. 28.

VALUABLE FARM, SAW-MILL, FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber is desirous of selling his property, consisting of 250 acres, 50 of which are under cultivation, comprising a

FINE YOUNG GRAFTED ORCHARD,

There is an excellent DWELLING HOUSE, with Barns, Sheds, and all other necessary Out-Houses, a good water

SAW MILL,

in good running order. The premises consist of Lot No. 9, and south-east quarter of Lot No. 8, in the 11th Concession of the Township of Monaghan. The Farm is one of the finest in the County, and most favorably situated on the Gravel Road, two miles from Peterboro. The wood land consists of hardwood and cedar, and the whole lot is furnished with a good supply of running water.

For further particulars as to terms, &c., apply on the Premises to

W. W. BOSWELL,
Peterboro, Sept. 8, 1857. 36

TO LET.

TWO NEW BRICK STORES fronting on George Street, one for Dry Goods, the other for Groceries. Both finished in the newest and finest style of workmanship, and elegantly painted and varnished, equal to any in Town; the basement stories are well lighted and perfectly dry, and warranted against frost. Application to be made to the proprietor on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', Feb. 1st, 1858. 5

TO LET.

That Splendid Three Story Brick Store, lately occupied by Mr. E. Peplow on Hunter Street.

Also 18 Town Lots for sale. Terms easy.

Apply to the Subscriber on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.
Peterboro', June 3, 1858. 23

Hardware.

New Stove Warehouse!!!

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform their friends and the Public that they have entered into Partnership as Stove-Dealers, Tinsmiths, &c., and respectfully invite public inspection to their new styles of Stoves, consisting in part of

The Improved Burr,
The Star of the West,
The Wide World,
The Commodore,
The Improved Canadian Farmer,
The Buffalo,
The Black Rover,
The King Stove,
The Premium.

Besides a variety of Parlor and Plate Stoves.

They also receive orders for all kinds of

COPPER, SHEET-IRON AND TIN WORK.

Which their Patrons may depend upon getting done in a manner which will give the greatest satisfaction.

A large stock of TIN-WARE, STOVE-PIPES, and other such articles belonging to their business, kept constantly on hand.

Their premises are on George Street, lately occupied by Messrs. Harvey & Thomson, and next door to Messrs. Glover & Robinson

BIGELOW & ROBINSON.
Peterboro', October 27, 1857. 43

AXES BY STEAM

THE subscriber invites public attention to his increased facility of making the

SUPERIOR AXES

he has so long supplied to the community, and begs to assure his patrons that he will be unremitting in his efforts to retain for his work the good reputation it has hitherto enjoyed. He offers

Narrow and Broad Axes,
AND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF
EDGE TOOLS,

WHOLESALE and RETAIL, as cheap as they can be purchased here or in any other market, and of a quality that cannot be surpassed.

His premises are located on GEORGE ST., opposite the OLD BURYING GROUND, and to enable him to supply his manufacture in sufficient quantity, and at modern prices, he has called in steam power to its assistance.

☞ Axes Jumped and Ground in quick order.

W. MCCOCK.
Peterboro', Sept. 17, 1857.

TO BE LET.

A FARM in Otonabee, No. 11, 14 Con., 72 Acres cleared; on Original, good dwelling house, Barns, Stables, &c., within ten minutes walk of the Hydro Station, the land is of the first quality.

☞ Apply at the Examiner Office.
Peterboro', 22nd Sept., 1858. 37-3

MONEY WANTED.

WANTED to borrow at good security £300 or £400, ... at 8 per cent. ...
September 28, 1858. ... 37—tf

Miscellaneous.

HATS! HATS!

THE New York and Canadian Style of Hats is now ready for inspection. Also, a large assortment of Fur Hats and Cloth Caps, &c., &c.

The Trade Supplied on Usual.

A. SECOR,
Hatter, &c.
Cobourg, March 19, 1858. 13

CABINET ROOMS RE OPENED!

THE subscriber informs his old customers and the public generally, that he has recovered from the effects of the late fire, and has erected a new building on the old site which he has fitted up as a show room. He is daily receiving and making up a choice assortment of

FURNITURE & CABINET WARE,

Of every description, which, as usual, he offers at moderate prices.

He has removed his workshop to the building just erected by Mr. Silcock, where by the use of Steam and the most recent improvements in

LABOUR SAVING MACHINERY,

He will be prepared to manufacture for sale or to order every description of Furniture, at prices unprecedent, in this Town.

W. Y. SWAYNE.
Peterboro', July 6th, 1857. 18.

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE LOT OF LAND, on the Gravel Road, about 3 miles from Peterborough, containing 35 acres, being part of the eastern portion of the North-East quarter of Lot No. 7, 11th Concession North Monaghan, on the West of John Green's Tavern, and adjoining it. Apply to the Subscriber,

WILLIAM BELL.
Monaghan, Jan. 11, 1857. 3

HORSE SHOEING.

BARNARD McGARRITY and WILLIAM MILLER, beg to inform the public, that their horse shoeing prices are as follows:—

A full set, new 6s,
Each remove 6d.

their terms are, if not Cash, well-approved credit.

Peterborough, Jan. 1st, 1858. 1

PERIODICALS, MAGAZINES, &C.

THE subscribers receive every Saturday the Weekly Periodicals in the following list, and on the third Saturday of each month the Monthlies for the next ensuing month, all of which they are prepared to supply on the annexed terms.

Orders respectfully solicited.

PER YEAR.		PER NO.
$2,25 ..	New York Ledger	0 3d.
2,50 ..	Harper's Weekly	0 3½
3,00 ..	Ballou's Pictorial	0 4
3,25 ..	Waverly Magazine	0 4
1,50 ..	Yankee Notions	0 1½
2,50 ..	New York Clipper	0 3½
2,50 ..	Flag of Our Union	0 3½
2,50 ..	Scottish Amer. Journal	0 3
3,25 ..	Leslie's Illustrated	0 4
9,00 ..	Illustrated London News	1 0
5,50 ..	" " Times	0 7½
5,50 ..	Punch	0 7½
3,00 ..	Harper's Magazine	1 2
3,00 ..	Household Words	1 3
2,00 ..	Chamber's Journal	1 0
2,20 ..	Mrs. Stephen's Journal	1 0
1,20 ..	Peterson's Journal	1 0
3,00 ..	Godey's Lady's Book	1 3
2,80 ..	Atlantic Monthly	1 3
2,50 ..	New York Mercury	0 3
2,50 ..	" " Weekly	0 3
2,50 ..	Rural New Yorker	0 3

YEARLY SUBSCRIPTIONS
MUST BE STRICTLY
In Advance.

Back Nos. must be paid for when ordered.

SAWERS & MURRAY.
Peterboro', June 23, 1858. 2

BOOK BINDING.

ONLY ONE QUARTER DOLLAR!
FOR THE
VICTORIA PAPETERIE,
OR
CHEAP PACKET OF WRITING MATERIALS
WHICH CONTAINS

12 Sheets fine ruled Letter paper usually sold for	7½d
12 Sheets fine ruled Note paper "	4
12 Large sized Envelopes adhesive "	3
12 Note " " "	2
3 Steel Pens	1
1 Holder	1
1 Pencil	1
1 Sheet Blotting paper	½
Making a total of	1s 6d.

NOW SOLD FOR
ONE QUARTER DOLLAR,
BY
SAWERS & MURRAY.
AT THE
NEW BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE,
Burnham's Block George-st, Peterborough.
June 22nd, 1858. 24

FRESH TEAS.

JUST RECEIVED from the Ship "Cambala," direct from China, an assortment of

Hyson, Young Hyson.
Gunpowder, Twankay,

S. E. CURRY, & Co.
Peterboro', 29th June, 1858. 25

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

THE attention of Clergymen, Teachers, and others interested in Sunday Schools is respectfully invited to our large and varied assortment of

Reward Books, Tickets, Admission Cards, &c., &c., &c.,

Especially adapted for Sunday Schools, and which we will sell on the best possible terms.

A CALL SOLICITED,

SAWERS & MURRAY,
NEW BOOK AND STATIONARY STORE,
Burnham's Block, George Street Peterboro'.

Dr. J. B. ALFORD'S
ECLECTIC, MEDICAL & SURGICAL OFFICE

CORNER OF SIMPSON AND ATLANTIC STREETS,
Near the Residence of James Hall, Esq.,
PETERBOROUGH.

DR. A. would announce to the citizens of Peterborough and vicinity, that he has located on this place for the purpose of attending to the duties of his profession. His system of treatment is purely Eclectic, being only those agents which are safe and reliable. INVALIDS however despairing, are invited to call, as no expense will be incurred without a corresponding prospect of recovery.

Residence—American Hotel.
Peterboro', Oct, 19, 1857. 41

FARM FOR SALE.

EAST Half Lot No. 14, in the 14th Concession of Asphodel, three miles from the Village of Norwood. There are fifty acres cleared, and fine Timber, and a never-failing spring of pure water upon the premises. The Land is of a superior quality.

Terms Liberal.

For further particulars apply to James Hall, Esq., or upon the premises, to

W. HANCOCK.
Asphodel, 10th June, 1858. 24-tf

Miscellaneous.

PIANO FORTE!!

The Musical Bouquet, (Baptista),
AT 4d PER SINGLE NUMBER.

THE subscribers have now in stock, the following pieces, to which they respectfully invite the attention of the Ladies of Peterborough.

QUADRILLES.

Les Scotch Quadrilles.
Piccolomini Quadrilles.
Les Chimes, (dogs) do.
The Lancers do.
The Don Cæsar De Bazan Quadrilles.
Belzhegor do.
The British Navy do.
Les Chats, (cats) do.
Bonnie Dundee do.
Les Singes, (monkeys) do.
Lucrezia Borgia do.
Les Souris, (mice) do.
The Marguerites do.
The Irish do.

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND
Ornamental.----Bronzing,
&c., &c., &c',
Neatly executed, on the shortest notice, and in the latest style, at the Office of the
EXAMINER PRINTING HOUSE,
Burnham's Block,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1858.

Volume 3.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 40.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Are Ten Shillings in Advance, for One Year; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING

	£	s	d
Six Lines, and under, first insertion	0	7	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	3
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0	3	4
Each subsequent insertion	0	1	3
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0	0	4
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	1

☞ Advertisements without written instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognized.

Business Directory.

REESOR, FITZGERALD & DRENNAN,
PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, CIVIL ENGINEERS AND LAND AGENTS. Office in Scott's Chambers, corner of George and Simcoe Streets.
Messrs. F. & D. having lately surveyed the outlines of eight new Townships now included in this County will be happy to give any information to intending settlers. 34

MR. DENNISTOUN,
BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

E. BURNHAM,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. B. J. Vizard, Esq.

W. B. RUBIDGE,
BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, &c. &c., &c.
Peterboro', March 10th, 1856.

DR. HOLYWELL,
HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Rubidge's.
Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOSEPH McNAB,
SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls in his residence, Peterboro' West.

ALBRO & VINDIN,
Commission, Shipping, Forwarding
AND GENERAL AGENTS,
Lumber Merchants, &c.,
Port Hope, C. W.

OFFICE—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets

MESSRS. STEWART,
ARCHITECTS, Engineers, Land Surveyors, and Land Agents. Office, Mill Street, Port Hope.
GEO. A. STEWART.
CHAS. E. STEWART.
Port Hope, May 22, 1857. 21.

JOHN HAYDEN,
Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.
King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 35—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.
INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.
Peterboro', May 28th, 1857. 22

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD.
PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.
COMMUNICATION THROUGH THE POST OFFICE, Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S
FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.
Port Hope, Sept. 29, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,
HUNTER STREET, PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST.
MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.
Peterboro', Sept. 2, 1856. 2

BOOKSELLERS AND STATIONERS.
SAWERS & MURRAY,
HAVE always on hand a complete assortment of Books in every department of Literature, School Books, Plain and Fancy Stationery, &c., &c.
New Boo: and Stationery Store,
33 Burnham's Block, George-st.

A. MERCER & SONS,
TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.
Peterboro', June 8, 1858. 23—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.
INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.
A. MUNRO, Agent.
May, 1858. 19

ROBERT THOM BROOKES,
ARCHITECT, Civil Engineer, &c., Scott's Chambers, George Street.
Peterboro', July 22, 1858. 29

QUARRY TO LET,
Near Peterborough.
THE Subscriber offers for a term of years, the Quarry on the river side, above the residence of Charles Donlop, Esq. The bridge in contemplation to cross the river will bring the Quarry within half a mile of the centre of the Town. The stone is of a superior quality, and is easily worked.
For Terms and other particulars, apply to CHARLES DUNLOP, Douro, or
GEORGE A. STEWART,
Port Hope.
Peterborough, July 15, 1858. 27

Notice to the Asthmatical.
Asthma Cured for $10!
THE UNDERSIGNED is in possession of a quick and certain remedy for that most distressing disease, and purposes, collected with it many supply as far as with the means of being restored to perfect health at a regard of time almost incredibly short. $5 to be paid by advance.
Address, (if by letter, post paid,) to
E. A. BROOKS,
Residence—Corner of Sherbourne and Aylmer Streets.
P. S.—Packages with directions, sent by mail, when desired, to any part of the country.
Peterborough, July 22, 1858. 29

A GOOD PEN
IS A REAL BLESSING.
BUY ONE DOZEN GILT PENS, IN BOX,
FOR
THREE YORK SHIL INGS,
At Sawers & Murray's Stationery Store.

DIARIES FOR 1859.
WE are now receiving our Stock of Diaries for the coming year. Merchants and others would do well to call early and make their selection.
SAWERS & MURRAY,
Booksellers and Stationers, George Street.

England to America.

And here's a hand, my trusty frien',
and gie's a hand o' thine!

From the London Times, September 29.

The ubiquity and the universal influence of this country were never more signally proved than during the present year. It is a fact on which future historians and orators will love to dwell, that in the year 1858 England not only crushed the most terrible military rebellion of modern times, but opened the vast empire of China to the world, and took the principal part in laying the first ocean telegraph between the Old and New Worlds. If it be added to this that the most promising regions are to be explored at this moment by a British expedition, and that a new Australia has been settled on the shores of America, it would certainly seem that enough had been done within the twelvemonth to satisfy the pride of the most exciting patriot. Unfortunately these great achievements bring us in little love from other nations. The penalty which a country like ours must pay for a political eminence so disproportioned to its extent and population is to be exposed to the envy and railing of other communities. But, as it is the nature of our people to be very little affected by foreign objurgations, so they are disposed to respond readily to any marks of goodwill which appear abroad. Nor do we hesitate to confess that in our eyes the opinions of the American people are of far greater importance than the praise or blame, the sympathies or antipathies, of any European State. Without dwelling on the obvious topics of kinship in race, similarity in laws, and identity in language and religion, we may say that our interests are becoming every day more bound up with the great English-speaking communities beyond the sea, of which the American Union is the most populous, enlightened and powerful. We cannot change the features of nature or sever our island from the community of states which make up the European system, but it is evident that though wars and alliances and the connexion of Royal houses may keep us one of the "Five Powers," yet the progress of enterprise, the current of trade, the family relations of our population with emigrant members, the inter-communication of ideas on practical and commercial subjects, and above all, the common possession of free institutions, must tend to make England feel herself a member of a more widely sundered, active, and happy sisterhood. Anything which elicits good feeling towards this country throughout the American Union, and is likely to obviate those undignified squabbles which every now and then take place between two nations who have no adverse interests must be satisfactory to the English people, as tending to establish that good understanding on which so much depends.

The speech of Lord Napier at the banquet which celebrated the laying of the Atlantic Cable will consequently receive the approbation of every one on this side of the ocean, and we have to thank the Americans for the feeling which prompted the toast of "The British Government and People," as well as to give credit to his Lordship for the eloquence and taste with which he responded to it. Although it may be true that the enterprise is for the moment a failure, and that men of capital and men of science must recommence their exertions before the Old and New Worlds are put in hourly communication, still there is the great fact that a cable has been laid, that messages have been sent, and that several scientific problems have been favourably solved. Although the Americans knew not at the time that they were celebrating only a preliminary and not a final success, still we may take the sentiments uttered as applying to that full realization of the project which cannot be far off, and agree to suppose that the messages between the Queen and the President represented the question of a bond between the two countries which shall never be broken. If this be the case, then, and England is made one with her colonies from Newfoundland to Vancouver, as well as with the free and highly gifted people whose destiny it seems to be to possess the lands of the Spanish race, from the borders of Oregon to the Isthmus, we may indeed look forward to a future widely different from anything that the world has yet seen. As Lord Napier observes with justice "Something may be detracted from the functions of diplomacy, but much will undoubtedly be gained for the peace of nations." Indeed, if intercourse follows the same laws as hitherto; if the speed at which news is sent leads to an impulsive demand for more rapid passenger communication, and if the rapidity with which men come and go urges improvements in the carrying of goods,—if, in short, the electric wire tends to hasten the steamship, and the steamship to improve the build and rig and navigation of sailing vessels, we may hope that before this generation has passed away England and the New World may in the opinion of their inhabitants be but one. It has been observed with truth that the United States, though continually extending their territory, have been yearly becoming for all purposes of intercourse smaller than they were. The increase of speed to be travelled over is more than counter-balanced by the decrease of the time necessary for traversing a given distance. When the Union extended only from Massachusetts to Georgia a journey between the two extreme points took longer than a journey at the present day from the Atlantic to Kansas or Minnesota. It may be hoped that in a few years less time will be necessary to pass from England to California than is now occupied by the voyage from England to Halifax; and it is found that facility of communication, and, above all, that saving of time increases travelling to a ratio almost incredible. The number of passengers between England and the States doubles itself in a very short period. What, then, may we not hope when the means of travelling shall be multiplied and indefinitely improved under the stimulus of an instantaneous communication of news?

It is from this increased acquaintance with each other that we anticipate harmony in the relations of England and America, and that consent in action which may become necessary at some conjunctures. No one, indeed, can expect the American people to mix themselves up with the doings of the Old World; for we ourselves feel how gladly we would escape from the entangling alliances, and the acrimonious disputes which our geographical position entails.—But if they care anything for the happiness and improvement of mankind beyond their own territory, they may be assured that in no way can they advance it better than by a cordial understanding with the only first-class State of the Old World which enjoys the rights and practices and the duties of civil freedom. Should feelings of mutual respect and good will take root in the hearts and show themselves in the actions of the two nations, it is certain that victory will have been gained over the force of despotism over which the most sanguine asserters of popular liberty may be satisfied. At present the supposed jealousy of England and the United States is a matter of notorious rejoicing with the reactionary party in Europe, who fancy that they can control England by the fear that in any war she would have her vindictive progeny against her, while American interference can be checked by rousing the ancestral jealousy of the British people against the pretensions of the Republic. If the rejoicings which have extended through the whole length and breadth of the Union are to have a legitimate cause, if these enthusiastic toasts and friendly "sentiments" are to have a result more durable than the fireworks and illuminations which accompany them, it will be through the determination to live on terms of good will and confidence with the British people.

Lord Brougham on Newton.

A statute in honour of Sir Isaac Newton was inaugurated at Grantham, England, Sept. 21, on which occasion Lord Brougham delivered an oration, of which the following is a summary:

We are this day assembled to commemorate him, of whom the consent of nations has declared that man is chargeable with nothing like a follower's exaggeration or local partiality, who pronounces the name of Newton as that of the greatest genius ever bestowed by the bounty of Providence, for instructing mankind on the frame of the Universe, and the laws by which it is governed. (The noble lord was here overpowered by emotion, and paused. In a few seconds he proceeded:)

"Whose genius dimmed all other men's so far
As does the midday sun the midnight star."

But though scaling these lofty heights be hopeless, yet is there some use and much gratification in contemplating by what steps he ascended. Tracing his course of action may help others to gain the lower eminences lying within their reach; while admiration excited, and curiosity satisfied are frames of mind both wholesome and pleasing. Nothing new, it is true, can be given in narrative, hardly anything in reflection, less still, perhaps, in comment or illustration; but it is well to assemble in one view various parts in the vast subject, with the surrounding circumstances, whether accidental or intrinsic, and to mark in passing the misconception raised by individual ignorance or national prejudice; which the historian of science occasionally finds crossing his path. The remark is common and obvious, that the genius of Newton did not manifest itself at a very early age; his faculties were not like those of some great and many ordinary individuals, precociously developed. His earliest history is involved in some obscurity; and the most celebrated of men has in this particular been compared to the most celebrated of rivers (the Nile), as if the course of both, in its feebler state, had been concealed from mortal eye. We have it, however, well ascertained, that within four years, between the ages of 18 and 22, he had begun to study mathematical science, and had taken his place among its greatest masters, learned for the first time the elements of geometry and analysis, and discovered calculus which entirely changed the face of science, effecting a revolution in that and every other branch of philosophy connected with it. Before 1661 he had not read Euclid; in 1665 he had committed to writing the method of fluxions. At 25 years of age he had discovered the law of gravitation, and had the foundation of celestial dynamics, the science created by him. Before ten years had elapsed he added to his discoveries that of the fundamental properties of light. So brilliant a course of discovery, in so short a time changing and reconstructing analytical, astronomical and optical science, almost denies belief. The statement could only be deemed possible by an appeal to the incontestible evidence that proves it strictly true. By a rare felicity these doctrines gained the universal assent of mankind as soon as they were clearly understood, and their originality has never been seriously called in question. The limited nature of man's faculties precludes the possibility of his ever reaching at once the utmost excellence of which they are capable. Survey the whole circle of the sciences, and trace the history of our own progress in each—you find this to be the universal rule. Nor is this great law of gradual progress confined to the physical sciences; in the moral it equally governs. Again, in constitutional policy, see by what slow degrees, from its rude elements, the attendance of feudal tenants at their lords' court, and the summons of burghers to grant supplies of money, the great discovery of modern times in the science of practical politics, has been effected, the representative scheme which enables States of any extent to enjoy popular government, and allows mixed monarchy to be established, combining freedom with order—a plan pronounced by the statesmen and writers of antiquity to be of hardly possible formation, and wholly impossible continuance. The globe itself, as well as the science of its inhabitants, has been explored according to the law which forbids a sudden and rapid leaping forward and decrees that each successive step, prepared by the last, shall facilitate the next. Even Columbus followed several successful discoveries on a small scale, and is by some believed to have had, unknown to him, a predecessor in the great exploit by which he pierced the night of ages, and unfolded a new world to the eyes of the old. The arts offered no exception to the general law. Domosthenes had eminent forerunners—Pericles the last. The art of war itself is no exception to the rule. The plan of bringing an overpowering force to bear on a given point had be tried occasionally before Frederick the Second had reduced it to a system; and the Wellingtons and Napoleons of our own day made it the foundation of their strategy, as it had also been previously the mainspring of our naval tactics. So the inventive powers of Watt, preceded as he was by Worcester and Newcomen, but far more material by Gauss and Papin, had been exercised on some admirable contrivance, now forgotten, before he made the step which created the steam engine anew; not only the parallel motion—possibly a corollory to the proposition on circular motion in the "Principia"—but the separate condensation, and, above all, the governor—perhaps the most exquisite of mechanical inventions. And now we have those here present who apply the like principle to the diffusion of knowledge, aware, as they must be, that its expression has the same happy effect naturally of preventing mischief from its excess which the skill of the great mechanist gave artificially to steam, thus rendering his engine as safe as it is powerful. (A burst of applause.) The grand difference, then, between one discovery or invention and another is in degree rather than in kind; the degree in which a person, while he outstrips those whom he comes after, also lives, as it were, before his age. Nor can any doubt exist that in this respect Newton stands at the head of all who have extended the bounds of knowledge. (Cheers.) The most marvellous attribute of Newton's discoveries is that in which they stand out prominent among all the other feats of scientific research, stamped with the peculiarity of his intellectual character. He not only enlarged the actual dominion of knowledge, penetrating to regions never before explored and taking with a firm hand undisputed possession, but he showed how the bounds of the visible horizon might be yet further extended, and enabled his successors to occupy what he could only descry; as the illustrious discovery of the New World made the inhabitants of the Old cast their eyes over lands and seas far distant from those he had traversed; lands and seas of which they could form to themselves no conception, any more than they had been able to comprehend the course by which he led them on his grand enterprise. In this achievement, and in the qualities which alone made it possible—inexhaustible fertility of resources, patience unsubdued, close meditation that could suffer no distraction, steady determination to pursue paths that seemed all but hopeless, and unflinching courage to declare the truths they led to, how far soever removed from ordinary apprehension—in these characteristics of high and original genius we may be permitted to compare the career of those great men. But Columbus did not invent the mariner's compass, as Newton did the instrument which guided his course and enabled him to make, and his successors to extend, his discoveries by closely following his directions in using it. Nor did the compass suffice to the great navigator without any observations, though he dared to steer without a chart; while it is certain that, by the philosopher's instrument, his discoveries are extended over the whole system of the universe, determining the masses, the forms and the motions of all its parts, through the mere inspection of abstract calculations and analytically adduced. New observations have been accumulated with glasses for exceeding any powers possessed by the resources of optics in the days of him whom to the science of optics, as well as dynamics, owes its origin—the theory and the fact have thus been compared and reconciled together in more perfect harmony; but that theory has remained unimproved, and the great principle of gravitation, with most sublime results, now stands in the attitude, and of the dimensions, and with the symmetry, which both the law and its application received at once from the mighty hand of its immortal author. (Loud applause.) But the contemplation of Newton's discoveries raised other feelings than wonder at his matchless genius. The light with which it shines is not more dazzling than useful. The difficulties of his course, and his expedients alike copious and refined for surmounting them, exercise the faculties of the wise, while commanding their admiration; but the results of his investigations, often abstruse, are truths so grand and comprehensive, yet so plain, that they both captivate and instruct the simple. The gratitude, too, which they inspire, and the veneration with which they encircle his name, far from tending to obstruct future improvement, only proclaim his disciples the zealous because rational followers of one whose example both encouraged and enabled his successors to make further progress. How unlike the blind devotion to a master which for so many ages of the modern world paralysed the energies of the human mind!

"Had we still paid that homage to a name
Which only God and nature claim,
The Western Seas had been our utmost bound,
And poets still might dream the sun was drown'd,
And all the stars that shone in southern skies
Had been admired by none but savage eyes."

Nor let it be imagined that the feeling excited by contemplating the achievements of this great man are in many degrees whatever the result of national partiality, and confined to the country which glories in having given him birth. The language which expresses her veneration is equalled, perhaps exceeded, by that in which other nations give utterance to theirs; but merely by the general voice, but by the well-considered and well-informed judgment of the masters of science. Laplace, when asked at the Royal table in Berlin his opinion of Newton, said that "taking mathematicians from the beginning of the world to the time when Newton lived what he had done was much the better half." "The Principia will ever remain a monument of the profound genius which revealed to us the greatest law of the universe," are the words of La Place. "That work stands preeminent above all other productions of the human mind." "The discovery of that simple and general law by the greatness and variety of the objects which it embraces confers honour upon the intellect of man." I agrange, we are told by Delambre, was wont to describe Newton as the greatest genius that ever existed, but to add how fortunate he was also, "because there can only once be found a system of the universe to establish. "Never," says the father of the Institute of France, once filling a huge place among the most eminent of its members, "never," says M. Biot, "was the supremacy of intellect so justly established and so fully confessed; in mathematical and in experimental science without an equal and without an example, combining the genius for both in its highest degree." The Principia he terms "the greatest work ever produced by the mind of man," adding, in the words of Halley, that nearer approach to the Divine nature has not been to mortals." "In first giving to the world Newton's 'Method of Fluxions,' says Fontenelle, Leibnitz did not like Promotheus, he stole fire from heaven to bestow it upon men." "Does Newton," L'Hopital asked, "sleep and wake like other men? I figure him to myself as a celestial genius, entirely disengaged from matter." To so renowned a benefactor of the world, thus exalted to the loftiest place by the common consent of all men—one whose life, without the intermission of an hour, was passed in the search after truths the most important, and at whose hands the human race had only received good, never evil—no memorial has been raised by those nations which erected statutes to tyrants and conquerors the scourges of mankind, whose lives were passed, not in the pursuit of truth, but the practice of falsehood—across whose lips, if truth ever chanced to stray towards some selfish end, it surely failed to obtain belief—who, to slake their insane thirst for power or of preeminence, trampled on all the rights, and squandered the blood of their fellow-creatures, whose course, like lightning, blasted while it dazzled; and who, reversing the Roman Emperor's noble regret, deemed the day lost that saw the sun go down upon their forbearance, no victim deceived, or betrayed, or oppressed. That the worshippers of such pestilent genius should consecrate no outward symbol of the admiration they freely confessed to the memory of the most illustrious of men, is not matter of wonder; but that his own countrymen, justly proud of having lived in his time, should have left this duty to their successors, after a century and a half of professed veneration and lip homage, we may well be deemed strange. The inscription upon the cathedral, the master-piece of his celebrated friend's architecture, may possibly be applied in defence of this neglect: "If you seek for a monument, look around." If you seek for a monument, lift your eyes to the heavens, which show forth his fame. Nor, when we recollect the Greek orator's exclamation that the whole earth is the monument of illustrious men, can we stop short of declaring that the Universe itself is Newton's. Yet, in raising the statute which preserves his likeness, near the place of his birth, and on the spot where his prodigious faculties were unfolded and trained, we at once gratify our honest pride as citizens of the same State, and humbly testify our grateful sense of the divine goodness which deigned to bestow upon our race one so marvellously gifted to comprehend the works of infinite wisdom, and to make all his study of them the source of religious contemplation, both philosophical and sublime. (Enthusiastic applause.)

Political Prospects in Canada.

We are glad to notice that in England the newspapers are beginning to form a just estimate of the men who at present conduct the Government of Canada, and to look forward to a change of Ministry as necessary and desirable. We felt assured that when the London journalists were aware of the double shuffle by which the members of a new government took office without going to their constituents for re-election, they could form but one opinion of the unconstitutional and dishonorable character of this proceeding. We are not disappointed; and in the article we copy from the London Times will be found a very natural expression of surprise at this unprincipled expedient, and an unqualified condemnation of it. For surprise, indeed, there is little occasion as our English contemporaries will own when they learn that the Macdonald-Cartier Ministry of twelve consisted of twelve country lawyers, and the Cartier-Macdonald Cabinet of an equal number of gentlemen exclusively of the same profession. The official salaries are more than most of them can make by their profession, not to mention perquisites, which may explain the unscrupulous pertinacity with which they retain office. It apparently requires a revolution to compel such men to relinquish hold of their prey; and Sir Edmund Head seems just to be the sort of person to humour their determination to retain office in the face of public opinion. A change must therefore originate with the home Government. They are now able to judge of the sort of policy to which the Governor-General is lending himself, and of the extent to which his judgment is to be relied on as a safeguard of public danger. We should not be surprised, therefore if Sir Edmund were recalled before the Provincial Parliament meets in January. The present Ministry can scarcely be expected to outlive the beginning of the session, and considering the state of feeling that now exists between Sir Edmund Head and the leaders of the Brown-Dorion party, his presence in Canada, in the event of a ministerial defeat, would give rise to an awkward, if not a dangerous state of affairs. A great majority of an intelligent population of the country cannot forever be set at defiance with impunity. If Sir Edmund Head had at all understood the true position of affairs—if he had not been a partizan, in short—he would have been aware that there was such a majority against the Macdonald-Cartier administration, towards the close of last session, and, as the natural remedy under the circumstances, he would have had recourse to a dissolution. A repetition of that blunder is too serious a risk to run; and, as the Governor-General is now likely to be more confirmed than than ever in his opposition to public feeling the only safe course is to replace him with some one else. It is to be hoped that his successor, whoever he be, may not be above following the example of sound judgment and good sense that is set by the British Sovereign. Canada wants nothing more, and will have nothing less. The stumbling-block over which Governors-General of the Province always fall is that they will persist in making George III. their model, and so insure the certainty of getting to loggerheads with one party or other. If persevered in much longer this will inevitably cause the constitutional form of government, by means of a representative of the Queen, to be abandoned as a hopeless experiment. Let the home Government therefore send out some good-natured gentlemen, who will conduct himself in a discreet way, and not make himself both ridiculous and dangerous by aiming at more power than is exercised by the Queen of England.

Several members of the Ministry, we observe, have recently gone to England, and it is surmised that it is their intention to bring under the notice of the Home Government certain objects which they referred to at the close of the session as being in contemplation. The bad odor just referred to having preceeded them, however, it is scarcely likely that their suit will be much favored, more especially as it is obviously a bid for public support rather than anything. The project of a Federal Union of all the British Provinces is a little too serious to be suggested as an afterthought, and brought forward as a make-shift by a sinking Ministry. Heaven forbid—and we say it with earnestness—that anything affecting the future interests of any people should be entrusted to such hands! To this they would just act as in everything else, with no more serious desire to serve the people's interests than a pettifogger adicted to sharp practice has to serve his client. The recklessness and insincerity of these men in connection with the most important transactions, can scarcely be credited, but we will illustrate it with one case out of several in our possession. They have professed their anxiety to co-operate with the people of Canada in measures calculated to open up communication with the Great North-Western country, to which we have recently been calling the attention of our readers. They could not well do otherwise, for public opinion has been setting strongly in that direction, and Parliamentary votes depended upon their aid being given. A surveying expedition was sent out in the first instance and, last session, a subsidy of £400 per trip was given for carrying a mail to Red River—the Ministry are very liberal with the public money, and will hand it out all round if it is necessary in that way to secure support, as in this case they believe it to be. The object, both in sending out the surveying party and in subsidizing the mail was to open a route by which trade and settlers might be induced to go to the West. To such a movement the Hudson Bay Company is in a position of natural hostility. Three hundred miles of the route lies through Lake Superior, which has barren rocky shores, except at the river mouths, where there is some fertile land, as was pointed out by more than one witness before the Parliamentary Committee in London. If it is desired to open up that country at all, and it is very suitable for mining purposes, it is of importance that these river mouths, the only harbours on the British side of the lake, and the only places where any kind of grain can be raised, should be reserved for settlement. But this Canadian Government professing its desire to open up the country, sending out exploring parties, and subsidizing steamers, actually sold the whole of these places to a rival interest, which, so far as they knew at the time, and so far as they know now, will not allow a single settler or any approach to civilization within their territories. They sold to the Hudson Bay Company the land adjoining all the best harbors and river mouths on the lake, extending altogether to about 50,000 acres for the sum of fifty pounds! and they have never condescended to make any explanation of this transaction, or to reconcile it with their pretended zeal for promoting settlement and traffic through these territories. It is alleged that there was a fee in the case and $2,000, if we mistake not, is mentioned as the munificent sum which secured the service of an official person in obtaining this important concession. We do not place any reliance on such rumors, but, judging from open and acknowledged facts, there is nothing too bad to be believed of the present Ministry and, therefore, this may explain the ministerial silence on the subject, if that does not arise merely from habitual contempt of all inquiry. This is no solitary or single case; it would fill a long pamphlet to detail all the reprehensible transactions of the Government that came to light during the last session of Parliament alone. But it illustrates their habitual system of unprincipled double-dealing, of doing and undoing at the same time, defeating the public interest, and loading the country with the expense of this costly kind of jugglery. In this instance that we have singled out, the characteristics of Mr. John A. Macdonald and Mr. Cartier are illustrated to a nicety—the one a man of undeniable talent and smartness, but shifty, unreliable, and unscrupulous in the extreme; the other more remarkable for small brain and near-sighted intellect, rather than any positive moral defect.

Now, such men, we say, are not to be entrusted with the conduct of any important transaction. They will inevitably sell the different parties concerned, sell themselves if placed in any such position. When, therefore, we learn that some of their number have gone to England to promote the two important projects of a Federal Union and an Inter-Colonial Railway, we cannot wish them great success, much as we may feel interested in both these undertakings. As regards the former, they are totally unfit to meddle with the matter at all.—The railway is not such a difficult affair, and we don't mind how soon a grant is pledged by the British Government to carry it into effect; though it is to be hoped, that when made, it will be a little better conducted than the Grand Trunk has just been shown to be by the Liverpool committee. Their success on this application will avail them little, however, as a political move, for it is not merely on any particular question of policy that the public opinion is formed, but on the entire course of their administration, which has been proved and experienced to be radically vicious and insincere, unworthy of the Province, and detrimental to all its best interests.—Scottish American Journal.

Attempted Escape of a Prisoner from a Train.

He Jumps off while the train is in full Speed.—The Constable Jumps after him.

It will be remembered that, about six months ago, a man named Thomas Ratcliff inveigled a colored woman, named Bloxam, away from the City, on the pretence that he was about commencing business as a Hotel-keeper in Detroit, where he would engage her as cook. Upon reaching that city, Ratcliffe stated his intention of proceeding on to St. Louis; but Mrs. Bloxam, suspecting something was wrong, declined going farther, and expressed a wish to return to Toronto. Before she left Detroit, Ratcliff succeeded in robbing her of her gold watch, and a quantity of goods and wearing apparel, amounting in all to about $300. Mrs. Bloxam returned to Toronto, and gave information to the Police regarding the robbery. All trace was lost of Ratcliff, until about a month ago, when a despatch was received at the Police Office, to the effect that he had been apprehended in Montreal on a charge of larceny. The Police Magistrate having sent a telegram that he was about to be discharged on Monday last, Constable Webster received orders to proceed to Montreal, with a warrant for Ratcliffe's apprehension on the charge of robbing Mrs. Bloxam. The prisoner being handed over to Mr. Webster, he was hand-cuffed, and both left by the 8 P. M. Grand Trunk train for Toronto, on Wednesday evening. Ratcliff appeared restless, and seemed annoyed at the sharp look-out kept upon him by the constable. At Kingston, where the train waited a short time to allow the passengers to get some refreshments, Ratcliffe wanted to get out also, but Mr. Webster would not allow him. The prisoner's wife had given him a supply of provisions, enough to last the entire journey. Being refused, Ratcliffe endeavoured to quarrel with the constable, and used very hard language towards him, calling the attention of the passengers to his condition. Finding that his keeper was not to be thrown off his guard, he then pretended to be asleep, and continued quiet for about an hour.—He then apparently woke up, and complained that he felt cold, and he was allowed to take a seat, still accompanied by Mr. Webster, in the vicinity of the stove, where he remained quiet for a short time. It was now about four o'clock in the morning, and very dark. The train was approaching Napanee station, and running at the rate of 25 miles an hour, when Ratcliff started up in a hurried manner and rushed to the door of the carriage, and succeeded in getting outside. Mr. Webster immediately followed, and caught the handle of the door before it could be closed. A struggle then took place, and Webster managed to pull the door open, but upon reaching the platform of the carriage, he discovered, to his surprise, that Ratcliff had jumped off the train! With a zeal and courage perfectly wonderful, Webster immediately followed, and falling on his hands and knees, fortunately received no injury, notwithstanding the rapid rate at which the train was going. He was soon on his feet, but could find no trace of his prisoner in the darkness. Listening attentively for a few minutes, however, he heard a slight groan, and walking to the place from where he imagined the sound had come, he found Ratcliff lying on his face on the ground. He turned him over, as he did not speak, but soon discovered that his prisoner was also unhurt. He then collared him, and held him till daylight. Having discovered that he was within one mile of Napanee station, he marched his prisoner to that place, where he got assistance from the station-master, Mr. Dryden, to handcuff Ratcliff's hands behind his back. Both took their seats in a freight car which passed Napanee about eight o'clock yesterday morning, and reached Toronto in safety about five o'clock last evening, when Ratcliffe was safely locked up. Mr. Webster deserves the utmost credit for following the prisoner off the train, at the risk of his own life, and the escape of his prisoner and himself from injury is certainly among the most wonderful on record.

The Chatham Slave Case.

NEW DEVELOPMENT OF THE STORY.

On Tuesday, 5th inst., the preliminary investigation in this case, before Thomas McGees, Esq., Police Magistrate of Chatham, was resumed pursuant to adjournment.—Mr. George Duck, County Attorney, conducted the prosecution against the parties charged with forcibly abducting the slave boy of Mr. Merwin—the charge being that the boy was carried off against his own earnest desire to remain with his master. Mr. McLean appeared for the defence. The Advertiser states that, after a good deal of evidence had been taken, two white and six coloured men were bound over to stand their trial at the Assizes, which will be held on the 18th inst. One of the white men is a Mr. Goodyear, who, it appears, headed the party that liberated the boy.

An extra of the Chatham Planet of Wednesday, gives the following letter, which the Editor says, is "from a person who knows all about Merwin, his antecedents and his intentions. As to its authenticity, there is no room for doubt. The name of the writer is not given now in compliance with his desire; but in its be seen together with the letter itself, in the possession of the person to whom it is addressed."—

New York, 2nd October, 1858.

Mr. Rufus Stephenson, Editor Planet, Chatham, Canada West.

SIR,—An article copied from the Detroit Free Press, and concerning the good behaviour of your townspeople, being extensively copied into our city newspapers, I take the liberty of stating a few facts, both for the encouragement of your citizens to continue their good efforts in favour of the oppressed, and also for the proper and just exposal of Mr. W. R. Merwin.

This gentleman, then, to begin at the beginning, is no Southerner at all, but a Western man, born in Ohio, and who, for the most part of his life, has lived in the Free States. His mother now resides in Illinois; and all his friends, without exception, are Northern people. So much for this "party of Southerners."

Mr. Merwin has only been back from California about 20 months, and since that time has been, and now is in the employ of O. J. Wood & Co., of No. 312 Broadway N. Y., proprietors of Wood's Hair Restorative, as travelling agent, and for the first 10 or 12 months for Job Moses of Rochester, Proprietor of Sir James Clark's Female Pills, &c. Also during the past summer driving a team for these firms through New York and part of Pennsylvania, in one of which States he picked up "the little favourite," so touchingly spoken of by the Detroit Free Press, much to the astonishment of one of the firm of O. J. W. & Co., who accidently happened to pass over part of the route Mr. M. had just traversed, and then for the first time heard of the magnificence of his Agent in travelling with a "negro servant." Nothing was said to him however, till his arrival in the city of New York about three weeks after, when he openly taxed him with having this "free negro child in his possession and that he was kidnapping, him with the intention of selling him when he got South"—whether he was just about to go—into slavery. He then most positively denied any such intention, saying that the boy was in Mr. Moses' employ to go about with him and distribute Moses' circulars in all the towns he went through, and in answer to a direct inquiry of Dr. Wood, said the boy was no longer with him, tho' at the very time with him in New York. This explanation was accepted as satisfactory, until lo! he turns up again claiming to be the owner of the free boy and purporting to take him South as his slave. One thing more and my statement is finished. Mr. Merwin was it seems rescued from "one of Her Majesty's officers" "by Mr. G. E. Goodrich, the conductor." I hope he is proud of his performance, and still more so, that the punishment Merwin deserved may be meted out to him. Again above all the cries of the little fellow calling to his master for protection was distinctly heard."—He supposed he was in honourable employment, and having very little to do, and the pleasure through the country, and living at hotels, &c., together, with no doubt kind treatment in view of the prospective reward to be reaped by his sale, it is very likely he wished to remain with his supposed master.

Finally the Detroit Free Press knew Mr. Merwin to be a travelling agent for the firms already mentioned, and to be no Southerner, and must have known the boy whose fate it so sadly laments to be no slave, but just what he is a deceived and nearly lost free negro child.

This, Mr. Editor, is a fair sample of the statements that occasionally find their way into the papers, wherein by the seeming affection of the slave for his master, this horrible institution of slavery is made to appear a happy one.

Please give the above space in your columns, that your people may feel fully justified in what they have done, and have the happy consciousness of having saved one poor little sufferer's back from the scourge of the slave driver, and fang of the bloodhound.

M. J. M.

The Atlantic Cable.

To the Editor of the London Times.

SIR,—I am instructed by the Directors to forward for publication the annexed report from Mr. Varley, the Electrician to the Electric and International Telegraph Company. He is one of the gentlemen who has been consulted by the Board in reference to the present state of the Atlantic cable.

Yours truly,
GEO. SEWARD, Secretary.
Atlantic Telegraph Co. No. 22 Old Broad St., Sept. 21.

REPORT OF THE STATE OF THE ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH CABLE.

London, Sept. 18, 1858.

I arrived at Valentia on the evening of the 5th inst., when I found that no words had for many a day been received through the cable from Newfoundland.

On the 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th and 10th I tested the cable at intervals in four different ways to ascertain its condition. The following are the results:

1. There is a fault of great magnitude at a distance of between 245 and 300 statute miles from Valentia, but the locality cannot be more accurately ascertained until a portion of the cable, 20 or 30 miles in length, had been tested against my standard of resistance, and until the log has been consulted to ascertain the amount of slack paid out. I would suggest that the piece of cable at Greenwich be carefully measured and tested against my standard, in order to obtain the most correct estimate of the distance of the fault. Assuming, however, that it is 270 miles, and allowing 33 per cent for slack, it is impossible that the chief defect is in shallow water—410 fathoms.

2. The copper wire at the faulty place above alluded to, does not touch the iron covering of the cable, as is proved by forming voltaic element, which gives rise to the continuous positive current from the copper wire varying very little in tension.

3. The insulation of the wire between

Valentia and the fault is perfect, or at least contains no defect of sufficient importance to be perceptible, or to materially influence the working were the cable otherwise perfect.

4. The copper wire is continuous, and consequently the cable has not parted.—Faint signals, or reversals, are still received from Newfoundland, but the power used will shortly eat away the exposed copper wire in the faulty place by electrolytic decomposition.

The actual resistance of the fault appears to be at least equal to ten miles of the cable, but is most probably greater.

Taking it at its lowest resistance, namely, 10 miles, and assuming that Newfoundland is only using 180 cells of Daniel's battery, the strongest current received thence during my stay was only one 24th part of the force that it should be were there but this one fault. When it is, however, borne in mind that on the other side they are probably using more power, and also that the defect first alluded to probably offers more resistance than that assumed, namely, 10 miles, it is evident that there is another and more distant fault, the approximate locality of which I could not pretend to estimate at this end without being able to speak to Newfoundland.

From authentic data shown to me at Valentia I am of opinion that there was a fault on board the Agamemnon, before the cable was submerged, at a distance of about 560 miles from the one end 640 from the other.

The following are the data in question, but on what occasion they were obtained I am unable to state. They were, however, probably taken when the ships were at Queenstown.

TESTING THE COILS ON BOARD THE AGAMEMNON, CONSISTING OF ABOUT 1,200 STATUTE MILES OF CABLE.

1 When the upper end was disconnected the current entering the cable from a battery was 8.5 parts.
2. When the upper end was put to earth current entering the cable was.....10.5 parts.
3. Current going out of upper end of cable to the earth.... 5 parts.
4. When the lower end was disconnected the current entering the cable was .....8.5 parts.
5. When lower end to earth.. 10.5 parts.
6. Current going out of upper end of cable to earth..... 4.5 parts.

Showing that if there was a fault it was nearer to the upper end, but not far from the middle of the coil.

When 200 miles have been removed from one end of the coil (but from which end I am not at present aware), leaving 1,000 miles, the amounts were:

1.....	7.5 parts	4.....——	parts.
2.....	10.25 parts	5.....	50.5 parts.
3.....	6.4 parts	7.....	6.5 parts.

indicating that there was a fault, by rough calculation, at about 560 miles from one end and 440 from the other.

With the 200 miles of cable, amounts were:—

1.....	3. parts	4.....	8.5 parts.
2.....	40. parts	5.....	11.5 parts.
3.....	39.5 parts	6.....	89.5 parts.

TEST OF THE ENTIRE CABLE ON BOARD THE AGAMEMNON AND NIAGARA—VIZ., 2,500 MILES.

Battery at Agamemnon end.

1 Current entering the cable, the Niagara end being disconnected...45 parts.
2 Agamemnon end to earth...49½ parts.
3 Current flowing out at Niagara end to earth.....15½ parts.

Battery at Niagara end.

4 Current entering cable, Agamemnon end being disconnected.....35½ parts.
5. Agamemnon end to earth....37 parts.
6. Current flowing out at Agamemnon end to earth.....14 parts.

Indicating considerable leakage on board the Agamemnon.

I am always informed that the currents through the cable, even immediately after it was submerged, were so weak that relays were useless, and that not one perfect message was recorded by them, everything that was received being read from the deflections of the galvanometer.

By comparing the above data with those of the new cable now making by Messrs Glasse and Elliot for the Electric and International Telegraph Company, the amount of current which entered the 1000 miles of cable when disconnected at one end should not have exceeded 2 or 2.5 parts instead of 7.5 or 8.5 parts.

The inference by rough calculation, therefore, is that there was a fault offering resistance equal to 1000 or 1200 miles of cable, situated at a distance about 550 miles from one end of the 1200 mile coil on board the Agamemnon.

This, however, cannot be the fault first alluded to, situate at about 270 miles from Valentia, but may have been the one which caused such alarm when the ships were 550 miles from Ireland and when the signals ceased altogether, and never certainly recovered. It is not at all improbable that the powerful currents from the large induction coils have impaired the insulation, and that had more moderate power been used the cable would still have been capable of transmitting messages.

To satisfy myself on this point I attached to the cable a piece of gutta percha covered with wire, having first made a slight incision in the gutta percha to let the water reach the wire; the wire was then bent so as to close up the defect. The detective wire was then placed in a jug of sea-water, and the latter connected with the 'earth.' After a few signals had been sent from the induction coils into the cable, and consequently into the test wire, the electricity burned through the incision, rapidly burning a hole nearly one-tenth of an inch in diameter.

When the full force of the coils was brought to bear on the test wire by removing them from the cable and allowing the electricity only one channel—that of the test wire—the discharges, as might be expected, burned a hole in the gutta percha under the water, half an inch in length, and the burnt gutta percha came floating up to the surface.

The foregoing experiments prove that when there are imperfections in the insulating covering there is very great danger arising from using such intense currents.

The size of the present conducting strand is too small to have worked satisfactorily even had the insulations been sound. With a strand of larger dimensions less intense currents would be required, and both speed and certainty increased.

It is not however, altogether impossible that some intelligible signals may yet be received through the cable, as stated in my previous communication.

C. F. VARLEY,
Electrician of the Electric and International Telegraph Co.

To the Chairman and Directors of the Atlantic Telegraph Co.

☞ The drought is so great in the province of Aragon, Spain, that the folks have to be watered, and the peasantry fight with each other to obtain water from the Ebro.

By-Law, No. 129.

A By-Law to provide for the appropriation and expenditure of Four Thousand Five Hundred Pounds in the construction and repairs of certain Roads and Bridges in the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria.

BE IT ENACTED by the Municipal Council of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same,—That the Treasurer of the said United Counties be, and he is hereby authorized and required to pay out of funds in his hands and applicable for such purposes the following sums of money,—that is to say:

For the repairs of the Boundary road between North and South Monaghan the sum of Five Pounds, and that Thos. Eyers be Commissioner for the same.

For the repairs of the Swamp road on the Boundary line between Cavan and Monaghan, north of Tully's Corner, the sum of Thirty Pounds, and that Thos. Eyres be Commissioner for the same.

For the repairs of the Boundary roads between the Townships of Smith, Monaghan and Peterboro', the sum of One Hundred Pounds, and that Daniel Hopkins and William Tully be Commissioners for the same.

For the repairs of the Road and Bridge at the Locks at Whitlow's Rapids, the sum of One Hundred Pounds, and that Andrew Jackson and W. A. Scott be Commissioners for the same.

For the repairs of the Communication road from Mud Lake to Pigeon Lake, through Ennismore, the sum of Fifty Pounds, and that Patrick Galavin and Martin Corkery be Commissioners for the same.

For the repairs of the Boundary line between Ennismore and Emily the sum of Twelve Pounds Ten Shillings, and that Patrick Galavin and Robert Ford be Commissioners for the same.

For the repairs of the Swamp road in the 3rd and 4th Concessions of Ennismore, the sum of Twelve Pounds Ten Shillings, and that Patrick Galavin and Martin Corkery be Commissioners for the same.

For the repairs of the Boundary line between Smith and Emily the sum of Twelve Pounds Ten Shillings, and that Robert Ford and John Walton be Commissioners for the same.

On the Communication road from Peterboro' to Mud Lake the sum of Twenty-five Pounds, and that William S. Deane and Isaac Garbutt be Commissioners for the same.

On the Road from Peterboro' to Lakefield Bridge, the sum of One Hundred Pounds, and that J. Fitzgerald, Isaac Garbutt, and Wm. Finlay be Commissioners for the same.

On the road from the 14th Concession of Smith to Buckhorn, the sum of Twenty-Five Pounds, and that Josiah Blewett and Isaac Garbutt be Commissioners for the same.

From Morrison's Hill to the Mud Lake Road the sum of Twenty Pounds, and that Messrs. Fitzgerald and Garbutt be Commissioners for the same.

On the fourth Concession line from Emily Boundary, the sum of Twelve Pounds Ten Shillings, and that W. H. Moore and John Walton be Commissioners for the same.

On the 9th, 10th and 11th Concessions on the allowance of Road between Lots 24 and 25 the sum of Twelve Pounds Ten Shillings, and that Messrs. J. Girbout and J. Blewett be Commissioners for the same.

On the Peterborough Bridge the sum of Fifty Pounds, and that Messrs. Daniel Sutherland and Daniel Hopkins be Commissioners for the same.

On the Court House Hill the sum of Fifty Pounds, and that Messrs. Daniel Hopkins and Walter Sheridan be Commissioners for the same.

For the construction of a new Bridge across the Otonabee River, between Douro and Otonabee, Smith and Peterboro', the sum of Two Hundred and Fifty Pounds, and that Messrs. W. A. Scott and Daniel Hopkins be Commissioners for the same.

On the Boundary line between Douro and Otonabee from the Asphodel Town line to Porter's Corner, the sum of One Hundred and Sixty-eight Pounds Fifteen Shillings, and that Messrs. Lang, Crow, G. Clarke and Patrick Cannon, be Commissioners for the same.

On the Boundary line between Dummer and Asphodel on the 4th Concession the sum of Twenty Pounds, and that Messrs. Pearce and Crow be Commissioners for the same.

From the East of the 4th to the East of the 10th Concession, on the Boundary line between Asphodel and Dummer, the sum of Eighty Two Pounds Ten Shillings, and that Messrs. Pearce and Crow be Commissioners for the same. And from the east of the 10th to the east of the 12th Concessions along said Boundary, the sum of Fifty Pounds, and that Messrs. Pearce and Crow be Commissioners for the same.

On the Marmora Road, Belmont, from the West of the 12th Concession to the East of the 9th Concession, the sum of Eightynine Pounds Ten Shillings, and that Messrs. Pearce and Seawright be Commissioners for the same.

On the Boundary line between Otonabee and Asphodel, the sum of Thirtyseven Pounds Ten Shillings, and that Messrs. Harrison and James Cameron be Commissioners for the same.

On the Side-line between Lots 15 and 16, Asphodel, from the 1st Concession to the East of the 7th Concession, the sum of Thirtyseven Pounds Ten shillings, and that Messrs. Walter Scott and James Stevenson, be Commissioners for the same.

From the Boundary line between Asphodel and Dummer at the East of the 8th Concession, via Norwood, to Hastings, the sum of Fortyfive Pounds, and that Messrs. Pearce and James Bicket be Commissioners for the same.

For repairing the road from Downer's Corner to the Bridge across the Otonabee River, the sum of One Hundred Pounds, and that Messrs. Jackson and Scott be Commissioners for the same.

From James Bicket's on the 1st Concession of Otonabee on the Road leading to Peterborough between Lots 26 and 27, the sum of Ninetythree Pounds Fifteen Shillings, and that Messrs. Jackson and Lang be Commissioners for the same.

On the Road leading from Peterborough to Keene, the sum of Ninetythree Pounds Fifteen Shillings, and that Messrs. Lang and Jackson be Commissioners for the same.

On the Road known as the River Road on the 4th Concession, Otonabee, leading to Allandale, thence to Keene, thence to the Boundary at Asphodel, the sum of Ninetythree Pounds Fifteen Shillings, and that Messrs. Jackson and Lang be Commissioners of the same.

On the Boundary between Dummer and Douro, at Newell's Hill, the sum of Twentyfive Pounds, and that Messrs. Crow and Clarke be Commissioners for the same. And on McHugh's Hill on the same Boundary the sum of Twenty Pounds, and that Messrs Crow and Clarke be Commissioners for the same.

From Warsaw to Couch's Corner on the Dummer Road, the sum of Sixtytwo Pounds Ten Shillings, and that Messrs. Crow and Clarke be Commissioners for the same.

On the Boundary line between Dummer and Douro, from Bread's to Stoney Lake, the sum of Three Pounds Fifteen Shillings, and that Francis Crow be Commissioner for the same.

Through the 6th Concession of North Douro on the leading Road from Lakefield to Dummer, the sum of Thirtyseven Pounds Ten Shillings, and that Messrs. Crow, Clarke, Silas Cox, and H. Watley, be Commissioners for the same.

For the construction of a Bridge across the River Trent at Hastings in Asphodel, the sum of Five Hundred and Twentyfive Pounds, and that Messrs. P. Pearce, Henry Fowlds, and Walter Scott, be Commissioners for the same.

From the 4th Concession line on the West Boundary of Smith on the present travelled Road to the Boundary of Ops and Emily, the sum of One Hundred and Twenty Pounds.

On the middle line of Emily from the Boundary of Cavan to the Boundary of Verulam, the sum of Fifty Pounds.

On the West quarter line of Emily from the Boundary line of Cavan to the South Boundary of Verulam, the sum of One Hundred Pounds.

From the Boundary line of Ops in the 10th Concession to the middle Road of Emily, from thence North to the Government Road in Verulam, the sum of Thirty Pounds.

On the Bridge at Omemee, the sum of Twentyfive Pounds.

On the Boundary line of Ops and Emily, the sum of Sixty Pounds.

And that the Reeves of Emily, Ops, and Lindsay, be Commissioners for the expenditure of the same.

On the Boundary line between Verulam and Emily, the sum of Ten Pounds.

On the Boundary of Smith, Emily and Ennismore, or the Road in lieu thereof, the sum of Twentyfive Pounds.

On the Boundary between Emily and Cavan, West of the middle Road, the sum of Seven Pounds Seventeen Shillings and Sixpence.

On the Post Road from Lindsay to Emily, the sum of Forty Pounds, and that T. Keenan, James Galogly, and P. McHugh, be Commissioners for the same.

From Lindsay to Mariposa, on the Post Road, the sum of Fifty Pounds, and that T. Keenan, John Connolly, and William O'Keefe, be Commissioners for the same.

From Lindsay to Manvers, Bowmanville Road, the sum of Sixty Pounds, and that James Pyne, Jas. Galogly, and P. McHugh, be Commissioners for the same.

From Lindsay on the Fenelon Falls' Road, the sum of Fifty Pounds, and that T. Keenan, John Connolly and W. R. Dick, be Commissioners for the same.

From Lindsay Boundary on the 6th and 7th Concession line, north to the quarter line, between Lots 25 and 26, the sum of Seventy Pounds, and that John Connolly, Wm. O'Keefe, and P. McHugh, be Commissioners for the same.

On the middle line of Ops, the sum of Fifty Pounds, and that James Pyne, Wm. O'Keefe, and P. McHugh, be Commissioner for the same.

On the Western Boundary line of Lindsay, the Sum of Twentyfive Pounds, and that T. Keenan, John Connolly, and Wm. O'Keefe, be Commissioners for the same.

On the Bond Head Road from Lindsay, including the quarter line between Lots 5 and 6 in the 5th Concession, the sum of Thirty Pounds, and that James Galogly, James Pyne and P. McHugh, be Commissioners for the same.

On the Eighth and Ninth Concession line, north of the Downeyville Road, the sum of Twenty Pounds, and that John Connolly, Jas. Galogly and P. McHugh be Commissioners for the same.

On the fifth and sixth Concession line south of the middle line, the sum of Thirty Pounds, and that James Galogly, James Payne and P. McHugh be Commissioners for the same.

On Simcoe Street, provided the County of Ontario meet the same by a similar grant, the sum of One Hundred Pounds, and John Clark and Robert Edwards be Commissioners for the same.

On the Boundary line between Mariposa and Eldon the sum of Fifty-five Pounds, and that John Morrison and A. A. McLaughlin be Commissioners for the same.

On the Boundary line between Fenelon and Mariposa the sum of Twenty-five Pounds, and that W. R. Dick and A. A. McLaughlin be Commissioners for the same.

On the Boundary line between Ops and Mariposa the sum of Fifty Pounds, and that P. McHugh and A. A. McLaughlin be Commissioners for the same.

On the second Concession of Mariposa the sum of Seventy-five Pounds, and that A. A. McLaughlin, James C. Mitchell and J. C. Ray be Commissioners for the same.

On the fifth and sixth Concession lines the sum of Seventy-five Pounds, and that A. A. McLaughlin, S. Metherall and Jas. Mark be Commissioners for the same.

On the ninth Concession line the sum of One Hundred and Four Pounds, and that A. A. McLaughlin, John Clark and Thos. Mark be Commissioners for the same.

On the side line between Lots. Nos. 15 and 16 the sum of One Hundred and Five Pounds, and that A. A. McLaughlin, Thos. Hoover and J. R. Lytle be Commissioners for the same.

On the twelfth and thirteenth Concession lines the sum of Seventy-five Pounds, and A. A. McLaughlin and Henry Lapp be Commissioners for the same.

On the Road between Fenelon and Ops west of the River, the sum of Ten Pounds.

On the same road east of the River the sum of Twenty Pounds, and that W. R. Dick and P. McHugh be Commissioners for the same.

On the Boundary line between Eldon and Fenelon, the sum of Twenty-Five Pounds, and that W. R. Dick and John Morison be Commissioners for the same.

On the Boundary line between Fenelon and Verulam, north of the Lake, the sum of Twenty-five Pounds, and that W. R. Dick and James Dunsford be Commissioners for the same.

On the new Falls Road leading to Lindsay the sum of One Hundred Pounds, and that W. R. Dick, W. Powles and D. Willock be Commissioners for the same.

On the second Concession line in Fenelon the sum of One Hundred Pounds, and that John Newson and Samuel Rains be Commissioners for the same.

In the township of Bexley or Somerville on or near the River the sum of Thirty Pounds, and that W. R. Dick, A. A. McLaughlin and Boperman be Commissioners for the same.

On the line leading East from the second concession of Verulam to the Boundary of Harvey the sum of Forty Pounds, and that James Dunsford and Jabez Thurston be Commissioners for the same.

On the North Bridge at Bobcaygeon the sum of Forty Pounds, and that James Dunsford and John Hunter of Bobcaygeon be Commissioners for the same.

On the main road from Bobcaygeon to Fenelon Falls the sum of Thirty Pounds, and that James Dunsford and John Hunter be Commissioners for the same.

On a Bridge over the Burnt River, north of the River between Fenelon and Verulam, or on a Road leading north of said Boundary, the sum of Thirty Pounds, and that James Dunsford and W. R. Dick be Commissioners for the same.

In the Township of Eldon, the sum of Seventythree Pounds, to be expended by John Morison, Duncan McRae, and Wm. Ashman, be the Commissioners therefor.

On Simcoe Street West of the Township of Eldon, the sum of Twentyfive Pounds and that John Morison and John McDonald be Commissioners for the same.

And be it further enacted, that on the Road from Lindsay on the Newcastle Post Road through the Township of Ops, the sum of Fifty Pounds, and that James Galogly, John Connolly, and P. McHugh, be Commissioners for expending the same.

And be it further enacted, that in all cases where appropriations are made in this By-Law for Roads between adjoining Counties, they shall be available only upon the express condition that a like sum be appropriated by such adjoining Counties for said Roads.

And be it further enacted, that where no Commissioners are named for appropriations of Moneys to be expended upon Roads, the Reeves and Deputy Reeves in such Township shall be such Commissioners.

And be it further enacted, that the Treasurer of the said United Counties is hereby authorized and required to pay to the Orders of the several Commissioners the various sums herein specified out of such Moneys as he may have in his hands for that purpose.

WILLIAM COTTINGHAM,
Warden.

WALTER SHERIDAN,
Counties Clerk.

Counties Council Chamber, Peterboro', Oct. 7th, 1858.

The "Times" on the "Great Eastern."

If there is one thing certain in war, it is that it is a race of invention. Every great captain, by land or by sea, has been distinguished for fertility of resource, for his use of new materials and expedients, and for readily availing himself of every opportunity. It is this that lends soldiers to say of the most illustrious names in history, "Oh, they were not soldiers; they were great men; they were adventurers with grand schemes; they were very clever fellows and knew how to use other men; they were well advised and well helped; they were fortunate; but they were not soldiers." We have heard this said of every hero of our school books, from Alexander to Wellington; and the same comment is pursuing the warriors of our day. There is a basis of truth in it which warns us to look out for improved means and improving men.—Cæsar conquered the world by a singular combination of originality and common sense. He made friends with everybody; he looked sharply after his commissariat; he kept on good terms with the Jews, and always met one dodge with another. He was a first-rate engineer; he plated his siege towers with iron, rigged his ships with chains, and, in a word, always did that which answered the purpose, without any sentimental prejudice in favour of mere bloodshed. He fought many a stout battle, hand to hand, when necessary; but he preferred sparing his men. Now, what are we doing in the way of invention? One hears of nothing but three-deckers and steam line-of-battle ships, each one bigger and carrying more metal than the other. That seems the one idea of doing things handsome. Meanwhile the French are, as usual, adapting the means to the end. They are working out a new idea which they may some day find a very serious one. It is nothing less than to run down our liners with what they call floating rams. They propose to case a vessel with thick plates of wrought iron, like one of their Crimean floating batteries, till it is as proof as a tortoise or an armadillo is against common attacks. The ugly monster is to steam into the thick of the enemy's fleet, the shot glancing from its sides or its decks as bullets are said to do from the hide of an alligator or full-grown rhinoceros; and run first into this ship, then into that, making each time such a hole in the side as must send the ship to the bottom. Our old acquaintance, Admiral Sartorious, no mean authority, thinks that two may play at this game, and that we may as well have our rams ready in case the plan should answer. He has long had such an instrument in view, and even urged it upon the Admiralty in the late Russian war, when two or three such rams would have forced the dreaded boom of Sebastopol, and run the gauntlet of all the batteries. So he takes occasion of these gentle hints from Cherbourg to suggest that we may hit on a weapon which will render our old ships of war and Cherbourg itself obsolete.

Meanwhile there is another opportunity which may never occur. It is not every day that a brand new ship, of first-rate construction, an eighth of a mile long, double-skinned, as strong as the Britannia Bridge, and divided into a dozen water-tight compartments, is to be sold for an old song.—Yet such, we fear, is the case with the Great Eastern. There is some futile talk of its being offered to a new company, who will take the ship at a bargain, and let the original shareholders have some fraction of their money back again. But they have not even settled where for to put the ship, or even found out any place on these shores except Milford Haven—which sounds almost as distant as New York itself—where they could put the ship. In this dilemma we can easily believe that the shareholders would be delighted to hear of a purchaser at a quarter of the cost, and then all England might put its head together to think what to do with the monster. Why should it not be made a floating battery that would be a match for all the smaller fry of the same species projected by our ingenious neighbors? We only ask the question. It is true the ship would not fulfil the conditions assigned by Admiral Sartorius for the particular weapon he recommends, but it would at least avoid one obvious objection to his project, which is the great quantity of power and work to be done by comparatively so small a vessel. In these days we call 2,500 a small tonnage, and small it would be for a vessel which is to have a very powerful engine, iron sides five inches thick, and twenty guns of the largest calibre. The utmost strength, the thickest plate, the greatest calibre of guns, unparalleled speed, momentum sufficient to run down any man-of-war, three iron towers of observation on deck, a large projecting solid ram fore and aft, screw propellers at both ends, well sheathed and protected, would be a good deal to comprise within 2,000 tons. It would be all everything,—all sides, all deck, all ram, all power, all guns, all iron; and, like a thick-rimed orange or a very big walnut, there would be no space or weight for anything left inside. We may be wrong; but we much suspect that, the project once undertaken, it would be found necessary to double the tonnage, or be contented with half the objects intended.

No doubt the Great Eastern would not be just such a thing as Admiral Sartorius has described, but it might be much more effectual. Suppose it cased with iron plates, and then plashed for a foot or two below the water line, and a sufficient height above it. Suppose it then pierced for one row of the heaviest guns that could be worked, with every known improvement and means of working. Suppose the sides to receive as much additional strength as might be thought necessary to carry the ponderous armour. With the calculated speed of 18 miles an hour such a ship would be irresistible. What if any renseum letter from the peaceful fold at Cherbourg should presume to butt at the iron mountain, as a sword-fish is said to bury its sword in a whale, and should even succeed in ramming in a few fathoms of the ships side, the eleven bulkheads would wound without going to the bottom. But it would be quite possible to give so much additional strength to the line of great vulnerability as would render such a collision fatal to the assailant. So strengthened and so armed the Great Eastern could steam through and through the enemy's fleet, running down everything that came in its way, pouring its broadsides in all directions, much as our ordinary steamers play with the canoes and junks of our barbaric foes to the East. Granting that a ship one-eighth of a mile long might take a couple of miles and, perhaps ten minutes to turn, it might do so without much further hesitation, as it would not have to consult its own safety in the mode and place of collision. The terrible effect of collisions at full speed is too well established by the records of daily disaster to have any doubt as to the result; and we should imagine that the French flock, whether sheep or rams, would be only too glad to get out of the way. We throw out the suggestion, and it seems worth the trial. Ten years hence, when the Great Eastern is no longer saleable or no longer exists, Parliament will be asked for a million, to build just such a vessel from the keel, and it will cost two millions to do it. Now we can have three-quarters of the work done for us, and can begin from the waterline.

Capturing a Detective.

An amusing incident occurred yesterday, which certainly deserves a place in the record of "clever captures," lately made by the Police force of this city. It appears that while Sergeant Hastings was attending to some duty at the Union Depot, about 11 o'clock in the forenoon, his attention was directed to the movements of a shabby-looking personage on the platform. The Sergeant eyed the man for a moment, and, not liking his appearance, he took up a position in front of him, for the purpose of getting a good look at the stranger. The man was dressed in a rough sailor's jacket, a good deal the worse for wear, with red shirt, and had a pair of blue drugget overalls above his trowsers, which were rolled up in true "rowdy" fashion. Having carefully noted the wearing apparel, the Sergeant turned his attention to the man's face. On doing so, he was surprised to observe that the moustachies which decorated the upper lip of the stranger were beginning to peal off and look a little awry. This discovery caused Mr. Hastings to approach closer to the man, when he observed that the large black bushy beard of the stranger had to a certain extent parted company with his face, and those with which nature had provided him, being of a light sandy colour, were discernable underneath. This was a settler, and the Sergeant immediately made up to the mysterious individual, and without any ceremony placed his hand on his shoulder and solicited his company in one of the waiting rooms. The stranger followed but informed Mr. Hastings that "it was all right," as he was a detective officer from New York State on important police business! This his captor rather doubted, being of opinion that the Empire state would in all likelihood have sent a more respectable looking representative. He accordingly took no notice of the remark, but proceeded to search his prisoner, and the first articles he brought to light were two highly finished revolvers. The stranger was then quietly informed that he must accompany the Sergeant to the Police Office, and he was marched along Front Street.—While passing along, the American reiterated his former statement, but the Sergeant only kept a closer eye on him in case he might attempt to make his escape. On reaching the office the Chief was sent for and interrogated the prisoner, who produced documents to prove that he was Mr. Syndam, a Deputy Sheriff from New York State, and that he was in pursuit of a person who was supposed to have fled to Canada, after committing murder in the States about six weeks ago. Mr. Syndam was immediately released amid a great deal of merriment in which he joined. Before leaving, however, Sergeant Hastings gave him a hint that his "make up" was a "leetle" too extensive, and might lead him into future trouble, and like his whiskers be easily seen through. The Deputy Sheriff left for St. Mary's by the afternoon train, no doubt fully impressed with the activity and acuteness of our police force.—Globe.

Mirth.

BY THE REV. HENRY WARD BEECHER.

The introductive lecture to the course to be delivered under the auspices of the Brooklyn Athenæum was delivered last evening, at the Athenæum building, Atlantic street, by Henry Ward Beecher, before a very large and intelligent audience. The subject of the lecture was Mirthfulness. The lecturer adverted first to the ignorance of mankind of mind. Faculties were laid aside like old garments. One age was characterized by the prevalence of one feeling, and another by another. In an age of asceticism, mirthfulness was a sin, men were never afraid of using those faculties which were in rogue to excess, but others they are afraid they would not banish entirely. Men fortified the side which was strong, and left the weak side exposed. It was politic in America to discourse on enterprise, but not on mirthfulness. The lecturer believed that mirthfulness would improve morals, and give the community a healthy tone. But Mirth was compelled to be a vagabond, and never to be found on the bench, in the observatory, the counting room, or the pulpit. It was considered orthodox to sleep in church, but sinful to laugh. By mirthfulness he meant the fire beneath, which produced the sparks of wit. It exhibited itself altogether through the other faculties. It never looked out on the world itself but when the perceptive faculties looked out; if mirthfulness slid its glass before them, the effect was observed in the appearance of the object. Mirthfulness entered a great deal into combination with all the faculties except the passions. The speaker analysed the different manifestations of mirthfulness in its combination with form, color, secretiveness, caution, ideality, imitation, benevolence, &c. Veneration was profited by the flavor of mirth. Was it not more lustrious when in its atmosphere? Conscience was improved by mirthfulness. Mirthfulness was not only one note in the mind, but it entered into harmonic combination with all other notes. If it connected with the higher feelings, it was elevating. Buoyancy, good nature, and cheerfulness were atmospheres in which the mind could not abide save all the faculties were normally exercised. Mirthfulness belonged to that class of feelings which could be called joy-breeders. Its function was to produce pleasurable emotions in all the faculties. The lecturer believed that man's faculties were designed to be fruitful of joy. But the faculties were not to one another responsive of joy. The most wretched thing on earth was man. It was a violation of divine law to be unhappy. Mirthfulness was not to be estimated by its flashes, but from its steady flow, which was far transcendent in its benefits. Anger was often subdued by mirth. More could be done with an angry man by just than by grace. Men oftentimes found more grace in wit than in conscience. Wit brought a man in better sympathy than those who heard him. It worked more for conscience than conscience could work for itself. Care was a low-browed, demon, having neither faith, hope nor trust. It deadened all the vitality of the faculties. Sorrow might have slain its thousands, but care had slain its tens of thousands; therefore cursed be care, and let all the people say amen; and blessed be that bright winged exorcisor which could destroy it. Mirthfulness was an effective ally of earnestness, as there was a liability to excess in earnestness, in which case it was followed by reaction. It was supposed that mirthfulness was an evil because it was heard at midnight revels and in the way of folly. But did not sunlight shine upon the evil as well as the good; and because of that was sunlight bad? It was said that mirthfulness was inconsistent with sobriety. But conventional moral sobriety had no countenance with the word of God. The sobriety which the Scripture contemplated was a Maine Law sobriety. He thought that the better way was to put men in the right position and then draw out the exercise of all the faculties. It was true that by locking a horse in a stable he would not run away; but the true education was to teach him not to run away while he had his liberty. By putting a padlock on all the feelings they would not do evil; but a better plan would be to bury the man at once. [Applause.] Historical influence had brought Puritanism in antagonistical relations with mirth. Mirth associated with vice in the court of Charles II could have no other effect than to bring mirth into disrepute with conscientious men. But we could not fail to admire the motives which induced the wrong more than admire the right thus associated. The lecturer then spoke of the bearings of a more enlarged mirthfulness upon the people of this country. All our troubles we had three times—first in anticipation, second in realization, and third in retrospect. In business a smiling face was of value, but was very unpopular. Clerks were not chisels and saws; even if they were to oil them occasionally it would make them work better. Mirthfulness was essential in the family and with a literary man. Corruption had no sustaining power of itself, and if mirthfulness and ideality could give an earthly immortality to the works of Sterne, Swift, Fielding, Byron, Moore, and others, what could they not do when allied to purity and virtue? There were great defects in our religious manners and mirthfulness would do much to improve them. No feeling could ever be brought up right until we could trust it. It was wrong to suppose that we could have a natural gratification for mirthfulness so long as we feared its manifestations. It was wrong to suppose that a given note in the scale was irreverent as to suppose a given faculty was irreverent. What the pulpit wanted was not solemnity nor intensity, but breadth and naturalness, and it was here in the pulpit, in which men regarded laughter as blasphemy, that the lecturer would assert the dignity of mirth, when it twined itself about the stable pillars of conscience and faith and laid its blossoms upon the blushing flowers of love and mingled its offerings to God with the fragrance of the whole soul. And God would accept it. (Loud applause.)

Hong Kong and Canton.

From the London Daily News, Sept. 21.

The Hong Kong papers delivered yesterday contain loud complaints of the insecurity of life and property in that colony, owing to the political excitement of the times. In the session of the legislative council on the 11th June, the Attorney General called the attention of the Governor to the fact that many Chinese merchants and servants were preparing to leave the colony owing to the present state of affairs, and asked his Excellency if they could not come to any resolution so as to strengthen his hands; to which his Excellency replied that he had no power to do anything in the matter.

A document entitled "An exposition of rules and regulations for the detectment and punishment of traitors," had caused great alarm among the Chinese household servants, many of whom had left, while many more were preparing to leave. It was very evident also, that the proclamations were having an effect with the people who have been accustomed to supply the colony with provisions, wood, charcoal, bricks, &c., as all these articles have lately advanced to extreme rates. The power which such proclamations exercise over the minds of the Chinese is, as the Hong Kong Register remarks, astonishing.

The following is one of the proclamations of the Imperial Commissioner addressed to the Chinese soldiery:

1. Whoever catches an English or French rebel chief will receive a reward of $5,000

2. Whoever cuts off the head of a rebel barbarian will receive a reward of $50.

3. Whoever catches a rebel barbarian alive will receive a reward of $100.

4. Whoever catches a traitor will, on producing satisfactory evidence, receive a reward of $20.

5. Whoever can manage to burn or take a large war steamer will receive a reward of $10,000

6. Whoever can manage to burn or take a shallow water steamer will receive $2,000 and be recommended for further reward.

The Register summing up the situation at Canton, says;—The position of affairs in this city is sad to contemplate. To say that it is held by the allied forces is hardly correct; it were more correct to say that the city is under a stage of siege. The bulk of a few representatives of houses which on the withdrawal of the blockade, went there for the purpose of trade, have returned, and the few fool-hardy men that remain to do so at the peril of their lives. Murders of civilians and soldiers occur every few days. The few Chinese who entered upon trade with foreigners have left; the city is deserted by all except the poor, who cannot leave; and provisions for the garrison can only with the utmost difficulty be obtained. Excepting that supplies can be thrown into it from the river side the garrison will soon succumb from actual starvation. It is with regret that Lord Elgin does not realise this extreme difficulty. It is said he completely ignores Canton—he knows nothing about it—the General and Commissioners must arrange matters there as well as they can, as they have quite sufficient force. Having succeeded in getting the treaty signed, he thinks his mission is accomplished.' It is even said his Lordship does not purpose again visiting Hong Kong, but that he will go to Japan, Manilla, Borneo, and on the Suez in the Furious. Well, if he will only send Admiral Seymour to us we shall be content that he should leave. A Treaty—other than that of Tien-tsu—has to be made with the province of Hong Kong, and made with the province of Hong Kong, and the Admiral is the man to do it. The Cantonese care not a fig for the Treaty made by the Emperor—nor for his edicts or his decrees. Canton has always been the head and front of offence, and will remain so until the hatred of the people to foreigners has been crushed out of them by the strong heel of military discipline. To eradicate this feeling, or to bring into subjection 20 millions of people, who possess it, will prove a most difficult task, and until such is done the Treaty of Tien-tsin will be utterly valueless."

The Pacific Railway.

From the Daily News, Sept. 21.

For three centuries and a half attempts have been made to find a north-west passage from the Atlantic to the Pacific, in order to get from Europe to Asia and the great South Sea by a nearer route than by the Cape of Good Hope or Cape Horn. The English Government has spent vast sums of money on this project, but the discoveries of Maclure and the terrible fate of Franklin have put a stop to all further attempts to find such a passage.

It is singular that just as the attempt of the English Government to find a north-west sea passage in the frigid zone should have ceased, a necessity should have arisen for that government to form a north-west land route from the Atlantic to the Pacific in the temperate zone. British North America includes the whole of the American continent northward from the 49th parallel of latitude, with the exception of Greenland in the extreme north-east, and Russian America in the extreme north-west. In the south-east of British North America lie our famous colonies and provinces of the Canadas, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick, adjoining the United States territory. In the south-west lie Vancouver's Island and British Columbia, near the United States territory of Oregon and California. British Columbia has a climate far superior to the Canadas, and, moreover, it is likely to turn out the richest gold colony in the world. Thousands of persons are now flocking to it. So prolific are the gold-fields there, and so easily worked, that the Californian authorities and journals are doing all in their power to check emigration from the United States to the British territory, and it is expected that even Australian gold-diggers will prefer picking up gold on the banks of Frazer's River, to mining deep for it in Victoria or New South Wales.

At the present time the mineral treasures along the shores of Lake Superior, the western boundary of Upper Canada, have drawn a population there, and a railroad from thence to the river St. Lawrence, and through New Brunswick and Nova Scotia to Halifax, will one day no doubt be made by private enterprise. From Lake Superior to Fraser's River the distance is only 1,600 miles across the American continent, and it would now be of incalculable importance if that distance, as well as the space between Lake Superior and Halifax, could be traversed by rail. A vast stream of emigration would then pass from Europe to British Columbia, through the Canadas, and the country along the whole line of railroad would become densely populated, and thus would effectually secure the southern boundary of our American territories. Instead, however, of the Canadian being able to get to British Columbia in a week and the European emigrant in a fortnight, which they could do if a railroad existed across British North America, they are each obliged to go round by the Isthmus of Panama, and to spend several weeks in journeying eight or ten thousand miles to get to the new British gold fields. The United States people who live on the Atlantic seaboard are equally inconvenienced by want of a railroad from the Eastern States to their golden State of California, situated likewise in the far west. Years ago such a railroad was projected, but it is now abandoned as hopeless. Mr. Whitney, an intelligent American, who has devoted a lifetime in urging its formation and pointing out how it could be best accomplished, has declared that from political, social, and physical causes, such a railroad is now impossible. He considers that the only chance of a railway being made across the North American continent is for it to pass entirely through British America, where he admits it could be more easily formed than through the United States territory under any circumstances.

The Hudson's Bay Company's territory consists of a great portion of British North America not colonized. The invested capital of the company is £400,000. Now, it has been proposed that the English government should buy a portion of the Hudson's Bay territory, and convert it into a penal settlement. We should then have a Siberia for our criminal population, and our expensive model prisons and ticket-of-leave system could be done away with. The cost of transportation of our convicts would not be much, and they might be employed in developing the material treasures on the shores of Hudson's Bay, and in draining the morasses, bridging the lakes and rivers, digging out cuttings, and forming embankments for a railroad between Lake Superior and Frazer's River. By the time such a railway was made it would be met by a private railroad from Halifax in Nova Scotia, and the two combined would make millions of emigrants to flock to the gold-producing or fertile valleys lying on one side or the other of the Rocky Mountains.

But great as would be the adv

cible. Nevertheless these difficulties were surmounted by Mr. Brown, who succeeded in conjunction with Mr. Dorion, a leading politicus of Lower Canada, in forming a Government which was likely to possess the confidence of both Provinces. As in England, the new Ministers had to vacate their seats, and to appeal for re-election to their constituents. The ex-ministerial party taking advantage of the absence of the new ministers (an act of sharp practice, which in England would condemn those who had recourse to it to enduring obloquy), and before they had an opportunity even to state their policy, succeeded in carrying a vote of want of confidence against Mr. Brown and his colleagues. Under these circumstances the minister naturally appealed to the Governor General for a dissolution. What can be more reasonable—what more constitutional? That the ex-ministers had not the confidence of the Parliament had been abundantly shown by the repeated defeats to which they had been subjected; and if by any unworthy contrivance, the Parliament had been induced to express a want of confidence in their successors, in so unusual and unceremonious a way, it seemed exactly a case in which one who wielded constitutional sovereign power should have been glad to appeal to the constituencies. That Sir Edmund Head had full right to refuse the request of ministers no one will deny; but it may be gravely doubted if it will ever be by such an exercise of sovereign prerogative that constitutional principles will take a healthy root in young communities. We are well aware that a hundred most plausible reasons may always be given to show that dissolutions, even when most justified by political events, are inconvenient. A general election is always inconvenient, and not least so when party spirits runs high and opposite principles are contending for the mastery. But that inconvenience, whatever it may be, is the necessary accompaniment of constitutional government. It is through such struggles only that free institutions can be firmly established, and retained in unison with progressive public opinion. And, therefore, while we cannot doubt the right which Sir Edmund Head had to refuse a dissolution, we may well question the discretion with which he exercised it.

But the subsequent proceedings throw the gravest suspicion over the whole affair. Mr. Brown being refused a dissolution, of course resigned. The ex-ministers were immediately sent for, and with some slight modifications, were again installed in office. Like their predecessors, they were expected to vacate their seats, and present themselves to their several constituencies for re-election. This would at least, though to a very limited extent, have shown what public opinion was in respect to the contest which was going on in Parliament. But no such thing happened. It appears that some time before an act had been passed to permit a minister to change from one office to another without undergoing a fresh election; and a period of twenty days was allowed to intervene between the resignation of the one office and the acceptance of another. Such a modification in our own law has often been proposed, and whenever a reform bill is passed, no doubt it will contain a provision to this effect. But who in that event will ever come to so monstrous a conclusion as that such a provision of law should be used to enable a whole ex-ministry again to accept office, and to reform a new government without vacating their seats? Yet such is the strained construction which Mr. Cartier and Mr. Macdonald with the acquiescence, if not with the direct consent of the Governor General, placed upon that provision of the law passed for an entirely different purpose. It would be difficult to conceive a more dangerous or desperate experiment upon a high-minded and energetic people, for the purpose of enabling a ministry to retain office. But this is not all. It is impossible for the public not to connect the two acts, that of the Governor General in refusing a dissolution to Mr. Brown, and that of his new ministers in resorting to so unworthy a stratagem to avoid the necessity of submitting themselves to public opinion. Do they not lead to the gravest suspicion, if not to the most direct inference, that both Sir Edmund Head and his new ministers were following a course of policy opposed to the real views and known opinions of the constituencies—and that the latter were not really represented by the existing parliament? If not—if Mr. Brown were really as little in favour with the constituencies, as with the parliament—why decline to let it be seen; if the new Cartier-Macdonald ministry were as great favourites out of doors, as with the Governor and certain sections of the parliament, why should they not have sought the advantage and strength which an appeal even to their own special constituencies must have given them? But the excuse which the Governor General may plead, that whatever may be the public opinion of his conduct, he had at least right on his side, cannot be urged by his ministers for their share in these strange proceedings. They have had the temerity to set upon their own interpretation of the law; that that interpretation will be upheld by the courts of law which are about to be appealed to, against it is at least most doubtful. If it is then it is plain they will have profited by the letter, but in spite of the spirit of the law; and in that case the sooner the law itself is made in its terms to correspond with its spirit the better. But however this may be, we shall be much deceived if so unworthy a disregard of the fundamental security which constitutional government affords does not soon recoil upon the heads of those who have thus set public opinion at nought.—The Economist.

The Comet.

To the Editor of the Daily Colonist.

MAGNETIC OBSERVATORY,
Toronto, 8th Oct., 1858.

SIR,—So much that is at least apparently contradictory has been written lately, in our public journals, relative to Donati's comet, and with that which may be admitted as true and instructive, there has been often so great an admixture of the false and palpably ridiculous, that he would do a good service who would come forward to unravel this net-work, and give out to the world what comet (if any) of past history this one can be identified with. I am not prepared to undertake this task, but it will be a step in the right direction if I remove one opinion that is commonly and erroneously held; and it may not altogether be useless if, in addition, I point out in brief and general terms the process by which these enquiries are made, and show how great are the difficulties with which astronomers have to contend in conducting them.

The propriety of calling this comet after Donatti is founded on the principle of nomenclature that that name is best which embodies fact, and does not imply a theory which may be afterwards overthrown.—Thus the identity of this comet with any formerly seen remains a matter of mere conjecture, it will continue to be called after Dr. Donati, who (during its present visit to the sun) first discovered it at Florence on the 2nd of June, 1858.

It was then seen about 70 degrees east from the sun and with a declination about 1½ degrees further north, and was found to be moving westwards, or towards its perihelion. After passing that point it reappeared early in September.

On the morning of the 15th, some observations taken in our premises with an altazimuth instrument, which, though excellent for its own proper duty, is ill adapted for so delicate an operation, gave as the approximate position of this comet:—

	h. m.	° ′
Right ascension.....	11 24.3
Declination.....		36 21 N.

or about 4 degrees west from the sun.

For several nights its motion, though towards the East, was more slow than that of the sun, and its declination changed very slowly. From the 27th its motion, both in right ascension eastwards and in declination towards the South have continued to increase in rapidity, as will be seen from the following approximate positions calculated from observations with the altazimuth instrument:—

	h. m.	° ′
Sept. 27, P. A.	11 21	Decln. 33 4 N.
" 28,	12 51	" 42 9
Oct. 1,	13 23	" 27 58
" 2,	13 34	" 26 12
" 5,	14 10	" 19 17
" 7,	14 35	" 13 17

Its daily motion is at present about 13m. in right ascension towards the East, and in declination about three deg. towards the South.

Now, as we know, that, as the body is receding from its perihelion, its speed must really be diminishing, this apparent increase of velocity is owing to its nearer approach to the earth.

A little consideration will then make it evident that the motion of the comet is in the direction in which the hands of a watch would move with its face toward the north pole; or in other words, that the motion of the comet round the sun is retrograde.

When the comet was first seen by Donati it was by many supposed to be the expected comet of Charles V., whose arrival at its perihelion was predicted by Hind, on the 2nd of August, 1858, within a limit of two years. The fact of the arrival of Donati's so near the time predicted for Charles V.'s comet was certainly a presumption in favor of the two being identical, but unfortunately there is this fatal objection to the opinion that the two comets are moving in opposite directions; that of Donati being retrograde, while that of Charles V. was direct.

The identity of a comet with one seen at a former epoch is inferred from the general resemblance of what are termed the elements of the orbit. These elements are certain numbers which define the position, form and magnitude of the orbit and the epoch at which the body passes its perihelion, and also supply the means of determining the periodic time or the time that elapses between two consecutive perihelion passages. The elements of any comet which has formerly been seen ought then to inform us when it will arrive again, and to enable us to determine, when it does arrive, whether it is in fact the same or some other comet that has not been seen before.

This might seem an easy process, but it is in truth far from being so, especially in the case of comets of long period. One obvious cause is the inferiority of instrumental means in the earlier periods of astronomical history when such comets were before visible, and the loss of early records. Another, that comets of long period are more liable to be exposed to the disturbing action of the larger planets, and thus be drawn out of and caused to move in orbits different from those derived from observations made on them near their perihelion. The amount of these disturbances may be calculated, provided that the elements are accurately known; but when astronomers have to search back into remote history for the materials whence to calculate the elements, the requisite accuracy cannot be arrived at.

The elements either of a planet or a comet are not directly observed, but are calculated from at least three but usually from several observed geocentric positions of the body with the corresponding times.—Some positions of the body are better adapted than others for determining these elements correctly, and for a planet these can generally be employed; but as the visibility of a comet is usually of short duration, it is not generally possible to use any choice in the selection of the best positions, and hence another difficulty which astronomers have to contend. Much more might be written on this subject, but I think I have said enough to show, in some measure, how great the difficulties are that attend the researchers of astronomers on the question of new comets, and that it is no discredit to their skill, or to the science of astronomy, that they cannot arrive at conclusions without the possession of the facts from which only such conclusions can be legitimately sustained.

Before concluding, I take occasion to remind you that the calculated positions given above make no pretensions to strict accuracy. This establishment, not being an astronomical observatory, it is not furnished, strictly speaking, with any astronomical instruments, and the instruments employed, though particularly good for azimuths, are quite incapable of taking altitude with tolerable exactitude.

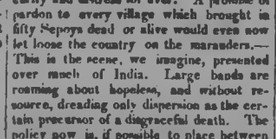
I remain, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
G. T. KINGSTON.

The Sepoys.

The Sepoys all declare that their cause is in their own eyes hopeless. The British have won the game, and, as their own doom is death, they fight on simply to protect the evil hour. They have lost their military stores. Their guns are gone, and wooden artillery is a poor substitute for brass.—Their firearms are diminishing. The only caps in Behar come from the Delhi arsenal, and are selling at 2rs. a hundred. Men armed with only sticks are told to look for no pay, and the instalments of wages are doled out with a jealousy which speaks of decreasing treasure and increasing distrust. Before the action at Arrah 2rs. were given out to each man, and soon after 1r. more. All too, appear to dread excessively dispersion into little groups. They say that in their own villages they are sure to be caught and hanged, while at the same time no idea of any grand exploit seems to occur to them. Their policy, such as it is, is to hold on to the jungle, "which nobody can eat," and there do nothing, or if attacked, disperse and reunite. If these are not the tactics against which Europeans are most successful, neither is this mood which enables men to win in revolutions. Even despair gives to Sepoys no great resolve. It imparts them only with the courage of otters, who, when the dogs have brought them to bay die half-hidden in their holes. We need only fresco and steady, quiet perseverance to bring this portion of the campaign to a close. The people, pauline as they are, must assist us in the end. They are suffering horribly already. Nine thousand of them have died the last few days, and, with wives and children, are seeking an asylum in the depot of the emigrants to the Mauritius. Six thousand have sailed already, and the colony is willing to accept any number. The mass, however, cannot move, and they will not tolerate the insecurity and distress for ever. A promise of pardon to every village which brought in fifty Sepoys dead or alive would even now let loose the country on the marauders.—This is the scene, we imagine, presented over much of India. Large bands are roaming about hopeless, and without resource, dreading only dispersion as the certain precursor of a disgraceful death. The policy now is, if possible to place between them and the villagers an irreconcilable hate.—Friend of India.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Steamer "Fly."
To Hotel & Saloon Keepers—R. C. Blackham.
Notice—Druid Hall.
For Sale—M. McDonald.



The Examiner.

THURSDAY, OCT. 14, 1858.

The Public Meeting.

The Public Meeting that was set down for Thursday last, was postponed until Saturday next, the 16th inst. The inclemency of the weather appeared to have prevented many of the people of the townships from attendance; and of those who were in Town, the greatest part were absorbed in the excitement of the County Show, so that it was considered only fair to the promoters of the meeting, that another and it is to be hoped more happy selection of a day be made for the occasion. Reformers will do well to remind themselves of the importance of numbers, in estimating the value of such demonstrations; they will also bear in mind that their opponents are watchful to turn the meeting to their own account. If, by the overweening confidence of the Opposition they should leave their party insufficiently supported, a victory be gathered to the enemy, it will be as effectual for their purposes as though it were they who called the meeting; and the resolutions which they might pass would receive the impress of the approbation of the people of the County. Therefore, and because of the pleasure it should bring to the active denouncers of an arbitrary Governor, and a fraudulent Ministry to record their testimony against all these things, it is confidently expected that a demonstration in numbers such as no building in Town would contain, will be ready to receive the loyal and constitutional sentiments embraced in the resolutions to be then submitted for popular acceptance.

County Council By-Law 139.

In another column we publish for the benefit of our readers, the new By-law of the County Council, providing for the appropriation and expenditure of Four Thousand Five Hundred Pounds in constructing and repairing certain Roads and Bridges in the United Counties.

THE navigation at Bobcaygeon is closed. The deposit from Mr. Boyd's Mill has formed an obstruction below the Locks over which the steamboats can no longer pass. The water level raised by the dam at Buckhorn is quite sufficient, but for the nuisance of the slabs, edgings, bark, &c., carried away in the tail race from Mr. Boyd's Mill, and allowed to accumulate in the passage leading to the Lock. The steamer Ogemah is on Sturgeon Lake, and the steamer Fly on the lower Lakes. Another month will bring frost that will stop all navigation, and until then the Ogemah will probably be continued in use; but, after the experience of this season, it is not likely she will be on the route again; her expenses being so heavy, and her adaptation to the requirements of that settlement so imperfect, that, without a determination to run her at all hazards, no one would be willing to face the prospect. The Fly is all right; running quick, at small expense, and being every way suited to the necessities of the settlement, she may be regarded as an institution of the back waters.

Agricultural Exhibition.

The Annual Show of this Society was held here last Thursday on the Court House Green. Unfortunately the day proved wet and stormy, and this, no doubt, was the means of keeping many back who otherwise might have been present as exhibitors or spectators; notwithstanding, a very fair show of cattle turned out, besides a goodly number of agricultural implements, &c. On account of the weather there could be no pleasure for any one lingering on the ground, and we merely gave a cursory glance over what was exhibited. Below we give a list of the prizes awarded. The exhibition of Ladies' work, &c., in the Town Hall, was highly successful for the first of the kind, and we feel sure, from the rivalry manifested on this occasion, that we shall have a keener competition among our fair friends at the next annual gathering. The miscellaneous articles exhibited spoke well for the enterprise and industry of our people, and we doubt not the extensive prize list below will stimulate many others to compete for the honors on the next occasion.

CLASS A.—HORSES.

1st Brood Mare and Foal,	S. Dayell.
2nd " "	Jno. Dayell.
3rd " "	Geo. Lee.
1st Two year old Colt,	Wm. Foster.
2nd "
3rd "	Jas. Robinson.
1st One year old Colt,	Robert Tully.
2nd "	Wm. Stewart.
3rd "	John Watson.
1st Farm Horses,	Andrew Tully.
2nd "	J. S. Fowler.
3rd "	John Watson.
1st Carriage Horses,
2nd "	Leon Grimm.
3rd "	Thomas Bell.
1st Single Horse,	Henry Meyers.
2nd "	L. McGregor.
3rd "	Thos. E. Bell.
Pony—recommended for a prize,	Rev. Mr. Beck.

CLASS B.—DURHAMS.

1st, 2nd and 3rd Cow,	John Walton.
" " 2 yr old Heifer,	"
" " 1 " "	"
1st aged Bull,	John Archer.
1st Bull, yearling,	John Walton.
Ayrshire—Bull,	J. Brakenridge
Devon—1st Bull,	E. Drake.
—2nd "	James Wallis.
1st Bull, yearling,	Ed. Brown.

CLASS C.—GRADE.

1st and 2nd Cow,	John Walton.
3rd "	Jos. Walton.
1st and 2nd 3 year old Heifer,	John Walton.
3rd "	M. Walton.
1st and 2nd 1 year old Heifer,	John Walton.
3rd "	Jos. Walton.
Yoke working Oxen, recommended,	Mr. Rolston.

CLASS D.

1st Ram, aged,	R. Brown.
2nd "	Adam Hall.
1st and 2nd Ram, shearling,	M. Walton.
1st Tup Lamb,	Jos. Walton.
2nd "	M. Walton.
1st Ewe and Lamb,	"
2nd "	S. Scott.
1st and 2nd 3 shearling Ewes,	M. Walton.
1st and 2nd 2 Ewe Lambs,	"

CLASS E.

1st and 2nd Large Sow,	R. Winch.
1st Poar,	"
2nd "	Wm. Taylor.

CLASS F.

1st Boar, small,	E. Brown.
2nd "	Jas. Swinton.

CLASS G.

1st Pair Ducks,	Jos. Walton.
2nd "	Paul Helm.
1st Pair Large Fowls,	S. Scott.
2nd "	R. Winch.
1st Fancy Fowls,	W. S. Conger.
2nd "	R. Winch.

CLASS H.—DAIRY AND FARM PRODUCE.

1st Butter—N. Walton.
2nd " —L. Davis.
3rd " —R. Tully.
1st Cheese—S. Manning.
2nd " Isaac Garbutt.
1st Fall Wheat—W. Darling.
2nd " W. Graham.
3rd " Wm. Tindale.
1st Spring Wheat—N. Walton.
2nd " J. Robinson.
3rd " Thomas Young.
1st Peas—Wm. Tindale.
2nd " James McDougall.
1st Oats— "
2nd " Wm. Tindale.
1st Corn—James Edwards.
2nd " Edward Brown.
1st Potatoes—James Grieve.
2nd " R. Tully.
1st Turnips—John Darling.
2nd " Joseph Walton.
1st Carrots—John Darling.
2nd " William Graham.
1st Flax Seed—J. Walton.
2nd " J. W. Gilmour.

CLASS I.—FRUITS AND VEGETABLES.

1st Winter Apples—J. Harvey.
2nd " J. B. Fowler.
1st Table Apples— "
1st Variety Apples—J. Darling.
2nd " J. Harvey.
1st Dozen Beets.—Deyell.
2nd " J. W. Gilmour.
1st Six Heads Celery— A. Fowlis.
1st Two Squashes—James Grieve.
1st Peck of Onions—James McDougall.
2nd " John Deyell.
Pumpkins—James Edwards, recommended.
Cauliflowers—J. W. Gilmour, recommended.

CLASS K.—FARMING IMPLEMENTS.

1st Horse Hoe—James Hamilton.
1st Cultivator—Whyte, Hamilton. & Co.
1st Roller— "
2nd " James Hamilton.
1st Double Mould Plow—James Hamilton.
1st Wooden Plow—White & Hamilton.
2nd " James Hamilton.
1st Harrows—John Edmison.
1st Straw Cutter—James Hamilton.
1st and 2nd Farm Waggon—D. McDonald.
" Two Horse Carriage—E. C. Hill.
" One " "
Gang Plow—Whyte, Hamilton & Co., recommended.

CLASS L.—DOMESTIC MANUFACTURE.

1st 10 Yards Cloth—Newton & Greene.
2nd " James McDougall.
1st 10 Yards Woolen Plaid—N. Walton.
1st Woolen Blankets—R. Tully.
Piece of Tweed—Newton & Greene, recommended.
1st Patch Work Quilt—Margaret Young.
1st Stocking Yarn—Robert Tully
1st Side Sole Leather—W. Patterson.
1st " Upper " "
1st " Harness " "
2nd " " " Wm. McBurney.
1st Kip Skin—W. Patterson.
1st Calf Skin— "
1st Deer Skin— "
1st Farm Harness—R. Walton.
2nd " Robert Wilson.
1st Double Carriage Harness—R. Walton.
2nd " " Jas. Pengelly.
1st Saddle—R. Walton.
2nd " Wm. McBurney.
1st Shoemakers Work—Thos. White, Sen'r.
1st Cabinet Work—W. Y. Swayne.
2nd " E. Poole.

CLASS M.—LADIES' WORK.

1st Worsted Work—Mrs. A. Morrow.
1st Raised Work—Rebecca Winch.
1st Braided Work—Miss Edwards.
2nd " Mrs. Kempt.
1st Crochet Work—Miss Edwards.
1st Fancy Needle Work—Miss J. Campbell.
2nd " Miss E. Morrow.
1st Velvet Painting—Mrs. Hatton.
1st Hair Work—Mrs. Cameron.
2nd " Miss Crawford.
1st Flowers—Miss Margaret M. Wilson.
1st Cone Work—Miss Crawford.
1st Painting in Oil—Miss Morrow.
1st, 2nd and 3rd Water Colour Paintings—Miss Edwards.
1st and 2nd Drawing in Pencil—Mrs. A. Morrow.
1st Drawing in Crayon—Miss Benson.
2nd " Miss Boswell.
1st Knitting—Mrs. Conger.
2nd " Mrs. Kempt.
1st Bead Work—Mrs. Kempt.
2nd " Miss E. Morrow.
Illuminated Painting—T. & R. White, recommended.
Book Dried Ferns and Flowers of Canada—Mrs. Trail, recommended.

Smith, Harvey and Emilsmere Fall Show.

The Fourth Annual Fall Show of the Branch Agricultural Society of the above Townships was held in the Village of Bridgenorth, on Monday, the 4th inst.—The following is the list of premiums awarded on that occasion:—

HORSES.

	£	d.
Best Brood Mare and Foal—Thos. Steel,	10	0
Second " (12 entries) Thomas Lee,	7	6
Best 2 year old Colt—(7 entries)—James Nichols,	7	6
Second " Nathan McAmoyl,	5	0
Best 1 year old Colt—(6 entries)—Wm. Preston,	7	6
Second do., Henry Down,	5	0

CATTLE.

Best Milch Cow—(6 entries)—Francis Montgomery,	7	6
Second do., John Archer,	5	0
Best 2 year old Heifer—(3 entries)—L. Davies,	7	6
Second do., John Archer,	5	0
Best 1 year old Heifer—(3 entries)—Fra Montgomery,	7	6
Second do., John Archer,	5	0

SHEEP.

Best aged Ram—(6 entries)—Geo. Fitzgerald,	7	6
Second do., Wellington Brown,	5	0
Best shearling Ram—(3 entries)—Geo. [illegible]
[illegible]

Second do., Charles Taylor,	5	0
Best Tup Lamb—(3 entries)—J. Archer,	7	6
Second do., Emanuel Mann,	5	0
Best 2 Ewes and their Lambs, (3 entries,) Emanuel Mann,	7	6
Second do., Wm. Preston,	5	0
Best 3 Shearling Ewes,—(3 entries)—Emanuel Mann,	7	6
Second do., Charles Taylor,	5	0
Best 3 Ewe Lambs—(4 entries)—Thos. Mann,	7	6
Second do., Charles Taylor,	5	0

PIGS.

Best Boar not over 8 months old—(7 ent.) James Nichols,	7	6
Second do., Wm. Elliott,	5	0
Best Breeding Sow not over 8 mo's old, (4 entries) Matthew Warnan,	7	6
Second do., Emanuel Mann,	5	0

GRAIN.

Best 2 bushels winter Wheat—(5 entries) Wm. Darling,	7	6
Second do., Thomas Tindale,	5	0
Best 2 Bushels Spring Wheat—(6 entries) Francis Montgomery,	7	6
Second do., John Robinson,	5	0

BUTTER.

Best Firkin of Butter not less than 50 lbs. (5 entries)—Lewis Davies,	10	0
Second do., Nicholas Walton,	7	6
Third do., James Mann,	5	0

CHEESE.

Best Cheese not less than 10 lbs (3 ent.) Samuel Manning,	10	0
Second do., Lewis Davies,	7	6
Third do., Charles Taylor,	5	0

Arrival of the "City of Baltimore."

IMPORTANT FROM INDIA.

MORE SUCCESSES AGAINST THE REBELS!

St. John's, N. F., Oct. 10.

The steamship City of Baltimore, captain Leitch, from Liverpool on Wednesday the 29th ult. She has a large and valuable cargo, and 100 passengers.

The news is quite interesting as will be seen from the following synopsis made up from papers brought in by the news yacht.

INDIA.

Later and important news has been received from India.

The Gwalior rebels were defeated on the 17th of August. They had 700 killed; the loss of the British was trifling.

The fort of Pocurie, after thirty hours' shelling, was surrendered to Gen. Napier on the 24th.

A brilliant victory had been gained by 550 police over 4,000 rebels. Three Bengal regiments had been re-armed.

The Punjaub, Madras and Bombay presidencies were tranquil.

India dates are, Bombay, September 7th.

The Calcutta fugitive rebels, from Gwalior, after their defeat, retreated towards Chumbul.

Sir Hope Grant's force was in the neighbourhood of Sultanpore, its movements being impeded by rains.

The 69th and 67th regiments which were disarmed, had attempted to seize the arms of the Fusileers, but were repulsed, and a great many were killed. The British lost five men.

The Gwalior rebels had obtained possession of the town of Japra Patten, which they were preparing to defend.

CHINA.

Later news from China, but it is unimportant.

FRANCE.

Accounts from the vine districts are favourable.

Considerable anxiety was felt throughout France as to the intention of the Porte respecting the decree permitting the importation of foreign grain, which would expire on the 30th of September, and which, if not renewed, would cause the revival of an absolute sliding scale.

The Chess contest between Morphy and Harwitz has been adjourned till the 29th. The score stands, Morphy 4; Harwitz 2.

It was rumoured that the Empress was again enciente.

Prince Napoleon had gone to Warsaw to invite the Emperor Alexander to visit Paris.

The Duke of Malakoff is to be married on the return of the Emperor from Chalons.

Havre, Dunkirk, Diepire, Calais and Boulogne, are to be put in a state of defence. A port of refuge is to be constructed between Brest and Cherbourg.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The controversy between Professor Whitehouse and the Directors of the Atlantic Telegraph continues in the newspapers. The shares of the company were quoted at £315 to £325.

The Liverpool Corn Market Association recommend that corn, flour, and meal be sold by a uniform standard of 100 lbs weight.

LIVERPOOL MARKETS.

Flour unchanged, with trifling demand. Wheat in moderate demand at slightly lower rates for better classes, and a decline of 1s on secondary and inferior descriptions. Corn dull and 1s lower.

Provision market dull, and prices nominal. Produce market is quiet.

LONDON MARKETS.

London, 28th, Evening.

Sugar unchanged. Coffee steady. Tea, Congou, 10d a 10½d.

London Money Market.—Consols closed at 98¼ for money.

"CITY OF BALTIMORE" AT NEW YORK.

New York, Oct. 13.

The steamer City of Baltimore, arrived this evening.

Letters from Valentia report no improvement in the electrical condition of the cable; the fault, however, did not get worse, for occasionally considerable and distinct reversals from Newfoundland were discernable. The opinion is, that the principal fault in the cable is near the shore, although Professor Thompson's opinion was directly opposed to such a supposition. It was supposed that something could be done towards under-running and repairing the cable during October, which is generally fine weather on the Irish coast. Mr. Henley's gigantic magnetic electric machine had arrived at Valentia, and had been put in operation, and with the aid of this instrument Mr. Henley hopes to be able to work through the cable during some part of each day. Even if the fault should prove irreparable, it was nearly the unanimous opinion at Valentia, that the laying of 10 or 12 miles of thick shore ends of cable would tend materially to obviate many of the difficulties. Beyond the continuance of experiments, nothing was to be done with the cable until preconcerted experiments at both ends had been made. They would, it was expected, demonstrate the possibility or impossibility of working the line in its present defective state. Mr. Whitehouse publishes a lengthy reply to the document recently issued by the Atlantic Telegraph Company. He speaks of the Directors as insincere and incapable, and declares that he was sacrificed to private and personal considerations.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The British Government have received its fortify Valentia.

The Earl of Elgin is appointed a Knight of the Grand Cross of the Bath; and Captains Aldham and Preedy of the Atlantic Cable expedition, are made Knight Commanders of the Bath.

PRUSSIA.

The Bank of Frankford had raised its rates of discount to 4 per cent.

The King of Prussia is not to abdicate in favour of his brother. The Regency is still with the Prince of Prussia. The King can assume his full power if he recovers his physical and mental health. The Regency meanwhile is to be uninterrupted.

AUSTRIA.

The arrangements between the government and the Rothschild and others, French and English capitalists, for the transfer of the Vienna and Trieste and other Railway lines, are understood to have been definitely completed on the basis lately described.

ITALY.

Letters in regard to the late conspiracy at Naples say that it assumed very formidable proportions, including many high persons in it, and having extensive foreign ramifications. It was discovered by the finding of some papers about the person of a man who had been accidentally drowned.

RUSSIA.

The Emperor had given the order of St. Andrew, the highest, to Prince Gortschakoff, as a mark of satisfaction that two such important treaties had been concluded.

The Invalide Russe announces that it is in contemplation to unite Europe and America. The telegraph now extending from St. Petersburgh to Moscow is to be continued to the frontier of China.

PERSIA.

A conspiracy in Persia against the Prime Minister had failed, and its leaders beheaded.

The Will of Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Orleans.

This remarkable document having to be proved in the Doctor's Commons, the Liverpool Albion has procured a copy of it, from which we extract the following:—

This is my will. In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. In dying I commend my soul to God, and in the name of Jesus Christ I implore His infinite mercy, praying Him to receive me in the eternal abode, there to reunite me with those for whom I have mourned upon this earth. I leave my maternal blessing to my beloved sons, and pray the Lord to guide them through this life, to give them prosperous days, and to grant them eternal felicity when they shall have nobly fulfilled their destinies here below. I bid them here a last adieu, whilst thanking them for the happiness they have contributed to my existence. I entreat the Queen to accept the last expression of my respectful gratitude. I bid farewell to my mother, to whom I owe so much; to my brothers and sisters, for whom I have ever felt sincere affection; to my mother's family, whose tender hospitality has lightened the bitterness of exile of my sons and myself; to my friends and servants, whose fidelity in the midst of misfortune has inspired me with grateful attachment; and, finally, I bid farewell to France, which I have loved so much, and where the happiest years of my life have glided away. I recommend my sons never to forget that the fear of God is the beginning of all wisdom, that it is a guide and beacon in prosperity, and a stay amidst misfortune; to remain ever faithful to the precepts of their childhood, and continue steadfast likewise in their political faith. May they observe it both by their constancy in adversity and exile, and by their firmness and devoted patriotism when the course of events shall restore them to their country. May France, restored to her dignity and liberty, may constitutional France reckon upon them to defend her honor, her grandeur, and her interests, and may she find once more in them the wisdom of their grandfather and the chivalrous qualities of their father. They should ever bear in mind the political principles which have made the glory of their house, which their grandfather faithfully observed upon the throne, and which their father, as his will and testament bears witness, had ardently adopted. His last directions have been the guiding rule of their education. In quitting this world I recommend my children to the Queen. My beloved son, the Count de Paris, will attain his majority the moment my will shall take effect; yet, notwithstanding this, I count upon the moral influence of the Queen and upon her respected authority to place me in his counsels; I likewise reckon upon her maternal solicitude in entreating her to accept the guardianship of my beloved son, the Duke de Chartres. Such duty will not, I trust, appear to her too onerous, for I beg my brothers to assist the Queen in the administration of the fortune of their nephews. I charge my sons to remain ever closely united; the indissoluble union of the two brothers forming the condition of their strength and mutual happiness. I desire that my eldest son shall, from the day that his legal majority permits him, to take part in the family council appointed to watch over the interests of his younger brother. It is also my desire that those tried and faithful friends who have surrounded my sons, and who, after having been the devoted adherents of their father, have never ceased to give us proofs of attachment in adversity, will still continue to remain about them.

Her Royal Highness then enumerates the articles of property belonging to her, and the relations and friends to whom they were to be given, and thus concludes:—

Whatever the place of exile where my days may close, and whatever the tomb I may happen to find, I request my sons, and in their default, my heirs, to have my remains conveyed to France whenever our family may return to it, there to deposit them in the mortuary chapel of Dreux, beside the tomb of my husband. I here close my last will with an assurance of pardon to all such as may have offended or afflicted me, with an entreaty to all those I may in my turn have offended or pained, not to retain the memory thereof. My last words are for my beloved sons—a prayer and a blessing.

HELENE, Duchesse D'Orleans.
Ebenalt, Jan. 1, 1855.

Another Fire.

It becomes our painful duty to record another fire. On Tuesday night, October 5th, the dwelling house belonging to Robert Porteous, Sr., in Manvers, was totally consumed by fire. Mr. Porteous lost everything belonging to him in the house; and, we regret to add, was so badly burned in making his escape from the burning building, that his life is despaired of. There was no insurance. The fire is believed to be the work of an incendiary.

☞ Since the above was in type Mr. Robert Porteous, Jr., called, and informed us that his father died yesterday morning thus surviving his injuries but one week.—Millbrook Messenger.

Explosion of the "Hercules."

From the Kingston News, Oct. 10.

On Saturday morning last, at 8 o'clock, the New Steamer Hercules, belonging to Messrs. Calvin & Breck, Garden Island, employed as a tug boat on the River St. Lawrence, while towing the steamer New Erie, disabled by the breaking of her shaft up the Rapid Plat, about twenty-five miles below Prescott, burst her boiler and sank, causing the death of several persons.—One named Kingsley was found on the wreck quite dead, the Hercules not being entirely submerged, and several others are missing, among whom we regret to mention Dexter Balvin, Jun., son of Mr. D. Calvin, one of the owners of the boat, an estimable young man about twenty-two years old; Martin Feeby, the Capt. of the old America, and Archibald Cambridge, employed as wheelsman on the America. Capt. Miller of the Herculas, the engineer, and several of the hands were badly scalded, or otherwise injured. Joseph Valley, one of the hands injured, was on board the St. Lawrence steamer on her way to Kingston on Saturday evening. On arrival he was to be sent to the General Hospital. Since the above was in type, a telegraph has been received which states that Captain Miller's recovery from the injury he received is very doubtful. A man is supposed to be in the hull of the Hercules. In addition to those mentioned as injured are, D. Doyle, T. Terrion, first engineer, Patrick Malone, fireman, William Longuell, Thos. Christopher, J. K. Tullock, second engineer. Edward Russell and John Crowley escaped unhurt.

Her Majesty's Visit to Leeds.

The royal visit to Leeds is now a matter for history, and in all the long annals of royal progresses in warmth and enthusiasm it should stand the first. Never, probably, has any Sovereign, save an English one, been so received, and but rarely has the same cordial greeting—less to the monarch than to the idol of her people—ever been given to our own Royal Family. A long and extensive experience of these royal progresses and visits fails to recall to memory any occasion of a similar kind where her Majesty has been as enthusiastically received. On the Tuesday the greatest scene along the whole route of her Majesty's procession to the Town Hall was at Woodhouse Moor, where the children of the charity and free schools were mustered to the number of nearly 29,000, of almost every age and every denomination. It was a grand sight—the greatest of all that met the Queen's eye, except, perhaps, at the scene at the Town Hall, though this, again, was quite different in kind, and suggestive of different associations. On the banks of the reservoir which bounds the western extremity of the plain of Woodhouse Moor were collected some 60,000 or 70,000 persons, who had made the best of the vantage ground which was here presented. Tier above tier they rose in dense masses to the height of perhaps 30 or 40 feet, and it may be questioned whether such a multitude was ever before packed into so small a space.—In the centre of the amphitheatre formed by those living walls stood the children, in two huge divisions (including teachers) of more than 16,000 each, divided into districts, parishes, and schools, and distinguished by their orange, crimson, or blue banners. It is almost useless attempting to convey any adequate idea of her Majesty's reception. It would merely exhaust superlatives without effecting any result, for "tremendous cheers" in print and tremendous cheers in Leeds are widely different things. Almost as her Majesty started the clouds broke up, and the sun alone fully as she came upon the moor, amid the children, and the thousand little eager faces which gazed with such intensity not more on her than on the young Princesses with her.—As the cortege came in sight, the signals "Prepare to cheer" rose upon every side, but they were needless; the difficulty was to keep the children quiet, for all the children strained their throats, and waved their hats and handkerchiefs with such a vehemence as threathened to make them still more ragged than many of them were already.—Then the conductor waved his wand, and slowly sw

MONEY WANTED.

WANTED to borrow on good security £200 or £300. Apply at this Office.
September 29, 1858. 37—tf.

COBOURG, PORT HOPE & PETERBORO' RAILWAY.

ON and after the 14th of November, 1858, Trains will run as follows :—

PASSENGER AND MAIL TRAIN

Will leave G. T. Station, Cobourg at	8	A. M.
do do Port Hope	8 30
do do Millbrook	9 40
Meets the Lindsay train at Millbrook and arrives at Peterboro'	10.30
Will leave Peterboro' at	3	P. M.
do Millbrook [meets Lindsay train]	3 50
do Port Hope at	5
Arrives at the G.T. Station Cobourg at	6 30

And connected with the Trains for Montreal and Toronto.

An irregular train will run for freight.

JOHN FOWLER,
Lessee.

Peterboro', October, 1858. 39

☞ Papers to copy—Peterboro' Review, Port Hope Guide, Cobourg Sun and Star, Millbrook Messenger, Omemee Warder, Lindsay Advocate, Victoria Herald, Bowmanville Post.

VALUABLE WORKS.

AMONGST a large assortment of Valuable Books, the subscribers now offer for sale the following useful and interesting works, suitable as appropriate presents to CLERGYMEN of SABBATH SCHOOL TEACHERS, or as useful and instructive additions to the Family Library, viz :

KITTO'S DAILY BIBLE ILLUSTRATIONS ;—Being Original readings from Sacred History, Biography, Geography, Antiquities and Theology. Morning and Evening Series ; complete in 8 volumes ; uniform cloth binding,—$1 each volume.

PALEY'S EVIDENCES OF CHRISTIANITY —Complete $1 25.

RYLES, J. C., EXPOSITORY THOUGHTS ON THE GOSPEL.—For Family and Private use, with the Text complete ; Matthew and Mark published, at $1 each volume.

BEECHER'S, HENRY W., LIFE THOUGHTS —New edition, $1.

CROLL'S REMAINS & MISCELLANIES—$1.

BAYNE'S ESSAYS IN BIOGRAPHY AND CRITICISM—$1 25.

HALSEY'S LITERARY ATTRACTIONS OF THE BIBLE ; or a press for the Word of God considered as a classic—$1 25.

BALDWIN'S REPRESENTATIVE WOMEN,—from Eve the wife of the first, to Mary he mother of the second Adam,—$1.

CHEEVER'S LECTURES ON THE PILGRIM'S PROGRESS,—$1.

LECTURES delivered in London to the Young Men's Christian Association,—$1.

SAWERS & MURRAY,
NEW BOOK STORE, GEORGE STREET.

Peterboro', Sept. 8, 1858.

The Globe Newspaper!

1858-9.

THE success which has attended the publication of the GLOBE Newspaper since its establishment in 1844, is the best certificate of its merits as a public journal, in the estimation of the community. No labour has been spared, and large outlays have from time to time been made to render it a comprehensive and reliable COMMERCIAL, POLITICAL, AND FAMILY JOURNAL.

The gratifying result is that it possesses by far the widest circulation and the greatest advertising patronage in British America.

The efforts which have been made in past years to keep pace with the progress of journalism, in other countries will be redoubled in the future. The EDITORIAL CORPS has been strengthened—the STAFF OF REPORTERS enlarged—and contributions of numerous Correspondents, at home and abroad, will give new interest to its columns. The English and Foreign News is received at the earliest possible moment by Telegraph and Express. The Proceedings of Public Meetings, of the Law Courts and Municipal Councils are accurately reported by stenographic writers, and no expense is spared in sending corps of Reporters to any part of the country, and transmitting their Reports by Telegraph for publication the following morning. The Debates of the House of Assembly, of each day, are fully and accurately reported in the DAILY EDITION of the following morning, and carefully condensed for the WEEKLY paper. All matters of Trade, Commerce and Navigation—the proceedings of the several Boards of Trade—the arrivals of vessels at Quebec and Inland Ports—and every other subject of interest to Mercantile men is watched with special care and faithfully chronicled and commented on.—The Markets and Prices Current of Great Britain, the United States, and at home, receive special notice. The Agricultural interests command that earnest attention to which their importance entitles them.

The Globe will Continue to Advocate:

The Adoption of Population, without Regard to Locality, as the Basis of Parliamentary Representation.

The Entire Separation of Church and State—the Abolition of all Appropriations of Public Money for Sectarian Purposes ; the Restraint of Ecclesiastical and other Corporations from Locking-up Land in Mortmain except for use and occupation.

National Education—Common School, Grammar School and Collegiate—Free from Sectarianism, and open to all on Equal Terms.

Economy in the Public Expenditure, and a Thorough Reform of the Departmental System.

Uniform Legislation for Both Sections of the Province.

Curtailment of the Power and Patronage of the Executive.

A Free Trade National Policy, so far and so rapidly as the Maintenance of the Public Credit will Permit.

Incorporation of the Hudson's Bay Territory as a Part of Canada.

&c., &c., &c.

THE DAILY GLOBE,

Is $6 per annum, payable strictly in advance.—It is published at four o'clock, every morning but Sunday, and is despatched by the early trains to all parts of the country. It is a very large sheet, containing a vast amount of news, mercantile intelligence, and general information, of the latest and most interesting character.

Any person sending the CASH for Five DAILY Subscribers, will be entitled to an additional copy FREE.

THE TRI-WEEKLY GLOBE,

Is issued every MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, and FRIDAY, at $4 per annum in advance. It is printed on a large sheet, and in its columns is given all that appears in the Daily Edition, with the Telegraphic and other news to the latest moment.

Any person sending the CASH for Five TRI-WEEKLY Subscribers, will be entitled to a FREE Copy.

THE WEEKLY GLOBE,

Is issued every FRIDAY morning, at $2 per annum, payable strictly in advance. It is printed on an immense double sheet of paper, of first-rate quality ; it is made up in a handsome quarto form, comprising eight pages of seven columns each ; and contains more reading matter than any other political newspaper on the Continent. Great care is taken in the compilation of the paper ; the news is carefully collated from the Daily Edition, and articles specially prepared for its columns. The Market Reports at home and abroad, receive constant attention.

To induce exertion on the part of the friends of the GLOBE throughout the country, it has been resolved, that any person making up a Club may have—

Ten Copies for.....Fifteen Dollars!
Twenty-five Copies for...Thirty-five Dollars!!
Eighty Copies for.... ...One Hundred Dollars

ANY person sending $10 for Five WEEKLY Subscribers, will be entitled to a FREE Copy.

The WEEKLY GLOBE will be sent to all Clergymen for One Dollar a year.

Money Letters addressed—"The Publisher of the Globe, Toronto," can be Registered by payment of one penny, and their safe arrival will then be at the risk of the Publisher.

☞ Subscriptions may commence at any period of the year, and be made for any term ; and persons desirous of receiving the Paper need not wait for an Agent to call on them, but have only to enclose their money, with their name and Post Office, to

GEO. BROWN,
Globe Office, Toronto.

Toronto, Sept. 10, 1858.

Miscellaneous.

AXE FACTORY.

THE subscriber is now having manufactured by P. J. AYRES, at his old stand, near the Otonabee Mills, a large lot of

DOUBLE STEELED AXES,
BROAD & NARROW AXES,
CARPENTERS TOOLS, &C., &C.,

of the best quality and workmanship, which may be had either at the Factory or at the subscriber's store, on reasonable terms.

R. D. RODGERS.

Ashburnham, September 23rd 1858. 37

NOTICE.

THE subscriber notifies all persons indebted to him, whose accounts are overdue, that in consequence of the amendment in the Usury Laws, TWELVE PER CENT INTEREST will hereafter be charged.

All accounts due from last year, and not paid immediately will be put in suit for collection.

W. B. READ.

Peterboro', 22nd Sept., 1858. 37

LETTER AND NOTE PAPERS.

CREAM and Blue Colors, ruled and plain.—Envelopes, all sizes and qualities to match. A very complete stock on hand. Merchants supplied on liberal terms.

SAWERS & MURRAY,
Stationers, &c., Peterboro'.

PETERBOROUGH LIVERY STABLE

THE SUBSCRIBER begs to inform the public that he is always ready to furnish them with Horses, Waggons, Carriages, and every thing required at a Livery, on the shortest notice, and on reasonable terms. He has several in fine condition, and everything about his establishment is in good order.

He very sincerely begs to withdraw from the long credit system, and begs all who may favor him with their patronage, to remember that he can only continue to accommodate the public, by them, in turn, enabling him to keep up his business, that is by ready pay.

THOS. EASTLAND.

Peterboro' Livery Stables, Hunter Street, Jan. 1st, 1858. 1

UNION HOTEL.
Peterborough.

GEORGE ALLEN

RESPECTFULLY intimates to his friends and the public generally, that his establishment is still open for the reception of guests in his usual good style.

The house is new and been fully situated on the bank of the Otonabee River, where travelers will find a quiet and desirable resting.

IF A limited number of respectable BOARDERS can be accommodated.

Good Stables and Sheds

On the premises. An Ostler in attendance, who will give the best attention to horses entrusted to his care.

Peterborough, Oct. 20th 1857. 42.

NORTH AMERICAN HOTEL,

DUNDAS STREET, COBOURG.

THE above Hotel having been recently repaired, painted, and newly fitted up, and being now entirely complete in all its appointments, is now opened for the reception of the travelling public.

The House is commodious, and no pains nor expense will be spared to make it one of the best in the Province.

The Liquors are of the best brands, and the Larder will be constantly supplied with all the delicacies of the Season.

The Stables are commodious, and an attentive Ostler is always in attendance.

The proprietor pledges himself that every attention will be paid to the wants of his guests.

☞ Omnibusses will attend at the Cars and Boats to carry passengers to the Hotel free of charge.

RALPH FRANCIS,
Proprietor,

Cobourg, August, 1857. 35

SCOTLAND'S AUTHORS.

Arnott's, Rev. Wm.—Laws from Heaven for Life on Earth, or Illustrations of the Book of Proverbs	$1,50
Bonar's Desert of Sinai, 3 plates	1,00
Do. Land of Promise, 5 plates	1,25
Do. Night of Weeping	0,30
Do. Morning of Joy	0,40
Do. Story of Grace	0,30
Do. Truth and Error	0,40
Do. Man, his Religion and his World	0,40
Do. Eternal Day	0,50
Boston's Four-Fold State	0,50
Do. Crook in the Lot	0,30
Brewster's—More World's than One	0,60
Brown's Concordance, gilt 30 cts.; plain	0,20
Chalmer's Dr., Miscellanies	1,50
Do. ...ural Philosophy	0,60
Do. Astronomical Discourses	0,60
Dick, Dr.,—Christian Philosopher	1,00
Duncan's—Tales of the Scottish Peasantry, illustrated	0,50
Do. Cottage Fireside, illustrated	0,50
Family Worship—A series of Prayers adapted to Domestic Worship, by one hundred and eighty Clergymen of Scotland, 830 pages	3,00
Gilfillan's Martyrs, Heroes and Bards of the Scottish Covenant	0,60
Guthrie's, Dr., Gospel in Ezekiel	1,00
Do. The City, its Sins and Sorrows	0,50
Hetherington's History of the Church of Scotland up to the disruption	1,50
Howie's Scots Worthies, or Historical account of those who suffered for the Reformation	1,50
Martyrs and Covenanters of Scotland	0,60
Macduff's Memories of Gennesaret	1,00
Do. Bow in the Cloud, and the First Bereavement	0,70
Do. Morning and Night Watches	0,60
Do. Footsteps of St. Paul, with plates	1,00
Do Words of Jesus	0,40
Do Mind of Jesus	0,40
Do Family Prayers	0,25
Do. Great Journey or Pilgrimage to Mount Zion	0,50
Do. Faithful Promiser and Altar Stones	0,75
Do. Memories of Bethany	0,50
Mabel Grant,—A Highland Story	0,50
McCheyne's Life, Letters, Lectures and Songs of Zion	1,50
McCosh's Method of Divine Government	2,00
Meetenkhi's, Mrs.,—Leys of the Kirk and Covenant	0,50
Pearson's Infidelity, its Aspect, Causes, and Agencies	1,00
Pollok's Tales of the Covenanters	0,50
Scotia's Bards—The Choicest productions of the Scottish Poets with Biographies	2,00
Turnbull's Genius of Scotland	1,00
Wardlaw on Miracles	0,75
Wilson's Lights and Shadows of Scottish Life, illustrated	0,75

For Sale at the New Book Store of
SAWERS & MURRAY.
George St., Peterboro'.

August 5, 1858. 30

FARM FOR SALE

THE South 70 acres of the west half of the 23rd lot in the 6th Concession of Smith.—The land is of the best quality, well fenced and in good cultivation, upwards of 30 acres being cleared of stumps and stones, with a good young orchard bearing fruit. There are on the premises

A New Frame Barn, a Good Log Barn,

Stables and Sheds. Also two Good Wells. For further particulars apply to the proprietor,

PATRICK WOOD.

Smith, Sept. 7, 1858.

READ! READ!!

SAM Slick's Nature and Human Nature	50 cents.
Sam Slick's Sayings and Doings	50 "
Sam Slick in England, or the Attaches	50 "
Mrs. Partington's Carpet Bag of Fun	50 "
Tom Cringle's Log	50 "
The Clockes of the Minute	25 "
Yankee Notions for September	12½ "

And a host of other capital things at

SAWERS & MURRAY'S BOOK STORE.

Peterboro', August 30, 1858.

Insurances.

THE ÆTNA AND BEACON ASSURANCE COMPANY.

CAPITAL.....£250,000 STG.

£140,000 PAID UP.

HEAD OFFICE IN CANADA, KINGSTON, C.W.

CANADA BOARD OF DIRECTORS OR TRUSTEES :
The HON. J. A. MACDONALD,
JAMES MORTON, Esq., Kingston.

DIRECTORS

Chairman—M. U. STRANGE, Esq.

Vice Chairman—THOMAS A. CORBETT, Esq.

JAMES MORTON, Esq., | A. J. McDONELL, Esq.
JOHN MOWAT, Esq., | JAMES HARTY, Esq.

AUDITORS

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Esq., Kingston,
JAMES THOMPSON, Esq.

Standing Counsel—A. J. MACDONELL, Esq.

Bankers—COMMERCIAL BANK, Kingston.

LOCAL MANAGER :
W. CLUXTON, Peterboro'.

Peterboro', March 2, 1858. 13.

THE LIVERPOOL AND LONDON
Fire & Life Insurance Co.

CAPITAL.....£2,000,000 STG.

Empowered by Act of Imperial Parliament.

RESPONSIBILITY OF SHAREHOLDERS UNLIMITED.

HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA, MONTREAL.

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to accept Risks in the above first class Company, on same liberal terms as any other responsible office.

Losses paid without reference to the Old Country.

W. CLUXTON,
Agent for Peterborough.

Peterboro' March 2nd 1858. 12

WESTERN
Insurance Company,

CAPITAL £500,000.

Head Office, Toronto.

FOR EVERY DESCRIPTION OF
FIRE & MARINE ASSURANCE
BUSINESS.

AGENT FOR PETERBORO',
W. CLUXTON.

Peterboro' Sept. 14th, 1857. 37

UNITY FIRE AND UNITY GENERAL
INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS OF ENGLAND.

FOR every description of Fire and Life Assurance business.

CAPITAL, £2,500 00 Sterling.

CHIEF OFFICES,—Unity Buildings, Canon St., London. Agents for Peterboro',

W. EASTLAND.

Peterboro', July, 1858.

Provincial Insurance Company.

OF TORONTO, C. W.

Subscribed Capital, $1 997 630. Paid up Capital, $620,356.

PRESIDENT, J. S. HOWARD, Esq.
VICE-PRESIDENT, Hon. J. E. CAMERON.

Directors.

Hon. W. E. Rowland,	J. F. Wetherbee, Esq.
Geo. Duggan, Jr., Esq.	Geo. Crawford, Esq.
J. S. Howard, Esq.	John Cameron, Esq., Q.C.
Wm. A. Sheppard, Esq.	W. M. Chase, Esq.
Hon. J. E. Cameron,	Duncan McDonnell, Esq.
Capt. P. Wallace.

MANAGER AND SECRETARY :
HON. J. LEANDER STARR.

ASS'T SECRETARY :
J. JOSEPH WOODHOUSE, ESQ.

Bankers.

TORONTO—CITY BANK OF MONTREAL.
NEW YORK—BANK OF THE REPUBLIC.

SOLICITORS :—Messrs. DUGGAN & BURNS.

HEAD OFFICE :
TORONTO STREET, TORONTO.

Fire and Marine Insurance business transacted by this Company at its various Agencies, as well as the Head Office, at as low rates as in any respectable Office, and all losses promptly settled.

Brokers allowed a commission of ten per cent. on all new business brought to the Head Office, where the necessary forms of application may be made.

Toronto, April 20, 1858. 44

THE COLONIAL
Life Assurance Company.

ESTABLISHED 1846.

HEAD OFFICE—Edinburgh, Scotland, and MONTREAL, CANADA.

Proposals for assurance disposed of in Canada without reference to Scotland.

Medical Adviser for Peterboro,—G. MacNab.

AGENT, W. B. READ.

Peterboro', July 28th, 1857. 30

ALL ABOARD!

THE SUBSCRIBER respectfully begs leave to announce to the Public, in his house at Bridgenorth, (Mud Lake) travellers supplied with the best accommodation and entertainment for travellers.

GOOD STABLING, DRIVING HOUSE, YARD ROOM AND STORAGE.

He also runs a STAGE to and from Peterboro' in connection with the Boats, leaving McGregor's Hotel, Peterboro', at half-past seven, A. M., to meet the boats at Bridgenorth, returning to Peterboro' on the arrival of the Boats, about 4 o'clock, P. M.

For freight or passage, enquire at McGregor's Hotel, Peterboro', or at the Subscribers Hotel Bridgenorth. Fare each way 1s. 10½d.

JOHN POPE.

Bridgenorth June 12, 1858.

AMERICAN HOTEL. PETERBORO'.

THE undersigned, Proprietor, begs to return his sincere thanks to the travelling community and the county as well as the townspeople, for the very handsome support his late house has received from them. He hopes by continued attention to their wants, and careful management of the House to retain the successful business which has attended his previous efforts.

The Bar

Will always be stocked with the best Liquors and Cigars.

Great care taken in the selection of servants and careful Ostlers always in attendance at the stables.

Passengers by or to the cars carried free, and attendance regular.

LOUIS McGREGOR.

Peterboro', 1858. 1858.

Business Notices.

SPLENDID INVESTMENT.
FOR SALE,

LOT No. 9, West of George Street, and South of Charlotte Street, adjoining the Port Hope and Peterboro' Railroad Depot, having three good buildings on it the situation is adapted to any public business. Those who desire to profit by such a rare chance, will please address the undersigned, by letter (post-paid) to Lindsay.

N. B.—It will be sold altogether or in building lots, to suit purchasers.

CHARLES McCARTHY.

Peterboro' July 29, 1858. 29-tf

EVERY SCOTCHMAN

SHOULD read the "Scottish American Journal," published weekly. It contains the best summary of old country news of any paper published in this country, and has besides a series of articles on the "Highland Bonnets," or Achievement of the Scottish Regiments in India and elsewhere. For sale at SAWERS & MURRAY'S New Book Store, Peterboro'. Price $2,50 per year in advance, or 3d per single number.

NOTICE.

THE PARTNERSHIP existing between us, and known as the firm of Hurst & Deane is this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts due to, and by, the said firm, will be settled by Henry Deane, who will grant receipts for the same.

WALTER HURST,
HENRY DEANE.

The business will hereafter be carried on by W. Hurst, who respectfully solicits a share of the Public patronage.

Blythe Mills, Peterboro', July 20, 1858. 28

NOTICE

IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Partnership heretofore existing between HENRY MORROW & ALEX. MORROW, both of the town of Peterboro', under the firm of Morrow & Brother, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

All debts owing to the said late firm will be received by the said Henry Morrow and all debts due by the said firm will be paid by him.

HENRY MORROW,
ALEX. MORROW

Peterboro' July 1st, 1858.

IN REFERENCE TO THE ABOVE, I would take the opportunity to inform my friends and the public that I will continue the business carried on by the firm in the same premises, and I hope by strict attention to business and a thorough knowledge of the wants of my customers, to merit and receive a continuance of the patronage so liberally extended to the late firm.

HENRY MORROW.

Peterboro', July 1st, 1858. 26

PAPER, PAINTS, &c.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, at his shop on Brock Street, a large and varied assortment of Room Paper, among which will be found patterns of English, French and American manufacture, which he has just received, and which he will sell at the lowest possible price, for ready pay, or short approved credit.

He keeps constantly by a number of hands, who can be employed in

PAPER HANGING!

And he recommends his Stock and Workmanship to the public.

The Papers range in price from 3d per Roll, up to 17s 6d per roll, and from their great variety, he is sure the most fastidious will find their choice.

The Painting, Glazing and Finishing business carried on as usual.

ROBERT STEVENSON.

Brock Street, Peterboro, April 8 1858. 41

The only Reliable Route to Peterborough
BY RAILWAY.

GREAT WESTERN
P. H. L. & B. RAILWAY,
AND
Peterborough Section.

NEW ARRANGEMENTS.

ON and after WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 18th 1858, Trains will run as follows :—

Leave Lindsay, 6 40 A. M., arrive at Port Hope, 10 10 A. M.

Leave Port Hope, 2 10 P. M., arrive at Lindsay, 6 40 P. M.

Leave Port Hope, 12 A. M., arrive at Peterborough, 2 P. M.

Leave Port Hope, 7 30 P. M., arrive at Peterborough, 9 40 P. M.

Leave Peterborough, 7 A. M., arrive at Port Hope 9 10 A. M.

Leave Peterborough 2 50 P. M., arrive at Port Hope, 6 P. M.

Trains run by Port Hope time

All the above Trains run in connection with Grand Trunk Railway, East and West. The splendid Steamer Maple Leaf, also runs in connection with P. H. L. & B. Railway, leaving Port Hope on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, at 11 a. m., arriving at Rochester at 6 p. m., in time for evening Trains to New York, Boston and Philadelphia, and leaves Rochester on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, at 11 a. m., arriving at Port Hope at 6 p. m. in time for passengers to reach Peterboro' same day.

Port Hope, August 16, 1858. 33

NOTICE.

FARMERS AND OTHERS, trading in produce, liable to Market fees, are hereby notified that I have purchased the right to collect such fees, under the Market By-law by which they are authorized, and in order to conform to the Market rules, all persons interested are respectfully requested to give their own account to the Market Square, and give no unnecessary trouble by attempted dodging. The law will be enforced with the utmost rigor.

A. MORROW,
Market Clerk.

Peterboro', Aug. 4th, 1858.

THE "COLONIST."

THE "COLONIST" HAS A BONA-FIDE Circulation of

TWELVE THOUSAND,

And is therefore

THE BEST ADVERTISING MEDIUM IN CANADA.

TERMS :

DAILY—4d a line for first insertion, and 1d a line for each subsequent insertion.

WEEKLY—6d a line for first insertion, and 2d a line for each subsequent insertion.

N. B.—Postmasters who send advertisements on these terms, will have a commission of 15 per cent allowed them.

The terms of Subscription to the DAILY COLONIST, are six dollars a year, payable in advance. For the WEEKLY, the price is a dollar and a-half, also payable in advance.

To Clubs of TEN, the WEEKLY will be supplied at one dollar a year. 35

FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE AND WELL SITUATED PROPERTY, being a part of Lot No. 12 in the 7th Concession of Smith, and within the Village of Bridgenorth, containing eight and one quarter acres ; bounded on the front by the Lake, and on the rear by the Main Road leading from Peterborough to Harvey, and situated between Mr. S. Kelly's Mills and the Wharf on Dunbar's Landing. There are on the premises a good substantial HOUSE AND BARN. An undisputed title can be given.

For further particulars apply to the owner on the premises.

JANE HARRINGTON.

Bridgenorth, Sept. 10, 1858. 36

NOTICE.

THE inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding district are respectfully informed that the subscriber has brought from Mr. Colton his Omnibus and Horses, and that he is now prepared to carry passengers to and from all the Hotels, and to all private residences, for One York Shilling.

As he carries the mails, the public may rely on his punctuality in meeting the trains.

ROBERT WHITE.

Peterboro', Oct. 9th, 1858. 35-tf

Farms, &c., For Sale.

PROPERTY IN OMEMEE
FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber offers for sale, in the flourishing Village of Omemee, on the Port Hope and Lindsay Railroad, village Lot No. 10, north side of King street, containing ¾ acre of land.—The buildings consist of a frame dwelling house and store, now occupied by Mr. John Henderson, a dwelling house adjoining, also a large workshop, and stabling, with every other convenience attached. The buildings are all new, and well put up.

If the above is not disposed of before 20th of OCTOBER NEXT, it will then be sold to the highest bidder, by PUBLIC AUCTION.

THE TERMS are, £200 cash, or a bankable note ; the remainder in instalments as may be agreed upon.

For further particulars apply to John Henderson, on the premises, or to the undersigned proprietor, in Omemee, or at the Examiner office, in Peterboro'.

There will be no difficulty as to title.

JOSHUA DAWSON.

10th Lot, 12th Concession, Otonabee, Aug. 12, 1858. 31

TAKE NOTICE!

ALL Parties indebted to me, who wish to avoid paying 12½ PER CENT INTEREST, will please to settle their liabilities immediately, as I will charge that rate of interest on all Notes & Accounts, due, or accruing due from the 1st instant.

All debts due prior to this date must be settled before the 10th October, or they will pass into other hands for collection.

T. G. HAZLITT.

Peterboro', September, 1858. 38—3t

FARM FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale East half 6 in 7th con. and East half of 7 in 7th con. Dummer, containing 100 acres, of which

80 ARE CLEARED

In good cultivation and well fenced ; a good

FRAME LOG HOUSE,

And two large barns, with other good out houses, and a superior well close at hand.

The property is three miles from

Millbrook.

On an excellent road, and will be sold for £2 10s an acre. From one third to one half to be paid down, the payment of the balance as agreed upon.

HENRY GARDNER.

Dummer, July 10th 1857. 28.

VALUABLE FARM, SAW-MILL, FOR SALE.

THE Subscriber is desirous of selling his property, consisting of 250 acres, 50 of which are under cultivation, comprising a

FINE YOUNG GRAFTED ORCHARD.

There is an excellent DWELLING HOUSE, with Barns, Sheds, and all other necessary Out-Houses, a good water

SAW MILL,

in good running order. The premises consist of Lot No. 9, and south-east quarter of Lot No. 8, in the 11th Concession of the Township of Monaghan. The Farm is one of the finest in the County, and most favorably situated on the Gravel Road, two miles from Peterboro. The wood land consists of hardwood and cedar, and the whole lot is furnished with a good supply of running water.

For further particulars as to terms, &c., apply on the Premises to

W. W. BOSWELL,

Peterboro, Sept. 8, 1857. 36

TO LET.

TWO NEW BRICK STORES fronting on George Street, one for Dry Goods, the other for Groceries. Both finished in the newest and finest style of workmanship, and elegantly painted and varnished, equal to any in Town ; the basement stories are well lighted and perfectly dry, and warranted against frost. Application to be made to the proprietor on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.

Peterboro', Feb. 1st, 1858. 5

TO LET.

That Splendid Three Story Brick Store, lately occupied by Mr. E. Perlow on Hunter Street.

Also 18 Town Lots for sale. Terms easy.

Apply to the Subscriber on the premises.

J. T. HENTHORN.

Peterboro', June 2, 1858. 22

Hardware.

New Stove Warehouse !!!

THE SUBSCRIBERS beg to inform their friends and the Public that they have entered into Partnership as Stove-Dealers, Tinsmiths, &c., and respectfully invite public inspection to their new styles of Stoves, consisting in part of

The Improved Burr,
The Star of the West,
The Wide World,
The Commodore,
The Improved Canadian Farmer,
The Buffalo,
The Black Rover,
The King Stove,
The Premium.

Besides a variety of Parlor and Plate Stoves. They also receive orders for all kinds of

COPPER, SHEET-IRON AND TIN WORK.

Which their Patrons may depend upon getting done in a manner which will give the greatest satisfaction.

A large stock of TIN-WARE, STOVE-PIPES, and other such articles belonging to their business, kept constantly on hand.

Their premises are on George Street, lately occupied by Messrs. Harvey & Thomson, and next door to Messrs. Glover & Robinson

BIGELOW & ROBINSON.

Peterboro', October 27, 1857. 43

AXES BY STEAM

THE subscriber invites public attention to his increased facility of making the

SUPERIOR AXES

he has so long supplied to the community, and begs to assure his patrons that he will be unremitting in his efforts to retain for his work the good reputation it has hitherto enjoyed. He offers

Narrow and Broad Axes,

AND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF

EDGE TOOLS,

WHOLESALE and RETAIL, as cheap as they can be purchased here or in any other market, and of a quality that cannot be surpassed.

His premises are located on GEORGE ST., opposite the OLD BURYING GROUND, and to enable him to supply his manufactures in sufficient quantity, and at moderate prices, he has called in steam power to his assistance.

☞ Axes Jumped and Ground in quick order.

W. MOGOON.

Peterboro', Sept. 22, 1857.

NOTICE.

PARTIES are requested to take notice that the Accounts for the last half year are now ready for delivery, and a prompt settlement is requested, as the subscribers are now closing their Book Accounts. Those accounts must be by cash payments or note will be by the 1st of November handed over for collection.

A. POWLES & Co.

☞ Take notice that interest will be charged in future at the rate of 12½ per cent.

Peterboro', October 7th, 1858. 35-tf.

Miscellaneous.

HATS! HATS!

THE New York and Canadian Style of Hats is now ready for inspection. Also, a large assortment of Fur Hats and Cloth Caps, &c., &c.

The Trade Supplied as Usual.

A. SECOR,
Hatter, &c.

Cobourg, March 19, 1858. 12

CABINET ROOMS
RE OPENED!

THE subscriber informs his old customers and the public generally, that he has recovered from the effects of the late fire, and has erected a new building on the old site which he has fitted up as a show room. He is daily receiving and making up a choice assortment of

FURNITURE & CABINET WARE,

Of every description, which, as usual, he offers at moderate prices.

He has removed his workshop to the building just erected by Mr. Murdock, where by the use of Steam and the most recent improvements in

LABOUR SAVING MACHINERY,

He will be prepared to manufacture for sale or to order every description of Furniture, at prices unprecedent, in this Town.

W. Y. SWAYNE.

Peterboro', July 8th, 1857. 18.

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.

AN ELIGIBLE LOT OF LAND, on the Gravel Road, about 3 miles from Peterborough, containing 35 acres, being part of the eastern portion of the North-East quarter of Lot No. 7, 11th Concession North Monaghan, on the West of John Green's Tavern, and adjoining it. Apply to the Subscriber,

WILLIAM BELL.

Monaghan, Jan. 11, 1857. 2

HORSE SHOEING.

BARNARD McGARRITY and WILLIAM MILLER, beg to inform the public, that their horse shoeing prices are as follows :—

A full set, new 3s,
Each remove 6d.

their terms are, if not Cash, well-approved credit.

Peterborough, Jan. 1st, 1858. 1

PERIODICALS, MAGAZINES, &C.

THE subscribers receive every Saturday the Weekly Periodicals in the following list, and on the third Saturday of each month the Monthlies for the next ensuing month, all of which they are prepared to supply on the annexed terms.

Orders respectfully solicited.

PER YEAR.		PER NO.
$2,25 ..	New York Ledger	0s 3d.
2,50 ..	Harper's Weekly	0 3½
3,00 ..	Ballou's Pictorial	0 4
3,25 ..	Waverly Magazine	0 4
1,50 ..	Yankee Notions	0 1½
2,50 ..	New York Clipper	0 3½
2,50 ..	Flag of Our Union	0 3½
2,50 ..	Scottish Amer. Journal	0 3
3,25 ..	Leslie's Illustrated	0 4
9,00 ..	Illustrated London News	1 7
5,50 ..	" " 7 times	0 7½
5,50 ..	Punch	0 7½
3,00 ..	Harper's Magazine	1 3
3,00 ..	Household Words	1 3
2,00 ..	Chamber's Journal	1 0
2,20 ..	Mrs. Stephen's Journal	1 0
2,20 ..	Peterson's Journal	1 0
3,00 ..	Godey's Lady's Book	1 3
3,00 ..	Atlantic Monthly	1 3
2,50 ..	New York Mercury	0 3
2,50 ..	" " Weekly	0 3
2,50 ..	Rural New Yorker	0 3

YEARLY SUBSCRIPTIONS
MUST BE STRICTLY
In Advance.

Back Nos. must be paid for when ordered.

SAWERS & MURRAY.

Peterboro', June 23, 1858. 2

BOOK BINDER.

ONLY ONE QUARTER DOLLAR!
FOR THE
VICTORIA PAPETERIE,
OR
CHEAP PACKET OF WRITING MATERIALS

WHICH CONTAINS

12 Sheets fine ruled Letter paper usually sold for		7½d
12 Sheets fine ruled Note paper	"	4
12 Large sized Envelopes adhesive	"	3
12 Note " " "	"	2
3 Steel Pens		1
1 Holder		1
1 Pencil		1
1 Sheet Blotting paper		½
Making a total of		1s 8d.

NOW SOLD FOR
ONE QUARTER DOLLAR,
BY
SAWERS & MURRAY.
AT THE
NEW BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE,
Burnham's Block George-st, Peterborough.

June 22nd, 1858. 24

FRESH TEAS.

JUST RECEIVED from the Ship "Cambalu," direct from China, an assortment of

Hyson, Young Hyson.
Gunpowder, Twankay,

S. E. CURRY, & Co.

Peterboro', 29th June, 1858. 25

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

THE attention of Clergymen, Teachers, and others interested in Sunday Schools is respectfully invited to our large and varied assortment of

Reward Books, Tickets, Admission Cards, &c., &c., &c.,

Especially adapted for Sunday Schools, and which we will sell on the best possible terms.

A CALL SOLICITED,

SAWERS & MURRAY,
NEW BOOK AND STATIONARY STORE,
Burnham's Block, George Street Peterboro'.

DR. J. B. ALFORD'S
ECLECTIC, MEDICAL & SURGICAL OFFICE.

CORNER OF HUNTER AND AYLMER STREETS,
Near the Residence of James Hall, Esq.,
PETERBOROUGH.

DR. A. would announce to the citizens of Peterborough and vicinity, that he has located in this place for the purpose of attending to the duties of his profession. His system of treatment is purely Eclectic, using only those agents which are safe and reliable. INVALIDS however despairing, are invited to call, as no expense will be incurred without a corresponding prospect of recovery.

Residence—American Hotel.

Peterboro', Oct, 10, 1857. 41

FARM FOR SALE.

EAST Half Lot No. 14, in the 11th Concession of Asphodel, three miles from the Village of Norwood. There are fifty acres cleared, and good fashion, and a never-failing spring of pure water upon the premises. The Land is of a superior quality.

Terms, Liberal.

For further particulars apply to JAMES HALES, Otonabee, or upon the premises, to

W. B. SCOTT

Asphodel, 19th June, 1858. 24tf

Miscellaneous.

FOR THE PIANO FORTE!!

The Musical Bouquet, (English,
AT 4d PER SINGLE NUMBER.

THE subscribers have now in stock, the following pieces, to which they respectfully invite the attention of the Ladies of Peterborough.

QUADRILLES.

The Scotch Quadrilles.
Piccolomini Quadrilles.
Les Chiens, (dogs) do.
The Lancers do.
The Don Caspar De Banna Quadrilles.

POLKAS.

Belphegor do.
The British Navy do.
Les Chats, (cats) do.
Bonnie Dundee do.
Les Singes, (monkeys) do.
Lucrezia Borgia do.
Les Souris, (mice) do.
The Mesmeteers do.
The Irish do.
Puss in Boots do.
The Royal Lancers' do. do.
The Comic or Ratcatcher's do.

POLKAS.

Guy Fawkes' Polka.
The Laughing Eyes Polka.
Tomtit's do.
The Bobbin' Around do.
The Original do.
Ask Mamma do.
The Minnie

PRINTING
OF
EVERY DESCRIPTION,
Plain, Colored, Fancy
AND
Ornamental.---Bronzing,
&c., &c.,
Neatly executed, on the shortest notice and in the latest style, at the Office of the
EXAMINER.
BURNHAM's BLOCK,
OPPOSITE THE MARKET.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1858.

Volume 3.] "THE PEOPLE." [Number 41.

The Examiner.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

ARE TEN SHILLINGS in ADVANCE, for ONE YEAR; no shorter time will be recognized.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Six Lines, and under, first insertion	£0	2	6
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	9½
Six to ten lines, first insertion	0	3	4
Each subsequent insertion	0	1	3
Over ten lines, first insertion (per line)	0	0	4
Each subsequent insertion	0	0	1

☞ Advertisements without written instructions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

Orders to discontinue must be given in writing, verbal orders cannot be recognized.

Business Directory.

MESSRS. FITZGERALD & DRENNAN,

PROVINCIAL LAND SURVEYORS, CIVIL ENGINEERS AND LAND AGENTS. Office in Scott's Chambers, corner of George and Simcoe Streets. Messrs. F. & D. having lately surveyed the outlines of eight new Townships now included in this County will be happy to give any information to intending settlers. 34

MR. DENNISTOUN,

BARRISTER at Law, Master Extraordinary in Chancery, Notary Public, &c., Peterborough.

E. BURNHAM,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Solicitor in Chancery, &c., Peterborough.

C. A. WELLER,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, Peterborough. Office, in the International Telegraph Office, East side of George Street, lately occupied by W. H. J. Vinard, Esq.

C. B. RUBIDGE,

BARRISTER and Attorney at Law, &c. &c., &c.
Peterboro', March 10th, 1856.

DR. HOLYWELL,

HAS removed his residence to Simcoe Street, two doors east of Captain Rubidge's.
Peterborough, Dec. 17, 1856.

MR. JOHN McNAB,

SURGEON and Coroner, will attend to professional calls at his residence, Peterboro' West.

ALBRO & VINDIN,

commission, Shipping, Forwarding
AND GENERAL AGENTS,
Lumber Merchants, &c.,
Port Hope, C. W.

Office—Corner of Walton and Ontario Streets.

MESSRS. STEWART,

ARCHITECTS, Engineers, Land Surveyors, and Land Agents. Office, Mill Street, Port Hope.

GEO. A. STEWART.
CHAS. E. STEWART.
Port Hope, May 29, 1857. 21.

JOHN HAYDEN,

Importer of Mantle and Pier Looking-Glasses, window Glass of all sizes, Room-Paper, &c., &c., WHOLESALE & RETAIL.
King Street, Cobourg, Sept. 1, 1857. 35—6m.

BANK OF MONTREAL.

INTEREST will be allowed on deposits at this agency as per agreement.
Peterboro', May 28th, 1857. 22

MR. A. T. HEATHFIELD,

PIANIST AND TEACHER OF MUSIC.

COMMUNICATION THROUGH THE POST OFFICE, Peterborough.

JOHNSON'S

FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing and Shaving Saloon in the Building formerly occupied by the Post Office, east of the bridge.
Port Hope, Sept. 29, 1857.

WILSON'S SALOON,

HUNTER STREET, PETERBOROUGH, CANADA WEST.
MEALS at all Hours. Oysters, Lobsters, &c., always on hand.
Peterboro', Sept. 2, 1856. 2

BOOKSELLERS AND STATIONERS.

SAWERS & MURRAY,

HAVE always on hand a complete assortment of Books in every department of LITERATURE, SCHOOL BOOKS, PLAIN AND FANCY STATIONERY, &c., &c.
New Book and Stationery Store,
22 Burnham's Block, George-st.

A. MERCER & SONS,

TAILORS & CLOTHIERS,
HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

FASHIONABLE Clothing made to order on the shortest notice.—Terms Moderate.
Peterboro', June 9, 1858. 23—1y

BANK OF TORONTO.

HUNTER ST., PETERBORO'.

INTEREST ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS.
A. MUNRO, Agent.
May, 1858. 19

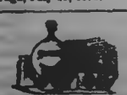
ROBERT THOM BROOKES,

ARCHITECT, Civil Engineer, &c., Scott's Chambers, George Street.
Peterboro', July 23, 1858. 30

QUARRY TO LET.
Near Peterborough.

THE Subscriber offers for a term of years, the Quarry on the river side, above the residence of Charles Dunlop, Esq. The bridge in contemplation to cross the river will bring the Quarry within half a mile of the centre of the Town. The stone is of a superior quality, and is easily worked.

For Terms and other particulars, apply to THOMAS DUNLOP, Douro, or
GEORGE A. STEWART,
Port Hope.
Peterborough, July 15, 1858. 27



Notice to the Asthmatical.

Asthma Cured for $10!

KNOW ALL MEN, that I, the undersigned, am in possession of a quick and certain remedy for this most distressing disease, and persons afflicted with it may apply to him with the full confidence of being restored to perfect health in a period of three minutes thereafter, short. $10 to be paid in advance.
Address, (if by letter, post paid,) to
S. S. MOORE.
Residence—Corner of Shuttlewood and Aylmer Streets.
N. B.—Packages with directions, sent by mail, when desired, to any part of the country.
Peterborough, July 23, 1858. 28

A GOOD PEN
IS A REAL BLESSING.
BUY ONE DOZEN GILT PENS, IN BOX,
FOR
THREE YORK SHIL. INGS.
At Sawers & Murray's Stationery Store.

DIARIES FOR 1859.

WE are now receiving our Stock of DIARIES for the coming year. Merchants and others would do well to call early and make their selection.
SAWERS & MURRAY,
Bookellers and Stationers, George Street.

The Editor's Story.

BY DR. R. M. BIRD.

"Sir," said Mr. Ticklum, "we were editor and proprietor of the The Light of the People—more commonly and familiarly called 'The People's Light'—a paper, sir, extremely well known, and when it came into our hands, and indeed, as we may justly say, for some years after, of the highest repute in the world of letters. Sir, it was a vigorous paper, and it had seven thousand subscribers; more than one half of whom were good pay. It was a rich paper, therefore, as well as a good one, and we were making our fortune by it.

"Sir—when we became the editor of the 'People's Light,' we were acknowledged to be the ablest h[illegible] that had ever conducted it; and we d[illegible], sir—we scorned all affected modesty; as an editor, sir, we have a right to praise ourself. Besides our natural abilities, sir, we enjoyed the advantage of an extensive acquaintance with the public tastes. Our predecessor was an experienced man, and our friend; and when we bought him out, he gave us a deal of instruction on the true principle of nasiduction."

"Nasiduction?" said I, interrupting the gentleman, "what is that?"

"Sir," said Mr. Ticklum, "it is a word used among editors, to express their art, that being otherwise without a name. It means, sir, to lead by the nose—or noseleading; and is thus expressive of the object of the art editorial, which is to manage the public.

"Our predecessor gave us the results of his experience on the subject of nasiduction; and, thus accomplished, we entered upon the duties of the 'People's Light' with the skill, the power, and the success of a veteran. We became a shining light in the party—that is, the party we belong to, and we were soon esteemed its chief organ. As a politician, we flatter ourself, our abilities were undeniable; and in the other sphere of editorial vocation we were not found wanting. Our talent for invective was universally acknowledged; we abused our opponents with a zeal that gained us the the love and respect of every member of our faction. If a reputation was to be blasted, a spirit wounded to the quick, a double friend held up to contempt, or an incautious enemy to execration, who was so ready, who was so able to wield the lash of punishment? Nay, if the party itself was to be humbugged, if the interests of the leaders, our great patrons, required a little dust to be thrown in the eyes of our readers, who could effect the purpose with equal address? Sir, we knew how to inflame the rage, and disturb the fear of our subscribers: we knew how to awaken their self-love, their vanity, their pride, and thus lead them to deeds of glory. In short, sir, we were a first rate editor, a man of reputation, sir, a man of power, a man of money—we were making our fortune, and—no thanks to virtue—with none of her assistance. We were a happy man, sir; we sat under our own vine and fig-tree, we warmed ourself at our own fire, we rode our own horse, we fattened our own chickens, and we endured the scolding of our wife, and squalling of our children with equanimity, for we endured them in our own house. As we said before, we were making our fortune; we had a thousand friends to help us spend it.

"Behold how virtue—sir, we say virtue, for virtue it was—crept betwixt us and the shunshine of prosperity; hacked to pieces our vine and fig-tree, and put out our fire, sparined our horse, killed our chickens, and brought the sheriff's surliest deputy into our best parlour.

"We had the misfortune, one night, to dream that the devil came to our bed-side, bidding us get up and follow him. This we did, (that is we dreamed we did,) for we saw he was a person not to be trifled with; but we must confess, sir, it was with fear and trembling. We ventured, however, as he led us into the street, to ask, whither he was carrying us? 'To your appointed place,' said he, looking as black as midnight—but wagging his tail, as if pleased with our company. Then taking us by the hand, he made a spring into the air at least ten feet high, and flinging up his legs, and ours too, as we reached that height, he made dive headlong into the pavement, which, instead of dashing out our brains as we expected, yielded to the shock, and away we went through flagstones and gravel, gas-pipes and culverts, the solid earth and still more solid rock, until we gained his infernal dominions about two miles below. Here, sir, we saw sights that made our hair stand on end; and it is our purpose, on some future occasion, to commit an account of them to the press; but at present we shall speak of them briefly, and of such only as are illustrative of our story.

"Pray, sir," said the honourable Mr. Smash, here interrupting the story, "allow me to ask if you can't speak of them in the first person singular? I don't wish to be critical or impertinent, but really, after what I have suffered from the press, I assure you I never heard that grand editorial WE, without feeling as if again undergoing the pangs of castigation; and, upon my honour, sir, the fancy is quite uncomfortable."

"Any thing to gratify our patrons—that is, I mean, to oblige a friend," said Mr. Ticklum, descending from the style professional to the humbler phrase of individuality. With which proof of his condescension and good nature, he resumed his relation as follows.

"A very strange and dismal looking place into which I was led by the devil, my conductor, attracted my curiosity, and asking what place it was, he told me. 'The Place of Public Spirits.' And being pleased with the interest I displayed in his concerns, he proceeded to show me the rarities of his realm, with which I was wonderfully struck. 'This province of my dominions, containing my good Public Spirits,' said he, 'is divided into several departments, or bells, very methodically arranged, each containing a peculiar genus of the damned. For example—you are now passing through the Hall of Politicians, consisting of two rooms, the one containing the politic by ambition—of those who went into public life for the noble purpose of rising to distinction and power; the other appropriated to the politic by covetousness—your base dogs who served the nations with the view of picking their pockets.'

"With that, I looked about me in the first room, a great grotto lighted by fires that were stirred up by imps, and saw the ambitious gentry hung up by the heels against the ceiling, like so many bats in a cave, smoking and broiling, and seeming ever on the point of dropping into the fires below; of which there was the more danger, as each had his bundle of peccadilloes tied to his neck, weighing him down, and the little imps of the fire every now and then saluted them with a volley of red hot chunks, as if trying to knock them from their holds. In the next chamber, a cavern similar to the first, were the politic by covetousness—fat placemen boiling in caldrons of molten gold and silver, bubbling up and down like so many tormented bullfrogs, with little scullion imps that sat stirring the pots, and occasionally tapping each seething sinner over the head, with red hot pokers.

"Truly," said I, surprised at the sight, "I thought politicians were more virtuous people. Have you any of our American patriots here?"

"Oh," said the devil, "a plenty of them."

"With that we passed into the third grot, where were a number of souls, some in great sieves, in which they were seared along with pitchforks and cannon balls at white heat; others roasting at a furnace; and some again being mashed under falling hammers, that ground them to atoms at every blow; while others were flaming in refining pots with white and black flux, that kept them sputtering and flashing in a manner marvellous to behold.

"I asked, what kind of public spirits these were that were handled so roughly?"

"Oh," said the devil, "they are Reformers and Agitators—honest personages now undergoing a process to reform their own qualities—a matter which, in their eagerness to amend their neighbors, they entirely forgot to attend to in the world above."

The next thing that struck me was a multitude of souls, some grovelling along the floors of a dark passage, which we walked through, others cowering away in corners as if to hide them from sight; but all, as I could perceive, having their heads strewn over with live coals, and vipers fastened on their breasts. I asked my satanic guide, who these 'unlucky wretches might be.'"

"What," said he, "don't you know them? and some of your own work, too? These are all small game—the tools and victims of the good fellows you have been looking at."

"Upon which, rapping some dozen or two of them over the shoulders with a stout bamboo he carried, they started up and displayed the countenances of individuals I very well remembered, some of them poor devils, that, being in want of public places, had been employed to do the dirty work of the party, by way of deserving them, as well as their own damnation; some not place-hunters but sovereign citizens, who, by a little drumming at their fancies and passions, had been induced to do the same thing, under the impression that they were playing the part of good and honest citizens, besides sundry persons of better note, some of the men of promise, ambitious to serve the public, when having become obnoxious to, or put themselves in the way of the party, I had helped to bring under the lash of correction, or drive them into the shades of obscurity, where there was little fear of our ever being troubled by them again.

"The sight of these latter persons caused me some concern. Until that moment it had never occurred to me, that calling a man in the public papers 'traitor,' 'hireling,' 'villain,' and so on, and teaching society to think him so, was doing him any mischief, except a political one; but the embers upon the head, and the worm at the heart, struck me with both dismay and compunction. Nor were these feelings much diminished, when my conductor whipped us sundry other sufferers, who fell foul of me with their tongues, upbraiding me with numerous other sins of which I had never made much account before. Some charged me with having made them the victims of sharpers, by lauding speculations which were designed for no other purpose than to gull numbskulls. Here was a soul accused me of cheating him out of his dollars, by commending to purchasers some swindler's ware, of which I knew nothing, except that it was goodnatured to recommend it, while a hundred and fifty opened upon me with full mouth, as their murderer, for having lauded the excellency of a steamboat, by which they were all blowed into eternity.

"But the most grevious part of the spectacle was the multitudes, the very herds of the people who laid their deaths at my door, because of the quack medicines they had taken on my recommendation; for though in an argument with the devil on the subject, I insisted that the notices of nostrums in my paper were puffs written by the proprietors, and printed and paid for as advertisements, and that therefore I had no share in commanding them; he declared I was entirely mistaken, that the giving publicity to such a thing was in itself a recommendation, and I was as much chargeable with their effects as if I had accepted an agency from the compounder, and, myself, supplied the public with death, at a dollar a bottle.

"Having settled this matter, much more to his own satisfaction than mine, Diabolo bade me 'never mind such small ware, (meaning the tails and victims,) but come along and see something of greater importance.' And giving me a jerk, he dragged me onwards until the passage we trod terminated in a great chamber, the floor of which, sinking down like the sweeping sides of an amphitheatre, ended at length in a great bog of quagmire; while at the top, where we passed, were long ranges of galleries running all around. In these galleries lounged a great variety of devils, looking down with interest upon what passed below; while in the quagmire, floundering in it up to the knees, were multitudes of men, great and small, engaged with marvellous earnestness pelting one another with mud. 'Upon my word,' said I, 'I do not understand this at all. What kind of public spirits are these? and what place is it?

"The devil looked amazed. 'Is it possible,' said he, 'that you don't know? that you don't recognize your friends from their amusements? Zounds, sir, this is the hell of editors!' Upon my word, I could not help laughing, it looked all so natural. There they were, indeed, my learned and able contemporaries, bedaubing one another with mudballs, with such zeal and energy as if the weal of the universe depended upon their pastime. Thinks I to myself, 'If a certain place that I know of is no worse than this, it is not so bad, after all.' 'Don't be too sure of that,' said Old Nick, reading my thoughts—'tis all fine fun for a while, but no such pleasant life to lead for ever. And, indeed, as I looked, and observed one gentleman get a ball in the eye, and another a pellet in the cheek, the third a whole mountain of mud on his back, I began to grow melancholy at the thought that the 'Lights of the World' should be so unworthily engaged, thus wasting their energies on one another. Nor was this feeling but a little increased, when Diabolo took occasion to observe, 'he was fond of editors; with other sinners,' said he, 'I have a deal of trouble, and am obliged, on an average, to appropriate the services of at least one imp among a thousand, for the purpose of tormenting them. Editors, fortunately, know how to torment themselves. 'And now Mr. Daniel Ticklum, of the people's Light,' said he, 'you know your place—descend.'

'With that he seized me by the nap of the neck, and tossed me into the thick of my contemporaries, who received me with a shower of mud-balls, which, for all their softness, had such an effect upon my feelings that I considered myself murdered outright, and opened my mouth to cry for quarter, which I received in the shape of a second volley from the whole company. At that moment I awoke and found it was all a dream.

"It was a dream, sir, but the more I revolved it in my mind, the more it troubled and perplexed me. At last, however, I became persuaded it was a vision of warning, sent me by some good angel, (for one would not think the devil so benevolent,) which it became me to improve. I became a new man. Sir, would you believe it, I began to think that, in accommodating my principles to those of my patrons—in toiling to please the party and my neighbours, at the sacrifice of some truth and more independence, I was doing wrong? I resolved to change my course, and act the part that became a conscientious man. I had no idea of going to the devil for my subscribers. I resolved to turn over a new leaf, and pursue that fearless, honest, independent course, for which so many of my worthy fellow citizens called; for, indeed, it was a common subject of lamentation throughout the land, in my day, that we had so few editors of high, fearless independent spirit.

"Sir, when I made that resolution, I had seven thousand subscribers; a week after I put it into execution, I had but two thousand! My first independent remark was a signal of my ruin. And what was that remark? Why, sir, a compliment to an enemy, an opposition candidate—an admission that he was an honest and an able man, in many respects superior even to our own candidate, and worthy of confidence and honour. A few more truths ended the matter. 'Stop my paper!' was echoed in my ears by two thousand voices, and thrown before my eyes in as many epistolary missives. Nay, sir, one half of the three thousand subscribers who never paid their dues, fell into the like anger, and bade me 'stop their papers.' In short, sir, it was a lost case with me; my subscribers left me, my creditors put their accounts into the hands of the lawyers, and my friends, not knowing how else to dispose of me, clapped me into this Asylum.

"Draw your own moral from this story; it is a true one. As long as I was willing to enslave my spirit, to crush my sense of right or wrong, to forget my principles, to devote the energies of my mind to flatter the whims and passions of my patrons, I enjoyed their favour and prospered; the moment I became a man of principle, I lost it. I say again, that men love virtue best in the abstract. The dignity of independence, the beauty of honour, the excellence of principle, are ever in the mouths of men, nine-tenths of whom will conspire together to ruin the editor who reduces them to practice.

Conspiracy and Attempted Escape of 1,500 Convicts from Portland, (England.)

Correspondence of the News of the World, Sept 26.

I found myself, on Saturday the 11th instant, at Weymouth, and, having taken a conveyance to visit Portland, I learned from the driver that the prisoners in the convict establishment there were reported to be in a very dissatisfied state, and were expected to "strike for wages," his belief appearing to be that, besides being well housed and fed, they received the usual rate of 12s or 15s a week. However, having taken up my quarters at Portland, I soon discovered that a dangerous conspiracy was reported to be organised, and expected to break out on Monday, when the prisoners went to their usual work in the stone quarries, out of which the Breakwater is formed. The numerical forces on the part of the authorities were about two hundred civil guards and warders, and one hundred and fifty Wexford militia in barracks, about half a mile from the prison. On the other side, the enemy mustered fifteen hundred strong.

To understand the position, I must explain that the stone has been excavated for a distance of about 500 yards backwards from the prison, and rather lower than the level of the ground upon which it stands, leaving at the curved face, where the work now proceeds, steep irregular walls of rock, varying from ten to fifty or sixty feet high; in some places perpendicular, at others gradually sloping, and in others cut into the form of steps as the stone has been removed. The quarries are also separated into east and west, and middle divisions, by raised tramways, along which the stone is conveyed to the Breakwater in waggons. The Government quarries are also adjoined by free quarries, and the bridge which carries the tramways of the latter overlooks the former. On Monday morning, having pocketed a friendly revolver, I took up a commanding view of the operations. At about a quarter past seven, the convicts might be seen advancing two abreast, in parties of various numbers, according to the working arrangements, and each party guarded by two or more warders, in proportion to its respective strength. The stream poured from the prison gate in regular order for perhaps ten minutes, by which time about a thousand of the most formidable ruffians I ever saw had emerged, (the remainder having turned into the various workhouses adjoining the prison,) unshackeled in any way, and selected for their strength, on account of the nature of the work to be performed. Perfect order seemed to prevail, and the work had proceeded for some time as usual, when suddenly a loud yell was raised, and 30 or 40 convicts rushed from their work, and, as was preconcerted, jumped on a raised tramway, shouting to their comrades to join them, and pressing forward to the point of communication. A picket of 12 Wexfords sprang down the sides of the quarry, charged in close order with fixed bayonets along the tramway in shorter time than I can describe it, and met the band of conspirators, to their utter astonishment and dismay. They halted, hesitated, and then fled, evidently not relishing the cold gleaming bayonet, and the loaded Enfield, and were then driven into a corrugated iron shed, erected for shelter in case of rain, where the warders chained them under protection of the guard.

But, in the meantime, the bugle was sounded, and armed men sprang from behind the rocks and out of places of concealment, and before the main body of convicts had recovered from their first surprise, every salient point was occupied, the communication between the quarries cut off, a cross fire established from every side, and reserves held in readiness to assist in case of violence on any part of the works. The effect was instantaneous; the thrown-down pick and shovel were resumed with deep and sullen curses, and the captured prisoners marched off to confinement. As the day passed on, small spasmodic rushes of desperate men took place, but the swords Warders and the front of the Wexfords repressed any tendency to violence, and they were easily captured.

Some of the convicts admit their plan to have been to rush from all outlaying parts of the quarries, to concentrate in the centre, and arm themselves with the tools, such as hammers, picks, &c., then overpower and murder the guards, burn the prison, plunder the villages, and make their escape to the mainland before assistance could arrive; and had they been allowed a few minutes to concentrate, a most desperate scene of bloodshed would have ensued; but all the arrangements were so admirably made and contingencies provided for by the director, Captain Gambier, and the Governor, Captain Clay, and their plans so prominently and vigorously carried out, that the satisfactory issue described was attained without the loss of one life. On Tuesday all the convicts appeared sulkily quiet, and proceeded to work as usual, but without any appearance of alacrity, when suddenly the same shouting was heard, and a body of between 20 and 30 were seen rushing from the quarry towards the centre. These were promptly met by a body of Wexfords, and the same scene occurred as on the previous day. The conspiracy then assumed the dogged, sullen form of small numbers at a time, or individuals throwing down their tools and walking quietly into the sheds and surrendering themselves. This continued throughout the day, and partially so on Wednesday, when the convicts, apparently no longer being able to resist the conclusion that they were overpowered, this subsided. On Thursday, on walking round, I inquired of an experienced warder if he thought it was all over, to which he replied that he judged from their "phizzyhogs" that it was, as they were all so "down in the mouth." Having ascertained that it was decided to send the captured prisoners to Millbank prison, I was curious to see their conduct and bearing after they had, as they fancied, irretrievably committed themselves in the eyes of the authorities. Accordingly I waited till they were marched out, lightly chained by the hand to each other, and having accompanied them a considerable distance along the road, it was only then that I fully appreciated the extent of the danger which had been averted, or understood what would have happened had they obtained the mastery. I can only compare them to a gang of demons baffled in a conspiracy against mankind, steeped in crime, and openly displaying their ferocity, villainy and impotent rage at the failure of their plot.

The Wexford Militia, under Capt. Piggott and Alcock, also the warders and civil guard, deserve the highest commendation for their steadiness, alacrity and forbearance under most trying circumstances; they endeavoured to carry out to the utmost the stringent orders conveyed to all by the authorities not to fire a shot or sacrifice a life unless the most urgent necessity compelled them.

One subaltern officer, to his credit, expressed his determination to stand between the bayonets of his men and the convicts to prevent any chances of firing unless he gave distinct orders. The sergeant particularly struck me. He was an old Gibraltar stormer, grim as death, and hard as bog oak. I sounded him with a view of ascertaining if he was quite satisfied with the service, when he confided to me that he did not think it right that the prisoners should have "pudden" (pudding) three times a week and the soldiers none. It was very amusing to see his strong sense of discipline struggling with the desire to give vent to his intense delight at the prospect of a scrimmage.

Now as to the cause of this dangerous emeute, I heard the prisoners questioned by the warders as to the cause of their refusing to work, and not one complaint did I hear against the discipline or treatment, but the universal reply was, "We won't be put up a by the Government;" or, "We won't be humbugged by Government;" and this I found to mean that those sentenced previous to 1853, and under the Act of 1857, may, by good conduct, obtain a remission of a certain portion of their punishment, while those sentenced under the Act of 1853 must work out the whole of their term, no matter what their conduct might be. Capt. Gambier explained to the whole body, in the kindest manner, that convictions for the same crimes under the Act of 1857 were for longer periods than under the Act of 1853, and that there was no real difference between the term of imprisonment actually inflicted under the two Acts; only that under the Act of 1857, if a prisoner misconducted himself, the authorities had power to keep him a certain additional period in confinement. Now, just to hit the blot if there be one—Have the judges, in passing sentences under the Act of 1857, kept in mind the intentions of the Government in framing it, and its provisions as regards remission; or, in other words, have they sentenced prisoners to five years' penal servitude, under this Act, for the same crime as they awarded four years under the Act of 1853, when there was no remission? If not, they are responsible for a grave oversight. Before leaving Portland I was allowed by the courtesy of Capt. Clay to inspect the prison, and I came to the conclusion that the rules and regulations were such as would gratify the heart of the sickliest sentimentalist, the most maudlin sympathizer with crime, or the most overstrained philanthropist. Everything was as clean and orderly as a gentleman's house—the food unexceptionable, the bread I should prefer to that of a London baker for my own table; the hours of work those of an ordinary labourer; chapel twice each day, a school established in the prison, and daily instruction given to the ignorant; two chaplains in constant attendance, who endeavour to lead their minds towards religion and a better course of life; and a well-ventilated hospital for the sick or injured, with two surgeons in attendance.

The British and Chinese Treaty

The following abstract is published by the British Foreign Office:—

SUMMARY OF THE TREATY BETWEEN HER MAJESTY AND THE EMPEROR OF CHINA SIGNED AT TIENTSIN, JUNE 26, 1858.

Article 1. Confirms the Treaty of Nankin of 1842, and abrogates the supplementary Treaty and General Regulations of Trade.

Art. 2. Provides for the appointment of ambassadors, ministers, or other diplomatic agents on the part of either country at the courts of Pekin and St. James.

Art. 3. Contains provisions for the permanent establishment of a British minister, his family, and suite at Pekin, and the forms to be observed in his communications with the Imperial Government.

Art. 4. Makes arrangements with the travelling and the transmission of the correspondence of the minister, and the employment by him of special couriers.

Art. 5. The emperor of China consents to nominate one of the secretaries of state, or some high officer, to transact business with the British Ministers either personally or in writing, on a footing of perfect equality.

Art. 6. The same privileges are to be granted to the Chinese Ministry in London.

Art. 7. Consuls may be appointed in China, and may reside in any of the open ports, and their official rank and position as regards the Chinese local authorities is determined.

Art. 8. The Christian religion as professed by Protestants or Roman Catholics, to be tolerated, and its professors protected.

Art. 9. British subjects to travel for pleasure or trade into all parts of the interior, with passports from their consuls, countersigned by the local authorities. The regulations as regards these passports are determined. The provisions of the article not to be applied to ships' crews, for the due restraint of whom regulations are to be drawn up by the consul and the local authorities. No pass to be given to Nankin, or cities in the hands of the rebels.

Art. 10. British merchant ships are to be allowed to trade up the great river (Yang-tse), but in the present disturbed state of the Upper and Lower valley, no port is to be open for trade with the exception of Chin Kiang, which is to be opened in a year from the signature of the treaty. When peace is restored, British vessels are to be admitted to trade at such ports, as far as Hankow, not exceeding three in number, as the British Minister, after consulting with the Chinese Secretary of State, shall determine.

Art. 11. In addition to the present ports New-Chwang, Tang Chow, Tai Wan (Formosa), Chow Chow (Swatow, and Kiung-Chow (Fainan, are to be opened and the right of residence and holding landed property is conceded.

Art. 12. British subjects are to make agreements for landed property at the rates prevailing among the people.

Art. 13. No restrictions to be placed on the employment by British subjects of Chinese subjects in any lawful capacity.

Art. 14. The hire of boats for transport of goods or passengers to be settled between the parties themselves, without the inference of the Chinese Government. The number of the boat not to be limited, and no monopoly allowed. If any smuggling takes place the offender to be punished according to law.

Art. 15. All questions regarding the rights to property or person between British subjects to be subject to the jurisdiction of British authorities.

Art. 16. Chinese subjects guilty of any criminal act towards British subjects to be arrested and punished by the Chinese authorities according to the law of China; British subjects committing any crime in China to be tried and punished by the Consul, or other public functionary, according to the law of Great Britain.

Art. 17. Determines the mode of procedure in the matters of complaints on the side either of British or Chinese subjects.

Art. 18. Provides for the protection of the persons and property of British subjects.

Art. 19. If any British merchant vessel in China waters is plundered by robbers or pirates, the Chinese authorities are to use every endeavor to capture and punish the offender and to recover the stolen property.

Art. 20. Wrecked or stranded vessels, or vessels under stress of weather, are to be afforded relief and security in any Chinese port; and the crews are be furnished by Chinese, if necessary, with the means of conveyance to the nearest consular station.

Art. 21 Chinese criminals taking refuge in Hong Kong, or on board of British ships shall upon the requisition of the Chinese authorities, be given up; the same also if taking refuge in the houses or on board the vessels of British subjects at the open ports.

Art. 22. The Chinese authorities to do their utmost to arrest Chinese subjects failing to discharge their debts to British subjects or fraudulently absconding, and to enforce recovery of debate. The British authorities to likewise as regards British subjects indebted to Chinese.

Art. 23. Debts incurred by Chinese at Hong must be recovered in the Courts of Justice on the spot. If the debtor should abscond, and should possess real or personal property in the Chinese territory, the Chinese authorities, in concert with the British Consul, are to see justice done between the parties.

Art. 24. British subjects shall pay on all merchandise imported or exported, the duties prescribed by the tariff, but in no case shall they pay other or higher duties than the subjects of other foreign nations pay.

Art. 25. Imported duties to be considered payable on the landing of the goods, and duties of export on the shipment of the same.

Art. 26. The tariff fixed by article 10 of the Treaty of Nankin to be reserved by a Commission of British and Chinese officers to meet at Shanghae, so that the revised tariff may come into operation immediately after the ratification of the treaty.

Art. 27. Either contracting party may demand a further revision of the tariff of the commercial articles of the treaty at the end of ten years; but six months notice must be given, or the tariff is to remain in force for ten years more, and so at the end of each successive ten years.

Art. 28. It is agreed that within four months of the signature of the treaty, the Chinese Collector of Duties at ports already opened and hereafter to be opened to British trade, shall be obliged, on application of the Consul, to declare the amount of duties leviable on produce between the place of production and the port of shipment, and upon imports between the consular port in question and the inland markets named by the Consul; and a notification thereof shall be published in English and Chinese. British subjects may, however, clear their goods of all transit duties by payment of a single charge; the amount of the charge to be calculated as near as possible at the rate of two and a half per cent advalorem duty, and it is to be fixed for each article at the conference to be held at Shanghae.

The payment of transit dues by commutation is in no way to effect the tariff duties on imports or exports, which will continue to be levied separately and in full.

Art. 29. Regulates the amount of tunnage dues. British merchant vessels of more than 150 tuns burden to pay at the rate of four mace per tun; if of 150 tuns and under the rate of one mace per ton.

Vessels engaged in the coasting trade or clearing for Hong Kong from any of the open ports shall be entitled to a special certificate exempting them from all further payment of tunnage dues in any open port in China for a period of four months from the dates of her port clearance.

Art. 30. The master of any British merchant vessel may, within 48 hours after his arrival, but not later, depart without breaking bulk; in which case he will not be subject to pay tunnage dues. No other fees or charges upon entry or departure shall be levied.

Art. 31. No tunnage dues to be paid on passengers boats, or boats conveying baggage, letters, articles of provision, or other articles not subject to duty. All cargo boats, however, conveying merchandise subject to duty, shall pay tunnage dues once in six months, at the rate of four mace per register ton.

Art. 32 The Consuls and Superintendents of Customs to consult together respecting the erection of buoys and light shins as occasion may demand.

Art. 33. Duties to be paid to the authorised Chinese bankers, either in sycc or in foreign money.

Art. 34. Seats of standard weights and measures to be delivered by the Superintendant of Customs to the Consul at each port, to secure uniformity.

Art. 35. British merchant vessels to be at liberty to engage pilots to take them into any of the open ports, and to convey them out, after they have discharged all legal dues and duties.

Art. 36. The Superintendant of Customs shall depute one or more customs officers to a British merchant ship on arriving off one of the open ports. They shall stay either in a boat of their own, or on board ship; their food and expenses shall be supplied from the Custom House, and they shall be entitled too no fees from the master or consignees.

Art. 37. Ships' papers, bills of lading, &c., to be lodged, in the hands of the Consul 24 hours after arrival, and full particulars of the vessel to be reported to the Superintendant of Customs within a further period of 24 hours; omission to comply with this rule within 48 hours punishable by a fine of 30 taels for each day's delay. The total amount of penalty not to exceed 200 taels. The master responsible for the correctness of the manifest; a false manifest subjects the master to a fine of 500 taels, but he will be allowed to correct any mistake within 24 hours, without incurring the penalty.

Art. 38 If the master shall begin to discharge any goods without the permit from the Superintendant of Customs, he shall be fined 500 taels, and the goods discharged shall be confiscated wholly.

Art. 39. The British merchants must apply to the Superintendant of Customs for a special permit to land or ship cargo. Cargo landed or shipped without such permit will be liable to confiscation.

Art. 40. No transhipment from one vessel to another can be made without special permission, under pain of confiscation of the goods transhipped.

Art. 41. The Superintendant of Customs shall give a port clearance when all dues and duties have been paid, and the Consul shall then return the ship's papers.

Art. 42. If the British merchants cannot agree with the Chinese officer in fixing a value on goods subject to an ad valorem duty, each party shall call in two or three merchants, and the highest price at which any of the merchants would purchase them shall be assumed to be the value of the goods.

Art. 43. Provides that duties shall be charged upon the net weight of cargoe, &c., and regulates the manner in which the tare on any article such as tea shall be fixed.—The British merchant may appeal to his Consul within 24 hours.

Art. 44. Upon all damaged goods a fair reduction of duty shall be allowed proportionate to their deterioration. If any disputes arise they shall be settled in the manner pointed out in the clause of this treaty having reference to articles which pay duty ad valorem.

Art. 45. British merchants who have imported merchandise into an open port paid duty, may re-import their goods under certain regulations, without payment of any additional duty.

British merchants desiring to re-export duty paid imports to a foreign country, to be entitled, under similar regulations, to a drawback certificate, which is to be a valid tender in payment of customs duties.

Foreign grain brought into a Chinese port in a British ship, if no part has been landed, may be re-exported without hindrances.

Art. 46. The Chinese authorities at the ports to adopt the means they may judge most proper to prevent the revenue suffering from fraud or smuggling.

Art. 47. British merchant vessels not to resort to other than the ports declared open not unlawfully to enter ports, or to carry on clandestine trade along the coast. Vessels violating this provision to be, with their cargoes subject to confiscation by the Chinese Government.

Art. 48. If a British merchant vessel be concerned in smuggling, the goods to be subject to confiscation by the Chinese authorities, and the ship may be prohibited from trading further, and sent away as soon as her accounts shall have been adjusted.

Art. 49. All penalties or confiscations under the treaty to belong and be appropriated to the public service of the Chinese Government.

Art. 50. All official communications addressed by British diplomatic or consular agents to the Chinese authorities are, henceforth, to be written in English. For the present, they will be accompanied by a Chinese version, but it is understood that in case of there being any difference of meaning between English and Chinese text, the English Government will hold the sense expressed in the English text to be the correct sense. This provision is to apply to the present treaty, the Chinese text of which has been carefully corrected by the English original.

Art. 51. The character "I," (barbarian) not to be applied to the British Government or to British subjects in any Chinese official document issued by the Chinese authorities.

Art. 52. British ships of war coming for no hostile purpose, or being engaged in pursuit of pirates to be at liberty to visit all the Chinese ports and to receive every facility for procuring necessaries, or if, required, for making repairs. The commanders of such ships to hold intercourse with the Chinese authorities on terms of equality and courtesy.

Art. 53. The contracting parties agree to concert measures for the suppression of piracy.

Art. 54. Confirms all advantages secured to the British Government by previous treaties and stipulates that the British Government shall participate in any advantages which may be granted by the Emperor of China to any other nation.

Art. 55. The conditions affecting indemnity for expenses incurred and loss sustained, in the matter of the Canton question, to be included in a separate article, which shall be in every respect of equal validity with the other articles of the treaty.

Art. 56. Ratifications to be exchanged within a year after the date of signature.

Separate articles provide that a sum of two millions of taels, on account of the losses sustained by British subjects through the misconduct of the Chinese authorities at Canton, and a further sum of two millions of taels on account of the expenses of the war shall be paid to the British representatives in China by the authorities of the Twang Tang province.

The arrangements for affecting these payments to be determined by the British representatives in concert with the Chinese authorities at Twang Tang.

The British forces are not to be withdrawn from Canton until the above discounts are discharged in full.

On Thursday, July 29th, an experiment was made in the Westminster road, and witnessed by thousands of spectators, who seemed much interested and astonished on seeing a steam engine traversing the streets of London. The machine was steered by a person who stood in front, and handled a wheel, about the size and appearance of those used in our river weight, and thus proceeded from the manufactory of Maudsley and Field, along the Westminster road to their wharf close to Westminster bridge, the entrance to which is in the Belvedere road, and here it was guided round with the utmost ease and without a moments delay.

The engine is the invention of a gentleman named Bray, who has attained a pretest. It is adopted to travel uphill or down, and its speed may be increased at pleasure. On this occasion it went through the throng of carriages and people at a walking pace, and it was several times stopped and then set in motion, showing it to be perfectly safe and under control.—Illustrated London News.

NEGRO PRINCES AT PARIS.—Three young negroes sons of petty kings in the district of Senegal, were about a year ago sent from St. Louis to the college at Algiers, where they were placed at the expence of the French Government. They already speak French perfectly, and are quite accustomed to French usages. Having recently been brought up to Paris, they were presented to Prince Napoleon, and his Imperial highness three days ago entertained them at dinner. They conducted themselves extremely well, and replied to all questions with a tact and good sense which occasioned surprise. They are named Nafe Marcan and Coury. The first, the eldest is deliciate and of low stature, but he is the most intelligent. Marcan, fourteen years of age, writes french tolerably well; it talks less than the other two, but is gay, and sometimes smiles sarcastically at what his companions say. Coury, not quite twelve, is tall and strong, is goodnatured, but rather melancholy. He says "Nafe is the best instructed of the three, but Marcan is the wisest." The little fellows, notwithstanding their youth, display great tact in avoiding direct replies to certain questions. "Of what religion are you?" asked the Prince to Marcan. "We are not Mussulmans," was the reply. "What then is your religion asked the Prince, turning to Nafe, the most learned of the three. "If French missionaries were sent to our country, we should all be Christians," was the answer. The fact is they are idolaters; though, from mixing with Mussulmans and Christians at Algiers, they have begun to lose their faith in the maternal idols.

Mutiny and Murder on Board Ship.

PENANG, July 31.—On the 17th instant a portion of the crew of the American ship Golden State, lying in the harbor, mutinied while the captain was on shore. It is said that a plot had been formed by a number of them to take the ship some time before arriving here, but that they were deterred from executing it by the fear that they would not be able to get any one to navigate her. On that day the ringleader, on the pretence of being dissatisfied with the food, stood up declared he would not serve any longer, and called on those who agreed to follow him to the forecastle, and those who did not to go below. He was joined by several of the men. The second mate ordered them to work, and on their refusing went for the first mate, who came and gave the same order. A boy replied they would not work. The mate struck him with his open hand. The boy returned the blow, and at the same moment the mate's feet slipped and he fell on the deck. The mutineers seeing this seized hand-spikes, threw themselves upon him, and struck him till his skull was fractured and beaten in. They then dragged him to the capstan, bound him to it, and beat him again. The second mate ran for his revolver, three barrels missed fire; the men rushed on him, and he was also savagely beaten and thrown through the skylight into the cabin. The boatswain's mate was also attacked and severely hurt. The carpenter was the only man who displayed presence of mind and did his duty well. He first locked the cabin where his tools were kept. He then ran up the flag half mast high and rung the alarm bell, and finally seized a musket and placed himself beside the arms warning off the mutineers. Meantime they had resolved to throw the first mate overboard, but the entreaties and tears of the cook induced them to refrain, and they lowered one of the boats and pulled for the jetty. The captain had seen the flag, and, hurrying down took a boat and pulled off. He met the mutineers and ordered them to return to the ship. They continued to pull for the shore and landed at the jetty, but a friend of the captain's had sent for the police, and they were all taken into custody. The first mate died in the hospital on the night of the same day.

THE CRYSTAL PALACE FIRE.—One "narrow escape" only is told, which is as follows: On Wednesday evening, a married lady, daughter of Mr. Beam, one of the officers in attendance at the Palace, visited the building with her child, a little girl of tender age, and, as the child became sleepy after being there some time, she, by the advice of its father, placed it in one of the exhibition beds on the upper floor, where the little thing soon fell into a sound sleep. Shortly after the fire broke out, Mr. Beam remembered the child; and, as the mother had parted from him previously, he, with great presence of mind, bethought him that he would not know where to go, being unacquainted with the building. He accordingly rushed up the stairs, and proceeded to the spot where the child was left. But on reaching it he found the smoke so dense as almost to choke him, and he had actually to feel the child which he found at length fast asleep and, of course wholly unconscious of its fearful position. He at once caught her up and turned to go down when he met the mother, who had come up by another way, and who was in such a state of distraction that she did not know him. Her feelings on having her child restored, safe and sound, may be imagined, and it was with the utmost difficulty that her husband was able to get her into the open air. She kissed the little one again and again, and nearly went into hysterics from excess of joy. Mr. Beam, who is a very heavy man, about 230 lbs., says that he cannot remember how he got up stairs, but that he almost slid up. He has further remarked, so it is said, that he would not have lost that child for all the wealth inside the Palace. It is believed that, had the child been suffered to remain but a minute longer she would have perished.

The Expedition to Paraguay.

The first ground of difficulty is chronological order was the refusal of the Government of Paraguay to ratify certain amendments to a treaty with the United States, executed at Asuncion, March 4, 1853; and ratified with the amendments in question by the Senate of the United States, June 1, 1854. Mr. John S. Pendleton, who negotiated the treaty, had foolishly yielded to the presumption and petulance of Lopez, the autocrat of Paraguay, by dropping the Constitutional style of this Government, "the United States of America," and substituting "United States of North America" and other variations of the same purport. These had to be submitted to confirm to the diplomatic rules of our State Department, and as there has been a year's delay in the time of completing the American ratification, the time at which the treaty should take effect had to be extended. To Lieutenant Page, then commanding the exploring steamer Water Witch in the Rio de la Plata, the treaty was sent by Secretary Marcy to be submitted for a second ratification by Lopez. The latter refused to hold any correspondence with Page, on the ground of his letters not being in Spanish, although fully informed of the object of his mission. In August, 1856, Colonel Richard Fitzpatrick was sent out as a Special Commissioner to procure a final ratification of the treaty; but without success. A letter from the Foreign Secretary of Lopez, Nicholas Vasquez, dated November 15, 1856, conclusively refused to ratify the treaty. One object, therefore, of Mr. Bowlin's mission is to procure, and of Commodore Shubrick's mission to enforce, the ratification.

A second ground of complaint is the treatment of the United States and Paraguay Navigation Company, represented in that country by Mr. Edward A. Hopkins, some time United States Consul at Asuncion. The Company consisted mainly of Rhode Island capitalists, whose adventure not only embraced the description of enterprise suggested by its title, but all manner of domestic improvements and industry within the State of Paraguay. They embarked in the speculation on the strength of a decree of Lopez, issued in 1845, inviting foreign capitalists and colonists to settle in Paraguay, offering all possible bounties, inducements and guarantees, including liberal grants of land. The Providence Company commenced operations on a large scale; sent out steamers machinery and laborers, bought land, set up tobacco factories and saw-mills, and were but entering on a splendid and prosperous career, when they were encountered by the jealousy and secret hostility of Lopez. These were carried to such length, that not only were the aids of native labor withdrawn from them, the legality of their land purchases denied, but it soon became apparent that no Paraguayan was to be permitted to hold intercourse or traffic with the Americans, without danger of persecution and ruin at the hands of the Government. Added to this, the persons of the Americans were only recognized in the streets to be exposed to insolence and mob violence, the Consular character of Hopkins and his brother failing to afford them any protection. In this state of things there was nothing for the Company but to suspend operations. Hopkins retired. Lopez proceeded to confiscate the property of the corporation, upon the pretence of reimbursing himself for a loan of ten thousand dollars made to its managers; and so extinguished the enterprise. It is a part of the Commissioner's duty to obtain indemnity for these wrongs.

A third matter of complaint arises in an alleged act of disrespect to the flag of the United States. In consequence of the treaties with the several governments of La Plata, consummated in 1852-3, the Water Witch, a petty steamer, adapted for the purpose, was sent out to explore those inland waters newly opened to our commerce. The vessel entered upon its task in the spring of 1853. It met with every possible encouragement from the Government and several States of the Argentine Union; it encountered all possible secret opposition from Paraguay. Lieut. Page, the commander, attempted to remove this resistance by friendly remonstrance.—He was told his letters would not be read. And when it was understood that he was disposed to dispense with the licence of Lopez, regarding that of the Argentine Executive as sufficient, the Dictator on the 3rd of October, 1854, issued a proclamation forbidding any foreign vessel-of-war to enter the waters of Paraguay. But the survey of the Parana was too important a part of the objects of the expedition to be foregone; and protected by the permit of the Argentine Government, whose jurisdiction over the river was concurrent with that of Paraguay, the Water Witch, on the 1st of February, 1855, passed the junction of that river with the Paraguay, and advanced, hugging the Argentine bank. When about four miles from the junction, it passed in front of the Paraguayan fort of Espira. In its efforts to keep on the Argentine channel it ran aground. It was then ascertained that the only practicable channel lay directly under the wall of the fort. Having got off, the steamer made for the Channel, when, after being hailed and fired into with blank cartridges, it finally received a volley of shot. The discharge was returned, and the firing sustained for several minutes, when, having suffered previous damage and loss, the steamer retreated down the stream. One of the crew was mortally wounded, others injured. That this attack was in violation of the law of nations is the ground assumed by this Government, and the Commissioner is to exact reparation accordingly. He is also to improve the occasion by securing the free navigation of the rivers, as far as Paraguay controls them, for all American vessels, whether naval or mercantile, and to obtain all the privileges granted to the most favored nations.

It is but proper to say that various mitigating circumstances of more or less plausibility are urged for the Government of Paraguay. It is highly probable that, seeing few Americans but Hopkins, and seeing too much of that gentleman's eagerness to enrich himself, and far too much of his presumptious reliance upon the influence of a distant and unknown Government, the Dictator of Paraguay has conceived strong prejudices against the American character, which a closer intimacy with our people would remove. There is also much reason to believe that he entertains the most ridiculous apprehensions of the scope and tendency of our foreign policy. His objection to the style of our Government, as displayed in the Pendleton Treaty, as the best evidence of the belief. Granting these premises, it is hardly fair, it is argued, to go to war to conquer an unfounded dislike, or to oblige a nation to be friendly with us at the point of the bayonet; and perhaps it is not. Then again, it is shown that the final ground assumed by Lopez to ratify the treaty was perfectly fair; namely, that it was better to negotiate a new Convention, covering the outstanding cases of the Water Witch and Providence Company. Others, also, put faith in the statements of the Paraguayans who represent the conduct of Hopkins, as Consul, and as agent of the Company, as extremely unfair, arrogant, and dishonest. And a very large party of publicists hold the Water Witch to have violated the law of nations in entering waters forbidden to it by a power possessing concurrent jurisdiction.

Certainly, what with the many plausible doubts cast upon the case of the United States by careful men; and what with the unlimited power conceded by Congress, and the unlimited expense incurred in fitting out the expedition, a very serious responsibility rests upon the Administration. Any deficiency in the discretion of the negotiator, any haste or precipitation on the part of the military arm, may involve consequences for which all concerned may be called to an unfavorable reckoning. And if at that moment, it shall be found that the casus belli was wholly factitious, that bravado and menace have been resorted to, where pacific means were equally available; that we who approach the capital of a small Republic, as belligerents demanding one; the verdict may not be agreeable to the Administration. There will be those who see striking similitudes in our complaints against China and Paraguay; and striking contrasts in our modes of prosecuting them.—New York Times.

Recent English Failures.

